The basis of pyramid scams is geometric progression. Some of us may remember the story of the Egyptian slave who persuaded his master to agree to give him one grain of rice for the first square of the chessboard, two grains for the second, four for the third, eight for the fourth, and so on. The slave's master was bankrupt before half the chessboard had been covered and accounted for. The slave, like the promoters of modern pyramid selling scams, understood the power of geometric progression.

Promoters of modern scams are greedier even than the Egyptian slave, whose scam involved mere doubling. Modern pyramid scams are more likely to use a higher power, say, of five. In a modern scam, each new member might be expected to recruit five people, who each recruit five people, and so on. There would in theory be 19,530 people in a six-level pyramid of recruits below each member.

If the member paid £50 to join the scam on the basis of £10 for each of the five persons recruited to the next level down, £1 for each person at the next four levels down, and £10 for each person at the sixth level down, in theory he could expect to get more than £160,000. Turn that into a monthly scheme, as is frequently the case—with payments by standing order, of course—and he might expect an annual income of £1,922,560 for every £600 that he pays, although it seems that he would have a fat chance of receiving anything like that.

At first glance, of course, for many people it seems only too easy to earn great sums, and the risks seem remarkably low for the possible returns. In my example, the punter would have covered his stake by recruiting only five others, but only the first to join such schemes receive substantial rewards. Most—in fact, the great majority—of those who join such schemes lose all that they put in. Some people are seduced by the idea of great riches into paying considerable sums—thousands or even tens of thousands of pounds—into such schemes. Many of them, as I said, may have had significant redundancy payments and lost them as a result. Sadly, most have lost virtually all that they paid in. Many have lost hundreds, even thousands of pounds, and some have lost tens of thousands of pounds.

The schemes are nothing less than a swindle of the public. The promoters know full well that the schemes are not subject to the Fair Trading Act controls.

[Sir Nicholas Scott]

Nevertheless, they often assure potential members that the scheme meets all the requirements of the Act. Indeed, the promotional material and contracts for such schemes often appear fully to meet the requirements of the regulations, even to the extent of including statutory warnings. That appearance of legality—it is just an appearance—is part and parcel of the swindle. The schemes do untold commercial damage to law-abiding schemes and their members. The promoters and members of those schemes say that the law-abiding schemes welcome the existing controls under the Fair Trading Act 1973. As I have explained, the purpose of the Bill is to ensure that members of all trading schemes have similar protection.

As I said at the outset, the Bill is simple in concept. It is designed to widen the coverage of the existing controls under the Fair Trading Act 1973. I shall run briefly through the clauses. Clause 1 would replace section 118 of part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973, which determines which schemes are subject to the controls specified elsewhere in that part of the Act.

Section 118 limits the controls to schemes in which goods or services or both are provided by a promoter, and—I emphasise the word "and"—the goods and services are supplied by members, and most of the sales do not take place on premises where the promoter or member carries on business, and members expect benefits from the recruitment of other members, whether by themselves or others, from their own or any other member's change of status within a scheme, from supplying goods, training or other services to other participants and from commission on sales by other members. Under existing legislation, the controls apply only to schemes that satisfy all four criteria. However, many schemes, including reputable ones, do not satisfy one or another of the first three criteria. Indeed, almost any scheme could be restructured so that it did not satisfy all the criteria and thus the present controls are effectively voluntary.

Clause 1 would replace the four criteria. Proposed subsection (1) contains two criteria. The first is that the participants expect to benefit from any of the matters specified in proposed subsection (2). The second criterion contains conditions relating to the goods and services sold through the scheme. I shall come later to the definition of "goods" in this context. The conditions for the second criterion are set out in subsections (3) and (4). One or other of the conditions must be met unless the powers provided in proposed subsection (7)(a) are used to disapply the second criterion. That sounds complicated, but if hon. Members look at the Bill, they will see that it is relatively straightforward. The proposed section 118 lists all the ways in which members of trading schemes may earn income. The main ways are introducing others to the scheme and selling goods and services. Other ways are also covered by the Bill. They include commission on sales made by other members, and payments related to the continued participation or promotion, or other change in status, of members. I could go on, but as most of the provisions, if the House passes the Bill this morning, will be set out in greater detail in regulations for which the Bill provides, I hope that the House will look favourably on the legislation.

It is essential that the controls apply to any trading scheme and not only to the very limited number covered by existing provisions. The proposed controls would apply to any trading scheme devised in which the public may be in danger from inducements to make payments based on the prospect of rewards from recruiting others. Clause 1 has been drafted to go as wide as necessary but no wider. As I have explained, proposed section 118(6) makes it possible to narrow the coverage and there are other powers to fine-tune the provisions in the Bill as a whole. Proposed subsection (8) would widen the definition of goods and proposed subsection (9) would define "provision or supply".

Clause 2 is a technical adjustment to the existing legislation. These days, when we pass legislation, we need increasingly to take account of developments in technology and commercial practice. It provides for the regulation of promotional material aimed at potential members. Such material may be advertisements, prospectuses, circulars or notices. The existing regulations apply only to documents, and clause 2 would widen the coverage to all forms of promotional material, such as videos, recorded messages and the use of the Internet, which is now commonly used to reach potential members.

Clause 2 also removes the distinction in section 119 between invitations to people to become participants, and information calculated to lead directly or indirectly to people becoming participants. The present distinction serves no practical purpose.

Clause 3 provides transitional protection, ensuring that nobody can be prosecuted as a result of the wider coverage in the new arrangements unless he has consented to or connived in the act that constitutes the offence.

Clause 4 ensures financial provision for the Bill. However, I understand that the Bill is expected to result in a reduction rather than an increase in public expenditure, which will come as a surprise to hon. Members. Without the Bill, the enforcement authorities have had to use other legislation to protect the public from scams that the Bill, will make subject to the Fair Trading Act controls. Those are expected to be more cost-effective, and thus to result in a reduction in public expenditure.

Clause 5 contains the short title and provides for the Bill's application to Northern Ireland. It also provides for a commencement order, which will make it possible for the Act to be brought into force at the same time as any regulations made under it.

I finish on the note on which I began. The Bill will not solve all the problems in a difficult, complicated and sensitive area, but I believe that it will stop the exploitation of vulnerable people by those who peddle promises of instant riches. It is time for Parliament to halt those practices. I therefore commend the Bill to the House and ask hon. Members to give it a Second Reading.

Mr. Nirj Joseph Deva (Brentford and Isleworth): Pyramid selling and multi-level marketing have become great and expanding businesses. Such marketing exercises involve more than people trading from their own homes; it has come to my notice that professional people such as doctors, surgeons and others who see and relate to people at different levels are also now encouraging and indulging in multi-level marketing and pyramid selling.

Patients come to see doctors to get fitter and healthier, and in that relationship they may be encouraged to buy water filters, air cleaners or filters and other things, in the surgery. That is a remarkable development. I have come across cases in which people were encouraged to buy in that way, and the professionally qualified doctors and accountants—I suppose even lawyers—who sell various goods on a part-time basis to their clients are earning large amounts of money.

That is a complicated matter, and the Bill proposed by my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea (Sir N. Scott) is an attempt to put certain matters right. In the late 1960s, when such trading schemes came into being, there was a great deal of demand. There were many abuses, and successive Governments have made attempts to correct those, as the schemes have expanded to include many millions of people.

The abuses current at that time included demands that participants pay to participate in a scheme, coupled with the promise of bonuses when they recruited others into the scheme; the absence of any written contract setting out a participant's rights; the absence of a cooling-off period for new recruits, or of a right for participants to claim refunds for unsold goods on withdrawal from the scheme; and inadequate or misleading information about the nature of the scheme and the rewards available to participants. These aspects were regulated under the Fair Trading Act 1973 and the pyramid selling regulations contained in section 119 of that Act.

The main aim of part XI of the 1973 Act and the regulations was to ban the taking of certain payments by a scheme's promoters. The receipt of participation fees from recruits, payments for trading, non-returnable deposits and payments of more than £25 for goods obtained during the first seven days of participation in a scheme were outlawed. That went a long way at the time towards making things better, but not much better. My right hon. Friend's Bill will go further to make the current situation more effective.

Section 120 of part XI of the 1973 Act identified two specific criminal offences—receiving payment from a potential participant who was persuaded by the prospect of benefits from introducing others to a scheme, and using the prospect of benefits from introducing others to a scheme to try to persuade someone to make a payment. The Bill is designed to amend the scope of the definition of trading schemes under part XI of the 1973 Act, and applies controls to a wider range of schemes. Its purpose is to protect vulnerable people from financial loss by ensuring that all trading schemes whose members recruit other people are subject to controls under the Financial Services Act 1986 and under part XI of the 1973 Act.

My right hon. Friend spoke in detail about some aspects of the scheme. In particular, section 118 of the 1973 Act defines the trading schemes to which part XI applies. The Bill introduces two new clauses—clause 1 proposes to substitute section 118 of the 1973 Act with a new clause designed to widen the definition of trading schemes. Clause 1 states:

"For section 118 of the Fair Trading Act 1973 (trading schemes to which Part XI applies) there is substituted—

118.—(1) This Part of this Act applies to any trading scheme if—

(a) the prospect is held out to participants of receiving payments or other benefits in respect of any of the matters specified in subsection (2) of this section; and

(b) (subject to subsection (7) of this section) either or both of the conditions in subsections (3) and (4) of this section are fulfilled in relation to the scheme."

The Bill refers to

"the introduction by any person of other persons who become participants in a trading scheme" and proposes controls on

"the continued participation of participants in a trading scheme . . . the promotion, transfer or other change of status of participants in a trading scheme."

The Bill will also regulate

"the supply of goods or services by any person to or for other persons . . . the acquisition of goods or services by any person."

All in all, this is a timely Bill. My hon. Friend the Minister has said that the legislation governing pyramid and other similar trading schemes is more than 20 years old. The controls provide essential protection to members of such schemes. While many trading schemes provide opportunities for thousands of individuals to become entrepreneurs, there has been a proliferation of schemes outside those controls. Because of the risk to members of such schemes, the Government published a consultation document on the matter last year. My right hon. Friend's Bill, which would implement the main proposals in the Government's consultation document, would give protection to thousands of small entrepreneurs and protect sometimes people who are innocent in that group. It aims to widen existing controls to apply to all trading schemes the members of which recruit others. Therefore, I commend my right hon. Friend's Bill to the House.

Mr. Piers Merchant (Beckenham): My right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea (Sir N. Scott) has characteristically most eloquently run through the problems that exist in part of the pyramid selling industry and has suggested some sensible remedies. I congratulate him on that, and on introducing the Bill.

My right hon. Friend referred, as did my hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Deva), to the 1960s. I just about remember the scandal that hit the press and media then involving pyramid selling—the scams, the blatant exploitation, indeed, the criminal links of some of the organisations. As a result, the Fair Trading Act 1973 took steps to control the industry. That was much welcomed, not least by a large section of the industry. The greatest proportion of the industry had never involved itself in the dubious practices of the 1960s, but its reputation was badly damaged by the dubious fringe and it wanted proper regulation to restore its respectability. Perhaps the only sad thing about the 1973 legislation was that it did not entirely achieve that. To an extent, the phrase "pyramid selling" still has somewhat dubious connotations. That is a shame because there is a legitimate industry which deserves protection and proper credibility.

There is always a tendency when new legislation is introduced for people to quote the bad examples in support of the need for change—a need that I do not challenge. It is important to remember that the majority of the direct selling industry, of which trading schemes are part, is legitimate, respectable and beneficial. It contributes a great deal to the economy. It is estimated that the size of the industry is in excess of £1 billion a year, of which trading schemes take up £200 million to £300 million. It is beneficial for consumers because it provides them with an often low-priced source of goods. It is beneficial for entrepreneurs and the small traders who become involved. It generates employment. It exists as a low-cost pressure on the retail market, which is beneficial for other consumers as well as the economy as a whole.

I should like to give two examples of very different schemes which illustrate the healthy side of the industry and the reason why there are problems that need to be dealt with. On the positive side, some years ago a cousin of mine became involved with an organisation called Amway, which markets a wide range of goods for kitchen and household cleaning. A little while after joining the scheme, he sold me some of the products, which turned out to be of extremely high quality and competitively priced. I have no doubt from my experience as a consumer and my knowledge of his experience as a participant in such a scheme that the organisation was entirely benevolent and operated absolutely properly.

It did not surprise me when, a few years later, my cousin sent me a note originating from Amway which called for extra regulation and an improvement in the law to protect consumers. The company was actually campaigning for greater regulation. I understand that the Government later considered Amway's suggestions and some of what it wanted is incorporated in the changes proposed in the Bill, although it also suggested various other remedies.

I wish to contrast that story with the unfortunate experience of a constituent of mine. He was persuaded—perhaps I should say "conned"—to part with his newly received redundancy money. It was not a large sum and he was not a wealthy man. He was persuaded by an organisation that purported to be involved in some form of multi-level marketing, which was supposed to have some connection with insurance. The scheme was not quite clear, but its purpose was simply cash generation. My constituent was persuaded to hand over his money on the promise that he would be able to recruit more members to the scheme, who would hand over money to him. He would receive money from both directions. That sounds most implausible, but such schemes can seem very persuasive, especially to those who do not have much background or skill in marketing or business. My constituent believed that he would receive money from the person who recruited him as well as from those he would recruit.

Not surprisingly, my constituent did not hear much from the promoter of the scheme. After he had been relatively unsuccessful in tracking the promoter down, he found out, six months later, that the promoter had gone into liquidation and had set up in another similar business under a different company name. My constituent had lost all his money, but had no legal remedy. He looked into various methods to try to retrieve some of the money, to obtain compensation or to bring some criminal prosecution or civil action against the promoter of the scheme. However, there was no way in which he could effectively pursue his money. That story illustrates the unacceptable side of the multi-level marketing industry.

The proposals in the Bill would do much to stamp out that sort of practice. It would be overly optimistic to say that we could end all such criminal activity and all forms of swindle simply by passing an Act of Parliament. Clearly, people will still find ways to continue such frauds, especially if they involve a breach of the law, but the Bill would extend the protection of the law.

The Bill would redefine section 118 of the Fair Trading Act 1973, which defines those schemes that come under the other sections of the Act. The Bill would successfully broaden the scope of that Act to give protection to those people who are being caught out by some of the clever schemes that have been developed since 1973 and that revisit the abuses that existed in the 1960s.

Clause 2 is a fairly technical amendment to the Fair Trading Act 1973 and it would extend the definition of documentary advertising to include the more recently developed means of marketing and advertising—videos and, as my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea said, computers. My right hon. Friend referred to the Internet, but another common way to advertise is to give away small floppy disks. Those are then inserted in millions of computers and quickly bring up the advertising message, often in colour with graphics, sound and music. They are most effective and it is absolutely right that they should be covered by the Bill.

The Government published a consultation paper in 1995, called "Pyramid Selling and Similar Trading Schemes". That included a suggestion that the regulation of advertising of pyramid schemes should be extended. Is it possible, as we consider the Bill, to examine that suggestion in more detail? Perhaps the Government could consider whether that should be pursued and, if so, in what way.

I speak as someone who was connected with the advertising industry and who maintains an interest in it—not a financial interest, I hasten to add, but an interest in the operation of the industry. It is fair to say that it is well regulated and that it is a successful example of self-regulation, but I do not rule out the necessity of introducing statutory regulation as well from time to time. There is a good deal of evidence to suggest that most of what is required in the 1973 Act, as extended by the Bill, could be done under the self-regulatory system. Indeed, the consultation paper accepted that because it suggested that, where financial benefits were not mentioned, the schemes could be regulated through the British code of advertising practice, which is ultimately administered by the Advertising Standards Authority—a self-regulatory body.

The consultation paper also suggested that there might be merit in extending statutory protection where financial benefits were included in the advertisement. The suggestion was that the advertisement should contain the name and address of the promoter, full details of the goods being marketed and a statutory warning. I have no difficulty with that suggestion, which could be incorporated in the British code of advertising practice and possibly also in statute, but it might be of merit for the two options—directly by statute or regulation, or by agreement with the industry—to be pursued in more detail and, perhaps, incorporated in the Bill at some stage during its passage.

I end by wishing my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea and the Bill every success.

1.32 pm

Mr. Alan Duncan (Rutland and Melton): As a result of the Bill, my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea (Sir N. Scott) can from now on be properly described as the nation's chief scam buster, as that is what he is attacking. The proper title is the Trading Schemes Bill, and schemes are what it tackles—scheming schemes, wicked schemes and schemes devised to deceive. They are nothing to do with genuine trade; the trade that the Bill rightly attacks is trade in false hopes, false promises and on a false prospectus.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea is dealing with what might be termed chain-letter trading. The schemes are not devised properly, to trade on margins for profit in a reasonable way, but by what he described as a geometric progression, to generate cash along lines that are bound eventually to collapse and deprive investors of the money that they put in.

It is a sad fact of commercial life that people are all too often tempted by the promise of easy riches. Some do not realise when they are being taken for suckers. That is what the Bill will tackle.

The Bill will introduce into the area that my right hon. Friend identified the safeguards that apply in other areas. From now on, there will be proper contracts and rights of redress and, as much as it is possible to put it into law, provisions to prevent people parting with their money in a scheme that is bound to go into liquidation. I urge the House to give the Bill its full support.

As so often happens when I scrutinise legislation, however, I found the language of the Bill almost unintelligible. To understand the Bill, one must use the brief in the Library. The Bill's language refers, as it must, to how bits of the Fair Trading Act 1973 are to be amended. There is no way in which the Trading Schemes Bill could be described as self-contained. Without reference to existing legislation, it is not a comprehensible document. We must eventually move to being able to draft our legislation in plain language—to self-contained Acts and Bills that can stand up on their own and be understood by the layman and even by me.

1.35 pm

The Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs (Mr. John M. Taylor): My hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Duncan) is self-deprecating in an unjustified but, as always, engaging and rather charming way. I accept his remarks about simpler language and self-contained Bills, but if I were to hold up in evidence the Act of Parliament that the Bill seeks to amend, he would understand how difficult an exercise in self-containment would have been. I am not complacent about the matters that he raised. He is basically right and the public are on his side.

I thank my hon. Friend the Member for Brentford and Isleworth (Mr. Deva) for his thoughtful and informed comments. My hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Mr. Merchant) described what I can only call a horror story about a scheme whose operating methods will be made unlawful by the Bill. We might both well say thank goodness. He also asked me to consider some variations on the Bill as it progresses, as we all hope that it will. Subject to what my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea (Sir N. Scott) may say—it is his Bill—I am prepared to be as helpful as I can.

I must repair an omission by congratulating my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea on introducing the Bill. I am grateful to him for seeking to repair legislation in an area in which the public are vulnerable.

The Government, as hon. Members will have gathered, welcome the Bill, which will make it possible for all trading schemes whose members recruit others to be subject to control under either the Financial Services Act 1986 or part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973.

At present, the coverage of the Fair Trading Act's controls is narrow. I am pleased to report that, where those controls apply, they have been extremely effective in protecting members and potential members of trading schemes from being persuaded to take excessive risks. These controls, both the offences and the regulations, have the widespread support of the direct selling industry, but the Fair Trading Act cannot protect members and potential members of schemes that are not subject to its controls. We need to widen the coverage of those controls.

The Government, the industry and consumer organisations are as one in wanting the protection of the controls to extend to the members and potential members of all trading schemes whose members recruit others.

I understand that the total sales of schemes that currently comply with the Act's requirements probably exceed £300 million. All those sales are made by self-employed members of the schemes. There are probably some 300,000 such enterprising individuals, who sell a wide range of consumer goods, mostly in the customers' or their own homes. Some sell home cleaning and other household products; others cosmetics, jewellery, clothes, diet supplements, water filters, books, toys, and much else.

The Fair Trading Act's controls ensure that those individuals were not misled when recruited, and that each has a contract with the scheme's promoter that is fair, both in that the potential member is fully informed of the details of the scheme to which he is considering committing himself and in that the risks inherent in any sales operation are not loaded on to the member but shared with the promoter. The contractual rights of every member of a regulated scheme are protected by civil law.

We have consulted widely over possible amendments to part XI of the Fair Trading Act. Promoters of schemes that meet the Act's requirements generally agree that the Fair Trading Act 1973 provides much-needed protection. They are concerned—rightly concerned—that that protection is not available to members of all trading schemes.

At present, the protection is offered only for members and potential members of schemes according to two qualifying conditions. First, protection exists where the goods or services are provided by the promoter and sold to third parties under transactions effected by the members of the scheme. Secondly, protection exists where most of those transactions do not take place on premises where the promoter or the participant carries on other business.

Not all trading schemes follow that pattern. That results in part from changes in commercial arrangements in the past 20 years. There are reputable schemes that are not subject to the controls. I was pleased to learn that many such schemes nevertheless meet the 1973 Act's requirements in full.

It is clear that some schemes have been devised deliberately to avoid the controls. Recently there has been a proliferation of schemes in which members make payments, and in which their financial reward depends on them and other participants recruiting new members to the scheme. Such schemes are essentially unsound because it is absolutely certain that there are not enough people in the world to ensure that all who join can get the promised rewards. Some of those schemes may also involve members in selling something or other—such as a scheme for personal self-improvement or a decorator's paint-brush rest. But essentially those pyramid scams serve no real purpose other than the enrichment of their promoters. They are no more than money circulation schemes. They are a swindle.

Too many people have been taken in by such schemes' promises of riches. As my right hon. Friend said, too many people have lost their savings through those money circulation schemes. Members and potential members of too many types of trading scheme do not have the protection that the Fair Trading Act already provides for traditional schemes.

Pyramid scams are not new; nor are they confined to this country. Across much of Europe they are called "snowball schemes", and are outlawed in many countries.

In 1920, the United States was host to a pyramid scam operated by Charles Ponzi. Members of his scheme expected to double their money in three months. But all the payments out to those who joined early were made from the payments in by those who joined late. Eventually the scheme foundered, and Ponzi was sent to prison. Since then, Americans have called such pyramid scams Ponzi schemes.

Members of the House may recall publicity about recent pyramid scams in Russia and Romania. A Russian scam called three M was reported by the Financial Times to have lured 10 million investors into a company in which the only business was selling shares in itself, while the Romanian scheme, Caritas, was reported to have had 4 million members who paid in £690 million. Its members were promised a sevenfold return on their money in a hundred days. It foundered, after nearly two years, when new money stopped flowing in.

What is perhaps new is the sophistication of recent pyramid scams, which is why we have to return to the statute book and why we are grateful to my right hon. Friend. What is, sadly, old is how many people are taken in. Last year, 17,000 people lost £10 million in just three money circulation schemes. One person lost £78,000. My Department receives a large postbag and many telephone inquiries from anxious people who have been persuaded to join those scams.

It has been a matter of considerable frustration that it has not been possible to prosecute the promoters of those schemes under the Fair Trading Act 1973. If those scams were subject to the 1973 Act, its controls would outlaw their operating methods. As I have explained, we have used such powers as we have to protect the public from such schemes, but those are limited in their application, cumbersome and not totally effective.

The Department has used such measures as are available to wind up companies operating such schemes. The Bill will make it possible to prosecute the promoters, whatever their identity, if they try to persuade people to give money—by promising riches if others are persuaded to do the same. The Bill will also make it possible to act quickly—it does not require a pattern of trading to be established before action can be taken.

It may help hon. Members to appreciate the problem if I quote from the promotional material for some of the schemes that were operated by companies recently wound up by the courts.

Global Pioneers Ltd. had a brochure that opens with a letter from John Lisgo:

"Dear Reader, Over the past few years I have developed a system that has virtually guaranteed instant profits, and with the right guidance I know anyone can be just as successful. My journey begun with just £200, yet within less than 36 months, I had turned it into half a million pounds annual turnover and today I now enjoy personal incomes exceeding £20,000 per month."

In his judgment on the petition to wind up Global Pioneers Ltd., Mr. Justice Harman said:

"I am satisfied that the company inevitably would fail to make the returns it promised to its subscribers because the growth of these schemes cannot be exponential—there must come an end in time. Alternatively, if in the real world nobody expects them to be exponential, the representations that the rewards were available must have been untrue and untrue in the knowledge of the people who made them. On either footing they are a swindle on the public".

Frequency Programming World—or FPW as it was known—operated what it described as a "computer-generated money pay-out plan" which it said had "proved so incredibly successful that the club has decided to expand its membership, so now you too can benefit from its amazing returns and—what is more—there are no limits!

You are not required to do anything at all to profit from it—no sending mailshots or any other work! All you do is simply enter as much as you want, and bank your profit. £460 clear for every £140 entered. It really is that simple—no strings, no catch, no limits!"

Madam Deputy Speaker, you may find it hard to believe, but another scheme, operated by Alchemy UK plc, included what it described as testimonials from Sir Isaac Newton, William Shakespeare, Francis Bacon, Leonardo da Vinci and Marie Curie. It claimed that its scheme was based on

"the mathematical matrix formulae that for decades have been used by western Governments to fund their economies. The very same formulae that are guarded so secretly and only until now disclosed to those who obtain the highest Government office."

Clearly, I have not reached high enough Government office. I do not know whether my right hon. Friend the Member for Chelsea, who is a Privy Councillor, which is a fairly high attainment in our political affairs, ever became privy to the formula recommended by Sir Isaac Newton or whether it was withheld from him. Clearly, as an Under-Secretary of State, I am not supposed to know the model, so I shall never become rich.

When the wonderful scheme, Alchemy UK plc, was wound up by the courts—they all seem to end up in the courts—its directors informed its members that

"yet again they have run circles around the DTI and will continue to trade unaffected".

The Government believe that money circulation schemes should be subject to the controls of the Fair Trading Act. The recruitment offences under the Act would then effectively outlaw the operating methods of the pyramid scams.

There have been trading schemes that fall within the definition of investment business in the Financial Services Act 1986. To ensure that no scheme is subject to control under both the Financial Services Act and the Fair Trading Act, the Bill excludes from control under the Fair Trading Act trading schemes under which the promoters or participants carry on investment business in the United Kingdom. I emphasise "investment business" because it is a term of art referred to in the Bill at clause 1(6)(a). It is a specific term of art that is necessary to ensure that there is no gap between the Financial Services Act and the Fair Trading Act, and to ensure that they do not overlap.

Some money circulation schemes have also fallen within the definition of investment business for largely technical reasons. But the nature of those schemes makes them unfitted for regulation as investment business. The Government therefore intend to make an order under section 2 of the Financial Services Act to take the schemes out of the scope of that Act. We intend the order to come into effect at the same time as the Bill comes into force. In that way, those money circulation schemes will not benefit from the exclusion of investment business. They will be subject to the controls of the Fair Trading Act.

The Trading Schemes Bill provides powers to exclude prescribed schemes from all the Fair Trading Act controls. We intend to use that power to exclude two types of scheme: first, franchise schemes in which only one UK participant can benefit from the activities of other participants; and secondly, simple chain letters.

Franchise schemes are generally trading schemes that operate on a larger scale than the typical direct selling scheme. Typically, the participants or franchisees make a substantial investment in the business. There is much confusion about their position. At present, the only franchise schemes that are not subject to any of the Act's controls are: those where the franchisees do not sell goods or services provided by the franchisor; or if most of the sales are made on premises where either the franchisor or franchisee carries on other business. Therefore, most franchise schemes are already subject to control under the Fair Trading Act. But most are exempt from the pyramid selling schemes regulations, which exempt schemes where only one UK participant can expect to benefit from the activities of other members of the scheme.

I am pleased to note that the Direct Selling Association has expressed support for the Bill. It is the main trade association for businesses whose sales personnel are self-employed. I understand that its members have nearly 500,000 independent sales people. The majority of those businesses are subject to the current controls. In addition, they comply with the code, which demands higher standards than are statutorily required.

The vast majority of people who are involved in direct sales operate lawfully and legitimately: they go about their proper business. It is the few who damage the rest. The Government are pleased to support the Bill, which would bring the protection of the criminal courts to potential members of all trading schemes and ensure that all those who join a scheme have contractual rights that are protected by civil courts. Many hon. Members have pressed for some such action and the proposal to introduce protection has been widely welcomed. I, too, welcome the Bill and I hope that it soon becomes law.

Gender Identity (Registration and Civil Status) Bill

Order for Second Reading read.

1.55 pm

Mr. Alex Carlile (Montgomery): I beg to move, That the Bill be now read a Second time.

The Bill is about transsexuals—a significant group of people in our society who, in a phrase, are deprived of the ordinary protections of law that we take for granted. I am grateful for the support that I received in the preparation of the Bill from transsexuals and others all over the country who have effectively lobbied not only me but hon. Members in all parts of the House on this issue. I am also grateful for the support of right hon. and hon. Members in all parts of the House. I have yet to hear from a right hon. or hon. Member who does not support the principle of the Bill, and only one significant misgiving has been expressed about part of it.

I should like to express my gratitude to Mr. Terence Walton from the firm of Fallon, solicitors in London, for his assistance in the drafting of the Bill. Mr. Walton was the solicitor for April Ashley in the well-known and leading case of Corbett v. Corbett, in which judgment was given 26 years ago to this very day. The issue has been in the public domain for more than a quarter of a century. The problem remains unresolved and is becoming increasingly acute.

It gives me special pleasure to note that the Minister who is to respond to the debate is the Under-Secretary of State for Health, the hon. Member for Orpington (Mr. Horam). I can think of no one in the House better qualified to understand the issue. The hon. Gentleman started his active political life as a Labour Member, later going into limbo as an early member of the Social Democrat party, and has emerged as a Conservative Minister. No doubt he would say that his brain has always been Conservative really. An interesting analogy can be drawn between the Minister's political position and the rather more unfortunate situation faced by transsexuals. The Minister, from his august and influential position, is able to claim many rights for himself. I hope that when he replies to the debate he will not seek to deprive others of rights.

It used to be thought that transsexualism was a florid psychological state enjoyed—I use the word advisedly—by hysterical individuals who wished to draw attention to themselves, and who were the object of a good deal of laughter and risible printed comment. I am glad to say that the situation has changed. Since I have been involved in this issue, for some 10 years or so, press comment has moved away from the jokey, freak-of-the-week-type comment to a serious discussion in newspapers and journals about the issue of transsexualism, why it arises and what should be done about it.

Perhaps one of the main reasons why the flavour of the argument has changed is that science has at last begun to play a real part in our understanding of what transsexualism is and how it arises. In November last year, neurobiologist Dr. D. F. Swaab of the Netherlands and his international colleagues at the Netherlands Institute for Brain Research in Amsterdam announced and published their post mortem study of a tiny region of the brain known as the BSTc—the central subdivision of the bed nucleus of the stria terminalis.

[Mr. Alex Carlile]

The study showed that, on average, the stria terminalis was 44 per cent. larger in heterosexual men than in heterosexual women. More remarkably, the BSTcs of six male-to-female transsexuals, whose post mortem brains the researchers had painstakingly collected during the course of 11 years, were 52 per cent. smaller than those of the average man in the study and were in fact about the same size as those of the females-from-birth. The researchers had chosen to study the BSTc because previous research in rodents had shown that it plays a pivotal role in sexual behaviour. Remove the BSTc from a rat, and the animal will show no interest whatsoever in sex. The findings led very distinguished scientists to conclude that in humans, too, BSTc size is programmed during foetal and neonatal development—perhaps as a result of an interaction between sex hormones and the developing brain—and is probably not the result of parental, social or psychological pressures after birth.

Dr. Swaab and others concluded that transsexuals are right in their belief that their sex was wrongly judged at the moment of birth, and can understand why it was so judged. At the moment of birth, it is possible to look at the sex organs, but it is not possible to look at the BSTc in the brain. However, the research seems to demonstrate that in terms of their brain BSTc, transsexuals are in fact of the gender that they later come to acquire after gender reassignment therapy.

In a paper given to the Council of Europe's 23rd colloquy on European law, Professor Gooren suggested that there is now evidence that the sexual differentiation process of the brain in transsexuals has not followed the ordinary course. Although sex assignment at birth by the criterion of the external sex organs is statistically reliable, in people who experience transsexualism it is not. Those people are exceptions to the statistical rule, and perhaps therein lie the roots of their difficulty: we all know how easy it is to rely on statistics and to ignore reality.

What are the consequences in human terms? Transsexuals in this country have told me and other hon. Members of those consequences. I pay tribute, in particular, to the work done in this sphere by the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones), who has established the Forum on Transsexualism. We worked as a partnership to try to improve the situation of transsexuals, and I suspect that I am presenting the Bill rather than she only because I was successful in the ballot and she was not.

Dr. Lynne Jones (Birmingham, Selly Oak): I thank my hon. and learned Friend—I will call him that at least for the purposes of today's debate. Tribute should also be paid to those individuals who have been brave enough to allow hon. Members and the public to know about their personal experiences. That has contributed a great deal to the changed atmosphere and the way in which society at large regards those people. We should pay tribute to their bravery because they risk discrimination and suffering as a result of their willingness to reveal their experiences.

Mr. Carlile: I agree with my hon. Friend, and I recommend that hon. Members and others read some of the recent serious and useful short autobiographies produced by transsexuals. The most recent is that by Mark Rees. Having written the forewords to, I believe, two of the most recent three, I have been able to enjoy reading them before they were published and understand what a clear picture they give of the condition.

I wish to say a little more about the human consequences and the discrimination that transsexuals face. In employment terms, it is apparently possible—at present, at least—for transsexuals to be dismissed solely because they are transsexuals. They also face discrimination in educational institutions, and in Department of Social Security offices where, although the staff may be extremely polite and helpful, the computer does not tell the real truth about the person before it. There are many other examples, but I do not have time to cite them as we have only half an hour or so available.

What type of people face discrimination? I received perhaps 200 letters from transsexuals during the preparation of the Bill. That is a remarkable number because, as my colleague implied a moment ago, it is more convenient for transsexuals to remain in the closet, keep themselves to themselves and function quietly in their acquired gender. Nevertheless, some very brave people have come forward.

Hon. Members should not get the idea that transsexuals are not playing their full part in society. I have had letters from at least two dons at Oxford university who are transsexuals and involved in distinguished scientific and other work. Other transsexuals are lawyers, doctors, company owners and executives, civil servants, teachers and nurses. In one case, a nurse is obtaining support from other members of the medical staff at the hospital where they work. Transsexuals are to be found across the spectrum of society and represent a cross-section of the population.

I shall say a word about a group of people who are not covered by the Bill but of whom I hope that the Government will take account. Very occasionally, genuine physical hermaphroditism arises at birth. I have received two moving letters from midwives who have been involved professionally in such cases. It is extremely difficult to judge what should appear on the birth certificate at that stage, and a wrong judgment has been made in one or two cases when viewed in light of the feelings, activities and behaviour of the people involved, but there is no mechanism to correct misrecording at birth. I raise that point simply so that it is not overlooked. Such cases have produced moving submissions.

Let us compare the situation in this country with that in other countries. In Germany, perhaps as one would expect, there is an efficient tribunal system to deal with transsexuals. Once they have gone through the system, they can live with full rights in their acquired gender. In the United States, it is permissible in certain states for a transsexual to marry after treatment. In Australia, there is a limited right to marry, although problems have arisen in connection with female-to-male transsexuals.

If a person who is a transsexual marries in their acquired role in one of those countries and comes to live with their spouse in the United Kingdom, they face an extraordinary situation. They would not have been allowed to marry here and yet, as I understand private international law, they are entitled to have their marriage recognised as lawful. It is a confusing international legal situation which needs to be sorted out. Transsexuals can also marry in this country, but only in the most bizarre circumstances: one transsexual can marry another transsexual provided that, in law, the bride is the groom and the groom is the bride. We surely do not want our law to support such an asinine situation.

Is the transsexual community simply sitting back and waiting for the Government to take half a century to reach a conclusion, on the basis that the matter has taken a quarter of a century already, so it may as well take another quarter of a century? Not a bit of it—if the Government do not take some action, it will cost them a great deal of money because they will lose case after case in the international and possibly also the domestic courts.

In a case going through the European Court of Justice, P v. Cornwall county council, Advocate-General Tesauro has given an unfavourable opinion, which I suspect is likely to be upheld. If that is so, it will be held that the United Kingdom should have anti-discrimination legislation relating to the employment of transsexuals. The European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg—the difference between the two courts is not often well understood, but they are very different—has before it, with leave to proceed to full judgment, the cases of Kristina Sheffield and Rachel Horsham, which relate to birth certificates and their consequences. Reading the preliminary documents from the court, it seems very likely that the Government will lose.

Leave to move for judicial review was given by Mr. Justice Brooke—the recently retired chairman of the Law Commission who has now returned full time to the Bench—in a case heard on 29 January. Other cases are before the Queen's Bench division of the High Court in relation to transsexuals, and there are many more to come. We should not be looking for piecemeal reform of the law through reaction to the Government's loss of case after case. We know that there is a problem and a solution must be found. My Bill seeks to provide that solution by a procedure which does not command universal support, but which seems to be as good a mechanism as can be found without offending certain assumptions.

One of the assumptions that I have accepted for the purposes of the Bill, although I am not sure that I accept it fully intellectually, is that a birth certificate can never be amended. It ought to be possible to amend a public document that is proved to have been scientifically wrong when it was prepared. For present purposes, however, let us say that that is not appropriate.

We seek to allow transsexuals who have completed appropriate treatment in each case to go to the High Court family division and obtain a recognition certificate. From that, it is my intention and that of the other sponsors of the Bill that the Registrar-General would issue a new certificate from a new register—not involving alteration to the birth certificate, but resulting in a birth certificate that is physically indistinguishable from the original. Following the issue of that certificate, the rights to which I have referred would follow. Transsexuals would be able to live in their acquired role, particularly as their achievement of gender reassignment would have been proved by applying to the High Court and producing medical evidence. That being so, why should they not have employment protection? Why should they not be entitled to marry? Why should they not be entitled to adopt children if the court is satisfied that it is an appropriate case for adoption? I know of stable families in which one person has undergone gender reassignment therapy. There are several examples and there would be many more if transsexuals were not forced to hide what has happened to them and to pretend, in the face of bureaucracy, that they are what the law says that they are not.

I look forward to hearing the Minister's response and I hope that it will be a positive one. I hope that the Government will say that in view of the plethora of Government Departments involved in the issue—that is a pretty lame excuse for taking no action—someone will co-ordinate the Government's views on the issue. I would like the matter to go immediately to the Law Commission for a quick report. I would like the commission to produce legislation which would be an ideal vehicle for a further private Member's Bill.

2.15 pm

Mr. Roger Sims (Chislehurst): In 21 years as a Member of Parliament, I had not encountered the issues raised in the Bill. Last year, however, I had two constituency cases of people in this condition whom I tried to help. When I went to the Conservative party conference this year, I noticed that one of the fringe meetings, arranged by an organisation called Press for Change, was about the medical and legal implications of transsexuality.

I admit that I went to the meeting with a mixture of curiosity and scepticism. My views on homosexuality, for example, might be described as conventional and I find the expression "gay priests" a contradiction in terms. However, I soon learned that transsexuality was something very different. We are talking about people where nature did not get it quite right—where nature made a mistake.

A transsexual is defined as a person

"having the physical characteristics of one sex and the psychological characteristics of the other."

One of the doctors at the meeting said that we were talking about a man in a woman's body, or vice versa. It is a condition that is capable of medical treatment, although not in every case. I was impressed by the extent and the detail of the treatment that can be given. Transsexuality is a recognised medical condition which can be treated successfully through gender reassignment, enabling the individual to lead a full and normal life.

The meeting was organised by a lady who was attending the Conservative party conference as a representative. She represented her constituency, where she is active in the party. She is a branch secretary, chairman of her supper club and typical of the ladies whom many of my hon. Friends know in their constituencies. Yet her birth certificate shows her as a man and she cannot legally marry. If she applies for a job, her birth certificate will have to be produced and the House will appreciate what might follow from that.

I well understand the difficulties that surround the proposition that a legal document should be changed, but I believe that the Bill contains an ingenious solution which would make life better for the people whom I have described. I hope that my hon. Friend the Minister will feel that he can give the Bill sympathetic consideration.

2.19 pm

Mr. Kevin Barron (Rother Valley): I congratulate the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on his good fortune in the ballot for private Members'

[Mr. Kevin Barron]

Bills. Unfortunately, speaking from experience—I am sure that the hon. and learned Gentleman knows this better than most—without Government support the likelihood of such Bills being enacted is nil.

There is much debate within parts of the medical and legal communities about the status of transsexuals, and the issue should be addressed. I have been in the House longer than the hon. Member for Chislehurst (Mr. Sims), and over the past few years, I have often had dealings with a transsexual in my constituency.

Medical knowledge about the condition, which is known as gender identity dysphoria, has changed dramatically over the years. Much more is known today about both the syndrome and the methods of diagnosis and treatment, which are far in advance of those available when it was first identified in the 1950s.

Biological evidence and indicators can be examined to assist in determining cases of gender dysphoria, and hormonal treatments and surgical techniques, together with therapy and counselling, can help an individual to cope with the physical and psychological effects of having an incongruent body. Studies of the effects of adopting that approach suggest that success rates for individuals who have undergone appropriate treatment are better than 90 per cent.

Although medical advances have helped individuals to come to terms with the syndrome, the law has not kept up with those developments. British law is now out of step with that of many of our European neighbours, and in law those who have undergone reassignment treatment are still identified as their previous sex, not their present sex. The law takes no account of their lives in permanently changed gender roles.

Clearly, that leads to problems. The case has been made in the debate that the law on the status of transsexuals is too inflexible. In Europe, recognition has already been given. The European Court of Justice said:

"The law cannot cut itself off from society as it actually is".

Legislators, too, must recognise that.

The European Court has also ruled that discrimination against transsexuals in employment is contrary to European law, so the United Kingdom Government may soon have to introduce legislation to correct that failure. That being the case, the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery has suggested that other parts of the law should be brought into line too. Such a change would put this country on a par with many of our European counterparts. Even if that change is not brought about through the Bill, it will still have to be made some time, if we are to return to a coherent law on discrimination.

I echo the hon. and learned Gentleman's final words. If we need a Law Commission report on the subject, that should be arranged quickly. It is wrong that such discrimination should exist in our midst, and we should take action now, instead of taking the piecemeal path that the hon. and learned Gentleman described, whereby we deal with issues only when a confrontation arises because we are outside European law. I hope that the Minister will look sympathetically at the idea of doing something further, because it is obvious that the Bill will not have time to progress in this Session of Parliament.

2.23 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. John Horam): In introducing the Bill, the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) drew an analogy between my political progress and the situation of transsexuals. I am flattered by being associated with what he clearly regards as a noble cause, but it is a little dangerous for him to make such comparisons, because those of us who are firmly on one side of the House or another have always regarded the Liberal Democrats as thoroughly confused, unable to make up their minds whether they are on the left or the right. If one is in a glass house, it is a little dangerous to throw stones.

None the less, I congratulate the hon. and learned Gentleman on his success in the ballot, and on bringing forward for debate a Bill that attempts to tackle such fundamental and important issues. I am sorry that it is now 2.23 pm on a Friday; perhaps it would have been better to have debated the measure earlier in the day—but such was not his luck.

The purpose of the Bill is to grant recognition of change of sex for all purposes to anyone who, under the terms of the Bill, has undergone gender reassignment treatment and has obtained a recognition certificate from the High Court, provision for which the hon. and learned Gentleman makes in the Bill. The Bill makes provision for medical, judicial and administrative procedures to facilitate the change, culminating in the issue by the Registrar-General of a birth certificate in the new sexual identity.

People who undergo gender reassignment treatment are commonly referred to as transsexuals, although I am aware that many prefer the term gender dysphoria. They are biologically of one sex, but feel themselves to be of the other. Transsexuals may undergo hormone treatment and, in many cases, gender reassignment surgery.

The Government are sympathetic to the distress felt by transsexuals, and we have tried to smooth the transition from one gender identity to the other. Gender reassignment operations are permitted without any kind of legal formalities. The surgery and treatment may be carried out under the NHS—[Interruption.] That is the case.

The law entitles any person to adopt such first names and surnames as he or she wishes without any restrictions or formalities, except in connection with the practice of some professions where the use of the new names may be subject to certain formalities. The new names are valid for the purposes of legal identification, and Government Departments and the agencies concerned will issue documents such as passports, driving licences, car registration books, national insurance cards and medical cards in the new name.

That has helped the progress of transsexuals and mitigates the obvious problems and distress associated with their position. The Bill would move the recognition process a further step on to relate it to the change of sex, rather than to the personal and legal identification that has been the focus of the present position.

The hon. and learned Gentleman is aware from our discussions that his Bill, sadly, is defective in a number of respects. None the less, I can assure him that the Government recognise the importance of the issues that he has raised. We take them seriously, and we shall carefully consider the issues raised by the Bill. To that extent, I believe that, even though the Bill has had a relatively short time to be debated today, it has fulfilled a useful purpose in taking the argument on to a further stage.

Mrs. Edwina Currie (South Derbyshire): Does my hon. Friend realise that, despite his litany of permitted changes in documentation, he has not yet set out a good argument as to why that should not include birth certificates?

Mr. Horam: That is one of the points that I want to come to. The changing of a birth certificate is one of the problems that the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery recognised during our discussions. I am sorry to say that, while the Bill makes a credible effort, it does not overcome something that the Registrar-General sees as a real problem.

Dr. Lynne Jones: I do not understand why there is a difficulty. In a letter to me, the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys said that, on average over the past 10 years, there have been 30 applications for corrections to the sex recorded at birth, and added that most have been granted. Furthermore, before the Corbett v. Corbett case, it was normal for birth certificates to be changed.

Mr. Horam: A number of changes have been made, but only after it has been recognised that a mistake was made at birth. Indeed, it is normal to wait until after the sex is clear before a birth certificate is issued as a safeguard. Occasionally, errors have occurred despite those precautions and a subsequent correction has been made. There has never been a case where a correction has been made because someone's sex has changed during his or her life—a point to which my hon. Friend the Member for South Derbyshire (Mrs. Currie) referred. There are real problems in making the change perhaps 20 or 30 years after the birth, but there have been instances when it has happened very shortly after the birth. I shall skip some of the points that I intended to make to deal with this particular point, which is obviously a matter of concern to hon. Members. Apart from the complex policy and legal implications, which are manifold, there is also the problem of how to provide tangible public recognition of the new civil status of a transsexual.

To date, the campaign by transsexuals has focused heavily on birth certification. Many transsexuals appear to believe, in my view wrongly, that if the Registrar-General would only agree to amend their birth certificates, that would suffice to change their legal sex. I acknowledge that the Bill does not entirely take that line. The hon. and learned Gentleman attempts to go further. He proposes to change birth registrations as one means of giving effect to a wider objective. However, sadly, his method of doing so would undermine the basis of birth registration in Britain. I shall explain that.

The entry in the birth register is a record of the facts as they were at the time of birth. It may be changed by annotation of the original record if the facts—

Medway Towns (Relief Road)

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Ottaway.]

2.30 pm

Mr. James Couchman (Gillingham): May I first say how pleased I am to have been granted a debate, at the first time of asking, on a subject that is of crucial importance to the future prosperity of my constituency and those of my hon. Friends the Members for Medway (Dame P. Fenner) and for Mid-Kent (Mr. Rowe). I am delighted that my hon. Friend the Member for Medway is in her place today and will wish to speak later in this debate. Had he been able to rearrange his day, my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Kent would have sought to reinforce the dismay that I intend to express at the deferment of the Gillingham northern link and the Wainscott northern bypass, two legs of the Medway towns northern relief road.

The Royal Navy withdrew from the royal naval base and dockyard, Chatham in March 1984. A part of the closed dockyard was almost immediately disposed of to the then Medway Ports Authority, which formed a subsidiary, Chatham Dock Company, to operate a commercial port with roll on/roll off ferries. One of the port's first tenants was the Norfolk Line/Kent Line and we were immediately faced with some 300 large lorry movements each day and through the night through narrow residential roads and streets in Gillingham more suited to traffic of an era pre-dating the motor car.

The result was a nightmare for my constituents and those of my hon. Friends. The deep bitterness at the Government's closure of Chatham dockyard was compounded by the realisation that any redevelopment of the 500 acres of the dockyard site was likely to involve a replacement of the Navy's previous mainly waterborne servicing of the naval base with road transport, including large lorries. There was a substantial outcry from those affected and from Gillingham borough council.

There was at that time an embryonic plan to build a northern relief road, but to say that it had not even reached the back burner, let alone been accorded any priority by Kent county council, would be to understate its then insignificance. I became something of a lone voice crying in the wilderness for Kent county council to start working up the scheme and to accord it some priority in seeking funding approval, but there was little enthusiasm at county hall, as was evidenced at a meeting in December 1983.

By the time the Navy left, English Industrial Estates, later English Estates, and now English Partnerships, had been engaged to prepare a strategic plan for the redevelopment, management and re-use of the large part of this vital site which had been in the Royal Navy's hands for more than 450 years. Excluded from the land handed over to English Partnerships were the area taken by the dock company and the largest concentration of ancient monuments in Europe collectively known as the Chatham historic dockyard, the management and exploitation of which was entrusted to a distinguished trust.

Early in English Partnerships' tenure, it became evident that good road communications would be crucial to the successful redevelopment of what would become known as Chatham Maritime. The Medway towns northern relief road gradually became, with much prompting from me and my hon. Friends, a more and more desirable project.

The dockyard closure, with the loss of several other major employers during the early 1980s recession, raised unemployment to nearly 20 per cent. The designation of 60 acres of Chatham Maritime as an addition to the north-west Kent enterprise zone in February 1986 helped to increase interest in the development, but still the poor road communications hampered English Partnerships in its efforts to market the site.

At about that time, in January 1986, the county council issued a feasibility study for the third element of the relief road—the new third crossing of the Medway. Out of three options, an immersed tube tunnel was preferred, after consultation, to a high or low-level bridge, notwithstanding the additional cost. By July 1987, the county had issued a consultation paper for all three elements with an estimated total cost, including the tunnel option, of about £70 million.

By August 1988, so urgent was it considered to make a start on that vital scheme that the ancient and perhaps unique Rochester Bridge Trust sought to promote a private Bill to construct a new road tunnel under the Medway using novel funding from English Estates—as it then was—Kent county council, Rochester-upon-Medway city council, Gillingham borough council and the trust itself. The trust was ultimately to own the new crossing as it has owned crossings since mediaeval times.

The Bill made slow progress through the House and, although lodged in November 1988, did not achieve Royal Assent until July 1990. In the event, the mixture of public and private funding for the tunnel fell in May 1991 as an unintended victim of section 48 of the Local Government Act 1989, which had been designed to prevent creative accounting by spendthrift councils.

Good news, however, arrived at Christmas 1991 when Kent county council achieved transport supplementary grant—TSG—for the tunnel. Tenders had been received pending the outcome of the failed exotic funding proposal. It is worth noting that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, then the Secretary of State for Transport, expressed the hope, in a letter dated 5 May 1991, that the northern relief road would come about, although he was less than forthcoming about where the money—by now more than £100 million—would come from. However, as I said, Kent county council included the scheme as top priority in the transport policies and programme—TPP—bid for 1992-93 and the tunnel element of the scheme achieved TSG. The feeder roads, as they were called by my right hon. and learned Friend, were given credit approvals, but without TSG. Kent received—for the first time—a huge settlement in that year and the Medway towns northern relief road appeared to be on its way.

There was token expenditure on the tunnel in 1992-93, but by 1993-94 the major construction had begun in earnest and proceeded apace. Three enormous concrete sections of the tube were cast. The 1993-94 settlement, however, had not brought TSG for the Gillingham link road and the Wainscott northern bypass and, between March and July 1993, the Secretary of State's inspector conducted public inquiries into the two roads and the orders attaching thereto. Those inquiries were to prove fateful and may be the reason why we are here today.

I shall have more to say later on the way in which the inquiries were conducted, and especially about the reporting.

By mid-1993, English Partnerships was becoming anxious about progress on the two roads and was hopeful that the decisions from the two inquiries might be made by the end of that year. It pressed very hard. By now, my right hon. Friend the Member for South Norfolk (Mr. MacGregor) had become Secretary of State for Transport and I was urged to try to progress TSG for the following year, 1994-95, in the confident expectation that construction would start in that year. Kent county council duly submitted the two schemes in its TPP submission as a "resubmission for future commitment and TSG".

On 15 December 1993, my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key)—then a Minister—wrote to me with the details of the TSG and supplementary credit approval settlement for 1994-95. In another huge settlement for Kent, both Gillingham northern link and Wainscott northern bypass had been approved for TSG in the sums of almost £40 million and nearly £56 million respectively, with substantial tranches for a start on both in 1994-95. With the Medway tunnel—now estimated at £57 million—the Medway towns northern relief road, with a price tag of £152 million, was the largest non-trunk road scheme in the country.

A start for both roads in the summer of 1994 was confidently expected by my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury. My hon. Friends the Members for Medway and for Mid-Kent and I, with the various councils, the Rochester Bridge Trust and English Partnerships, enjoyed our Christmas turkey for 1993, quietly confident that it had all been worth while. All the pain and frustration was at an end.

Or was it? We had all forgotten what I might call the buggeration factor—1994 came and went, but answer came there none from the inspector. Rumours abounded that he had gone sick, or worse. At the urging of English Partnerships, my hon. Friends and I were in regular contact with Ministers. One major relief came at Christmas 1994, when the schemes—by now totalling £157 million—were still included in the TSG settlement for 1995-96 in view of the expectation of substantial expenditure in that year. That was just as well, for by now the Medway tunnel was beginning to take shape and the prospect of its opening before the bypass roads was viewed with mixed feelings. It was realised that traffic might use the tunnel as an alternative route to London, causing worse problems than we already had.

Finally, the Secretary of State's decision on the Gillingham northern link was received on 12 April 1995. With minor adjustments, the county council could proceed with that element. Preliminary works were started, but still there was no word on Wainscott, despite my hon. Friends and my constant badgering of our hon. Friend the Under-Secretary who is to answer today's debate.

There was some correspondence between the county council and the Department on the side road orders and other minor issues and at least some of the delay seems to accrue from tardiness in the council's providing information, but there also appears to have been a process of "decelerated progress" at a technical level in the Department.

It was not until 8 January 1996—three weeks ago—that the affirmative decision on the side road order and compulsory purchase for Wainscott northern bypass was announced, 34 months after the public inquiry began. By now, however, catastrophe had struck. Christmas 1995 had brought a much less generous TSG settlement nationally and, although Kent received by far the largest settlement of £36 million and a £81 million total spending allocation, it was about £30 million short of its needs.

Worse though, was the news that, having been embarrassed by its inability to spend its previous allocation because of the interminable delays in the Secretary of State's decision on the Gillingham northern link and Wainscott northern bypass, the county had taken the decision during 1995 to proceed with the provision of dual carriageway for the Thanet way, A299, and a scheme on the A256 at Whitfield.

Furthermore, the 1996-97 TSG settlement—unusually given to Kent as a block grant, as opposed to being scheme specific—was so much less than needed that it would barely cover the contractual commitments on the two alternative schemes. I am told that only £8 million of the block grant of TSG is uncommitted and, although that might allow letting of the contracts on Wainscott and/or the Gillingham northern link and a token start being made on site during 1996-97, without the assurance that a sufficient TSG settlement for subsequent years will be available the county is unenthusiastic about putting itself at risk of having to abort contracts once committed.

What is more, the county has three other approved smaller schemes on which it could commit the uncommitted £8 million. It is holding its decisions, pending the outcome of discussions of what might be done to progress with confidence the Medway towns relief road; this debate is a part of that exploration.

So what is to be done? English Partnerships has committed £150 million—including its contribution to the tunnel—to the development and attracted a similar sum from the private sector; if one includes the remaining cost of the tunnel, about £300 million or more has been invested in the redevelopment of the former dockyard.

Despite some notable coups, such as the letting to the Overseas Development Natural Resources Institute of the former naval barracks and the letting of a superb headquarters building to the Colonial and Mutual insurance company, the marketing of some splendid new buildings is still bedevilled by the uncertainty about road communications.

The proposed widening of the poorly built M2 between junctions 1 and 4 raises the spectre of more traffic being diverted through the towns over Rochester bridge, which already carries some 50,000 vehicle movements a day. Memories of the legendary solid traffic jams from Strood to Rainham on the old A2—Watling street in the charabanc days before the M2 was built—come flooding back. We are regularly reminded of such horrors when the two-lane M2 is blocked by an accident. The historic dockyard is not receiving a just number of potential visitors because of poor access.

I am told that the county council remains committed to this important road scheme, and I believe that. It is investigating the possibility of obtaining alternative loan finance, but loans mean repayment and repayment ultimately means transport supplementary grant. Thus it is that I must ask my hon. Friend the Minister to seek most urgently a way forward to give Kent county council the necessary confidence to let the contracts for Gillingham northern link and Wainscott northern bypass this year, sure in the knowledge that the TSG income stream will continue to the successful conclusion of the contracts. The hopes and fears for a prosperous future for 250,000 people in Gillingham, Rochester and Chatham rest with him.

2.45 pm

Dame Peggy Fenner (Medway): I am grateful to my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman) for letting me have a short time to speak, after his comprehensive history of this notorious and disappointing transport matter. He explained how important the road is to our constituents in the Medway towns. That shows how interdependent we are in our road structure, which is vital industrially.

My hon. Friend mentioned what is happening in Chatham Maritime, where we hope to use dockyard land to bring back more prosperity to the Medway towns. We lost so many job opportunities when the Government closed the naval dockyard and base that the bypass is essential for redevelopment. He described at length the indefensible delay of the public inquiry and the issue of the final report. I do not want to repeat the elegant and eloquent words with which he regaled the House.

I have three questions and my constituents want answers. I want to give my hon. Friend the Minister plenty of time to answer, but I know, being the good friend that he is, that he will ensure that I receive answers by letter if he does not have time to answer my questions now.

The orders have been signed, albeit only on 18 January. The annexe describing transport supplementary grant issue for this year has been produced. Halfway down the list is the project that is numbered 5533 and named Wainscott northern bypass. The document, with immense optimism, gives the start year as 1994-95. My hon. Friend the Minister will learn what a miserable start we have had. The project is marked with an asterisk, of which the document states:

"An asterisk after a reference number denotes a scheme accepted for TSG in this settlement".

To my constituents, that means that the money has been allocated and will start in 1996-97. My hon. Friend the Minister has dedicated the public money to the scheme. It is named and identified in the list. With the help that my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham has sought, will my hon. Friend the Minister insist that the project starts this year, in 1996?

My second question is whether this is the first time that the Department of Transport has adopted the doctrine that the Highways Agency is responsible for deciding priority. If so, why? Surely it is rotten, bad housekeeping to give an allocation of public funds with no assurance of compliance with the projects listed.

My third question relates to my constituents, who are extremely worried because they believe that the planning consents that cover the northern Wainscott bypass will expire early in 1997. Will the Minister tell them what, hypothetically, would be the problem?

I introduced my brief remarks by commenting on the importance of the road, industrially and environmentally, to our quarter of a million constituents. May I ask the Minister to look seriously at the protection of the living environment for the thousands of people in my constituency whose houses are pounded night and day by heavy lorries and other traffic through Brompton Farm road, Rede Court road, Hollywood lane and countless other areas in my constituency? That will continue until the new tunnel is in use. Will my hon. Friend reassure my constituents that the procedures are completed, ensure that money is provided, and instruct that the road shall be built?

2.50 pm

The Minister for Transport in London (Mr. Steve Norris): I am grateful to my hon. Friends the Members for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman) and for Medway (Dame P. Fenner) for raising the topic of the Medway towns northern relief road. It is a road scheme that has particular importance for my Department, even though it has been built by Kent county council, and when completed, will be part of its road network.

The scheme has three sections—Wainscott northern, the Medway tunnel and the Gillingham northern link. I shall say a brief word about each and how they interrelate.

Following on from the observations of my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham, the key objective of the Wainscott scheme is to provide greatly improved access to the Isle of Grain, and to allow for the expansion and development of that area, while at the same time taking heavy goods traffic away from unsuitable residential roads in the Wainscott area. As my hon. Friend said, it is valuable piece of infrastructure.

The Medway towns northern relief road heads south from the junction with the A228 to the western end of the new tunnel under the River Medway. The tunnel is, of course, a considerable engineering feat. My hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham referred to my former boss, my right hon. Friend the Member for South Norfolk (Mr. MacGregor). I recall him walking through the tunnel, and, if I remember correctly, my hon. Friends were with him. The tunnel is an extraordinary technical achievement. It is an immersed tube, 725 m long. The tunnel scheme also includes a link to a new roundabout on Anthonys way on the western side. To the east, the grade separated interchange at Pembroke road provides access to the Chatham Maritime development, to which my hon. Friend the Member for Medway referred. That is a key development, especially in the unfolding context of the Thames Gateway. That junction was financed by English Partnerships, the developer of Chatham Maritime. The developer contribution to the cost of the Medway tunnel is currently about £25 million.

Chatham Maritime is a flagship of the Government's Thames Gateway initiative, and it is starting to develop. Earlier this year, the Halifax building society took a 25-year lease on Royal Sovereign house, which will be its new administrative centre for the south-east. Time (Open Systems) Ltd., a financial software specialist, has decided to locate its new national headquarters at Chatham Maritime.

Moving further east, away from the tunnel, we reach the particular interest of my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham, the Gillingham northern link. That will provide a dual carriageway connection from the tunnel to the A2. A short distance to the east of the A2 junction, the A278 runs south to join the M2 at junction 4.

As my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham knows well, the Gillingham scheme is important in giving access to the new development at Chatham Maritime and to industrial areas along the B2004. It will provide environmental, road safety and community benefits by removing traffic from residential streets such as Woodlands road and Barnsole road and, like the rest of the Medway towns northern relief road, the Gillingham scheme will play an important role in congestion relief.

The junction with the A2 is at a roundabout that already serves the Gillingham business park, which is one of north Kent's success stories. Since development began at the old Army barracks, nearly 3,000 jobs have been created throughout the retail, office, warehouse and manufacturing sectors. Companies such as Lloyds bank, B and Q, Rover Fairways and Mercury Interactive have all moved to Gillingham business park. It has more Japanese companies as tenants than any United Kingdom business park.

Scope for modest expansion remains, however, and when the Gillingham northern link is completed, it will improve access to the business park for potential customers and for employees in the Medway towns conurbation. It will be an important link between Gillingham business park and the Chatham Maritime development.

The project is substantial, and my hon. Friends will understand when I emphasise that it is very expensive. The latest cost estimates that we have were provided in the county council's last transport policies and programme submission, dated July 1995. In addition to the £25 million that was provided by the developers, Wainscott northern bypass is currently estimated to cost £59.4 million, the Medway tunnel £59.9 million and Gillingham northern link £42.4 million—a total of £187 million, of which £162 million is being sought from the Department of Transport budget for capital expenditure by local authorities.

It may be helpful if I place that sum in context. When we reviewed the trunk road programme in November, the estimated cost of proposals to widen the M25 between the M3 and the M40—the busiest section of motorway in the country—was about £137 million, compared with the £162 million that I mentioned. In our entire main trunk road programme, only two schemes are more expensive than the Medway towns northern relief road, and the largest individual scheme that was accepted for transport supplementary grant this year was only £11 million.

The scheme is not cheap; it is a very large proportion of the budget that is available throughout the country for such schemes—but I shall now make a very positive statement. We remain committed to funding in full the Medway towns northern relief road, and to doing so in the shortest time that our resources allow.

I understand the disappointments that my hon. Friends have felt, and I pay a genuine tribute to their significant, sustained efforts to bring pressure to bear on myself and my colleagues, to ensure that there is no undue delay beyond that which is inevitable.

My hon. Friends know of the two problems. The problem with the statutory orders is as great as the problem with funding. We warn local authorities, when securing orders, that it can be a lengthy and complex process, and the Gillingham and Wainscott schemes have been among the most difficult that my Department has had to handle.

In the case of the Gillingham scheme, the public inquiry was held in June 1993 and the inspector's report was received by September 1994. An interim decision was made by April 1995, which required the county to make modifications to the proposed orders, and after that was done, the orders were confirmed in September 1995.

As my hon. Friend the Member for Medway knows, substantial modifications were required to the Wainscott scheme as a result of the February 1995 interim decision letter, and the decision letter finally confirming the orders was, as she said, issued as recently as January 1996.

Those difficulties are now history, and I understand why the tremendously long time during which the new road was held up by bureaucracy might have caused frustration, but my hon. Friends will understand that the Secretary of State acts in a quasi-judicial capacity when he decides on orders, and both he and the inspector must be able to show that they thoroughly examined all the technical issues. I am afraid that our legal advice, for example, on the reference to substantial modifications was that that was the position that the Secretary of State for Transport was obliged to make clear, and he did so simply because that was the obligation placed on him.

I have no time left to answer most of the questions that my hon. Friend the Member for Medway asked, but I undertake to answer them in writing as soon as possible. I confirm again that we are committed to the scheme going ahead, and to its being funded in full within our Department's resources.

Incomes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been (a) the percentage change in real personal disposable income and (b) the index of real personal disposable income, taking 1966=100 in each year since 1966. [9319]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information on real personal disposable income and the index of real personal disposable income, both based on 1990, is published annually in the CSO Blue Book and quarterly in the CSO press notice "Quarterly National Accounts" and is held on the CSO database. All sources are available in the Library of the House. The figures are given in the table—the 1990 based index has been re-referenced to 1966=100.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households have incomes (a) less than £5,000 a year, (b) £5,000 to £15,000 a year, (c) £15,000 to £20,000 a year, (d) £20,000 to £50,000 a year, (e) £50,000 to £100,000 a year and (f) more than £100,000 a year; and of each of these groups, how many and what percentage have incomes that are (i) wholly earned, (ii) wholly unearned and (iii) part earned and part unearned. [9324]

Mrs. Knight: The figures are not available in the form requested.

Financial Services Act 1986

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when section 164 of the Financial Services Act 1986 was brought into force. [10638]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Section 164 of the Financial Services Act 1986 has not been brought into force and was repealed when the Public Offers of Securities Regulations 1995 came into force on 19 June 1995. Regulation 10 of those regulations contains an equivalent provision to section 164.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the enforcement of penalties for (a) carrying on, and (b) purporting to carry on, investment business without authorisation or exemption, under section 4 of the Financial Services Act 1986. [10434]

Mrs. Knight: Prosecutions for contraventions of section 3 of the Financial Services Act are brought before the courts where there is a realistic prospect of securing a conviction and the public interest is in favour of a prosecution. Enforcement of any penalty under section 4 of the Financial Services Act imposed by the court is a matter for the court concerned.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase the penalties for (a) carrying on and (b) purporting to carry on, investment business without authorisation or exemption, under section 4 of the Financial Services Act 1986. [10435]

Mrs. Knight: I have no plans to do so.

Tortoises

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what seizures of tortoises and tortoise products were made by Customs and Excise in 1995. [10153]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Statistics for Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species seizures made by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in 1995 are complete only for the first nine months to 30 September. In that period, there were two seizures of tortoise products imported in breach of CITES requirements together with 794 live specimens.

The latter figure includes one large seizure of 674 specimens found in the possession of crewmen on board an east European vessel which called temporarily in the United Kingdom.

Banks (Overcharging)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to provide that banks pay compensation to customers for the consequences of overcharging; and if he will make a statement. [9880]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 January 1996]: There are no plans to introduce such legislation. Arrangements already exist for customers' complaints to be pursued, either through banks' internal procedures or, where they are exhausted, by involving the banking ombudsman.

Banking Contracts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consult the Governor of the Bank of England with a view to making changes in the standard inclusion in banking contracts of repayment on demand; and if he will make a statement. [9881]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 January 1996]: No. The precise form that a particular loan takes is a commercial matter to be agreed between a borrower and his bank. Since 1992 there has been a shift in small business lending away from overdrafts, which are repayable on demand, and towards a greater proportion of fixed-term loans.

Bank Customers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consult the Governor of the Bank of England with a view to establishing guidelines to ensure protection coverage for bank customers in cases of (a) bank malpractice, (b) overcharging and (c) breach of contract; and if he will make a statement. [9882]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The code of banking practice and the banking ombudsman scheme already provide guidance on these issues, and offer definitive and flexible methods of resolving disputes. Customers now have far more information than ever before about banking practices, fees and interest payments, and about what they should do if they wish to discuss, or complain about, the services they receive.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will implement the recommendations of the Government's 1989 review of banking services to provide for (a) the power of a bank to withdraw any complaint which has wide ramifications or raises important legal issue from the banking ombudsman's jurisdiction to be exercised only with the concurrence of the ombudsman, ( b) compulsory production by a bank of any relevant documents of information and (c) publication of information about a complaint if a customer consents; and if he will make a statement. [10232]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 18 January 1996]: Recommendations (a) and (b) are now reflected in the latest version of the banking ombudsman's terms of reference—paragraphs 20–22 and 5(b) respectively. The ombudsman does not publish details of customers' complaints but his annual report does quote figures on the types of complaints received by the ombudsman. The report also quotes examples of specific complaint, without revealing the identity of the complainant, to illustrate the circumstances of a particular case.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to require banks to establish bank customer councils; and if he will make a statement. [10234]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 18 January 1996]: No. This is a matter for banks and their customers.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to provide financial support or guarantees to Eurotunnel in respect of the re-financing of the channel tunnel. [10114]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 18 January 1996]: No.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were United Kingdom relative export unit values at current rates of exchange (a) at the latest available date and (b) at the time of United Kingdom entry into the exchange rate mechanism. [9786]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply of 16 January 1996, Official Report, column 526 given by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the same question.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent research has been initiated by his Department into early decommissioning of nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement. [10089]

Mr. Eggar: My Department has not initiated any research into the early decommissioning of nuclear power stations. However, my Department together with Nuclear Electric, is providing funding for the early decommissioning of the prototype advanced gas-cooled reactor at Windscale.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent research the Government have initiated into the use of robotics in the decommissioning of nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement. [10088]

Mr. Eggar: The Government have not initiated any research into the use of robotics in the decommissioning of nuclear power stations. However, I am advised that in 1993–94 the nuclear installations inspectorate identified the use of telerobotics as a nuclear safety research issue that the nuclear licensees should address. As a result, Scottish Nuclear, on behalf of the licensees, undertook research on telerobotics safety-related control and protection.

Business Links

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to bring about a business link in East Lancashire. [10634]

Mr. Richard Page: The chairman of the business link national assessment panel had detailed discussions with the chairman of the East Lancashire training and enterprise council about its proposals for a business link in East Lancashire. Those proposals were considered by the assessment panel in December, which concluded that they needed to be developed further in conjunction with other partners.

The Government office for the north west has convened a series of meeting with ELTEC, the local chamber of commerce and the local authorities concerned. This has led to the establishment of a working group involving all partners and the Government Office, that is committed to developing an agreed bid for consideration by the assessment panel.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the average number of clients held by personal business advisers in business links; and what is the largest and smallest number of clients. [10415]

Mr. Page: Our latest information indicates that the average case load of a personal business adviser is around 40 clients. Most have between 21 and 50; none are known to have more than 100.

Resider and Rechar Programmes

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals to grant additional funds to the United Kingdom under the European Union Resider and Rechar 1994–1997 programmes were discussed at the management committee meeting of member states in December 1995; and if he will make a statement. [10422]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The committee's agenda included a Commission proposal to allocate an additional 60 mecu to the United Kingdom for Resider, Rechar, Retex and Konver together, for 1998 and 1999. These are programmes of European structural funds grant for designated areas which have lost jobs in, respectively, steel, coal, textiles and defence.

The UK asked for a larger allocation. Before a decision is taken, the committee will meet again; the European Parliament is also being consulted.

I plan to make a statement after the allocations for these and certain other similar programmes have been settled.

British Coal

Mr. Hanson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list opencast deposits identified by British Coal on land in its ownership in north Wales; [10927]

(2) if he will list the landholdings of British Coal in north Wales which are subject to sale currently; if he will list those land holdings of British Coal in north Wales which will be considered for sale in the future; and if he will give the current land use of all of these land holdings. [10926]

Mr. Page: These are matters for British Coal.

Official Gifts

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for what reasons details of official gifts received by Ministers in his Department are not available before 1994–95, as indicated in his answer of 4 July, Official Report, column 146. [10178]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Information in respect of gifts received by Ministers before April 1994 is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Systematic Biological Research

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his Department's letter of 12 September 1995, what progress has been reported to Her Majesty's Government by the United Kingdom systematics forum, on its identification of priorities for systematic biological research. [8411]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The United Kingdom systematics forum published its "Review of 1994–95" on 6 October 1995 and produced a preliminary report, "Priorities in Systematic Research and Training" in September last year.

I am pleased to be able to announce today that the Office of Science and Technology will be providing a further three years' funding to the systematics forum from 1 April this year, amounting to a total of £86,000. Since it was established in 1994, the forum has done much to foster closer communications within the community it serves, This new commitment will enable it to focus on devising a national strategy on priorities for systematics research.

OST will explore integration of the forum into an existing learned society during this new funding period so that the links built within the systematics community are maintained.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10969]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative within my Department and its associated bodies since its introduction are as follows:

| | 1992–93 | 1993–94 | 1994–95 | 1995–96 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Staff costs | Nil | Nil | [1]11.5 (11.5) | [1]163.4 (159.1) |
| IT | Nil | Nil | Nil | Nil |
| Other costs | Nil | Nil | [1]11.5 (11.5) | [1]22.4 (21.8) |

[1] Real costs in brackets.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10970]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No money has yet been spent by my Department on external consultants in the tendering process for projects under the private finance initiative.

Forte Hotels

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he intends to act under the Financial Services Act 1986 in respect of Granada group's decision to understate publicly its intention for the disposal of the Meridien and Exclusive hotels of Forte plc. [9808]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 16 January 1996]: Section 47 of the Financial Services Act 1986 provides that it is an offence for any person to seek to manipulate the market in or the price or value of any investments by issuing a statement, promise or forecast which he knows to be false or misleading. If the hon. Member has evidence of improper conduct, he should write to me.

If the bid by Granada Group plc for Forte plc is successful, it is possible that any subsequent disposal or proposed disposal by Granada of assets acquired from Forte might be subject to examination under the merger control procedures of the Fair Trading Act 1973, depending on the nature of the particular disposal in question and of the acquirer.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will provide a breakdown of the spending by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry; and how much has been spent on legal advice and for whom. [10223]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The amount so far spent by my Department on external advice in relation to Sir Richard Scott's inquiry is £293,870. The names of individuals and their legal advisers are confidential to them.

Competitiveness

Ms Ruddock: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" was modified by the results of any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [8668]

(2) if "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; and if he will publish the appraisal; [8666]

(3) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead"; [8669]

(4) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" were considered in any environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [8667]

Mr. Page: The 1994 White Paper, "Competitiveness: Helping Business to Win" was the first comprehensive audit of the UK's competitive position. The 1995 White Paper, "Competitiveness: Forging Ahead" updated the analysis, and it will be reviewed and developed further in the competitiveness White Paper due to be published later this year.

The White Papers have analysed the main factors influencing competitiveness. They identified the primary responsibility of companies themselves to improve their competitive performance. They also outlined policies and initiatives across the whole of Government to help create the right framework and conditions to foster that improvement.

Against this background, the White Papers considered the relationship between environmental issues and competitiveness. The 1995 White Paper sets out the implications for business of the Government's commitment to sustainable development. It addresses the way that tax and regulatory policies are used to achieve environmental objectives and identifies the challenges and opportunities for business managers. There was no specific, separate written environmental appraisal of the White Papers themselves. It is a matter for each Government Department and individual company to consider and monitor the environmental implications of their activities in the normal way—including, where appropriate, the need for a written environmental appraisal.

Responsibility for managing the competitiveness agenda within the Government now lies with my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister, and the Office of Public Service in the Cabinet Office.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Warrants and Process (Transfer)

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations his Department has received expressing concern over the proposed transfer of responsibility from the police to magistrates courts committees of the execution of warrants and the service of process; and how many of these have been received from members of police forces. [10985]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: My Department has been in consultation with representative bodies within the magistrates courts community and other interested parties, including the Association of Chief Police Officers, over the proposed transfer of responsibilities, which has now been postponed with a view to its taking effect on 1 April 1997. In addition to these consultations, my Department has received correspondence on the subject of the transfer from individual justices chief executives and clerks to magistrates courts committees, justices clerks, local authorities, the chairman of an area criminal justice liaison committee and interested private firms. I have also received representations from Members of Parliament for the Kirklees area, including the hon. Lady. My Department has received one letter from the Metropolitan police expressing concern over the progress of the transfer of responsibility.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10961]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: All expenditure on external consultancy has been incurred in the current financial year. Expenditure to date is (i) legal fees—nil, (ii) publicity costs—nil, (iii) accountancy fees—nil, (iv) management consultancy fees—£108,464.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's department what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10962]

Mr. Evans: All expenditure was incurred in the current financial year. Expenditure to date is (i) staff costs—£153,000, (ii) information technology—£1,500, (iii) other costs £3,000.

Public Interest Immunity

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what arrangements are in place to ensure that justice is done on the basis of accurate information in a court case where public interest immunity is claimed to suppress certain evidence; and if he will make a statement. [9498]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: In each individual case, the authority for deciding claims relating to public interest immunity rests with the courts.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidance he intends to issue to (a) departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arms-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9218]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer to the answer given by my right Hon. Friend, the Minister for Disabled People on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible will be made fully aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Official Gifts

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will put on public display those gifts received by Ministers in his Department. [10161]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Gifts received by Ministers are not put on public display.

Penguins (Falkland Islands)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the population change in Gentoo and Magellanic penguins in the Falkland Islands over the last 10 years. [10160]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There is insufficient recorded material from which to draw detailed conclusions on the state of the penguin populations in the Falkland Islands.

A recent survey of Gentoo penguins indicates that there are approximately 65,000 breeding pairs which suggest a decline of around 10 per cent. over the last 10 years.

An accurate estimate of the population of Magellanic penguins is more difficult. Figures based on recent study plots suggest a very approximate total of 300,000 breeding pairs, which could show a decrease of up to 30 per cent. over the past five years.

Hong Kong and China

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Hong Kong and Beijing. [8570]

Mr. Hanley [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1996, column 410]: I regret that the last paragraphs of my answer of 15 January were inadvertently omitted. The full answer is as follows

My right hon. and learned Friend, the Foreign Secretary, visited Hong Kong and China from 6 to 11 January.

In Hong Kong he met the governor, members of the Legislative and Executive Councils, senior Hong Kong Government and British officials and business and community figures. This gave him an invaluable opportunity to hear at first hand the views and concerns of the people of Hong Kong about their future.

My right hon. and learned Friend was warmly received in Peking and held frank and constructive discussions with President Jiang Zemin, Premier Li Peng, Vice Premier Qian Qichen, and the Director of the State Council Hong Kong and Macau Affairs Office, Lu Ping. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary's discussions gave him an opportunity to describe to Chinese leaders the mood in Hong Kong and to discuss with them ways of maintaining confidence there. We made substantial progress on several specific issues. The Chinese assured my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary of their commitment to a successful transition and to the preservation of a high degree of autonomy for Hong Kong after 30 June 1997.

We also agreed to develop further our bilateral links in all areas: political, economic and commercial. As part of this dialogue my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary registered our concerns over reports of human rights abuses and urged china to address these issues quickly and openly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Woodland Improvement Grant

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what role the woodland improvement grant will play in encouraging coppicing for the purpose of reducing the decline in the numbers of woodland butterflies and moths. [9322]

Mr. Boswell: The first projects eligible for the woodland improvement grant are those which encourage informal public recreation in woodlands. Further projects, which may include coppicing to enhance the nature conservation value of woodlands, will be considered in due course.

Fish Stocks

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress of the treaty on straddling fish stocks; and highly migratory fish stocks; and what action has been taken to place limits on catches of (a) tuna and (b) swordfish which migrate through international waters and stocks of (i) flounder, (ii) halibut and (iii) other fish which straddle the territorial waters of different countries. [8246]

Mr. Baldry: The United Nations agreement for the implementation of the provisions of the United Nations convention on the law of the sea of 10 December 1982 relating to the conservation and management of straddling fish stocks and highly migratory fish stocks was adopted by the conference on 4 August 1995. It opened for signature on 4 December 1995 and was signed on that date by 25 states, including the United Kingdom in respect of certain dependent territories. The EC and its member states have not yet completed the required internal procedures for signature.

Much of the content of the agreement has to do with the establishment of regional fisheries organisations and their activities. The International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas, which the United Kingdom joined on 14 November 1995, adopted at its 1995 meeting further measures to limit the catches of bluefin tuna in the Atlantic and to allocate percentage national shares for the catch of north Atlantic swordfish. The North-West Atlantic Fisheries Organisation has adopted for 1996 a zero catch limit for yellowtail flounder and a total allowable catch of 27,000 tonnes for Greenland halibut on the Grand banks.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the latest estimate of farm income for (a) each standard region, (b) for England and (c) for the United Kingdom, together with the equivalent figures for the previous three years in constant prices, indicating the yearly percentage change and the cumulative percentage change in each case; and if he will make a statement; [9019]

(2) if he will list the latest estimate of farm income together with the equivalent figures for the previous three years in constant prices, indicating the yearly percentage change and cumulative percentage change in each case; and if he will make a statement. [9020]

Mr. Boswell: The latest available estimates of total income from farming, covering years from 1990, for the United Kingdom, the four countries and each standard statistical region within England are as follows. The figures are presented in real terms, first in £m at 1990 prices and then as indices—1990=100. The latter set thus show cumulative percentage changes from 1990 and both allow easy calculation of annual changes. The figures have been derived from those shown in table 6.5 of "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1994" and tables 5.2 and 5.3 of issues of "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom".

A provisional estimate of total income from farming in 1995 for the United Kingdom will be issued by press release on 31 January and corresponding country data will be issued by the other agricultural departments. "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1995" and "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom [1]1994–95", both to be published on 19 March, will provide further details, including English regional data for 1994.

Live Animal Imports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to permit the importation of breeding cattle from North America through the port of Avonmouth. [9855]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The port of Avonmouth has applied for approval as a border inspection post—BIP—to handle imports of cattle from third countries including north America. EC inspectors have recently visited the port in order to assess its suitability as a BIP and their report is awaited.

HEALTH

Hospital Waiting Lists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the percentage of patients dying while on the waiting list for bypass surgery, (a) nationally and (b) by region. [10748]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the then Minister for Health (Dr. Mawhinney) gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 19 May 1994, Official Report, column 557.

Helplines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all the helplines, or schemes which include a helpline service, for which his Department provides any funding, stating which are (a) independent organisations, (b) run by his Department or agencies of his Department of (c) of another classification; how many calls each received in each of the last five years; and how much money each received from his Department in each of the last five years. [9800]

Form AG1

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the availability of his Department's form AG1. [9907]

Mr. Malone: Supplies of form AG1 are available from Her Majesty's Stationary Office in the normal way.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to making MRSA a notifiable disease; what representations he has received, and from whom, on this matter: what assessment he has made of the effect of the non-notifiability of MRSA on its recorded incidence; and if he will make a statement. [10269]

Mr. Alan W. Williams : To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will assess the advantages of making MRSA a notifiable disease. [10594]

Mr. Horam: No representations that methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus—MRSA—should be made a notifiable disease have been received in recent years.

The statutory notification system requires doctors who are directly responsible for patient care—not laboratories—to notify diagnosed and suspected cases who are suffering from certain diseases. About 80 per cent. of people who acquire MRSA do not develop any infection and are not therefore suffering from a disease. When MRSA infection does occur, it can take the form of many different diseases, ranging from trivial skin infections to pneumonia or septicaemia, all of which are more commonly due to other causes. MRSA infection cannot be diagnosed clinically but only by laboratory tests. Notification of clinically suspected cases of all these diseases would be wholly impracticable. Appropriate control measures are taken in hospitals when MRSA is identified—such control action is not dependent on whether or not MRSA is notifiable.

Current data on the incidence of MRSA are compiled by the central public health laboratory of the Public Health Laboratory Service. The PHLS believes that its data on the incidence of MRSA are among the most complete of any country in the world.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has given to social services departments on the treatment of patients with MRSA discharged from hospital; and if he will make a statement. [10268]

Mr. Horam: The Department held a seminar in December 1995 on methicillin—resistant staphylococcus aureus in the community which was attended by representatives from social services departments: a further seminar is being planned. The Department intends to issue guidance shortly to social services departments about MRSA and to provide them with leaflets, which are currently being prepared, for distribution to nursing and residential homes.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's annual expenditure on (a) research into MRSA and (b) developing new antibiotics. [10598]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health is currently funding, through the regional research and development programme, two research projects totalling £46,000 per year into the detection and prevalence of methicillin—resistant staphylococcus aureus. It is also spending £2 million on studies on the surveillance and costs of hospital acquired infection including MRSA infections. The regional research and development programme includes many projects which involve antibiotics. Of these, two, totalling about £300,000 per year, are on research into antibiotics. There are also eight RHA-funded research projects relating to antibiotics totalling about £210,000 per year.

About 20 per cent. of the NHS drugs bill goes into research and development of new drugs by the pharmaceutical industry and the industry in the United Kingdom is currently spending in excess of £1.5 billion. This includes research into antibiotics, some of which are intended specifically for use against MRSA.

The Public Health Laboratory Service is conducting research into the genetics of MRSA and into the behaviour and virulence of different strains of MRSA, and is also co-operating with the pharmaceutical industry on testing new antibiotics.

The MRC, which receives its grant-in-aid from my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, is funding a research project costing £538,000 over five years into staphylococcus aureus, including MRSA.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the severity of the problem of MRSA in (a) Britain and (b) France, Germany, Italy and the United States of America. [10596]

Mr. Horam: Methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus was a considerable problem in British hospitals in the mid-1980s, then receded, but has increased again in the last two to three years. Data on incidents of MRSA are compiled by the central public health laboratory of the Public Health Laboratory Services—PHLS, which defines an incident as three or more patients with the same strain of the organism. About 80 per cent. of patients with MRSA are only carrying the organism and have no infection from it. In 1994, the PHLS recorded 1,081 incidents of MRSA and in the first six months of 1995 there were 750 incidents. Most of these incidents were short lived.

Whilst it is clear from papers published in the medical literature that the other countries have problems with MRSA in some hospitals, the Department is not aware of any central collation of data on MRSA in any of these countries and we are unable to assess the severity of the problem there.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement outlining the department's policy on controlling the spread of MRSA. [10597]

Mr. Horam: The Department's policy on the control of methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus in hospitals is contained in guidance published jointly by the Hospital Infection Society and the British Society for Antimicrobial Chemotherapy, circulated to the NHS in September 1994 under cover of EL(94)74 entitled "Improving the Effectiveness of the NHS".

The Department also published guidance on the control of infection in hospitals in March 1995 under cover of HSG(95)10 "Hospital Infection Control". This includes new advice on the surveillance of MRSA. Copies of both documents are available in the Library.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his Department's guidelines to health authorities or NHS hospital trusts on the number of fully medically supported intensive care beds to be available at any one time. [10320]

Mr. Horam: It is for health authorities and national health service trusts to determine the level of intensive care provision that is needed by their local populations.

Mental Health Services

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the response from health authorities to his letter sent in August 1995 requesting information on the state of mental health services in each health authority; [10738]

(2) if he will list the number of health authorities (a) providing a comprehensive mental health service, (b) who will be in a position to provide such a service if given sufficient investment by the end of 1995–96 and (c) who will not achieve it by the end of the current year. [10739]

Mr. Bowis: An announcement will be made shortly.

North Mersey Community Health Trust

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the reduction in the management costs of the North Mersey community health trust will be redeployed into the trust's clinical services. [10712]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for North Mersey community national health service trust to decide. The hon. Member may wish to approach Mr. R. James, chairman of the trust, for details.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) in the year 1994–95, how many NHS prescriptions were dispensed for prescription-only medicines at the relevant standard charge which could have been purchased on private prescription at less than the relevant standard charge; [8620]

(2) in the year 1994–95, how many prescriptions were dispensed at the relevant standard charge. [8621]

Mr. Malone: When an item is dispensed privately, the pharmacist may add a private dispensing fee to the cost of the medicine. The amount of that fee is at the pharmacist's discretion. It is not therefore possible to calculate the number of prescription items which would, if purchased as private prescriptions, cost less than the NHS prescription charge.

In England in 1994–95, it is estimated that 50.7 million prescription items were charged at the point of dispensing.

Quitline

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the Quitline programme in combating teenage smoking. [9021]

Mr. Horam: The Quitline telephone helpline which provides advice on smoking cessation for all age groups was launched as a Freefone number on 7 November 1995. The performance of the service in its first year is being carefully evaluated.

Patient Transfers

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in 1995 had to be transferred to other hospitals because they could not be treated at their local hospital; and if he will indicate the trust to which these belonged; how many of these transfers arose from (a) a lack of beds and (b) a lack of suitable staff; how many of the patients died; and if he will make a statement. [10464]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what quantity of benzodiazepines was prescribed via community pharmacists in England and Wales in each of the last four years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9886]

Mr. Malone: The available information for England is shown in the table. Information relating to Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Number of prescription items dispensed for benzodiazepines: 1991 to 1994

England

| Year | Prescription Items (millions) |
|---|---|
| 1991 | 15.7 |
| 1992 | 14.8 |
| 1993 | 14.3 |
| 1994 | 13.8 |

The data are from the "Prescription Costs Analysis" (PCA), are for England only and are based on the number of prescription items dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors.

Prescriptions

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the figures for disbursements by the Prescription Pricing Authority in England for each year since 1990 in respect of payments for drugs to dispensing doctors and drugs supplied by prescribing doctors in terms of (a) net ingredient cost, (b) discounted cost, (c) VAT, (d) container allowance, (e) dispensing fee, (f) on cost and (g) in total; and if he will make a statement. [9888]

Mr. Malone: Information on the actual payments, made direct by family health services authorities to doctors in England is shown in the table.

| Year | Net ingredient cost £ million | Net ingredient cost less discount £ million | On cost allowance £ million | Percentage to basic price | Fees £ million | Container allowance £ million | Total payment oxygen £ million | VAT £ million | Total cost £ million |

1. The information was obtained from the Prescription Pricing Authority.
2. The total cost is the remuneration and reimbursement paid for prescriptions dispensed by doctors and for personally administered items. This is calculated from the net ingredient cost of drugs appliances and chemical reagents dispensed, less a discount calculated from the discount scale, plus an on-cost allowance, a dispensing fee per prescription, a container allowance per prescription, and a VAT allowance where applicable. Payments are made in accordance with Paragraph 44 of the General Medical Services Statement on Fees and Allowances.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated; [10054]

(2) what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10066]

Mr. Horam: My Department's policy is not to gold plate European Community directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Post Traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is undertaken by his Department (a) directly and (b) indirectly by financing research elsewhere into combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder; and if he will indicate for (b) the organisations involved and the total funding provided. [10538]

Mr. Bowis: No such research is being undertaken by the Department of Health. The main agency through which the Government supports biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what provision is made by his Department for the treatment of combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder; [10536]

(2) what provision is made by his Department for respite care for sufferers of combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder. [10539]

Mr. Bowis: It is the responsibility of health authorities to assess the needs of their population and to secure, through contracting, services to meet those needs.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of ex-service (a) men and (b) women suffering from combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder. [10537]

Mr. Bowis: No such estimate has been made.

Antibiotics

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many courses of antibiotics were administered in Britain in 1970, 1980 and in each year from 1990 to 1995. [10595]

Mr. Malone: The available information for England is shown in the table. Information relating to Scotland and Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales.

Number of prescriptions dispensed for antibiotics

England

| Year | Prescriptions (millions) |
|---|---|
| 1980 | 32.8 |
| 1990 | 39.8 |
| 1991 | 43.7 |
| 1992 | 43.4 |
| 1993 | 47.7 |
| 1994 | 45.8 |

Notes:

1. Antibiotics are those preparations in the British National Formulary [issue 26, September 1993] therapeutic group 5.1—antibacterial drugs.
2. The data for 1980 and 1990 are not consistent with data from 1991 onwards. Figures for 1980 and 1990 are based on fees and on a sample of 1 in 200 prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists and appliance contractors only. Figures from 1991 are based on items and cover all prescriptions dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors dispensing doctors and prescriptions submitted by prescribing doctors for items personally administered.

Treliske Hospital

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency referrals by general practitioners at Treliske hospital, Cornwall, the hospital was unable to admit on the weekend of 6 and 7 January. [10462]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact John Williams, chairman of Royal Cornwall Hospitals national health service trust for details.

Dental Services

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to issue further regulations in respect of the crowning and capping of teeth on the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [10707]

Mr. Malone: I announced proposals for the reform of the general dental service on 5 April 1995, Official Report, columns 1214–15. One of the measures proposed was the introduction of more rigorous prior approval procedures to ensure that the general dental service provides only those treatments which are clinically essential and for which there are no clinically acceptable, less costly, alternatives. We will implement the reforms in due course.

Manchester Health Commission

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what submissions were made to the Under-Secretary at his meeting on 17 January with representatives of the Manchester Health Commission and the city's community health councils; what response he gave; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement. [10997]

Mr. Horam: Representatives of Manchester health authority and the three Manchester community health councils gave a verbal account of the problems affecting health services in the city, supporting their case with written evidence. I listened sympathetically to their views and undertook to consider any potential solutions.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10954]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 15 January at column 337. Tenderers bear their own costs. Further information is not available centrally.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees,(ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. ### Abortions

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions in total have now been performed in England and Wales under the provisions of the Abortion Act 1967; how many and what percentage of that total were performed in an emergency to save the life of the mother; and if he will give a breakdown by region of that total and the relevant figures and percentages. [6796]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 18 December 1995]: The total number of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act in England and Wales on residents and non-residents from 1968 to 1994[1] was 4,054,340. During this period 140 abortions were performed in an emergency, certified by the operating practitioner as immediately necessary, so as to save the life of the woman. A breakdown by region of the total and the relevant figures and percentages, excluding data for 1968 and 1969, is in the table.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of carbon monoxide poisoning annually resulting in death and injury are the result of a work-related incident. [9709]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

Statistics on incidents of carbon monoxide–CO–poisoning resulting from work-related incidents are not available.

TRANSPORT

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) fatal, (b) serious and (c) minor injuries were suffered by (i) passengers and (ii) employees of London Underground in each of the last 10 years. [8111]

Mr. Norris: The information, which has been provided by London Underground Ltd. on the basis of accidents reported by them to HM railway inspectorate, is set out in the following tables. Figures are not available for 1986.

Injuries on London Underground 1987–1995

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are the costs per day of security staff and other security measures employed at the Newbury bypass site; [9345]

(2) what estimate he has made of the likely delay caused by action directed to prevent the building of the Newbury bypass; [9346]

(3) if Her Majesty's Government will now carry out a new cost benefit analysis of the Newbury bypass. [9344]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 22 January 1996:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr John Watts, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what are the costs per day of security staff and other security measures employed at the Newbury Bypass; if the Government will now carry out a new cost benefit analysis of the bypass; and what estimate has he made of the likely delay caused by action directed to prevent the building of the bypass.

There are no figures available for security costs at this early stage; costs will in any event vary from day to day.

The economic evaluation shows the western bypass to be very good value for money. We will not be carrying out another COBA.

We do not expect the protest action to delay the scheme significantly. The target for completion is Summer 1998.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, columns 500-01, on what date compensation was first paid under the Newbury bypass compulsory purchase order; how much compensation has been paid to date; what negotiations with landowners are expected to be concluded; and what is the estimated total amount of compensation to be paid under the order. [10650]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 19 January 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the A34 Newbury Bypass.

The first payment of compensation for land compulsorily acquired for the Newbury Bypass was made on 17 May 1994. To date the Agency has paid just over £1.2m compensation from an estimated total land expenditure figure of £8.25m.

It is impossible to predict with any certainty when all land compensation negotiations will be concluded. Many claimants prefer to wait until the road is built and operational before submitting their claims for disturbance and injurious affection.

Road Scheme Protests (Cost)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to carry out a new cost-benefit analysis of the Newbury bypass to take account of increases in the costs of the road; [10439]

(2) what were the total security and legal costs that resulted from protests against the building of the M11 through residential areas; [10433]

(3) what assessment he has made of the effect of the additional security costs at the Newbury bypass site on the cost-benefit analysis calculations prepared for the road scheme; [10440]

(4) what were the total security and legal costs that resulted from protests against the building of the motorway through Twyford down. [10432]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr Graham Allen, dated 22 January 1996:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions about the costs of security at Twyford Down; the effects of the additional cost of security at Newbury on the cost benefit analysis for the scheme, the total security and legal costs resulting from protests against the M11, and what plans there are to carry out a new cost benefit analysis of the Newbury Bypass following the increase in the costs of the road.

The legal and security costs resulting from protests at Twyford Down amounted to £3.9M (including VAT).

Costs associated with the additional site security element required to complete the Newbury Bypass cannot be established at this early stage. The final outcome will depend on the level of protest action. But given that the present value benefits of the scheme are estimated as being between £83M and £150M, the additional cost would not have any significant effects on the cost benefits of the scheme.

The security and legal costs resulting from protests against the A12 Hackney to M11 Link Road were in the order of £10M.

We have no plans to carry out a new cost benefit analysis of the Newbury Bypass. Cost benefit analysis are carried out as part of the decision making process for the road schemes. In this case they showed that the scheme is very good value for money.

Road Repairs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the Highways Agency to have completed its computerised road repair database. [9334]

Mr. Watts: The Highways Agency operates a number of computerised databases which contain information on road repairs. Further improvements to these systems are being developed.

School Buses

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve safety measures on double-decker school buses. [9896]

Mr. Norris: None.

Traffic and Transport Advice

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 48, if he will list the advice on traffic and transport matters and its legal status issued by his Department in the last year. [9898]

Mr. Norris: Most of the advice the Department of Transport issues each year to local authorities on traffic and transport matters is not statutorily binding but is concerned with the dissemination of good practice.

The only binding advice issued to local authorities in 1995 originated from the Highways Agency, and concerned new or revised standards for trunk roads and motorways. The agency requires local authorities acting as its agents to comply with these standards. The following documents were published in this category:

Rail Freight Services

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what due diligence processes his Department has undertaken in relation to the Wisconsin Central and Loadhaul/Omnitrax bids for the British Rail Freight businesses. [9916]

Mr. Watts: All bids were evaluated in detail by British Rail and its professional advisers, and then discussed with my Department before a preferred purchaser was selected.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many railway freight grants were granted in each year since 1987; and what was their total value in each year. [10865]

Mr. Watts: The Government have awarded 28 railway freight facilities grants since 1987. The value of the awards were as follows:

1988: £651,473

1989: £4,145,985

1990: £765,000

1991: £1,771,000

1992: £7,601,500

1994: £2,911,720

1995: £7,348,219

The full list of awards can be found in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of freight grants in encouraging the transfer of goods from road to rail. [10880]

Mr. Watts: More than 200 schemes have benefited from these grants at a cost of £90 million, removing more than 3 million lorry journeys per year from the roads.

Socially Necessary Rail Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many rail services in England and Wales he plans to designate as socially necessary; and if he will make a statement. [10085]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for the Franchising Director. He considers the services to be specified in passenger service requirements on a franchise-by-franchise basis. When setting passenger service requirements he is required by his instructions and guidance from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to consider each service individually, taking account of all surrounding circumstances. Where services are essential but unprofitable to run, the Franchising Director will set the PSR close to or at the level of the British Rail timetable in operation at the time. Where a train is exceptionally lightly used and is not an essential service he may omit it from the PSR where he considers that its inclusion would not provide value for money. He has specified a number of socially necessary but uneconomic services in the PSRs that have so far been finalised.

West Coast Main Line

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current estimated cost for the complete refurbishment of the west coast main line between London and Glasgow. [9926]

Mr. Watts: The overall cost of the west coast main line core investment programme has been estimated at about £1 billion.

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport where the signalling technology proposed for the modernisation of the west coast main line is currently installed; and what assessment he has made of its operational flability. [10309]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack informs me that in-cab signalling technology is currently employed in differing forms in various parts of the world, but is not identical to the system planned for the west coast main line. For this reason, Railtrack intends to let further development contracts for the signalling system during the first quarter of this year and expects that a reliable signalling system can be developed within the time necessary for the modernisation works.

Rail Privatisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 29, what is the budgeted expenditure for 1996–97 for the employment of consultants and other advisers in the Officer of Passenger Rail Franchising. [9942]

Mr. Watts: The budget has not been finalised. It will be published in the transport report in due course.

A590, Cumbria

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects work to start on the High and Low Newton improvements on the A590 in Cumbria; and how much has been spent to date in preparations, including land purchase. [10094]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Michael Jopling, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the High and Low Newton improvements on the A590 in Cumbria.

You will have seen from the Secretary of State's announcement on the Road Programme on 28 November that this scheme has been included in the main programme but against a background of continued pressure on public spending, I am unable to give you a firm start date. All I can say is that it will be brought forward as quickly as resources and statutory procedures allow.

To date preparation costs total £889,400 in addition to lands costs of £230,000.

Motorway Noise

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to use porous asphalt on the areas of the M4, between junctions 5 and 8, which are being resurfaced. [10193]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr Graham Allen, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the use of porous asphalt for resurfacing a section of the M4 between junctions 5 and 8.

Resurfacing of the M4 between junctions 5 and 8 is being undertaken using a conventional hot rolled asphalt surface similar to that originally laid on this section of motorway,

There are statutory obligations which require the Highways Agency to provide noise attenuation measures but these relate only to new or substantially altered roads. Maintenance can only be undertaken in the most cost effective way. Although I recognise that porous asphalt surfacing does cut down the noise generated by vehicle tyres it is significantly more expensive to provide, requires special highway drainage, costs more to maintain and has a shorter life than hot rolled asphalt.

Porous asphalt was not therefore considered suitable as a replacement for the existing surface for the M4.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if it is his policy to use major works on motorways to reduce the impact of motorway noise on nearby homes. [10183]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the use of major works on motorways to reduce the impact of motorway noise on nearby homes.

There is a statutory requirement to consider the impact of noise on nearby homes only in the case of works involving the construction of a new road or of improvements which alter the line or level of an existing road. It is Departmental policy to regard this as covering the widening of motorways. In such cases, the scheme will include appropriate measures designed to mitigate noise and other environmental impacts. In the case of other roadworks such as minor improvements and structural maintenance which have no subsequent effect on the position of traffic relative to adjacent properties there is no requirement for such impacts to be reviewed.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he encourages the use of porous asphalt to reduce noise pollution near motorways. [10184]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the use of porous asphalt to reduce noise near motorways.

The Highways Agency has developed with industry a general specification to permit the use of porous asphalt. Its adoption is encouraged where conditions are suitable and where the benefits can be shown to outweigh the higher costs associated with its use.

Railway Stations

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new stations have been opened on the rail network in the last three years; and what estimate he has made of the number to be opened on the railway system during the next three years. [9946]

Mr. Watts: Twenty-two new stations have been opened on the rail network since January 1993. There are plans for 17 new stations to be opened over the period 1996 to 1998.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish for each British Rail region and for British Rail as a whole for each of the last available three years (a) the total number of railway stations and halls and (b) the total number of such stations and halls with ticket sales offices, indicating (b) as a percentage of (a) in each case. [8917]

Mr. Watts: The information requested is not available for each British Rail region. The information requested at (a) for BR as a whole is as follows:

1994–95: 2,506 stations

The information requested at (b) is available only for 1994–95. Of the 2,506 stations, 1,316 or 53 per cent. had ticket sales offices.

Driving Standards Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many chief executives there have been at the Driving Standards Agency in the last five years. [10485]

Mr. Norris: Prior to the current chief executive who joined DSA in April 1995 there have been two substantive DSA chief executives in the last five years.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the salary of the chief executive of the Driving Standards Agency is linked to the performance of the agency. [10486]

Mr. Norris: Yes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the loss of the Driving Standards Agency's chartermark will affect the chief executive's salary. [10487]

Mr. Norris: The recent loss of the charter mark by DSA was mainly due to the fact that car driving test waiting times were exceeding the DSA service standard, and DSA was also failing to meet certain other customer service targets such as speed of telephone answering. The chief executive's salary partly depends on achievement of such standards and targets, and will be reduced as a result of their non-achievement.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what action he is taking to improve service levels at the Driving Standards Agency following the recent loss of the charter mark award; [10490]

(2) what plans he has to address service problems at the Driving Standards Agency; [10489]

(3) if he will instruct the Driving Standards Agency to improve its telephone system. [10694]

Mr. Norris: I have reviewed the situation at DSA and authorised the following actions to improve service levels.

The recruitment of 25 per cent. additional staff to increase staff numbers on the telephones and the installation of new technology phone systems which distribute calls to the booking clerks more efficiently.

Recruitment and training of additional contract examiners to reduce test waiting times. These are being taken on at an average of 10 per month.

Steps to reduce the number of short notice test cancellations, including measures to achieve reductions in staff sick absence. A new compensation code for candidates whose tests have been cancelled at short notice has been implemented.

Improvement in external communications with the introduction of an external newsletter and a range of other measures.

The implementation of customer satisfaction tracking later this year and other new systems to improve the handling of complaints.

Heavy Vehicles (Testing)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many buses in the Greater Manchester area failed safety tests in (a) 1992, (b) 1993 and (c) 1994; [10318]

(2) how many heavy goods vehicles were tested in the north-west region on emission standards; and how many of them were (a) prohibited and (b) prosecuted. [10319]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions on the number of heavy goods vehicles tested on emission standards in the North West and how many were prohibited and prosecuted. Your other question asked how many buses in the Greater Manchester area failed safety tests in 1992, 1993, and 1994.

Heavy goods vehicles (HGVs) are tested for emissions standard as part of their annual test. Details of the number tested in the North West Region and the percentage of those which failed on smoke emission are shown in Table 1. Vehicles which fail this part of the test would not be prohibited but would be required to rectify the fault before a test certificate was awarded.

Emissions are also checked as part of the HGV spot checks for roadworthiness that are carried out throughout the year. The Vehicle Inspectorate (VI) has no single enforcement area comprising the North West "region", it is covered by 3 VI Enforcement Areas. Smoke emission checks were carried out on a total of 2,968 HGVs of which 73 (2.46%) were issued with prohibitions. Prohibitions can only be removed when the vehicle has been rectified and inspected again by VI to show that it is fit for service. Prosecution for emission offences is reserved for very serious neglect and for serial offenders. Details of the number of prosecutions for emissions as a result of routine spot checks can only be provided at disproportionate cost. There were no prosecutions following last year's "blitz" checks on HGVs in the North West.

Details of the number of buses which failed their annual test in the Greater Manchester area are shown below.

|---|---|---|---|
| Total number tested | 2,861 | 3,868 | 4,357 |
| Total number failed | 825 | 756 | 863 |

Number of HGVs tested and percentage failed on smoke emission: North West

| | 1994–95 | |
|---|---|---|
| VI HGV testing station | Tested | Percentage failed |
| Carlisle | 3,733 | 1.7 |
| Milnthorpe | 3,065 | 2.4 |
| Barrow | 529 | 1.7 |
| Kirkham | 8,325 | 1.8 |
| North Manchester | 10,604 | 1.6 |
| South Manchester | 12,317 | 2.0 |
| Simonswood | 12,828 | 0.52 |
| Bromborough | 2,651 | 0.9 |
| Wrexham | 5,416 | 1.9 |

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the profits of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company for the years from 1989 to 1995. [10330]

Mr. Norris: These are matters for the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company. Details can be found in its annual reports and accounts for the years concerned.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representation Her Majesty's Government have on the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company. [10331]

Mr. Norris: None.

A1 Gateshead Western Bypass

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of properties compulsorily purchased by the Highways Agency in the Gateshead area from April 1994 to date in connection with the Agency's proposed A1 Gateshead western bypass; and what has been the total cost of the purchases. [10555]

Mr. Watts: Since April 1994, nine properties have been purchased at a cost of £1.6 million. They have been purchased under statutory blight provisions which enables affected owner-occupiers to require the Department to buy their property in advance. The question of compulsory purchase does not arise.

Royal Train

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport where the royal train is kept when it is not in use; and how many times it was used by (a) the Queen, (b) the Prince of Wales and (c) other members of the royal family in the last 12 months. [10639]

Mr. Watts: The royal train is kept at a secure rail depot in Buckinghamshire when it is not in use. During 1995 the train was used eight times by Her Majesty the Queen, 14 times by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and on 10 other occasions by members of the royal family.

Road Building

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy when road contractors are ahead of schedule and the new work required is dependent on the allocation from the next financial year. [10488]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 22 January 1996:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what is the policy when road contractors are ahead of schedule and the new work required is dependent on the allocation from the new financial year.

Road building activity is governed by the terms of commercial contracts between the Highways Agency and road contractors. Within this framework, it is incumbent upon the Agency to manage its financial affairs in such a way that requirements arising from the annuality of Government accounting are met.

M62 Relief Road

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new tenancies and on what terms have been granted by the Highways Agency or those acting on its behalf in the Bury, South constituency since the announcement of the cancellation of the M62 relief road. [10938]

Mr. Watts: No new tenancies have been granted by the Highways Agency's managing agents following my announcement of the withdrawal of the M62 relief road from the trunk roads programme. Twelve tenancies which had previously been secured by payment of deposits have come into effect since my announcement. In all these cases, the tenants have been granted one-year fixed-term agreements.

Seat Belts and Child Seats

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answers of 29 November 1995, Official Report, column 752, what progress he has made on seat belt regulations and child seat concessions. [10925]

Mr. Norris: I intend to lay the regulations before the House in early February.

British Bus

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to investigate the activities of British Bus. [10937]

Mr. Norris: None, other than the normal monitoring of bus companies' operations by the Traffic Commissioners.

Bicycles (Light Emitting Diode Lights)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ban the use of LED lights on bicycles. [11052]

Mr. Norris: We have no plans to ban the use of LED lights on bicycles. A recent public consultation exercise was carried out asking for views on prohibiting the use of non-approved lights on bicycles. We are currently analysing the responses.

Heathrow Flight Paths

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what factors led to the change in the main easterly departure flight path from Heathrow via Dover in the early 1990s [10827]

(2) what inquiries about the main routing of Heathrow air traffic to the east were received by the Civil Aviation Authority prior to the change in the main easterly departure flight path from Heathrow towards Dover; [10829]

(3) what is his responsibility in respect of setting flight paths from Heathrow; [10826]

(4) if he will restore the main easterly departure flight path from Heathrow via Dover to its former line; and whether he will make a statement; [10830]

(5) what efforts were made to consult affected local communities about the change made in the early 1990s in the main easterly departure flight path from Heathrow towards Dover. [10828]

Mr. Norris: The main easterly departure route from Heathrow towards Dover has remained unchanged for over 25 years, apart from minor but essential adjustments from time to time to compensate for movement in the position of magnetic north. At the present time, the position of magnetic north is decreasing by about 7.2 minutes a year in relation to true north and points in south-east England. This departure route has used a track of 287 deg. to the relevant navigational beacon since 19 August 1993, when it was adjusted from a track of 288 deg. to compensate for magnetic drift since the previous such adjustment made in 1986.

The Secretary of State has taken responsibility for the routes taken by departing aircraft from Heathrow up to an altitude of 4000ft. Aircraft using this particular route must attain this altitude before reaching the area of Norbury in south London, but in practice most do so much nearer the airport. Once an aircraft has reached 4,000ft. it may be vectored off the route by air traffic control on to a more direct heading to its destination. This long standing practice is essential for the efficient management of air space.

Car Ownership (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the projected increase in car ownership in the Greater Manchester area over the next five years. [11037]

Mr. Norris: Car ownership in Greater Manchester is predicted to increase by between 6.5 per cent. and 10.5 per cent. over the next five years, depending mainly on the growth in the local economy. This represents an additional 56,000 to 96,000 cars owned. The forecast is based on census data. The 1991 census showed that households in Greater Manchester owned 814,000 cars.

Central Railways plc

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral statement of 15 January, Official Report, column 403, what plans he has to ensure that, in the event of a proposal from Central Railways plc to re-develop the central railway being deemed of national significance, Parliament will be adequately informed of the relevant national issues. [10048]

Mr. Watts: The documents to be deposited with Parliament in this event include a briefing note by the Department. We would expect to deal with relevant national issues in that note and in opening the debate.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that before any application from Central Railways plc to re-develop the central railway under the Transport and Works Act 1992 is submitted to Parliament (a) the application fully complies with the Act in relation to the funding of blight and (b) that Central Railways plc produces conclusive and irrefutable evidence that it can fully fund the inquiry process. [10049]

Mr. Watts: The Transport and Works Act rules require applicants to provide concise details of their proposals for funding the cost of acquiring blighted land within the meaning of section 149 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990. If Central Railway plc were unable to meet its statutory obligations to acquire such land, the application would fail. Similarly, if it were unable to finance the inquiry it would be forced to withdraw the application.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy that any application made under the Transport and Works Act 1992 in regard to the central railway submitted by Central Railways plc complies with all the requirements of the Act with particular reference to the submission of adequate information including maps of the proposed route at a scale of not less than 1:2500 before the application may be placed before Parliament and that local authorities affected will be consulted in this process. [10046]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is considering applications by Central Railway plc for partial, conditional or absolute waivers from compliance with certain application requirements under the Transport and Works Act rules. If we judge that local authorities should be consulted before reaching a decision, we will do so.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from local authorities along the route of the proposed central railway about the likely compliance of the proposals to be made by Central Railways plc with the requirements of the Transport and Works Act 1992. [10045]

Mr. Watts: We have received a number of representations. These will be taken into account in considering the applications by Central Railway plc for waivers from compliance with certain requirements of the Transport and Works Act rules.

Transport and Works Act 1992

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions of the Transport and Works Act 1992 require the submission of a statement to justify a proposal made under the Act in relation to national planning or transport policy or economic or technical considerations. [10047]

Mr. Watts: There is no requirement for a statement in relation to national planning or transport policy, but Parliament has the opportunity to consider the case in principle for any application judged to be of national significance. Any applicant for a works order involving compulsory land acquisition would need to be able to demonstrate that the project is technically feasible and financially viable, and that the public benefits of the proposals outweigh any private disbenefits before the order is approved.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated; [10055]

(2) what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10065]

Mr. Watts: My Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Bull Bars

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new proposals he has to ban the use of bull bars; and if he will make a statement. [11064]

Mr. Norris: I recently met Neil Kinnock of the European Commission. It was agreed that the best way forward was for the Commission to bring forward a proposal for an amendment to the existing external projections directive. This would specifically address bull bars and help remove obstacles to effective national action. The initiative now rests with the Commission and we will be urging them to announce their plans as soon as possible.

Waste

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his letter G/PSO/26593/95 of 15 December, what response he has made to summary point 8 of the report by Dr. Martin Angel of Southampton in respect of the expedition of the provision and funding of waste facilities in ports. [8413]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 1 November 1995, Official Report, column 309.

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to ensure that direct image transmission from site is installed on the MV Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement. [9912]

Mr. Norris: While we have not ruled out this possibility, we are advised that there would be considerable technical difficulties and that the cost would be significant in relation to the total resources available.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will permit two MV Derbyshire Family Association nominated technical experts to be included in the expedition to the wreck of MV Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement. [10245]

Mr. Norris: The views of the Derbyshire Family Association are being taken into account in the development of the arrangements for the return expedition to the wreck.

No commitment can be made at this stage as to who will be on board the vessel used in the expedition.

Rail Ticket Offices

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each British Rail region and for British Rail as a whole all rail ticket sales offices on BR stations and halts which have been staffed wholly or partly by volunteers in the last 12 months, indicating the date on which such service ceased or is due to cease; and if he will make a statement. [9302]

Mr. Watts: Ticket offices at the following stations are currently staffed by volunteers on a commission basis:

Clitheroe
Gobowen
Ledbury
Newtown (Powys)

The information requested on the dates that BR ticket office services ceased is not available.

Oil Pollution (Wildlife Deaths)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the numbers and species of birds and sea mammals recently washed up on the north Humberside coast as a result of oil pollution; and what progress has been made in establishing the source of the oil pollution. [8768]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 19 January 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 22 January 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number and species of birds and sea mammals washed up on the North Humberside coast as a result of oil pollution.

During the period 27 December to 4 January an approximate total of 450 birds were affected by pollution off the North Humberside coastline. Of that number some 320 birds were recovered alive and treated by the RSPCA; these included approximately 250 guillemots, 50 Razorbills, and single figure numbers of Kittiwakes, Puffins and Shelduck. Reported dead birds totalled 127 which were made up of 72 Guillemots, 38 Razorbills, 10 Puffins, 4 Fulmars, 1 Kittiwake, 1 Little Auk and 1 Red Throated Diver. During the same period 3 seals were rescued and taken into care by the RSPCA, one of which was thought to be affected by oil.

The Agency's Marine Pollution Control Unit (MPCU) has not been able to establish the source of the pollution. The first indication of pollution in the area was oiled birds coming ashore in Humberside. Oil samples associated with the incident and collected on behalf of MPCU have been analysed. The analyses have concluded that samples taken from the beach and from the feathers of contaminated birds are a mixture of light fuel oils which may indicate bilge discharges by ships. We do not have sufficient evidence to identify particular ships.

During the period 27 December to 4 January the MPCU surveillance aircraft flew 3 patrols in the sea area off the Humberside coast. These patrols were in response to continuing reports of oiled birds coming ashore in Humberside. One of these patrols detected oil at sea some 23 miles east of Spurn Point which might have caused the damage to wildlife described here.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service

33. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Attorney-General how many members of the Crown Prosecution Service there are at present; what that figure is as a percentage of the optimum complement of the service; and if he will make a statement. [8865]

The Solicitor-General: As at 31 December 1995 the Crown Prosecution Service employed 6,769 staff, including part-time workers. Staffing requirements are being reassessed in the light of expected workloads, resources and the senior management and pay and grading reviews.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to improve the training available to the Crown Prosecution Service. [9909]

The Attorney-General: The training needs of the Crown Prosecution Service are a matter for the Director of Public Prosecutions who carries out her functions under the superintendence of the Attorney-General.

Training is seen as an essential tool for improving Crown Prosecution Service performance. A wide range of training, both professional and managerial, is undertaken and its relevance is continuously reviewed. The provision of training has recently been market tested to ensure quality and value for money.

Saudi Arabia (Contracts)

34. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what recent discussions he has had with his counterpart in Saudi Arabia over contracts. [8866]

The Attorney-General: None.

Scott Inquiry

35. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Attorney-General if he has had any recent discussions with Lord Justice Scott regarding the Scott report. [8867]

The Attorney-General: It is the intention of the inquiry that any exchanges with individual witnesses should be confidential. That is to be respected.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General what guidelines he issued in (a) October and (b) November 1995 in respect of issuing public interest immunity certificates in the Ordtech appeal hearing; and what factors underlay his advice. [9496]

The Attorney-General: Any advice given to Government concerning public interest immunity following the decision of the House of Lords in ex parte Wiley in July 1994 will have taken account of the change of approach signalled in that case. However, by convention, the fact as to whether the Law Officers have advised on a given matter is not disclosed, nor is the content of any advice which may have been given.

Departmental staff

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General how many people currently work in his Department; at what cost to public funds; how this figure compares in similar and real terms with May 1979; and if he will make a statement. [8864]

The Attorney-General: Twenty-seven staff are currently employed in the legal secretariat to the Law Officers. The total staff costs for the financial year 1994–95—consisting of salary, allowances, overtime, earnings-related national insurance contributions and superannuation—were £1,040,018. This figure does not include agency staff.

The Supply Estimates for the year 1979–1980 show 22 staff at a cost of £209,000. This figure does not include superannuation which is currently 14.9 per cent. of basic salaries. Applying this percentage to staff costs of £209,000 gives a sum of £240,141.

Since 1979 additional functions have been conferred on the Attorney-General, principally supervision of the Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office, and those connected with the review of certain criminal sentences which may be unduly lenient with a consequent increase in the number of criminal lawyers on my staff.

The staff cost of £240,141 for the financial year 1979–1980 at 1994–1995 prices is £600,112. The difference between the latter figure and that for 1994–1995 is represented in part by an increase generally in the number of staff and the proportion of higher grades, and in part by the increase in staff salaries over and above the rate of inflation over the period in question.

John Bennett and Keith Wilson

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Attorney-General what consultations he has hade with the South Wales police in relation to the conviction of John Bennett and Keith Wilson for corruption in Welsh Office printing contracts. [9598]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service forwarded to my Department a file of the evidence which resulted from the investigation into the activities of John Bennett and Keith Wilson by the South Wales police. The evidence was considered by the Solicitor-General who agreed to grant his fiat to prosecute both men under the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906. Neither the Solicitor-General nor I have had any direct contact with the South Wales police.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Lord President of the Council what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9225]

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt) on 15 January, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my Department is made aware of its responsibilities under the Act. I am not responsible for any executive agencies or other bodies.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are her plans for the development of policy on the distribution of lottery proceeds. [10077]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am writing today to the chairmen of the lottery distributing bodies to consult with them on changes to policy directions I issue under section 26 (1) and (2) of the National Lotteries etc. Act 1993. My proposals would allow an amount of revenue funding to help develop the skills and talent of young people including elite young athletes; increase access to the arts and sports; allow the Sports Councils to fund one-off major events in the United Kingdom; and allow the national heritage memorial fund to make awards to building preservation trusts. None of these proposals is intended to substitute for existing funding through grant in aid. These proposals do not affect the Millennium Commission and the National Lottery Charities Board. My colleagues will be writing in similar terms to the chairmen of the distributing bodies in Scotland, in Wales and in Northern Ireland.

I have considered the existing rules on partnership funding. I am satisfied that there is sufficient flexibility available for distributing bodies to take account of special circumstances in individual applications. I shall be encouraging the chairmen of the distributing bodies to be properly flexible in their interpretation of what is possible in this area, and I shall be encouraging the Arts Councils to consider what they can do to foster innovation within the existing definition of capital. The Arts Council of England has proposed using lottery money to help arts organisations gain long-term financial stability, in a way which would not substitute for existing grant in aid. I shall be discussing this further with it.

The consultation period will last until the end of February. I will then consider the responses to the consultation process, with a view to announcing any changes to the directions at the beginning of April.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Former Prime Ministers Allowance

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many former Prime Ministers claim the maximum allowance available to them. [9901]

Mr. Freeman: I do not think it right to disclose information about the amount of allowance claimed by former Prime Ministers, any more than the House discloses details of claims by individual Members under the office costs allowance.

Photocopiers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 335, on costs of photocopiers, what was the estimated number of copies projected in respect of each contract and at what cost per copy. [10277]

Mr. Willetts: The estimated number of copies projected in respect of each contract and the cost per copy for the 25 photocopiers is as follows:

| Copies projected for contract period | Cost per copy (pence) |
|---|---|

Regulators

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 289, what are the reasons for the degree of variations in the salaries paid to the regulators. [10648]

The Prime Minister: The salaries paid to individual regulators are determined by the appointing Secretary of State and take account of various factors including the responsibilities of their particular office and what is necessary to recruit and retain a suitable appointee.

Liverpool Dockers (Petition)

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the petition presented on 9 January by the women's support group on behalf of Liverpool dockers who had been made redundant. [10427]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) on 18 January, Official Report, column 689.

Iran-Iraq War

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the occasions between June and October 1989 when in his capacity as Foreign Secretary he made statements, written or oral, or corresponded, on the United Kingdom's policy towards each of the participants in the Iran-Iraq war; in each case what was that stance; and if he will make a statement. [11043]

The Prime Minister: A comprehensive record of statements and correspondence on Iran and Iraq could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Statements made are, of course, a matter of public record.

"Realising our Potential"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what progress has been made, subsequent to the letter of 19 September to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, by the research councils and Sir John Cadogan, to implement the science, engineering and technology policy research set out in "Realising our Potential". [8242]

The Prime Minister: The research councils continue to implement the policy set out in "Realising our Potential" in accordance with their royal charters and guidance from the Director General of the Research Councils. The President of the Board of Trade announced on 16 January the science budget allocations for 1996–97 and the planning figures for the next two years to enable them to do so. A booklet explaining the allocations, "Allocations of Science Budget 1996–97" is available in the Library.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the principal statements, or documents, authorised or made by persons who are, or have been, Ministers of the Crown since 1990, which show that it was the intention of Her Majesty's Government to so privatise the functions of the former British Railways in a manner that made possible (a) the dispersal into separate companies the current responsibilities of Railtrack and (b) that any such company or any other performing any of the functions of the former British Railways Board could be owned or controlled by (i) shareholders a majority of whom were not citizens of the United Kingdom or (ii) a company registered outside the United Kingdom. [8619]

The Prime Minister: The White Paper, "New Opportunities for the Railways", published in July 1992, announced the Government's intention to restructure the railways. Restrictions on the ownership of shares by foreign nationals are tightly controlled by international law and agreements.

Official Gifts

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much was spent on the provision of official gifts by his Office in 1994 and 1995; and if he will now make it his policy to give details of the gifts presented. [10149]

The Prime Minister: A total of £22,510 was spent on the provision of official gifts in the 1994–95 financial year. It is not my practice to give details of gifts purchased.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to put on public display official gifts received by him and his predecessors. [10163]

The Prime Minister: All gifts are handled in accordance with the provisions set out in "Questions of Procedures for Ministers".

Mohammed al-Masari

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister who on behalf of Her Majesty's Government made representations to the Government of Dominica to inquire if they would receive Professor Mohammed al-Masari if he was deported from the United Kingdom; if he will place in the Library copies of the correspondence between the two Governments concerning this case; and if the Government of Dominica has indicated if it will receive Professor al-Masari. [10659]

The Prime Minister: The initial approach was made by my right hon. and learned Friend, the Foreign Secretary to the Dominican Prime Minister when he visited London on 18 December. It is not normal practice to make public correspondence between Her Majesty's Government and other Governments. The Dominican Government have agreed to accept Dr. al-Masari and to grant him asylum, if he applies for it.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what is now the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the French Government's current series of nuclear tests in the Pacific. [10499]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) on 29 November, Official Report, column 790–91.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Prime Minister what are the responsibilities of the staff employed in the Cabinet Office in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10986]

The Prime Minister: The responsibilities of staff in the Cabinet Office employed on matters relating to the inquiry are to provide Ministers and officials with advice on matters arising from the inquiry, and to liaise with the inquiry.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions staff employed in the Cabinet Office in relation to the Scott inquiry have had on matters related to the Scott inquiry with persons (a) employed by and (b) working as consultants for Conservative Central Office; and what subjects were discussed. [10987]

The Prime Minister: None.

Monetary Union

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Prime Minister for how long a currency must be in the exchange rate mechanism before it can be abolished in favour of a single European currency; and what are his current plans regarding the exchange rate mechanism and the pound. [9304]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore), on 9 January, Official Report, column 114.

Mobile Phones

(2) on how many occasions mobile or car phones retained for his use or the use of his staff have been cloned since his appointment. [9571]

| 1993–94 | 1,490 |

Figures rounded to the nearest £10,000.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total cost to public funds arising from all duties in each complete year since 1990–91 and for 1995–96 to date; and if he will indicate the figures separately for (i) accommodation and (ii) expenses. [8964]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 January 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 December, Official Report, columns 1053-54. The information as requested for earlier years is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if he will provide the figures from 1990–91 to 1994–95 and 1995–96 to date for (a) the cost of maintaining and running No. 10 Downing street and additional costs at Chequers, (b) the grant-in-aid to the Chequers trust and (c) the costs on a consistent basis and expressed at constant 1984–85 prices. ### Road Investment

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Prime Minister if the recent statement of the Minister of State at the Scottish Office about the fundamental importance of road investment to Scotland's economy represents the policy of Her Majesty's Government; if a similar policy exists for the rest of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement on his policies on road investment in (a) Scotland and (b) England and setting out the basis for differences between the two. [10238]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 January 1996]: The Government believe that an efficient transport infrastructure, of which trunk roads form an integral part, is essential to national competitiveness. My right hon. Friends, the Secretaries of State for Transport for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland develop their plans in that context taking account of transport needs of each country within the United Kingdom.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many mobile phones have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years; and in each of those years how many different suppliers were involved. [9130]

Mr. Newton: Excluding the office of my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Privy Seal, the information for the Privy Council Office is as follows. Three mobile phones were purchased between 1989 and 1992, all from the same supplier; the exact year of purchase is no longer recorded. One telephone was supplied in 1993. Two telephones were purchased in 1995, from two different suppliers. No telephones were supplied in 1994.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Disabled People

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to ensure that disabled people are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9364]

Mr. Moss: A number of disabled people already serve in a non-executive capacity on health boards and as members of health councils and their contribution brings a necessary and important perspective to the bodies to which they are appointed. Nominations to serve as non-executives on health boards and as members of health councils are sought from a wide range of community, voluntary and health groups.

Responsibility for appointments to health boards and health councils in Northern Ireland rests with the Department of Health, which seeks to ensure a broad representation of members appointed to these bodies.

Autism

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the services available to (a) children and (b) adults with autism; and what plans he has to enhance these services. [9256]

Mr. Moss: It is the responsibility of the education and library boards to assess and provide for the special educational needs of all children in Northern Ireland, including children with autism. Placements may be made in special schools, in special units attached to mainstream schools or in mainstream schools themselves.

The health and personal social services needs of people with autism are met by the four health and social services boards within their learning disability programmes of care. Services include residential and nursing home care, day care and respite care and a wide range of community nursing, social work, psychology and paramedical services. There is, however, growing awareness among health and social services boards, trusts and professional staff of the specialised needs of people with autism. One board is organising a series of courses to train staff in TEACCH—treatment and education of autistic related communication handicapped children—a structural treatment and educational programme.

These courses will enable staff in adult settings to continue and develop the TEACCH programmes started in schools and to introduce TEACCH to others who would benefit from it.

In addition, the Department of Health and Social Services is providing financial support for Professionals and Parents and Autism—PAPA—a local voluntary organisation.

Edgewater Development, Donaghadee

Mr. John. D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what breaches of planning permission have occurred at the Edgewater development to the north and west of Norfolk avenue, Donaghadee; and if he will make a statement. [9311]

Mr. Moss: The Department considered that the continued use of Norfolk avenue to access the development site would be a breach of planning control. The Department contacted the developer about this and the matter is resolved as the access is no longer in use.

Carers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has ensure that carers are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9239]

Mr. Moss: Nominations to serve as non-executives on health boards and as members of health councils are sought from a wide range of community, voluntary and health groups, a number of whom will represent the interests of carers.

Responsibility for appointments to health boards and health councils in Northern Ireland rests with the Department of Health, which seeks to ensure that a broad representation of community interests is available through the appointment of members.

Buddy Bear Conductive Education Centre

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy that the Department of Education endorses all statements from education boards, placing children in the Buddy Bear conductive education centre. [9931]

Mr. Ancram: Under article 31(3) of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986, a proposal by an education and library board to arrange for the special educational provision for a child to be made otherwise than at a grant-aided school is subject to the approval of my Department. My Department considers each proposal made under this legislation on its merits, taking into account the professional advice, parental representations, proposed costs and any other circumstances relevant to each case. There are, however, proposals currently before Parliament to change this legislation: under these proposals, my Department's approval role in individual placements would be replaced by a power to approve institutions other than grant-aided schools as suitable for the placement by boards of children with special educational needs.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when a statement will be approved, and appropriate fees and costs authorised, by the Department of Education for Anna Marie Treanor and Daniel Murphy, currently attending the Buddy Bear conductive education centre in Dungannon. [9932]

Mr. Ancram: The two proposals referred to, which have been made by the Southern education and library board, are still under consideration. These have been submitted to my Department in the form of a proposed pilot scheme and further information is being sought from the board about the scheme, including its proposed structure, costs and duration.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what date the educational statement issued by the North Eastern education and library board for James Agnew was approved by his Department; and from what date the fees and transport costs of his placement at the Buddy Bear conductive education centre in Dungannon will be paid. [9933]

Mr. Ancram: The proposal made by the North-Eastern board to place this child in the Buddy Bear school was approved by my Department on 20 November 1995. I understand that the board will be meeting the associated fees and transport costs with effect from May 1995, when the school received final registration as an independent school.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the pilot conductive education project proposed by the Department of Education, with particular reference to (a) the date when the proposal was completed, (b) the reasons for abandoning the proposal and (c) the reasons for questioning the basis of the pilot proposal presented by the Southern education and library board. [9934]

Mr. Ancram: My Department has not proposed a pilot conductive education project. A pilot project was the subject of discussions between my Department and the North-Eastern education and library board in 1992, and subsequently discussions about possible pilots took place with the Southern education and library board and the Buddy Bear trust. It was however decided in April 1994 not to proceed with a pilot project. In coming to this decision, particular regard was had to resource considerations and the potential value of the pilot projects in the form proposed in the light of the findings of a Government-funded research project carried out at the Birmingham Institute for Conductive Education which became available during the course of 1993.

The Southern board has recently sought approval to place two children with special educational needs at the Buddy Bear school in Dungannon for a four-term pilot scheme, but no information was given as to the nature of the proposed pilot. In order to form a view on the value for money which would be obtained from the significant additional expenditure which would be incurred through the proposed pilot, my Department therefore sought further information from the board as to the nature, objectives and operation of the proposed pilot, and its relationship to another pilot which I understand the board has also been considering at one of its own special schools. Some information has been provided, and discussions with the board are ongoing.

Prison Service

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many prison officers are currently employed in (a) HMP Maze, (b) HMP Maghaberry and (c) HMP Belfast; [10341]

(2) how many prisoners are currently in (a) HMP Maze, (b) HMP Maghaberry and (c) HMP Belfast; [10342]

(3) how many prison officers and staff will be made redundant in the proposed round of staff reductions in the Prison Service in Northern Ireland; [10343]

(4) what percentage of the proposed reductions in staffing in the Prison Service will occur in Northern Ireland; [10344]

(5) how many prison staff in Northern Ireland will be eligible for redundancy packages accompanying staffing reductions in the Prison Service; [10345]

(6) when HMP Belfast will close; how many of its prisoners will go to other prisons in Northern Ireland; and if he will list the prisons concerned. [10346]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subjects in question have been delegated to the Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. D. Shannon to Ms Marjorie Mowlam, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to the Parliamentary Questions in which you asked:

(i) the number of prison officers who are currently employed in certain Northern Ireland prisons;

(ii) the number of prisoners in certain Northern Ireland prisons;

(iii) the number of prison officers and staff who will lose their jobs in the proposed round of staff reductions in the Prison Service in Northern Ireland;

(iv) the percentage of the proposed reductions in staffing in the Prison Service which will occur in Northern Ireland;

(v) the number of prison staff in Northern Ireland who will be eligible for redundancy packages accompanying staffing reductions; and

(vi) when HMP Belfast closes, how many of its prisoners will go to other prisons in Northern Ireland; and to list the prisons concerned.

Sir John Wheeler recently announced the closure of HMP Belfast and the construction of new prisoner accommodation at HMP Maghaberry. The inmate population of HMP Belfast will be reallocated to other accommodation some of which is currently vacant and un-staffed. The staffing implications of this decision are currently being assessed, but preliminary studies suggest that around 15 Governor posts, 200 officer posts and 25 civilian posts will no longer be required. It is hoped that the reductions can be achieved through natural wastage and voluntary redundancies.

The recent announcement of staffing reductions in HM Prison Service does not have any impact on the staffing levels of the Northern Ireland Prison Service, which is a separate organisation.

The management of the NIPS is currently consulting with the relevant Staff Associations about the precise terms of any redundancy package which may be offered. The extent of the application of any package forms part of this consultation and has yet to be agreed.

On 18 January 1996 the staffing and inmate figures for each of the prisons was:

| | Inmates | Staffing | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | Prison Officers | Others |
| HMP Maze | 588 | 1,241 | 86 |
| HMP Maghaberry | [1]293 | 618 | 65 |
| HMP Belfast | 254 | 400 | 46 |
| HMP Magilligan | 258 | 448 | 45 |

[1] Includes 27 female prisoners.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10965]

Sir John Wheeler: A range of projects across all Northern Ireland departments and the Northern Ireland Office are under consideration, but none are yet at the invitation to tender stage. The administration costs incurred to date in the tendering process are part of the normal work of departments and are not separately identified.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10963]

Sir John Wheeler: A range of projects across all Northern Ireland departments and the Northern Ireland Office are under consideration, but none are yet at the invitation to tender stage. However, the following external consultancy costs have been incurred in 1995–96 in moving towards this position:

| | £ thousand |
|---|---|
| Legal | 58 |
| Publicity | 2 |
| Accountancy | 1 |
| Management consultancy | 97 |

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Mechanical Restraints)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since January 1990 inmates at Her Majesty's Prison, Holloway, have been (a) detained in a strip cell and (b) restrained by body belts for (i) medical or (ii) non-medical purposes. [8440]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service,who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

[9221]

Mr. Howard: I refer to the reply to the hon. Member's question given on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417, by my hon. Friend the Minister for Disabled People. I, too, will ensure that my Department and bodies for which it is responsible are made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Frankland Prison

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total cost of, and reasons for, replacing the locks at Her Majesty's prison, Frankland; [9266]

(2) where the master key to the locks of Her Majesty's Prison Frankland was found. [9265]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 22 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the replacement of the locks at Frankland prison.

The keys to the security locks of Frankland prison were compromised by the loss of a cell key. In the circumstances it was decided to replace all cell locks and other pass locks in use in the prison.

The cost of locks and labour in fitting them was £93,500. The missing key has not yet been found.

Helplines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all the helplines, or schemes which include a helpline service, for which his Department provides any funding, stating which are (a) independent organisations, (b) run by his Department or agencies of his Department or (c) of another classification; how many calls each received in each of the last five years; and how much money each received from his Department in each of the last five years. [9804]

Mr. Howard: My Department funds a number of telephone inquiry lines which the public can ring for advice. It has not been possible in all cases to attribute costs, but details which are readily available are as follows:

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what public response he has made to the publication by Amnesty International last June of "Playing Human Pinball-Home Office Practice in Safe Third Country Asylum Cases"; if he will place copies in the Library of letters he has sent to Amnesty International in reply to letters from it concerning matters contained in the pamphlet; and if he will make a statement. [10660]

Mr. Kirkhope: My predecessor wrote to Mr. David Bull, director of Amnesty International, on 27 July in response to this report. I have placed a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average time taken by his Department to reach substantive decisions on asylum applications lodged since the coming into force of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, when applications are made (a) at a port of entry, (b) by persons given leave to enter the United Kingdom for a limited period and (c) by persons liable to removal as illegal entrants; [10080]

(2) what is the average time taken by his Department between receipt of an asylum application under the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 and the carrying out of substantive interview with the asylum seeker when applications are made (a) at a port of entry, (b) by persons given leave to enter the United Kingdom for a limited period and (c) by persons liable to removal as illegal entrants. [10081]

Mr. Kirkhope: Information on the average time taken during 1995 to reach a substantive decision on those asylum applications submitted after the implementation of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 is given in the table. Reliable information on the time between application date and interview date is not held centrally.

Average time taken to reach a substantive decision[1] on post 1993 Act asylum applications, 1995

| 1995 | Average decision time Months |
|---|---|
| Port cases | 8.6 |
| In-country cases previously granted leave to enter[2] | 13.4 |
| Illegal entrants | 7.6 |
| All cases decided[3] | 9.5 |

[1] Excludes without foundation refusals and refusals under paragraph 340 of immigration rules.
[2] Includes those who applied after deportation action had been initiated.
[3] Excludes those cases where the applicant's immigration status was unknown at the time of application.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library all material issued on behalf of Her Majesty's Government to the UN human rights committee concerning the appeal rights of asylum seekers. [10623]

Mr. Kirkhope: The fourth periodic report by the United Kingdom to the committee, dated October 1994, which included a description of asylum appeal rights under the 1993 Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act, is already available in the Library. The committee's record of oral evidence by United Kingdom officials to the committee on 21 July 1995 about the report will be placed in the Library when it becomes available.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the Tamil asylum seekers arriving in the United Kingdom on 13 February 1989 (a) have been repatriated and (b) have been given leave to remain or are remaining in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [10460]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not readily available.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the Home Office circular dated 13 January 1994 setting out the circumstances in which the Home Office may exercise its discretion and consider asylum cases substantively in potential safe third country cases. [10661]

Mr. Kirkhope: I have done so today.

Channel Islands

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the matters discussed and decisions agreed at the meeting his Department hosted with a delegation from the states of Jersey and Guernsey on 5 January; and if he will place in the Library copies of all documents or briefings made available to the Channel Islands delegation during the meeting. [10087]

Mr. Sackville: This meeting was that looked forward to in the reply by my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East (Mr. Kirkhope) on 29 November 1995, Official Report, column 774, to an earlier question from the hon. Member. At the meeting, officials from a number of Government Departments and British Nuclear Fuels briefed political representatives of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and the Isle of Man, and accompanying officials and advisers, on a range of nuclear matters, including the dumping and transport of nuclear waste, the monitoring of radiation levels, contingency planning, and possible developments in the French civil nuclear industry and at Sellafield. Departments undertook to provide further information requested at the meeting or for which the islands might ask subsequently, and to arrange further meetings as need be. Our aim is to ensure that the island authorities have continuing reassurance in these matters. I am arranging to place in the Library copies of all the papers provided to the insular representatives at the meeting, all of which are also available publicly.

Director General, Prison Service

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions have taken place between the parties on the amount of compensation to be paid to the former Director General of the Prison Service; and whether a quantified offer of compensation has been made by his office; [10324]

(2) how long was taken to agree compensation for the former Director General of the Prison Service; and what is the norm in such cases. [10334]

Miss Widdecombe: It would be inappropriate to disclose details of the discussions which are continuing between lawyers representing both parties. The length of time taken to conclude such matters depends upon the circumstances of each case.

Crime Reduction (Suffolk)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the outcome of the positive people bid from the Suffolk consortium of police, education and business for funding for the crime reduction programme; and if he will make a statement. [9303]

Mr. Maclean: The positive people bid is one of a number of second stage applications for funding under the criminality reduction development programme. The matter is being given very careful consideration and I hope to be able to make final decisions shortly.

Young Offenders

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders sentenced under section 53(1) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 were in custody on the last date for which figures are available; and of those in custody, how many were (a) in local authority secure accommodation, (b) in prison department custody and (c) detained under mental health legislation. [9887]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 22 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about young offenders sentenced under section 53(1) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933.

On 15 January 1996 there were 51 young offenders, including 9 juveniles, sentenced under section 53(1) of the 1933 Act in custody. 48 were held in Prison Service custody and 3, all juveniles, in local authority secure accommodation. There are currently no young offenders who have been sentenced under section 53(1) of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 detained under mental health legislation.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the convicted prison population aged over 21 years had also been convicted of an offence under the age of 21 years, for the latest year for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [9875]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 18 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 22 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what percentage of the convicted prison population aged over 21 years had also been convicted of an offence under the age of 21 years for the latest year for which information is available.

The latest available information is contained in the attached table.

Adult prison population[1] in Prison Service establishments under sentence on 30 June 1994: by whether an offence[2] is recorded under the age of 21

England and Wales, Adults

| | | Percentage | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Population | Previous history not found[3] | No conviction[2] aged under 21 | Conviction[2] aged under 21 |
| Males | 28,896 | 5 | 26 | 69 |
| Females | 1,128 | 11 | 54 | 35 |
| Total | 30,024 | 5 | 28 | 67 |

[1] Excludes fine defaulters and is based on samples of 4,606 males and 1,105 females. The adult population consists of those aged 21 and over apart from some young offenders aged 21 who have not been reclassified as adult.

[2] Relates to convictions for "standard list" offences only. These offences include all indictable offences and some of the more serious summary offences.

[3] Information on prisoners was matched to records on the Home Office Offenders Index. In some cases no set of matching records can be found. A prisoner may not be matched because he or she may not have been sentenced to a "standard list" offence and has no previous record for such offences or alternatively there may be an inconsistency between personal details held on the Offenders Index and those held on prison records.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons aged 15 years were held in young offenders' institutions and remand centres in England and Wales on the last available date; in which establishments they were held; and if they were held on remand or under sentence; [10145]

(2) how many persons aged 16 years were held in each young offenders institution and remand centre in England and Wales (a) on remand and (b) under sentence, on the last available date. [10146]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 January 1996]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 22 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions asking, how many persons aged 15 and 16 years were being held in young offenders' institutions and remand centres in England and Wales on the last available date; in which establishments they were held; and if they were held on remand or under sentence.

[1] Provisional figures. Remand includes both untried and also convicted unsentenced prisoners.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the significance of emotional disturbance among young people as a factor associated with inmates of detention centres; what estimate he has made of the proportion of the cost to detention centres accounted for by such young people; and if he will make a statement. [9018]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 January 1996]: Detention centres and youth custody centres were replaced by young offender institutions in 1988.

Two studies have been commissioned by the Home Office into the mental health of sentenced and unsentenced prisoners. Both include findings of young males in prison, although data on young females was not collated separately from data on adult females. The report of the first study was published in May 1991 under the title, "Mentally Disordered Prisoners". The report of the second study, "Mental Disorder in Remand Prisoners", was received by the Home Office in late September 1995.

The 1990 study showed that 33 per cent. of sentenced young male offenders in the sample group were diagnosed as suffering from some form of psychiatric disorder, including harmful or dependent misuse of substances. The corresponding figure for unsentenced young male offenders in the 1995 study was 53 per cent. of the sample group.

No figures are available on the cost of maintaining inmates with emotional or mental health problems, as opposed to those without such problems.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated; [10060]

(2) what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10072]

Mr. Howard: It is my Department's policy not to make regulations implementing European directives which add to the burdens imposed by such directives. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Fire Services

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average number of firefighters and officers per fire service for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [10239]

Mr. Sackville: Information on the numbers of personnel in each fire authority is published annually in the reports of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services for England and Wales. The reports for 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993–94 and 1994–95, Cm 1581, 2008, 2275, 2679 and 2998, each contain a table giving establishments and strengths at 1 January 1991 to 1 January 1995 respectively. However, these tables do not provide a breakdown into firefighters and more senior ranks and such information could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Illegal Immigrants

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the incidents involving illegal immigrants arriving at Gatwick in December 1993 absconding. [10469]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons arriving at United Kingdom ports of entry have been allowed to go to temporary addresses in each of the last five years; and how many have absconded in each year. [10459]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information available is given in the table.

Passengers at United Kingdom ports of entry

| | Passengers granted temporary admission | Passengers who absconded[1] |
|---|---|---|
| 1991 | 13,220 | 601 |
| 1992 | 16,967 | 530 |
| 1993 | 19,063 | 667 |
| 1994 | 19,327 | 1,240 |
| 1995[2,3] | 23,084 | 1,577 |

[1] Either from temporary admission or detention or the control area at ports. The time period relates to when the passenger was recorded as an absconder, not when the passenger entered the country.
[2] January to October.
[3] Data for 1995 are provisional.

Immigration (Hong Kong)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Hong Kong citizens have applied for United Kingdom passports; and how many dependents are estimated to arrive from each application. [10461]

Mr. Kirkhope: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to applications for British citizenship made under the British nationality (Hong Kong) selection scheme. As at 26 November 1995, 108,768 principal beneficiary applications had been received. This figure includes invalid, ineligible and withdrawn applications and second applications from some of those unsuccessful in the first tranche of the scheme. So far, 48,376 of these applicants have been registered as British citizens, along with 80,207 dependants. The scheme allows for a maximum of 50,000 principal beneficiaries.

James Hanratty

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute a public inquiry into the case of James Hanratty; and if he will make a statement. [10468]

Mr. Kirkhope: No. In 1974 Mr. Lewis Hawer QC was appointed to carry out an independent assessment of the case and his report, which did not conclude that there had been a miscarriage of justice, was published as Cm 6021. Following a request in July 1994 by solicitors acting for the late Mr. Hanratty's family, my officials arranged for scientific tests to be carried out on certain material relating to the case, but these proved inconclusive. We are currently considering what further action may be necessary in relation to other points raised by the solicitors.

Immigration (Detention)

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were detained under Immigration Act powers (a) overnight, (b) between one night and one month, (c) for a period of more than one month up to two months and (d) for more than two months in (i) Harmondsworth detention centre, (ii) the Queen's building, Heathrow, (iii) Terminal 4, Heathrow, (iv) the Beehive, Gatwick, (v) HM prison Haslar, (vi) HM prison Pentonville, (vii) Campsfield house detention centre, (viii) HM prison Rochester, (ix) HM prison Holloway and (x) other establishments during (1) 1994 and (2) 1995 to the latest date for which information is available; and, of these people, how many in each category were (B) women, (B) children under 18 and (C) men; and what were the names of the establishments in (x); [7423]

(2) how many people were received into (a) Prison Department establishments, (b) immigration detention centres and (c) police cells under Immigration Act powers during (i) 1994 and (ii) 1995 to the latest convenient date; how many of these were (1) asylum-seekers or (2) applying to remain on non-asylum grounds, by individual prisons establishment or detention centre; what was the average daily population of persons so detained in each of those years; what was the average length of time spent in detention by persons so detained in each of those years; and what was the nationality of persons so detained for each of those years. [7424]

Mr. Kirkhope [holding answer 9 January 1996]: Information on the total numbers of persons detained, analysed by nationality, is given in table 1. The number of detainees received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales under the Immigration Act 1971 is given in table 2 for 1994 and for January to November 1995. The number is shown by the establishment of initial reception. The average population in 1994, including persons originally received for a criminal offence, was 487. The average for January to November 1995 is 481. A breakdown of receptions into Prison Service establishments by nationality is given for 1994 and for January to November 1995 in table 3.

The average period of detention for detainees released in 1994 and in January to November 1995 is provisionally estimated at 21 weeks and 19 weeks respectively. The other information requested is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners (Resettlement)

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps have been taken by his office to monitor additional services in resettlement services and accommodation required by prisoners losing their entitlement to housing benefit under the new regulations; [10446]

(2) how many ex-prisoners were placed in hostels for the homeless in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96 to date; and at what cost. [10448]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 19 January 1996]: The general use of approved probation/bail hostels and other offender accommodation is monitored through the collection and analysis of routine information on occupancy.

Specific information about the take-up of places by ex-prisoners is not collected centrally; but inspection by Her Majesty's inspectorate of probation and reports from probation services may draw attention to particular pressures or problems.

As for the cost of offender accommodation, I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 188.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners released after serving between 13 and 52 weeks were homeless on release in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 to date in respect of (i) male and (ii) female prisoners. [10449]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 22 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners serving between 13 and 52 weeks who were homeless on release in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, and (c) 1995–96 to date in respect of (i) male and (ii) female prisoners.

The information requested is not recorded centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bradley. To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance on the changes in housing benefit regulations has been given to prisons receiving (a) remand and (b) sentenced single prisoners with tenancies. [10450]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 19 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 22 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about guidance issued to prisons holding (a) remand and (b) sentenced single prisoners with tenancies on the changes in housing benefit.

The latest edition of the Prisoners' Information Book, which is available in all prisons and to all prisoners, refers to the changes in the rules on housing benefit and advises prisoners to seek further advice from prison staff and/or the Housing Benefit Office.

By April 1996 all prisons are due to be offering Inmate Development and Pre-Release (IDPR) training covering the main obstacles to effective resettlement, including housing advice, and to have a pool of officers trained by NACRO's Prisons Link Unit (PLU) to deliver a housing and employment advice service to prisoners. The PLU also provides establishments with a substantial set of directories with relevant information and an updating service changes occur.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how employment levels in the Employment Service will be affected by the implementation of the jobseekers's allowance; [9790]

(2) how many surplus staff there will be in the Employment Service as a result of the implementation of the jobseeker's allowance. [9789]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the planned staffing levels in the Employment Service (ES) as a result of the implementation of the Jobseeker's Allowance, and how many surplus staff there would be as a result of that implementation.

There is no target for specific efficiency savings in staff numbers as a result in the implementation of JSA. In fact during the implementation period some additional staffing will be required. However, if unemployment continues to fall fewer staff will be required and the expectation is that there will be a modest reduction in total staffing. The actual staffing figures for ES—and therefore possible staff surpluses—have not yet been finalised and this will, to some extent, depend upon discussions with the Benefits Agency about staff transferring.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if individuals voluntarily leaving their job will receive any contributory jobseeker's allowance after 8 April. [10298]

Mr. Forth: Jobseeker's allowance will be introduced on 7 October 1996. If people have voluntarily left their employment as employed earners without just cause, contribution—based JSA will not be payable to them for a period of at least one week but not more than 26 weeks. Decisions will be made by independent adjudication officers, who will also decide the period of non-payment in each individual case.

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be in the implications after 8 April for claims for contributory jobseekers's allowance of suspension of an applicant's unemployment benefit because that applicant voluntarily left a job. [10323]

Mr. Forth: Jobseeker's allowance will be introduced on 7 October 1996. Until that date, claims for unemployment benefit will continue to be suspended pending an adjudication officer's decision as to whether claimants have voluntarily left their employment without just cause. After 7 October, provided the jobseeker satisfies the entitlement conditions that he is available to be employed, actively seeking employment, and has entered into a jobseeker's agreement, payment of JSA will be made in full pending an adjudication officer's decision on a leaving voluntarily question.

Redundancy Compensation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many representations her Department has received in the last 18 months on the operation of part IV of the Local Government (Compensation for Redundancy) Regulations 1994; and if she will make a statement; [10082]

(2) what plans she has to amend Part IV of the Local Government (Compensation for Redundancy) Regulations 1994; and if she will make a statement. [10083]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has received 17 representations on this matter in the last 18 months. Amendments to the Local Government (Compensation for Redundancy) Regulations 1994 are for the Department of the Environment to consider.

Secondary School Inspections

Mr. Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of secondary schools inspected under section 9 of the Education Schools Act 1992 are judged to have been in the (a) very good, (b) good, (c) sound, (d) unsatisfactory and (e) poor category. [10417]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Business Start-up Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors led her to put the business start-up scheme into the single regeneration budget. [10414]

Mr. Paice: The introduction of the single regeneration budget gave local partnerships greater scope to determine the right mix of measures to support the development of their local economies. As helping unemployed people to set up their own business is an important element in regeneration, the business start-up scheme was incorporated into the single regeneration budget.

Foreign Students

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many foreign post graduate students were studying at United Kingdom universities at the latest date for which figures are available; and what this number is expressed as a percentage of all post graduate students of United Kingdom universities; [10903]

(2) how many foreign students were studying at United Kingdom universities as undergraduates at the latest date for which figures are available; and what proportion this was of the total number of undergraduate students at United Kingdom universities. [10892]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 December, Official Report, columns 975–76.

Work Permits

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many work permit applications for soccer players from abroad were received by her Department in 1995 including those for extensions to existing permits. [10157]

Mrs. Gillan: The number of work permit applications for soccer players from abroad, including those for extensions to existing permits, received by the Department in 1995 was 65.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for what reasons information regarding work permit applications for soccer players from abroad is not available in respect of clubs, player nationality and refusal numbers as indicated in her answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 1341. [10177]

Mrs. Gillan: Each work permit application is considered on its merits against the agreed criteria for soccer players. Information about clubs, and the players' nationality and numbers refused is not recorded separately by the work permit computer system as these factors are not relevant to the decision to approve or refuse a permit application.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what new systems she has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10067]

Mr. Forth: The Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to her efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10053]

Mr. Forth: Official guidance on gold plating of European legislation is currently being reviewed by the Cabinet Office deregulation unit in consultation with other Government Departments.

Dance and Drama Students (Funding)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what results were obtained from the consultations between the then Department of Education, the Department of National Heritage and the Arts Council on the subject of securing improvements in the funding for students of dance and drama. [10348]

Mr. Forth: Discussions on this issue are continuing. No final decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students of dance and drama are (a) presently on course, (b) receive discretionary awards and (c) finance themselves; and what were the equivalent figures for 1992–93. [10350]

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected centrally.

Upper Secondary Graduation Rate

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what examination the upper secondary graduation rate of 63.6 per cent. was based in the information which her Department supplied to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development for "Education at a Glance: OECD" indicators, published in 1995. [10534]

Mr. Robin Squire: The statistic is based on the number of pupils in the United Kingdom who left school at the end of the 1991–92 academic year with at least one GCSE at grades A to C or equivalent or higher academic qualifications including CSEs at grade 1, Scottish certificate of education standard and higher grades, GCE O and A levels and AS examinations.

Oral Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many parliamentary questions for oral answer have been transferred to another Department by her since her current Department was set up; and which Members were involved. [11066]

Mr. Robin Squire: Four oral questions, tabled by the hon. Members for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Field), for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger), for Rotherham (Mr. MacShane) and for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn), have been transferred to other Departments since the establishment of the Department for Education and Employment.

Dartford Schools (Playing Fields)

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she plans to issue a decision on the dispute concerning the allocation of playing fields between the Dartford West high school for girls and the Dartford grammar school for girls; and if she will make a statement. [10771]

Mrs. Gillan: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already informed the parties of the decision that she is minded to make. Further representations have been made, some only very recently, and these are receiving urgent attention. The case raises a number of complex issues and is further complicated by another case which is now before the Education Assets Board. The outcome of that case may affect my right hon. Friend's consideration of this one.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which schools with grant-maintained status had financial deficits in the financial year 1994–95; and how much the deficits amounted to for each school at the year end. [10981]

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the amount and purpose of each bid from each grant-maintained school for 1996–97; and if she will list the allocation made per school. [11063]

Mr. Robin Squire: These matters are now the responsibility of the Funding Agency for Schools. I have asked the chairman of the funding agency to arrange for replies to be sent to the hon. Members.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs; [10946]

(2) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10945]

Mr. Forth: The procurement of projects under the private finance initiative in the education sectors is entirely a matter for individual institutions and local education authorities. The information which the hon. Member requests is, therefore, unavailable for projects undertaken at universities, colleges or schools.

The Employment Service has procured a personnel administration system under the PFI. Information about the running costs relating to the tendering process would be available only at disproportionate cost. The ES relied solely upon consultancy provided by CCTA—the Government centre for information system. Costs for this service are not disaggregated in the form sought in the question, but the service included both legal and procurement advice. Payments totalling £26,711 were made to CCTA over a 13-month period from November 1994 to November 1995.

Out-of-School Child Care Initiative

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the full evaluation of the out-of-school child care initiative will be published. [10338]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 19 January 1996]: I expect to publish the second evaluation report on 23 January 1996. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Employment Advertisements (Age Limits)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 520–21, on the banning of an upper age limit in employment advertisements, what is her policy in respect of legislation to ban such advertisements. [10442]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 19 January 1996]: I have no evidence which suggests that such legislation would have any effect on employment. The Government remain convinced that the way to combat age discrimination is through persuasion.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into a link between noise levels from military low flying and deafness in children; and if he will make a statement. [10086]

Mr. Soames: My Department has not conducted specific research into the subject. We do, however, closely monitor scientific research on noise and hearing including that relating to possible hearing loss in children due to aircraft noise. We believe that the restrictions we place on the heights, speeds and operating procedures of military aircraft should ensure that the level of noise experienced on the ground is not harmful, particularly given the brief exposure involved.

Bosnia

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the cost of peacekeeping in Bosnia is to be borne by each of the member states of NATO. [10253]

Mr. Soames: Those costs which have been accepted as common costs for the IFOR operation will be borne by all members of NATO according to the appropriate cost share formulas.

All other costs will be borne by the individual troop-contributing nations, largely by each meeting the cost of their own national deployments. The United Kingdom has assessed its own costs to be in the region of £300 million for the duration of the operation. We have no visibility of the costs other nations will have to incur.

Armed Forces Driving Schools

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) what savings and (b) what costs will flow from moving the Royal Air Force driving school from Saint Athan to Leconfield; and when he expects the cost of the move to be paid back by the savings made. [10028]

Mr. Soames: The investment appraisal carried out as part of the study into the future of the tri-service driver training indicates that moving the RAF driving school from RAF St. Athan to Leconfield will:

(a) provide savings of £47.222 million at net present value—over 25 years. This saving takes into account the additional costs,

(b) require additional costs of £10.616 million over 25 years.

The additional costs will be paid back by the fourth year following implementation—currently FY200/01.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the qualifications of the management accountants who visited the three sites affected by the proposal to amalgamate the armed services driving schools; and whom they interviewed at each site. [10027]

Mr. Soames: The investment appraisal into the future location of driver training was produced by a member of management accountancy services (Army), the MOD's own internal management accountancy service. All members of the service are qualified management accountants.

The management accountant and other members of the study team interviewed a number of civilian and military personnel at each of the sites visited. Information was also obtained by telephone, by facsimile and by letter. The management accountant and the study team also visited policy and finance staffs in the services.

HMS Malabar

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Navy ships have visited Hamilton since the closure of HMS Malabar; and at what cost. [10254]

Mr. Soames: Since the closure of HMS Malabar on 31 March 1995, three Royal Navy ships and a Royal Navy submarine and a Royal Fleet Auxiliary ship have visited Bermuda. The bills for the three Royal Navy ship visits have not yet been received, but the ships' broker and agent has estimated a total approximate cost of £33,000, excluding refuelling costs. The cost of the submarine visit was £107,559; that for the Royal Fleet Auxiliary ship is not yet available.

Royal Naval Publications

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of writing, publishing, printing and disseminating the Royal Navy promotional literature "Broadsheet 1995–96" and "VJ The Final Victory". [9939]

Mr. Soames: "Broadsheet" is an annual publication produced by the Royal Navy to promote awareness of wider naval issues among a broad audience, including serving and retired personnel, and hon. members with an interest in such matters. Some 44,000 copies of the present issue were produced. The "VJ The Final Victory" brochure was a one off publication to commemorate the substantial contribution of the East Indies and Pacific Fleets to the victory in the far east. Some 85,000 copies were produced. The total cost of producing and disseminating "Broadsheet 95/96" and the VJ day brochure was approximately £235,000.

Royal Marines School of Music

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected date for the Royal Marines school of music to occupy the former RNDQ premises in Her Majesty's naval base, Portsmouth. [10321]

Mr. Soames: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw) on 17 January 1996, Official Report, column 581.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who provided external legal advice for Ministers in the Department in relation to the Scott inquiry. [11050]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The source of legal advice to witnesses to the Scott inquiry is a confidential matter.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions staff employed in his Department in relation to the Scott inquiry have had on matters related to the Scott inquiry with persons (a) employed by and (b) working as consultants for Conservative Central Office; and what subjects were discussed. [10995]

Mr. Arbuthnot: None.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the responsibilities of the staff employed in his Department in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10994]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The responsibilities of the staff employed in my Department in relation to the Scott inquiry are to provide Ministers and officials with advice on matters associated with the inquiry, and to liaise with the inquiry.

HMS Ocean (Damage Costs)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the damage done to HMS Ocean; what is the cost of rectifying the damage; and who is responsible for paying this cost. [10494]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The minor extent of the damage to HMS Ocean when she was launched in October was confirmed at a dry docking over the Christmas period. We now await proposals from the contractor in respect of the arrangement to make good the damage and the estimated cost of repairs. An element of the cost will be borne by the contractor with the balance being covered by MOD's normal self-insurance arrangements

Maritime Patrol Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the contract for the replacement maritime patrol aircraft. [10496]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Our assessment of bids continues, and we expect to let a contract with the selected prime contractor in late summer this year.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10944]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The tendering process of a particular project may consider a number of procurement routes and it is not possible to separately identify those costs attributable to the private finance initiative. The procurement route selected is that which provides best value for money over the whole life of the project.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10943]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information required is available only at disproportionate cost. The private finance unit of the MOD has in this financial year spent some £200,000 on management consultants in support of projects which may have a PFI element.

Falkland Islands (Argentine Mines)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current estimate of the number of Argentine mines remaining in the Falkland Islands; and what contribution is being made by Argentina towards the cost of clearance. [10159]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 8 February 1995, Official Report, column 321.

Dishonourable Discharges (Army)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates of dishonourable discharges from the Army as a result of breaches of military discipline in the period November 1992 until December 1993 together with the units from which they were discharged. [10498]

Mr. Soames: "Dishonourable discharge" is not an expression used by the services. Fifteen personnel were discharged with disgrace from the Army during the period 1 November 1992 to 31 December 1993.

The list of those discharged under this heading is as follows:

| Date | |
|---|---|
| 10 November 1992 | Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers Manning and Record Office |
| 23 November 1992 | 7th Signal Regiment |
| 7 December 1992 | The Royal Dragoon Guards |
| 13 January 1993 | 32 Engineer Regiment |
| 11 February 1993 | 16th Signal Regiment |
| 12 March 1993 | Army Medical Services Training Group |
| 20 April 1993 | 7 Armoured Workshops, REME |
| 4 July 1993 | Army Medical Services Training Group |
| 4 August 1993 | The Royal Scots Dragoon Guards |
| 26 August 1993 | Combined Manning and Record Office |
| 3 September 1993 | 26 Engineer Regiment |
| 13 September 1993 | Support Battalion, Allied Rapid Reaction Corps |
| 20 September 1993 | 12 Transport Squadron Royal School Military Engineering |
| 30 October 1993 | Royal Green Jackets |
| 2 November 1993 | Army Training Regiment, Lichfield |

The list does not necessarily show the units at which the individuals were serving at the time they committed the disciplinary offences for which they were discharged. In many cases the personnel may have been discharged from holding units or their manning and record to which they were transferred after the disciplinary offence.

The manning and record office accounts for those personnel who are not held on the establishment of a specific unit.

Stores Losses

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), on 14 December. Official Report, column 762, what are the 20 most valuable items which have been (a) stolen and (b) lost from the armed services stores in the past five years; and what is their estimated (i) value and (ii) replacement cost. [11096]

Mr. Soames: Figures for items lost or stolen valued at below £100,000 could not be provided without disproportionate cost since a central register is not held.

A central register of stores losses of over £100,000, however, is maintained. From this register there are two cases of items lost from armed services stores.

(1) Stores lost in transit from stores depot to RN vessel.

Description

A Thermal Imager was lost in transit. Extensive searches have failed to locate its whereabouts.

Value: £118,000

Replacement Cost: £118,000

Date of Loss: July 1993

(2) Stores lost in transit on return to stores depot

Description

A consignment of 3 inch rockets being returned to a Royal Naval armament depot in Scotland after the Gulf conflict was lost in transit. Despite extensive investigation, the exact cause of the loss could not be determined.

Value: £104,000

Replacement Cost: £104,000

Date of Loss: April 1991

Both losses are detailed in the 1995 appropriations account which was approved by the National Audit Office.

NATO (Interoperability)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning NATO command, control and communication information interoperability. [9976]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 18 January 1996]: Much work has been done, in recent years, to improve interoperability of United Kingdom and NATO command, control, communication and information systems. The pace of change in information systems technology means that it has been necessary to maintain a constant programme of work to build on current achievements.

Recently, major initiatives such as the joint Warrior interoperability demonstration and the interoperability symposium in The Hague have assisted progress. Particular successes have been achieved in naval and air systems including the joint tactical information distribution system.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government (House Sales)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the total receipts to local government from the sale of their homes for rent; by whom the balances are now held; and what is (a) the amount and (b) the proportion of these receipts that has been used to write off local authority debt. [9861]

Mr. Clappison: Total receipts to local government from the sale of local authority dwelling since 1971–72 are about £23 billion. Most of these receipts will have been used to repay debt or for new capital expenditure, but no breakdown is available relating to housing receipts. Unused amounts remain with the authorities that received them.

Rented Property

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if properties remain subject to assessment by the rent officer service where a tenant's consent has been obtained on form RR1. [10251]

Mr. Clappison: Schedule 11 to the Rent Act 1977 sets out the procedures for rent officers receiving applications for the registration of a rent.

If a landlord and tenant apply jointly on form RR1 for the registration of a rent, the rent officer may, after making any enquiry he thinks fit or asking for any information he requires, simply register the asking rent if he thinks it is a fair rent. If he does not think it is a fair rent, he may determine a fair rent.

Homelessness

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment (1) what action was taken by local authorities in England for those households accepted as homeless and in priority need by reason of old age, in each quarter of 1993 and 1994 and in the first two quarters of 1995; [10262]

(2) what were the reasons for homelessness among those households accepted as homeless by local authorities in England, who were in priority need by reason of old age, in each quarter in 1993 and 1994 and in the first two quarters of 1995. [10266]

Mr. Curry: The quarterly P1(E) return on which local authorities in England report information on their activities under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 does not provide a breakdown by priority need category of the data collected on the use of temporary accommodation for households accepted for re-housing, the type of accommodation in which households are finally placed or the reason for the loss of previous settled accommodation.

Wild Birds (Shooting Licences)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by species the number of licences issued in 1995 under the terms of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 for the destruction of wild birds; and how many birds were killed in each case. [10152]

Mr. Clappison: Details of licences issued under section 16 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 are contained in reports by the Untied Kingdom to the European Community on derogations under article 9 of the directive on the conservation of wild birds (79/409/EEC). The latest report for which figures are available covers 1994. Figures are not yet available for 1995, but when the report has been prepared a copy will be placed in the Library of the House.

Rough Sleepers (London)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what emergency provisions were made for rough sleepers in metropolitan areas during the very cold spell over Christmas and the new year; and if he will make a statement. [9972]

Mr. Curry: Under the Government's rough sleepers initiative, an annual programme of winter shelters provides additional beds for rough sleepers in central London between December and March. The 1995–96 programme is providing 310 beds in seven shelters. Extra emergency beds are opened during particularly cold spells and, so far this winter, up to 125 beds have been made available between 5 and 13 December and between 21 December and 7 January.

Extra assistance for rough sleepers during the winter is also provided nationally by local authorities and voluntary sector agencies.

European Regional Fund

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many bids have been successfully made for objective 1 status funding in Merseyside; and how many relate to (a) the Wirral and (b) the Liverpool side of the river. [10458]

Sir Paul Beresford: A total of 1,521 bids have so far received approval under the objective 1 process. Of these some 300 are based in or being delivered directly in the Wirral. A further 178 training projects involve some beneficiaries from the Wirral and a further 30 business support and technology transfer projects will benefit companies across Merseyside. This leaves 1,013 projects based in or directly aimed at residents of the other four Merseyside districts.

East Cambridgeshire District Council

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he has decided to take in relation to East Cambridgeshire district council following the notice served on it on 19 May 1995 in respect of anti-competitive behaviour in awarding a refuse collection contract in-house. [10588]

Sir Paul Beresford: On 19 May my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, served a notice under section 13 of the Local Government Act 1988 on East Cambridgeshire district council, setting out his view that the authority had acted anti-competitively during a competition for refuse collection work.

My right hon. Friend has given careful consideration to the response to that notice. East Cambridgeshire awarded the contract for refuse collection to its direct service organisation when it had received substantially lower bids from private companies. In my right hon. Friend's view they did not have well-founded reasons for doing so. He has therefore today given the authority a direction under section 14 of the Act which requires them to retender their refuse collection work by 22 January 1997. It must seek his consent if it plans to assign the work to its direct service organisation.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs; [10948]

(2) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10947]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies have achieved increases, year on year, in the amount of private finance attracted in support of departmental programmes. In 1995–96 we estimate that £4.6 billion will be levered-in. The administrative costs of this activity are not separately identified.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the bids for reorganisation costs for 1996–97 that have been made by those local authorities subject to reorganisation on 1 April 1995, 1996 and 1997 and the proportion of the bids which have now been allocated supplementary credit approval cover for 1996–97. [10840]

Sir Paul Beresford: The amounts are as follows:

[1] The councils of the East Riding of Yorkshire, Hull City, Bristol City, Bath and North-East Somerset and York District have been asked to reconsider whether the reorganisations in their area could be implemented more economically. If they submit revised bids by the end of January, they will be considered and allocations made during February.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update his answers of (a) 17 July 1995, Official Report, columns 868–69, to the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Raynsford) and (b) 17 July 1995, Official Report, column 869, to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers) for the financial year 1994–95. [10942]

Sir Paul Beresford: A list by region of the amounts of accumulated usable capital receipts for each English local authority at 31 March 1995 has been placed in the Library of the House. Figures for the amounts set aside as provision for credit liabilities at 31 March 1995 are not yet available.

The regional totals for these amounts are:

Amounts held at 31 March 1995 (£ million)

Nottingham Unitary Authority

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to lay the orders making Nottingham a unitary authority. [11226]

Sir Paul Beresford: I expect to make an announcement shortly.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9758]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The companies with which my Department and its executive agencies hold air-time contracts are:

BT Mobile; Carphone Warehouses; HL Communications; Hutchinson Orange; Martin Dawes Communications; Mercury One 2 One; Peoples Phone; Talkland; Vodac; Vodacom.

Contract duration varies but the standard arrangement is for a minimum of 12 months subject to a termination period of between one or three months thereafter. Figures are not available for the cost of each contract.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9759]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The procedures followed depended on the value of the contract being awarded and ranged from full competitive tendering processes to obtaining quotations from a number of potential suppliers. The companies involved with these processes were:

BT Mobile, Carphone Warehouse, HL Communications, Hutchinson Orange, Martin Dawes Communications, Motorola, Mercury One 2 One, Peoples Phone, Securicor Cellular, Talkland, Uniqueair, Vodac and Vodacom.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9760]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 17 January 1996]: None. My Department has withdrawn from over 250 air-time agreements but has done so by exercising its right to give notice of termination in accordance with the terms of the contract.

SCOTLAND

Prison Population

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the average daily population in each penal establishment for each month from 1990 onwards. [7788]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 22 January 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the average daily prison population in each establishment for each month from 1990 onwards.

I enclose tables which provide the information requested for the calendar years 1990–1994 and January 1995–November 1995. As this information is rather lengthy. I have also arranged for a copy of these tables to be placed in the Library of the House.

Severe Weather Conditions

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by local authority area, the total number of houses in each local authority which have been reported as suffering damage as a result of the recent severe weather conditions. [8939]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is not yet available centrally as local authorities are continuing to assess the damage caused. However, the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities is collecting information from individual local authorities on the position. When I met COSLA's housing committee on 12 January I asked for the information that it collects to be passed on to the Scottish Office as soon as a full picture emerges and it has undertaken to do so.

Local authorities may have limited information about houses where the occupants did not call upon the council for assistance.

Flood Prevention Schemes

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what impact the abolition of ring-fencing in relation to the capital programmes of local authorities will have on his plans to impose a statutory duty on local authorities to assume responsibility for flood prevention schemes. [9285]

Mr. Kynoch: It is for each local authority to determine the relative priorities of schemes within its capital programme in the light of its statutory duties and identified local needs. The financial implications of any changes in flood prevention responsibilities will be taken into account in the review which the Secretary of State announced on 1 November 1995. A consultation paper will be issued soon.

Hafez Dalkamoni

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions there have been between the Crown Office and the German authorities concerning Hafez Dalkamoni, and if he will make a statement. [9402]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There have been no recent discussions between the Crown Office and the German authorities concerning Hafez Dalkamoni. Any decision concerning the release of a national of a third country from a German prison is solely a matter for the German authorities.

Disabled People (Sport)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in relation to the development of sports for disabled people. [9214]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Government are committed to the development of sporting opportunities for disabled people and significant progress has been made in this area in recent years through the Scottish Sports Council. In December 1994 the council appointed a co-ordinator of sport for people with a disability within the framework of the successful team sport Scotland initiative. This appointment came in the wake of the launch of the national ready, willing and able scheme aimed at improving the opportunities for people with disabilities to take part in sport. Ready, willing and able is a partnership between the Scottish Sports Council, the Scottish Sports Association for People with Disabilities and the Royal Mail, whose sponsorship of the programme has been matched through the sportsmatch scheme.

Carpet Industry

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Scottish carpet manufacturing industry, with particular reference to European competition and European Community regulations; what plans he has to promote, enhance and develop the Scottish carpet industry; and when he next plans to meet representatives of the industry to discuss economic advancement. [9288]

Mr. George Kynoch: The census of employment estimates that in September 1993 some 1,300 people were employed in the Scottish carpet manufacturing industry. A wide range of business development advice and assistance to the industry is available from the Scottish Office, the Scottish Enterprise network and the Scottish Textiles Association.

Article 92 of the treaty of Rome requires that all support to the carpet industry from any public source has to comply with the European Community state aid rules. Where aid has been found to be incompatible with the rules the European Commission has ordered its repayment. The UK Government monitor closely cases which arise in other member states. The Government also maintain close contact with representatives from the UK carpet industry.

National Waste Strategy

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to establish a national waste strategy for Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [9207]

Mr. Kynoch: The Environmental Protection Act 1990, as amended by the Environment Act 1995, provides for the preparation of a national waste strategy for Scotland. It places a duty on the Scottish Environment Protection Agency to prepare a strategy as soon as possible. The agency will become operational on 1 April 1996.

New Zealand Flatworm

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent assessment he has made of dangers arising from the New Zealand flatworm; and what finance the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland allocates to (a) Invergowrie and (b) other research establishments for investigations relating to the New Zealand flatworm. [8412]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: In 1991 the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department commissioned and funded a survey of the distribution of the New Zealand flatworm in Scotland. Further surveillance on horticultural and farm businesses is presently being undertaken and will be completed later in the year.

There is no current funding made available to the Scottish Crop Research Institute at Invergowrie or to any other research establishment for investigations relating to the New Zealand flatworm. However, it is proposed to commission shortly a three-year project which will look at the environmental and ecological impact of the flatworm. This is part of a joint approach to research into the flatworm by the UK Agriculture Departments.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10056]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office is currently considering with other Government Departments the introduction of guidance about gold plating in relation to EC directives.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10064]

Mr. Kynoch: My Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research is undertaken by his Department (a) directly and (b) indirectly into combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder; and if he will indicate for (b) the organisations involved and the total funding provided. [10546]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office Department of Health is not undertaking any research, either directly or indirectly, into combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what provision is made by his Department for the treatment of combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder; [10544]

(2) what provision is made by his Department for respite care for sufferers of combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder; [10547]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of ex-service (a) men and (b) women in Scotland suffering from combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder. [10545]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: Health boards in Scotland are responsible for purchasing health services to meet the needs of their resident populations. Services are purchased nationally only in the case of a few rare highly specialist treatments. These do not include services for people suffering post-traumatic stress disorder.

The Scottish Office Department of Health has not, therefore, specifically assessed the numbers suffering, nor has it made specific provision for treatment of, or respite care for, people suffering from this condition. These are matters for health boards.

Rural Areas

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to revise the definition of rural areas following the introduction of new local authority boundaries in April. [10590]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department is planning to commission research which will review the existing definitions of rurality and develop an appropriate formula in the light of that research and taking account of forthcoming changes to the structure of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to ensure that all agencies with an interest in rural affairs work to a common set of definitions. [10591]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Rural White Paper "Rural Scotland: People, Prosperity and Partnership", which was published on 15 December 1995, sets out the Government's policies for rural communities in Scotland and proposes measures to put these into practice.

The White Paper proposes a Scottish rural partnership system, based on local rural partnerships, supported by a Scottish national rural partnership and resourced through a Scottish Partnership Fund. The national rural partnership will provide a forum at national level for a range of agencies and organisations concerned with rural Scotland to formulate and implement their policies in an integrated manner and to work towards the achievement of the objectives laid out in the Scottish Rural White Paper.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the rural local authorities, according to the Scottish "Economic Bulletin" Randall definition, updated to take account of data for the 1991 census of population. [10589]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish "Economic Bulletin" Randall definition defines rural as those local authority districts which have a population density of fewer than 100 persons per square kilometre.

The information set out in the following list details the local authority districts classed as rural under this definition, taking account of data from the 1991 census of population.

The information requested regarding other organisations and individuals is not held centrally and could be provided only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The average increase between 1995–96 indicative standard spending assessments and 1996–97 provisional standard spending assessments for county councils and county borough councils is 2.9 per cent. Bridgend county borough council's provisional standard spending assessment for 1996–97 is £107.537 million.

16. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what the revenue settlement for local government provides per head of population in (a) Wales and (b) England. [8845]

Mr. Hague: The provisional settlement proposals for 1996–97 provide for total standard spending per head of population of £984 in Wales and £922 in England. Comparable figures for central Government support for that spending are £864 and £732.

Both I and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will announce our final settlement decisions at the end of the month.

22. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received following the announcement of the 1996–97 local government finance settlement. [8853]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I discussed the provisional settlement with representatives of local government at a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on local government finance on 18 December 1995. We have also received various written representations.

Tourism

14. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest trends in tourism in Wales. [8842]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Latest information for 1995 suggests that domestic visitors to Wales increased by 11 per cent. with spending up 8 per cent. There were 690,000 overseas visitors to Wales in 1994 with spending up 10 per cent. to £190 million.

Closed Circuit Television

15. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what resources have been allocated to provide more closed circuit television cameras to fight crime in Wales. [8843]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: £1.6 million has been allocated over the next two years under the strategic development scheme for new closed circuit television camera projects in Wales, with over 100 additional cameras being brought into use for the fight against crime. ### Cardiff International Airport

17. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what developments have taken place to improve the facilities at Cardiff international airport. [8846]

18. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the figure for male unemployment in (a) Newport, Gwent and (b) Wales at the latest available date and expressed in percentage terms. [8847]

Mr. Richards: In December 1995, the unadjusted number of males on the claimant unemployment count in the Newport travel-to-work-area was 5,841. This compares with 82,839 in Wales. The unemployment rates were 10 per cent. and 11.1 per cent. respectively.

Government Spending

19. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about Government spending and tax receipts per head in Wales. [8849]

Mr. Hague: A Welsh Office report, "Government Expenditure and Revenue—Wales 1993–94", published on 8 January, estimated that total Government expenditure on behalf of the population of Wales in 1993–94 was £14.7 billion. This is equivalent to £5,040 per head in Wales compared with expenditure of £4,871 per head in the United Kingdom as a whole. Total tax receipts from Wales in the same year are estimated at £9.3 billion or £3,020 per head. This compares with the UK figure of £3,973 per head.

Trade (Far East)

20. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what activities the Welsh Office is undertaking to promote trade in the far east. [8850]

Mr. Richards: General advice is available to any company which is considering exporting to any overseas market, including the far east. In addition, the Welsh Office trade mission programme and trade fair representative service specifically encourage small and medium sized Welsh companies to export to new markets worldwide. Eight visits to various countries in the far east have been made or are planned under current programmes between 1993 and spring 1997.

Public Transport

21. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he intends to take to protect and improve the level of local public transport services in Wales. [8852]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The level of services is primarily a matter for operators. It is the responsibility of local authorities to ensure that essential public transport services are provided where it cannot be done commercially.

Grant-maintained Schools Foundation

23. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much it has cost to set up an office for the Grant-maintained Schools Foundation in Wales. [8854]

Cycle Paths

24. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he has taken to encourage the development and use of cycle paths in Wales. [8855]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I recently announced that £1.3 million has been allocated over three years under the strategic development scheme to help create 326 miles of cycle paths in north and south Wales.

The Welsh Office is also assisting with the funding of a feasibility study for the proposed Swansea to Newport cycle route.

Schools (Expenditure)

25. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from headmasters and others on the level of education expenditure in schools in Wales. [8857]

Mr. Richards: Many representations have been received on the level of expenditure on schools in Wales. However, it is for individual local authorities to determine how the resources that are made available to them are allocated between services, including education, in the light to their statutory responsibilities and their perception of local needs and priorities.

Carers

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that carers are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9366]

Mr. Richards: People representing all sections and interests of the community are encouraged, through open advertisement, to apply for non-executive appointment to NHS trusts and health authorities and to become members of community health councils. An equal opportunities policy in the selection process is adopted for all appointments.

Incontinence Pads

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his policy is in relation to the supply of incontinence pads to those who require them because of disability; what plans he has to review these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [9211]

Mr. Richards: The organisation of continence services in Wales and the manner in which they are delivered, including the provision of continence pads, are matters for district health authorities and hospital and community units. They are under a general obligation to provide these services where need exists and having regard to their resources and priorities.

NHS responsibilities for meeting continuing health care needs, which include the provision of community health services such as the supply of continence pads, are set out in Welsh Health Circular WHC(95)7.

Disability

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest assessment of the impact of local government reorganisation on the provision of services of disabled people; what guidelines he (a) has issued, and (b) intends to issue, to unitary authorities on the provision of services for and to disabled people; what arrangements he intends to put in place to ensure the continuation of services which are currently provided across the new local government authority boundaries; and if he will make a statement. [9237]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The new unitary authorities will be responsible for deciding how their statutory responsibilities for social services can best be discharged. The Welsh office issued guidance in August 1995 to all shadow unitary authorities in Wales, summarising local authority social services functions and responsibilities. This highlights the particular features of social services which the new authorities will need to consider as they plan the effective provision of social services for the people who need them.

Sections 32–34 of the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 allow my right hon. Friend to take certain steps if the arrangements for any service or aspects of that service appear to be unsatisfactory or appear likely to become unsatisfactory. These powers are available until 31 March 1999.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that disabled people are represented on the health boards and health councils which he is responsible for appointing; and if he will make a statement. [9363]

Mr. Richards: People representing all sections and interests of the community are encouraged, through open advertisement, to apply for non-executive appointment to NHS trusts and health authorities and to become members of community health councils. An equal opportunities policy in the selection process is adopted for all appointments.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of the national lottery on raising funds to support the development and operation of the hospice movement and hospices; what plans he has to ensure the financial security of hospices; and if he will make a statement. [9282]

Mr. Richards: There is, as yet, no conclusive evidence concerning the impact of the national lottery on the fund raising activities of the voluntary hospices in Wales. However, the Government have given a commitment to monitor charitable income, and the Welsh Office is associated with a Home Office research project which will analyse and monitor changes in charitable income, following the introduction of the national lottery. One hospice in Wales has benefited from the national lottery.

Since 1 April 1995 funds for hospices have been included in the health authority allocations. Authorities will be expected to assess local health needs and commission an appropriate level of palliative care, entering into three-year rolling contracts, where possible.

Youth Training

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many eligible young people in Alyn and Deeside, Clwyd, Gwynedd and Wales are currently unable to obtain a place on a youth training scheme; and if he will make a statement. [9551]

Mr. Richards: Information is not available in the form requested. However, at 30 November 1995—latest available—no young person in Wales eligible for the Government's youth training guarantee was waiting for an offer to start a training place.

Nursery Education

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of under-fives' education in Wales is on a full-time basis. [9552]

Flintshire Unitary Authority

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to respond to the request made to his Department in November 1995 for more funds for the Flintshire unitary authority in the financial year 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [9555]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Flintshire county council's views are being considered as a representation on the provisional local government revenue settlement, consultation on which ended on 5 January. My right hon. Friend will announce his final settlement proposals shortly.

Smoking

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will introduce a programme to tackle the problem of teenage smoking on similar lines to the Quitline programme in England. [9022]

Mr. Richards: The Quitline telephone helpline in England provides advice on smoking cessation for all age groups and is not aimed specifically at teenage smokers.

The Health Promotion Authority for Wales currently delivers a wide range of programmes designed to prevent the take up of smoking or to help individuals to stop smoking. Many of these programmes, including the "Smokebusters" initiatives—which aim to discourage 11 to 13–year–olds from starting smoking—and "Quit and Win" project— aimed at 15 to 19–year–olds—are designed specifically to address the problem of smoking among young people. There are no plans to introduce a programme similar to Quitline in Wales.

Under the new arrangements for funding Health Promotion Wales which are to be introduced from April 1996, it will be primarily for health authorities to commission future programmes to deal with the problem of teenage smoking in Wales.

Council Tax

Mr Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish his estimate of the average council tax—band C, two adults—in constant prices for each of the new unitary council authorities and for Wales as a whole for 1994–95 and 1995–96 together with his estimate for the same categories for 1996–97. [9198]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The average council taxes for band C dwellings with two adults for 1994–95 and 1995–96, at constant 1995–96 prices, are £303 and £348 respectively. No information is available on a unitary authority basis for 1994–95. Implied band C taxes for individual unitary authorities for 1995–96 are given in the following table. The figures have been derived from the final disaggregated budget and indicative standard spending assessments (SSAs) issued on 27 October 1995. These redistribute 1995–96 budgets and SSAs for the existing councils to the new authorities.

Council tax levels for 1996–97 will depend on the budgetary decisions of individual authorities in the light of the final settlement which will be announced at the end of the month.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people currently serve in his Department; at what cost to public funds; what were the figures in real and current terms in May 1979; and if he will make a statement. [8848]

Mr. Hague: There are currently 2,400 full-time equivalent staff in my Department, with a total running cost budget of £76 million for 1995–96. In 1979–80 there were some 2,600 staff with recorded running costs of £18 million, which is equivalent to £46 million at 1995–96 prices. However, these running cost figures are not comparable; for example, running costs in 1979–80 did not include superannuation charges, the training and enterprise council management fee and various overhead costs including accommodation, which have added at least £22 million to the 1995–96 figure. The Welsh Office has assumed additional functions over this period; for example, further responsibilities for industry, higher education and training.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10063]

Mr. Hague: My Department's policy is not to gold-plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the United Kingdom. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10057]

Mr. Hague: I shall arrange for a copy of the current guidance on deregulation to Welsh Office staff to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as possible. This guidance is already subject to review and will be affected by the outcome of the official review of guidance on gold plating.

Post Traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what research is undertaken by his Department (a) directly and (b) indirectly into post traumatic stress disorder and if he will indicate for (b) the organisations involved and the total funding provided; [10550]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of ex-service men and women in Wales suffering from combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder. [10549]

Mr. Richards: None.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what provision is made by his Department for the treatment of combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder; [10548]

(2) what provision is made by his Department for respite care for sufferers of combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder. [10551]

Mr. Richards: None. The provision of services is a matter for local determination.

Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the hospitals, registered nursing homes and homes for the elderly that have suffered outbreaks of MRSA, indicating the severity of the outbreak with special reference to the number of victims and of deaths. [10592]

Mr. Richards: The epidemiology of MRSA is a complex matter. Certain data are available on an England and Wales basis, but the Welsh element could be disaggregated only at disproportionate cost. MRSA is undoubtedly a rising problem. For this reason, last year, the Chief Medical Officer in the Welsh Office invited the Public Health Laboratory Service in Wales to undertake separate surveillance on MRSA in Wales.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will instruct NHS trust hospitals to publish information about the number of cases of (a) MRSA and (b) other infections in their annual report. [10593]

Mr. Richards: There are no plans to require NHS trusts to provide this information in their annual reports. However, details should be available from the Chief Executive of NHS trusts on request, since they have been asked to ensure that adequate infection control arrangements are in place within their hospitals.

Wrexham Maelor Hospital

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of the tender and the other associated expenses in demolition and adaptation of block T05 of phase 2 of the Wrexham Maelor hospital carried out in the second half of 1995. [10352]

Mr. Richards: The cost of the tender for the scheme, to provide an expanded rehabilitation unit as part of the redevelopment of the hospital, carried out in the second half of 1995 was £133,457. The total cost of the scheme was £244,000 which included the cost of the professional fees, equipment and VAT.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was block T05 designed for when phase 2 of the Wrexham Maelor hospital was constructed; and if it was used for this purpose. [10353]

Mr. Richards: Template T05 within phase 1 of the Wrexham Maelor hospital and provides accommodation for rehabilitation services, that is, physiotherapy, occupational therapy and speech therapy. It has been used for this purpose since it was opened in 1986.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the budget of the Welsh development agency for 1996–97. [8856]

Mr. Hague: None.

Chunghwa Picture Tube Company

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial assistance or inducement was offered to the Chunghwa Picture Tube Company of Taiwan by the Welsh development agency to locate its new United Kingdom assembly plant in Cardiff. [10684]

Mr. Hague: There were many discussions with Chunghwa about a wide range of support, including financial assistance, to encourage the company to locate in Wales. The package included support from my Department; the Welsh development agency; the South Glamorgan training and enterprise council; South Glamorgan county council; and Cardiff Bay development corporation.

Theatr Clwyd, Mold

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amounts he has included in Flintshire's standard spending assessment specifically for Theatr Clwyd, Mold. [10841]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The formula for calculating standard spending assessments comprises objective indicators of relative need which are relevant to local government as a whole. The formula for 1996–97 has been agreed with the local authority association and ratified by the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance.

The formula does not include specific indicators for expenditure items, such as Theatr Clwyd, which are relevant to individual authorities. However, as a major recreational facility Theatr Clwyd will influence Flintshire county council's SSA and revenue support grant entitlement since the SSA formula includes indicators which contain estimates of day and night visitors to the authority's area.

Clwyd county council's budgeted expenditure for Theatr Clwyd in 1995–96 is being disaggregated into Flintshire's notional amount figure. Flintshire will have the spending power associated with that.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs; [10941]

(2) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10971]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: For 1995–96, the only Welsh Office running costs and consultancy fees relating to the tendering of private finance initiative projects are as follows: staff costs £195,300; other costs £550, and management consultancy fees £18.580.

No costs were incurred before 1995–96.

Roads (Porous Surfaces)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on which roads in Wales porous surfaces have been laid. [11067]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Porous asphalt has been laid on the M4 between the Coryton and Miskin interchanges.

Traffic Separation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on which roads in Wales chevron road markings are used to encourage traffic separation. [10998]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

NHS (Priorities)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his priorities for the national health service in Wales during 1996. [8844]

Mr. Richards: The priorities are clear. My right hon. Friend wants the NHS in Wales to redouble its efforts to provide effective care, care that has been shown to be of benefit to patients with minimum bureaucracy and delay and with maximum efficiency.

Our priorities in detail are:

(i) more emphasis on services of proven benefit to patients;

(ii) more responsive services;

(iii) partnerships with Social Services and voluntary groups;

(iv) co-operation within the NHS; and

(v) improved efficiency.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the proposed family credit ceilings in 1996–97 for a family with (a) one child aged under five years, (b) two children aged under 11 years, (c) two children aged over 11 years, (d) three children aged under 11 years, (e) three children age over 11 years and (f) two children under 11 years and two children aged over 11 years. [8158]

Mr. Roger Evans: At the new benefit levels proposed for April 1996, the family credit ceilings represented by the highest amount of net earnings and other relevant income, including child benefit, a family can have and still qualify for family credit at the minimum payment of 50p will be as follows:

| | Parent working 16 to 29 hours per week £ | Parent working 30 hours or more per week £ |
|---|---|---|
| Family with one child under five years | 168.43 | 183.14 |
| Family with two children under 11 | 194.01 | 208.73 |
| Family with two children over 11 (but under 16) | 216.01 | 230.73 |
| Family with three children under 11 | 219.60 | 234.31 |
| Family with three children over 11 (but under 16) | 252.60 | 267.31 |
| Family with two children under 11 and two children over 11 (but under 16) | 267.19 | 281.90 |

These ceilings may be increased by up to £15 where maintenance is received and by up to £60 where there are relevant child care expenses.

From October 1994, up to £40 a week per family in respect of formal child care charges incurred can be offset in the calculation of normal earnings for family credit. It applies where the care is for a child under 11 in the family of a lone parent or a couple where one is working and the other is incapacitated. This increases the potential ceilings still further.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reassess the appropriateness of the interval between qualification for cold weather payments and receipt of the money. [8416]

Mr. Heald: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 19 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will reassess the appropriateness of the interval between qualification for Cold Weather Payments (CWPs) and receipt of the money.

The Metrological office supply the Agency with temperature data on the basis of forecast and recorded periods of Cold Weather. A forecast period is seven consecutive days during which the mean daily temperature is forecast to be equal to or below zero degree centigrade. A recorded period is seven connective days during which the mean daily temperature was recorded as equal to or below zero degree centigrade.

Once a Cold Weather period has been identified a scan of the Income Support computer is run to establish those who are eligible for a Cold Weather Payment (CWP). If a period of Cold Weather is identified ending on a Thursday, a scan is run that weekend. A Cold Weather period identified ending on a Friday will be included in a scan the following weekend. The scans can only be run at a weekend when District offices are closed and the computer system is not needed. Payment is sent out automatically the following week.

This method ensures that payment is made timeously and without the customer having to make a claim. Where payment is made on a forecast period of Cold Weather potential qualifiers can be established more quickly than waiting for a period of Cold Weather to be confirmed.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claimed extra heating allowance in the areas covered by the Peterlee and Seaham area benefit offices during the recent cold weather; and on which dates they qualified. [9511]

Mr. Heald: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Cummings dated 19 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people claimed the extra heating allowance in the areas covered by the Peterlee and Seaham area benefit offices during the recent Cold Weather; and on which dates they qualified.

Cold Weather Payments, are paid automatically when the average daily temperature in an area, as reported by the weather station covering that area, has been or is forecast to be Zero Degree Centigrade or below for seven days. A customer is entitled to a Cold Weather Payment, if for at least one day in the Cold Weather period, they receive Income Support which includes an amount for a dependant under five, or one of the following premiums; Higher Pensioner, Enhanced Pensioner, Disability, Severe Disability and Disabled Child.

The benefit offices of Seaham and Peterlee are part of the North Durham District. Geographical areas are linked to weather stations by post code. Postal codes covered by the North Durham District are linked to the weather stations at Leeming and Tynemouth.

The information you requested is provided at Annex A.

I hope my reply is helpful.

Annex A

| Weather station | Qualifying period |
|---|---|
| Leeming | 23 December 1995 to 2 January 1996 inclusive |
| Tynemouth | 22 December 1995 to 3 January 1996 inclusive |

| Benefit office | Number of payments |
|---|---|
| Peterlee | 6,678 |
| Seaham | 1,985 |

Unemployment Costs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current annual overall cost of unemployment to his Department; and what is the average cost per unemployed claimant (a) per week and (b) per annum. [9536]

Mr. Roger Evans: The total estimated outturn expenditure by the DSS on unemployed people in 1994–95 was £9,100 million. Of this, £1,260 million is unemployment benefit, £5,323 million is income support, £48 million is social fund payments and £2,470 million is housing benefit and council tax benefit. The average weekly amount received by unemployed claimants receiving a specific benefit is: income support £55.38, unemployment benefit £48.60, housing benefit £42.65 and council tax benefit £7.44.

Pensioners' Benefits

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the number of pensioners who are in receipt of (a) income support and (b) housing benefit. [10207]

Mr. Roger Evans: The numbers of pensioners receiving income support and housing benefit are 1.78 million and 1.94 million respectively.

Notes:

Pensions (Women)

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when his Department received the results from the research it commissioned from Ms Julia Field and others in 1994 into women's pension provision for retirement, the financial effects of divorce and the treatment of occupational pensions; [9920]

(2) when his Department will publish the findings of research it commissioned from Ms Julia Field and others in 1994 into women's pension provision for retirement, the financial effects of divorce and the treatment of occupational pensions; [9921]

(3) what was the total cost of the research his Department commissioned from Ms Julia Field and others in 1994 into women's pension provision for retirement, the financial effects of divorce and the treatment of occupational pensions. [9922]

Mr. Heald: Preliminary results of the research on women's retirement provision and on the treatment of pensions rights on divorce commissioned from social and community planning research were received in the Department by the end of December 1995. We expect to receive the final draft reports by the end of March 1996 and will publish the findings soon afterwards. The total cost of the four linked surveys that constitute this programme of research is £457,100.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reconsider his decision to prevent local authorities from paying housing benefit in advance to housing associations. [9925]

Mr. Roger Evans: Proposals for changing the rules for paying housing benefit from payment wholly or partly in advance to payment in arrears were put to the Social Security Advisory Committee and the local authority associations in December 1995. The committee decided to consult more widely on the proposals with interested bodies. Its report and the views of the local authority associations are due in February and will be taken fully into account when deciding what changes, if any, should be made to the housing benefit rules.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to place in the Library the report of research undertaken by the Benefits Agency Security, benefit review team, into housing benefit fraud. [10495]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 19 January 1996, Official Report, Column 834.

Compensation Recovery Unit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total amount of state benefits recouped by the compensation recovery unit in each of the last three years. [10133]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 19 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what is the total amount of state benefits recouped by the Compensation Recovery Unit in each of the last three years.

The information requested is given in the table below

| Financial year | Amount £ million |
|---|---|
| 1992–93 | 51.3 |
| 1993–94 | 81.9 |
| 1994–95 | 110.1 |

Figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

The figure for the current financial year to 31 December 1995 is £96 million.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what responses, in addition to his formal one, he has made to the report of the Social Security Committee of 1994–95 (HC 196) concerning the compensation recovery unit; and if he is conducting a consultation exercise with interested parties regarding the work of the compensation recovery unit and its future operations; and if he will make a statement. [9470]

Mr. Roger Evans: I wrote to the Chairman of the Select Committee on 10 January. My letter explained that a compliance cost assessment of the Select Committee's proposals for reform of the compensation recovery scheme would be published shortly. A consultation exercise on the Select Committee's proposals was conducted in late 1995. I shall publish a summary of the results of the consultation shortly.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10068]

Mr. Roger Evans: This Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed by all Departments.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10052]

Mr. Roger Evans: The largest block of EC legislation on social security is in the form of Council regulations, which are directly effective. There is relatively little other EC legislation on social security. This has been implemented on a case-by-case basis in line with overall policy of not gold plating directives, the guidance on which is currently under review. In addition, the Department has its own action plan on deregulation and EC law which is designed to ensure that there is no over-implementation of EC directives.

National Insurance

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the number of people awarded national insurance contribution credits in 1994–95, (b) the average number of credits awarded and (c) the cost of funding these national insurance credits; and if he will indicate the different groups being credited with national insurance contributions. [10770]

Mr. Heald: Some 10.5 million people in the United Kingdom in one or more of the categories listed were awarded an average of 39.4 national insurance credits in the tax year 1994–95.[1] Estimates of the costs arising from these credits are not available.

Categories of people awarded national insurance credits:

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total annual expenditure on income support to cover mortgage interest payments in each financial year between 1989–90 and 1994–95. [10710]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

| | Total number of cases with mortgage interest included in the assessment | Total amount of estimated annual expenditure |
|---|---|---|
| 1989–90 | 281,000 | 353 |

| 1991–92 | 411,000 | 949 |
| 1992–93 | 499,000 | 1,143 |
| 1993–94 | 529,000 | 1,145 |
| 1994–95 | 511,000 | 1,001 |

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand and expenditure to the nearest million.

2. Caseload figures are for May each year, except for 1994–95 where February 1995 figures have been used.

3. Expenditure estimated for 1989–90 to 1992–93 is derived by multiplying the number of cases by the average weekly amount then multiplying by 52. Figures for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are based on an average of four quarters.

Disability Living Allowance

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to review his policy in respect of the award to children under five years of age of the mobility component of disability living allowance; and if he will make a statement; [10842]

(2) how many applications have been made on behalf of children under five years of age for the mobility component of disability living allowance in each of the years since 1993; [10843]

(3) how many children under five years of age were exceptionally allowed to claim the mobility component of disability living allowance in each year since 1993. [10984]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Claims for disability living allowance are for the benefit as a whole and not for an individual component. The Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 specifies that a person must be aged over five to be entitled to the mobility component of DLA. There are currently no plans to review this policy.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10967]

Mr. Roger Evans: In 1994–95 this Department's private finance initiative projects spent £1.044 million on external consultants in the PFI tendering process on the areas of consultancy identified. This figure comprises (i) legal fees of £420,000; (ii) publicity costs of nil; (iii) accountancy fees of £167,000 and (iv) management consultancy fees of £457,000. In 1995–96 prices these costs would be £1.073 million in total and (i) £431,000; (ii) nil; (iii) £172,000 and (iv) £470,000 respectively.

The Department's PFI projects forecast that in 1995–96 we will spend £2.774 million on external consultants in the PFI tendering process on the areas of consultancy identified. this figure comprises (i) legal fees of £359,000; (ii) publicity costs of nil; (iii) accountancy fees of £95,000 and (iv) management consultancy fees of £2.32 million.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10968]

Mr. Roger Evans: In 1994–95 this Department's private finance initiative projects incurred total running costs relating to the PFI tendering process of around £1.5 million, rounded either as a cash figure or at 1995–96 prices. In 1995–96 the Department's PFI projects forecast that they will have incurred total running costs of around £2.5 million relating to the PFI tendering process. A breakdown of the costs is not available in the format requested.

COULD YOU SERVE THE COMMUNITY AS A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE?

The answer is yes, if you have the necessary personal qualities such as common-sense, courage, compassion and the time to offer about 18 days (or 36 half days) a year plus time for training, which would give you a unique insight into the skills required for decision making. Justices of the Peace, often called magistrates, are at the heart of Britain's system of justice and come from all walks of life, many different ethnic backgrounds and all sectors of the community.

Justices of the Peace are unpaid but they may receive certain allowances to cover travelling expenses, subsistence and financial loss occasioned by the performance of their duties.

Justices of the Peace in England and Wales are appointed on behalf of the Sovereign by the Lord Chancellor on the recommendation of local Advisory Committees.

The Advisory Committee for the Doncaster District are currently looking for men and women who live in or within 15 miles of the Metropolitan Borough boundary and who are suitable to be appointed as Justices of the Peace. If you are between 27 and 50 and would like to know more about this vitally important public duty they want to hear from you. If you are between 50 and 60, you may still be considered.

For an application form, information on the selection process and what is entailed, please write to me at the address below, or telephone (01302) 366711.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what he estimates the cost will be to the local police constabulary of policing the site of the Newbury bypass. [9343]

Mr. Maclean: Policing of the bypass site is a joint operation between Thames Valley police and Hampshire constabulary.

Estimated total policing costs in 1995–96 have been assessed by Thames Valley police as £1.525 million and by Hampshire constabulary as £478,000. This includes the costs of officers who would otherwise be on duty elsewhere in the force areas.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps Her Majesty's Government are presently taking to examine the conviction in Sweden of Bengt Bolin under Sweden's extra-territorial law on sex offences against children; [9672]

(2) when Her Majesty's Government expect to be able to make a statement on the implications of the Bengt Bolin case in Sweden for future United Kingdom legislation on child sex offences committed aborad. [9673]

Mr. Maclean: My officials have obtained from the Swedish authorities various documents concerning the Bolin case, including transcripts of the court proceedings. The Swedish chief prosecutor gave a presentation about this case to an Interpol working group in November last year, and Home Office officials who attended the presentation spoke to him about the case. My officials have also recently met a representative from the Swedish Ministry for Foreign Affairs to discuss this matter. In addition, a meeting is being arranged with the Thai prosecutor who was involved in the Bolin case.

The information so far received suggests that there would have been difficulties in securing a conviction in this country on the basis of the evidence presented to the Swedish court. The United Kingdom could, however, unlike Sweden, have extradited a British offender in similar circumstances. We remain of the view that this is the best approach, and have not been persuaded by the experience of the Swedes that extra-territorial jurisdiction would be helpful in dealing with British tourists who commit offences overseas.

School Bus Drivers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what responsibilities the police have for checking the suitability of applicants to be school bus drivers; [10185]

(2) if applicants for school bus driving positions are always checked by the police against a central criminal database; [10186]

(3) how many applicants for school bus driving vacancies were checked against the central criminal database in 1995. [10187]

Mr. Maclean: The police have responsibility for carrying out criminal record checks on applicants for jobs in the statutory sector if the applicant will have a substantial level of regular unsupervised access to children, particularly if such access is on a one-to-one basis in an isolated setting. The Association of Chief Police Officers and the Home Office have agreed guidance on which groups should be eligible for checks and this is set out in Home Office circulars. School bus drivers are listed as one of the groups which should not normally be subject to checks as it is assumed that, for most journeys, they will be transporting large numbers of children with a teacher or parent also present. If a bus driver is likely to be transporting a child or small number of children on a regular basis without a teacher or parent being present, the police have discretion to carry out a check.

If the police are satisfied that a check is justified, the applicant will be checked both against Phoenix, the national criminal record database, and local police records. No statistics are kept on the number of applicants for jobs as school bus drivers who have been checked.

Electro-shock Equipment

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the duration of the hard arrests trial programme; what areas of equipment, policy or training were involved; and what was the budget of the programme; [10249]

(2) what research his Department has carried out since 1987 on the operation, safety or use of electronic shock equipment. [10248]

Mr. Maclean: I assume that the hon. Member's interest relates to the issue of electronic shock equipment. Neither my Department nor the police service has any knowledge of "the hard arrest trial programme" or of any other programme in this area.

Chief officers of police, with their police authorities, are responsible for deciding what equipment to obtain for their officers, either for testing or for introduction. A number of forces have obtained electro-shock equipment for use against ferocious dogs and training in their use would have been undertaken at the local level. The cost of training was met from existing resources. As I have made clear previously, no force has obtained any form of this equipment for use against people.

In 1990 the Forensic Science Service published a theoretical assessment of the effects of electric shock weapons.

Premium Telephone Numbers

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines he has issued to police forces on the use of premium telephone numbers for services to the public. [10256]

Mr. Maclean: None.

Police Vehicles (Accidents)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many road traffic accidents involving police patrol vehicles were reported for the years 1994 and 1995; and how many police officers or civilians sustained serious or fatal injuries in such accidents. [10408]

Mr. Maclean: The latest information which is available centrally, in respect of police forces in England and Wales, is for the year 1993, and is shown. The information on injuries relates to those where death or serious injury has arisen in the course of either police pursuits or responses to emergency calls.

Police vehicle accidents in 1993—all types of police vehicles

All accidents: 18,631.

Accidents in course of pursuits or responses to emergency calls: 5,887.

Police fatal injury: 5

Police serious injury: 113

Civilian fatal injury: 29

Civilian serious injury: 187

Special Constables

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of special constables in each police force in England, indicating in each case the ratio of specials to full-time officers and to the population of the force area. [10631]

Mr. Maclean: The following table, which is broken down by police force area, shows:

the number of special constables in post on 30 September 1995[1];

the number of regular officers in post on 30 September 1995[2]; the proportion of regular officers the number of special constables notionally represents (disregarding discrepancies in hours of duty[3];

the population of each force area according to the latest available estimates from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (mid-1994)[4]; and the number of special constables per 5,000 population[5].

Many special constables perform about four hours' duty a week.

Standards in Public Life

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to complete the review of the law relating to the bribery of hon. Members referred to in the Government's response to the first report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life, Cm 2931. [10559]

Mr. Maclean: The Government are committed to the consolidation of the corruption statutes, and have welcomed the opportunity to clarify the position of hon. Members as part of that exercise. I cannot say at this stage when a conclusion might be reached.

Immigration and Asylum Interviews

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reconsidered requests for tape recording immigration and asylum interviews at ports of entry and at the Home Office. [10478]

Mr. Kirkhope: We have no plans to allow asylum and immigration interviews at ports of entry or the Home Office to be tape recorded.

Juvenile Offenders

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of juvenile offenders subject to a supervision order reoffend within two years of the making of the order. [10863]

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information relates to a sample of those sentenced for standard list offences during three separate weeks of 1991.

Eighty per cent. of those aged under 17 when sentenced to a supervision order were reconvicted within two years of the making of the order. This reconviction rate includes only reconvictions for standard list offences and relates only to offenders sentenced for such offences—standard list offences consist of all indictable offences and some of the more serious summary offences. The reconviction rate is based on a sample 275 offenders.

Reconviction rates will be influenced by criminal histories and types of offences committed.

Ms Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of juvenile offenders who receive custodial sentences reoffend within two years of release. [10864]

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information relates to prisoners discharged from Prison Service establishments during 1992.

Eighty-nine per cent. of those aged under 17 when sentenced to custody were reconvicted within two years of release from prison. This reconviction rate includes only reconvictions for standard list offences—these consist of all indictable offences and some of the more serious summary offences.

Reconviction rates will be influenced by criminal histories and type of offences committed.

Dangerous Dogs Legislation

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dogs are currently being held under the dangerous dogs legislation. [11263]

Mr. Sackville: There are presently 81 dogs held in police custody in England and Wales under the Dangerous Dogs Act 1991. No dogs are currently being held by the police under other dog legislation.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dogs have been destroyed under the dangerous dogs legislation to date. [11249]

Mr. Sackville: Information on the number of dogs destroyed under the dangerous dogs legislation is not collected in the form requested.

However, during 1992, 1993 and 1994, a total of 781 people were convicted either of offences under section 1 of the 1991 Act or of aggravated offences under section 3. In each of these cases, the court would have had no option but to order the destruction of the dog concerned. The figure quoted is thus likely to be close to the actual number of dogs put down under the Act over that period.

Corresponding figures for 1995 are likely to be available in the autumn.

Crime Control (International Co-operation)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what international research and co-operation his Department has been involved concerning the introduction of new technologies to combat crime; and if he will make a statement. [9889]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Home Office police scientific development branch has memoranda of understanding with the Dutch Ministry of Justice, the Bundeskriminalamt in Germany and the Office of National Drug Control Policy in the United States of America with a view to collaborating in the research, development, evaluation and operational use of law enforcement technologies. Further MOUs are under discussion with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Drug Enforcement Administration and the New South Wales police. PSDB is also a member of the working group on international technology support and participates in numerous international specialist crime-related conferences. My Department is also working with the European Committee for Standardisation to develop a European standard for vehicle tracking devices.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library all information held by his Department concerning the effectiveness of installed closed circuit television on preventing crime; and if he will make a statement. [9890]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: My Department has published a number of research papers looking at various aspects of closed circuit television effectiveness as part of its series of crime prevention unit papers and the successor series of crime detection and prevention papers. The most recent of these—published on 29 December 1995—is paper No. 68—"CCTV in Town Centres: Three Case Studies". Copies of all these papers are held in the Library.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total central Government expenditure to date on crime prevention closed circuit television schemes; and if he will make a statement. [9891]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Approximately £800,000 has been allocated to 56 crime prevention projects featuring closed circuit television since 1989 under the safer cities programme. In addition, £5 million was awarded to 106 CCTV schemes in last year's CCTV challenge competition. The current CCTV challenge competition will provide a further £15 million for CCTV in 1996–97. Information about CCTV projects funded by other Government programmes is not collected centrally.

National DNA Database

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what international co-operation and research the United Kingdom Government have been involved concerning the operation of a national DNA database; and if he will make a statement. [9892]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Forensic Science Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Dr. Janet Anderson to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 23 January 1996:

You recently tabled a Parliamentary Question about international co-operation and research concerning the operation of the National DNA Database. As you know, the arrangement now is that the Chief Executive of an Executive Agency, with the agreement of the Minister, replies to Members of Parliament on operational matters. I am therefore replying on behalf of the Forensic Science Service.

The National DNA Database was launched in April 1995. The DNA technique used for the Database, Short Tandem Repeats (STRs)., was pioneered and developed by the Forensic Science Service (FSS). Following extensive peer review, a test system using STRs was successfully introduced into casework. The technique was chosen for the Database after a pilot study commissioned by the Home Office. The FSS work on STRs is now being taken forward internationally and I have set out some details below.

FSS has engendered and maintained close contacts throughout the world. It was at the forefront of the foundation of the European DNA Profiling Group (EDNAP) whose members now include representatives from virtually all European countries. The work of EDNAP is focused on STRs. The FSS takes a leading role in the direction fo forensic testing in Europe through this group orchestrating collaborative trials and studies. This in turn helps to enrich the FSS research programme.

FSS Scientists are regular guest lecturers in North America, Australia and Asia. These talks help to assure that their work is subjected to the widest possible peer review. It is a measure of the quality of the most recent advances, which have tended toward simultaneous analysis of highly discriminating tests, that the philosophy and indeed the particular test systems have been adopted by countries throughout the world.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost of launching and operating the national DNA database; and if he will make a statement. [9893]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The total cost of launching the national DNA database and the cost of its first year of operation, 1995–96, are forecast to be £3.2 million.

Crime (Retail Premises)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to reduce crime against retail premises; and if he will make a statement. [10244]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: There are many measures in place to reduce retail crime. The retail action group, an associate group of the Home Office crime prevention agency board, has produced booklets for retailers on preventing burglary, robbery, and violence to staff; further guidance on the prevention of customer theft, and external fraud, and on making an arrest will be published later this year. The group is also looking at ways of identifying and promulgating best practice, and considering the uses of technology in crime prevention.

The use of closed circuit television can make a significant contribution to reducing crime against retail premises, especially when it forms part of a package of crime prevention measures. The Home Office has helped to spread the use of CCTV through the publication of guidance on its use, and through last year's CCTV challenge competition in which the majority of successful bids were from partnerships which wished to install security cameras in shopping centres and high streets in town centres around the country. A further CCTV competition in which £15 million will be available is to be held this year, and it is likely that shopping areas will again be major beneficiaries.

The British Retail Consortium is making a valuable contribution through the programme of work being pursued by the retail crime initiative. This initiative, which aims to develop the retail perspective in inter-agency crime prevention initiatives, is an important and valuable way of raising the general awareness of retail and town centre crime and of encouraging retailers to work together to beat crime.

The projects carried forward by local partnerships, business and shop watch schemes, ring round schemes, police advice on the part that building design can play in preventing crime, as well as the numerous individual police force initiatives being pursued across the country all contribute to retail crime prevention. The safer cities programme has also funded a number of schemes aimed at improving the security of retail premises.

The recently published Home Office commercial victimisation survey singles out for the first time the effect of crime on commercial victims, and we are continuing to analyse the data collected so that retailers, the police and others can target their crime prevention initiatives to best effect.

The Home Office was represented on the Health and Safety Executive committee which last year published guidance for employers on the prevention of violence to retail staff in the workplace; and we also contributed to the funding of a non-profit-making video for retailers on the prevention of customer theft, which was produced by Compass Vision Ltd.

Party Conferences (Policing Costs)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the policing costs associated with the annual conferences of the (a) Liberal Democrats, (b) Conservative and (c) Labour parties; and what amounts were claimed by each party from central funds for security costs. [10246]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: I understand from the forces involved that the latest estimated additional costs of policing the 1995 party conferences are:

(a) Liberal Democrats (Strathclyde Police)—Nil

(b) Conservative (Lancashire Constabulary)—£1 million

(c) Labour (Sussex Police)—£29.029

Finalised claims for security costs incurred by the political parties at these conferences have not yet been received.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what co-ordinated action police forces are taking to provide adequate mechanisms for rough sleepers and similar vulnerable people to report physical attacks. [9971]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Government's consultation paper "Rough Sleepers Initiative: Future Plans" makes it clear that the police aim to provide the same quality of service to the homeless as to all other victims of crime, and in doing so should have regard to the special needs and vulnerability of homeless people. It is for individual chief officers, though, to decide the most suitable approach locally.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9751]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Arrangements for the procurement of mobile telephones in my Department are devolved to executive agencies and dispersed business units and no central records are kept. I am aware of agreements for four individual mobile telephones which have been terminated. The cost to my Department was about £145. The companies involved were Cellcom and People's Phone.

Killings and Woundings (Toxteth)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) killings and (b) woundings have taken place in Toxteth over the past year to the most recent available date; and if he will make a statement. [10467]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 January 1996]: This information is not collected centrally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10955]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The amount spent on external consultants in the tendering process since the introduction of private finance initiative is as follows:

(a) In real terms: applying the GDP deflator to the cash totals in (b) below, costs are equivalent (1995–96 prices) to:

| | 1993–94 | 1994–95 | 1995–96 |
|---|---|---|---|
| | 27,740 | 421,170 | 1,381,448 |
| (b) In cash terms: | | | |
| Legal fees | 4,500 | 186,450 | 537,128 |
| Publicity costs | — | — | — |
| Accountancy fees | 22,000 | 135,834 | 260,901 |
| Management consultancy | — | 87,616 | 583,419 |
| Totals | 26,500 | 409,900 | 1,381,448 |

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10956]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The information requested is not separately recorded.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Committee on the Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how often the Committee on the Co-ordination and Presentation of Government Policy has met. [10022]

The Deputy Prime Minister: "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" makes it clear that information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet or Cabinet Committees is not normally made public.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes have taken place in his responsibilities over the last four years; and what impact this has had on the running costs of his Department. [10023]

Mr. Freeman: The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster's ministerial responsibilities in December 1992 were as follows:

The discharge on a day-to-day basis of the responsibilities of Minister for the Civil Service; overseeing progress and development of the citizens charter initiative, the next steps programme, the efficiency and effectiveness of the civil service and the market-testing programme; responsibility for the Office of Science and Technology which, in addition to responsibility for Government policy on science and technology, is responsible for the research councils; and ministerial responsibility for Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

These responsibilities were carried out by the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service and Science. The estimated annual running costs associated with these responsibilities in 1992–93 was £96 million.

On 1 April 1993 financial provision for the Prime Minister's Office, the Office of Parliamentary Counsel, support to the Whips and minor other functions were transferred to the Cabinet Office "other services" vote. This reduced the OPSS annual running costs by £15.5 million.

On 1 April 1995 my predecessor took over responsibility for civil service pensions and civil service pay and conditions, including the senior civil service. These responsibilities were transferred by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury, following HM Treasury's fundamental expenditure review, and strengthened my civil service efficiency and effectiveness remit. The effect of these additional responsibilities serve to increase the OPSS annual running costs by some £13 million.

The machinery of Government changes announced in July 1995 saw significant changes with responsibility for the science and technology transferring from the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to the Minister for Science and Technology, Department of Trade and Industry. At the same time, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster assumed responsibility for supporting the Deputy Prime Minister on the competitiveness agenda and for the progress and development of deregulation, transferred from the Minister of State, Department of Trade and Industry. The net annual affect on running costs of these changes to my Department—now the Office of Public Service—is estimated to be a reduction of £3 million.

On the 1 January 1996 I assumed responsibility from the Minister for the Environment and Countryside for two executive agencies—the Security Facilities Executive and the Buying Agency. The effect of this transfer on my Department's annual running costs is £29 million.

1. The figures for the Cabinet Office excludes expenditure by the Office of the Prime Minister, which was the subject of a separate Answer by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.
2. Cabinet Office expenditure is virtually all on the Citizen's Charter.
3. Expenditure by title excludes agency or COI costs.
4. There has been no expenditure on newspaper advertising by the Department's agencies, other than for the purposes of recruitment.
5. 1995–96 figures are actual expenditure to end-November.
6. Estimates for 1995–96 are not available. Newspaper advertising is treated for budgeting purposes as part of advertising in all its forms.
7. HMSO figures are based on its year of accounting, which is January to December, and encompass all forms of advertising including newspaper advertising. The advertising is used to promote sales of HMSO books, and other products and services. Much of this is placed in trade journals, but more general periodicals and newspapers are also used.
8. The Cabinet Office does not have any NDPBs.

Information Technology

Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if Government Departments may sell spare information technology capacities to other Departments; and if he will make a statement. [10680]

Mr. Willetts: Computer systems need to be installed with sufficient capacity to meet peak work loads and, as a consequence, Departments may have spare processing capacity outside these peak periods.

Departments are encouraged to make the most efficient and effective use of their information technology resources. Where economic quantities of spare computing capacity can be identified, this may be sold to other Department so long as the normal technical, security and financial controls are met.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees; [10957]

(2) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10958]

Mr. Willetts: As yet, nil.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the mobile phones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11009]

Mr. Willetts: In the Cabinet Office the following phones were cloned:

Four telephones in January 1994;

One telephone in October 1995 and,

One telephone in June 1995.

None of the mobile phones purchased by the Central Office of Information in the last eight years has been cloned.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office does not hold this information centrally and it could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Historic Monuments

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the outcome of the prior options stage of the financial management and policy review of the Royal Commission on the historical monuments of England; and if she will make a statement. [11819]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The overall conclusion of the prior options report was that maintaining the central functions of the royal commission is a necessary national task, and that the RCHME is best placed to carry out this work. I have accepted this recommendation and confirm that the RCHME will continue to carry out its role as the national body of survey and record of the historic environment, as defined in its royal warrant. A copy of the prior options report has been placed in the Library of the House.

The report also looked at the relationship between the RCHME and other heritage bodies working in the field and recommended that there was scope for greater co-operation between RCHME and English Heritage, and for a further clarification of their respective roles with regard to survey work. Discussions are taking place between the two bodies to give effect to these recommendations.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Furniture Inventory

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what progress has been made with compiling a comprehensive inventory of the furniture in the Palace of Westminster; and if he will make a statement. [10839]

Mr. Ray Powell: The inventory of historic furniture was completed in late 1995. More than 7,500 pieces were identified on the parliamentary estate. These were numbered and photographed and the descriptions recorded on a computer database. The inventory is currently being edited and will provide an important tool for the management and conservation of these valuable assets.

Regional Agents

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the cities in which regional agents who monitor the economy for the Bank of England are based in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales. [10429]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Bank has regional agents in Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle and Winchester. There is additionally an agent in London, covering the south-east. In Scotland there is an agent in Glasgow. There is no agent in Wales. The Bank is currently reviewing its agencies, with a view to enhancing their coverage and profile in the regions.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 16 January 1995, Official Report, column 527, who provided external legal advice to his Department's Ministers in relation to the Scott inquiry. [10875]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The names of individuals receiving external legal advice at public expense, and of their legal advisers, are confidential to them.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions staff employed by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in relation to the Scott inquiry have had on matters related to the Scott inquiry with persons (a) employed by and (b) working as consultants for Conservative central office; and what subjects were discussed. [10991]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Government have received representations from Eurotunnel on a number of issues, including the company's current financial difficulties.

It has been made clear to the company that any financial restructuring of Eurotunnel is a matter for the company to resolve, in discussion with its bankers, and without Government intervention. From the start, it was always envisaged that the channel tunnel would be an entirely private sector project and that the concessionaries would have no recourse to Government funds or guarantees of a commercial nature. That remains the position.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set those qualifications held by Mr. David Hart which led to his employment as a special adviser. [11086]

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 3.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Mr. David Hart has an office in the Department. [11082]

Mr. Portillo: No.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence of which projects in the Department Mr. David Hart has direct control; and in which areas of work he has responsibility. [11081]

Mr. Portillo: None.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many meetings Mr. David Hart has had with foreign defence equipment suppliers since he was appointed; [11085]

(2) how many meetings Mr. David Hart has had with British defence equipment suppliers since he was appointed as a special adviser. [11165]

Mr. Portillo: Since David Hart was appointed as an independent adviser my Department has not maintained a record of such meetings.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what interests Mr. David Hart has declared in respect of consultants (a) currently working for his Department and (b) committed to work for his Department. [11083]

Mr. Portillo: None.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many departmental staff, of which grades, work directly for Mr. David Hart. [11080]

Mr. Portillo: None.

Consultancy Agreements

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultancy agreements his Department has entered into for (a) the current and (b) future financial years on (i) efficiency studies, (ii) value for money studies, (iii) financial control systems and (iv) other related matters; and in each case what are the costs (1) now committed and (2) estimated to be incurred. [11084]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Budget holders throughout the Ministry of Defence have delegated authority to engage external advisers, on a paid consultancy basis or otherwise, to conduct independent reviews of aspects of the Department's work. Information on such studies is not collected centrally, or in the format required, and the details could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Marine Services

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the result of the market test of the marine services business. [10509]

Mr. Arbuthnot; The market test of the marine services business has reached the stage of final tender evaluation. The select of the successful bidder will be taken following this evaluation and will be announced as soon as possible thereafter.

Service Women (Pregnancy)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the compensation payments made to pregnant service women dismissed between 1979 and 1990 by rank and the service in which they served. [11329]

Mr. Soames: Some 5,000 compensation payments averaging under £11,000 each have been made to service women discharged on pregnancy between 1978 and 1990. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State will write to the hon. Member with a list of the individual payments which have been made to date, broken down by service, but details of the rank relating to each payment could be provided only at disproportionate cost. A copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what distinction his Department makes in fitness standard requirements between service women returning to work following a period of maternity leave and female service personnel who have not been pregnant. [11326]

Mr. Soames: Women who return to duty following a period of maternity leave are, in common with other female personnel, normally expected to meet the level of fitness necessary to carry out their duties. However, in accordance with health and safety regulations, special considerations apply to pregnant women, women who have recently given birth, and breast-feeding mothers. It is possible, therefore, that some women returning to duty from maternity leave may be temporarily placed in a reduced medical category which necessitates their employment on restricted duties for a period of time.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the fitness requirements and testing applied to service women returning to work following a period of maternity leave; and how many such service women have failed these tests. [11324]

Mr. Soames: Service women returning to duty following maternity leave undergo a medical examination to confirm that they are fit to return to duty. The ability of a service woman to return to her normal duties will be assessed in the light of the medical examination. If necessary, a woman returning to work after a period of maternity leave will be temporarily placed on restricted duties. No data are available centrally in respect of the number of women who fail to meet the medical standards necessary for them to resume their normal duties.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many female service personnel gave up children for adoption in each of the years from 1978 to 1990; and what was his Department's policy towards such personnel during this period. [11327]

Mr. Soames: Information in respect of the numbers of women who gave up children for adoption in each of the years from 1978 to 1990 is not held centrally. During this period, pregnant service women were compulsorily discharged from the armed forces. Some women may have decided to have their child adopted prior to applying to re-enter the armed forces and any application for re-entry would have been treated in the same way as all other applications. Any decision by a serving mother to give up her child for adoption is a private matter for the woman concerned.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service women have returned to work following a period of maternity leave in each of the years since maternity leave became available. [11325]

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State will write to the hon. Member and a copy of his letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Equal Treatment Directive

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has implemented article 7 of the equal treatment directive. [11328]

Mr. Soames: Yes.

Industrial Tribunal Orders

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions he has failed to comply with orders from industrial tribunals within the time prescribed by the industrial tribunal. [11330]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not held centrally, but it is my Department's practice to comply wherever possible with all such orders, once they have been received.

Ministerial Visits (Kuwait)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last visited Kuwait; what issues were discussed; when the visit was arranged; and if he will make a statement. [11322]

Mr. Portillo: I had been planning to visit Kuwait for some time and was able to do so at short notice on 13 January. I discussed a range of bilateral issues, including regional security, defence co-operation and the supply of defence equipment.

Conventionally Armed Stand-off Missile

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the desirability of a merger of British and American projects to meet a requirement for a conventionally armed stand-off missile. [11321]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There have been discussions with several countries with a similar requirement to our own for a conventionally armed stand-off missile to assess the potential for co-operation. The outcome of these discussions will be taken into account during our assessment.

Portland Naval Base

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department is involved in the search for ordnance within the waters of the former Portland naval base; and if he will make a statement. [11323]

Mr. Soames: In anticipation of the closure of the naval base on 31 March 1996. Portland harbour is being searched for the purpose of safely removing any ordnance which may exist. This is in accordance with MOD policy to clear surplus sites of ordnance before disposal. The Royal Navy is clearing the harbour floor and an area outside the harbour in areas deeper than 10 m. A MOD-approved specialist contract diving company is clearing areas inside the harbour of less than 10 m depth up to the shoreline. Only a small quantity of live but stable ordnance has been found and is being safely disposed of by Navy ordnance disposal specialists.

Franco-German Armaments Agency

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his French and German counterparts concerning British participation in the Franco-German armaments agency. [10497]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Secretary of State met his German counterpart on 27 November 1995, and his French counterpart on 30 October 1995, on which occasions helpful discussions took place with regard to possible UK participation in the Franco-German armaments agency. Also I met my German counterpart on 18 January 1996 and had constructive discussion on this issue.

PRIME MINISTER

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made as to the number of asylum seekers who are abusing their position in the United Kingdom. [11136]

The Prime Minister: The level of abuse of the asylum procedures is very high. Last year only 5 per cent. of asylum applicants were granted refugee status under the 1951 United Nations convention on refugees and 79 per cent. of applicants were refused outright. The great majority of Home Office asylum decisions are upheld on appeal by independent adjudicators; last year, only 3 per cent. of such appeals were allowed. The Government are taking measures across a broad front to deter abusive asylum claims and to strengthen the procedures for determining applications.

Opposition Policies

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what arrangements have been made for the retention of assessments drawn up of Opposition policies in advance of general elections; and what facilities for the public inspection of these records are available. [10982]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Departments are asked from time to time, under Governments of any party, to provide factual costings of the policies of the Opposition. Such costings form part of departmental files and are not subject to any special access arrangements.

Political Honours Scrutiny Committee

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister who are the members of the Political Honours Scrutiny Committee; when they were appointed and by whom; and what is the term of their appointment. [11100]

The Prime Minister: The current members, my right hon. and noble Friend Lord Pym, the right hon. Lord Cledwyn of Penrhos and the right hon. Lord Thomson of Monifieth, were appointed by Order in Council on 9 November 1992. They were appointed on my advice following consultations with the right hon. Members for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) and for Yeovil (Mr. Ashdown). The Order in Council provides that the committee is appointed for the duration of office of the present Government.

2001 Census

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will require the 2001 census to ascertain proficiency in (a) all indigenous languages of the United Kingdom and (b) in major European Community languages. [8783]

The Prime Minister: No final proposals will be made until 1998 in the light of cases made for all potential questions. However, little need has been stated for information from the census on proficiency in European Community languages and it seems unlikely that there will be a question about this. Some needs have been expressed for extensions to the questions on indigenous languages asked in Wales and Scotland in the 1991 census, and these are being considered.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will require the 2001 census to ascertain the extent of proficiency in the Welsh language in all nations of the United Kingdom. [8784]

The Prime Minister: The matter is under consideration. No final proposals will be made until 1998 in the light of the cases made for all potential questions.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will establish an office in Wales to oversee the conduct of the 2001 census. [8785]

The Prime Minister: By statute it is the duty of the Registrar General to make the arrangements for taking the census throughout England and Wales. The Registrar General is, and will be, working closely with the Welsh Office in planning and co-ordinating the proposed 2001 census.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will require the 2001 census forms in Wales to be published in a bilingual Welsh-English form. [8786]

The Prime Minister: In the 1991 census in Wales, bilingual English-Welsh publicity material was distributed and the census form itself was available in Welsh as well as in English. The acceptability, effectiveness and practicability of a bilingual census form are under consideration.

Royal Yacht Britannia

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government have yet decided the future of HMY Britannia after decommissioning in 1997; whether any replacement vessel is to be acquired; and if he will make a statement. [9305]

The Prime Minister: A number of suggestions have been made about the future of HMY Britannia and these are being considered. The Government are also considering the question of whether to replace Britannia. An announcement will be made in due course.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 23 January. [9471]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provisions of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9138]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The chief executives of the following executive agencies will respond direct to the hon. Member—Companies House, the Insolvency Service, the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, the National Weights and Measures Laboratory, the Patent Office and the Radiocommunications Agency.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

I am replying in relation to the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about pre-retirement courses. The Personnel Section of the Patent Office runs such courses for staff who are about to retire and I can confirm that we will continue to provide them for our staff in the future.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to respond to your Parliamentary Question.

I can confirm that the Radiocommunications Agency will continue to provide appropriate training to help those staff that are preparing for retirement.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the action being taken to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses.

The Insolvency Service currently uses the courses run by the Department of Trade and Industry's Personnel Training Services Consortium. About a year before expected retirement the individual members of staff are invited to attend a course: The Service pays for the individual and his/her partner to attend.

The Service expects to continue the provision of such courses.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the provision of pre-retirement courses.

There are no changes planned and this Agency will continue to provide pre-retirement courses.

Letter from R. D. Worswick to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 12 January 1996:

I have been asked to answer with respect to the Laboratory of the Government Chemist your question to the President of the Board of Trade number 9138 asking what action heads of executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies.

The Laboratory of the Government Chemist continues to operate a policy of offering staff approaching retirement age the opportunity to attend a pre-retirement course.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

You have recently tabled a written Parliamentary Question asking what action the Department of Trade and Industry's Executive Agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses. I have been asked to reply as Chief Executive of Companies House Executive Agency.

Companies House initiated its own programme of pre-retirement courses in March 1990; prior to this the service was provided by the Department's Training Division. An invitation to attend the training is issued to every member of staff and their partner across all sites twelve months before they reach the age of 60. This invitation is also extended to any member of staff who takes up the option of early retirement.

The course is a two day event. It is delivered by local external speakers who tailor their material on the financial, social and personal aspects of retirement to the needs of the course members. So far 92 staff have attended the training. We will continue to provide this service as part of our commitment to the welfare of our staff.

This reply also takes account of your amended question.

Telecommunications Services

Mr. Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the relative levels of penetration of integrated services data network lines in Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries. [10425]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The OECD compiles a table representing the level of penetration of OECD lines in member countries which it amends and makes available to my Department regularly. I will arrange for a copy of the most recent survey, 1995, to be placed in the Library of the House.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people in full-time employment in the United Kingdom earn less than the minimum hourly wage rates in each country of the European Union. [10637]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Information in the form requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the number of full-time employees in Great Britain earning less than the minimum hourly wage rates in those European Union countries which have a statutory national minimum wage is contained in the following table:

| Country | National minimum hourly wage £ Sterling equivalent[1] | Number of full-time workers in Great Britain earning less than the minimum rate[2] Millions |

Mr. Eggar: I understand that, during the course of its normal regulatory inspection duties at Wylfa nuclear power station, the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate was informed of the discovery in July 1990 of a small number of corroded fuel elements in one of the dry fuel stores and also of the identification in May 1993 of erosion in part of the defuelling route. Nuclear Electric has made acceptable safety cases to the NII for dealing with these occurrences and is implementing appropriate action.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) all leaks and (b) all accidents that have occurred at the Wylfa power station on Ynys Môn since 1 January 1989; and if he will make a statement. [11016]

Mr. Eggar: A copy of the report by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate setting out the findings of its assessment of Nuclear Electric's long-term safety review of Wylfa is already available in the Library of the House. In addition, site newsletters, which cover safety issues, are published for all United Kingdom civil nuclear installations, including Wylfa. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

The direct salary cost since 1992 of Sir Richard Scott's inquiry team, which also falls to my Department, is approximately £718,000.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 19 January 1996]: Responsibilities for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 23 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the types of disability of people who have received support through Access to Work.

I attach a table that shows all the help provided through Access to Work from 6 June 1994 (the first day of the programme) to 31 March 1995. The table shows the elements of help and the number of people in disability categories. Some people get more than one element of help and therefore the totals do not show the total number of people supported.

In 1994/95, 10,394 people were helped, including a number receiving help under the previous special schemes that replaced Access to Work on 6 June 1994.

The principal types of disability of those receiving help were disabilities of the spine (around 21%); organic nervous diseases (10%); hearing difficulties (18%) and visual impairments (26%).

I am sorry that we do not have interim figures for 1995/96. Analysis by disability type is done annually and figures will be available after the end of the operating year in March.

I hope this is helpful.

EU Universities (UK Students)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many United Kingdom students are currently studying at other European Union university institutions as (a) undergraduates and (b) postgraduates. [10902]

Mr. Forth: Information is not available in the detail requested. Figures published by the European Union show that in 1991–92—the latest year for which full information is available—nearly 9,000 United Kingdom higher education students were studying in other member states, of which over 6,500 were participating in the Erasmus and Lingua programmes. In 1994–95, there were nearly 12,000 UK students studying in other member states under the Erasmus and Lingua programmes as well as an unknown number of other UK higher education students.

University Facilities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many universities in the United Kingdom have established (a) a business school and (b) a science park. [10898]

Mr. Forth: This information is not collected by the Government. However, I understand that there are currently 71 United Kingdom universities with business schools and 49 science parks in the UK with UK Science Park Association membership.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many universities in the United Kingdom have developed joint programmes with their local training and enterprise councils. [10894]

Mr. Paice: This information is not held centrally, but officials have requested Government offices to make inquiries of the training and enterprise councils in their regions and I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

University Funding

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what powers she has to provide exceptional funding to universities which have particular areas of expertise. [10899]

Mr. Forth: Under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, responsibility for determining the allocation to universities of grant funds provided by the Department for Education and Employment rests with the Higher Education Funding Council for England. The allocation to universities of grant funds relating to initial teacher training is, under the Education Act 1994, the responsibility of the Teacher Training Agency. The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has no powers to provide exceptional funding to universities which have particular areas of expertise.

Careers Service (London)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has for the careers service in Greenwich, Lambeth, Lewisham and Southwark, following the decision of the Grand Met Trust to withdraw its plans to take over the contract to run the service. [10530]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Department is discussing options with the four local authorities. The Department's priority is to ensure a high-quality careers service for the young people of the area.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many expressions of interest were received by each of the boroughs of Greenwich, Lambeth, Southwark and Lewisham with regard to the contract to run these authorities' careers services; and which consortiums bid for the contract. [10532]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 22 January 1996]: There were four bids submitted for the combined area of Greenwich, Lewisham, Lambeth and Southwark. Bids were submitted on a commercial in confidence basis and the Department must respect the confidence of the other organisations involved.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what criteria the Grand Met Trust was given preferred bidder status in respect of the contract to run the careers service in the boroughs of Greenwich, Lambeth, Lewisham and Southwark; what experience Grand Met has had in providing a careers service; and how many people were employed by the subsidiary of Grand Met bidding to run the careers service when the Department awarded it preferred bidder status. [10531]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Grand Met Trust submitted the best bid as measured against the criteria that were published in the "Prospectus for the Provision of London Careers Services from April 1996". Grand Met Trust has not previously provided a careers service. The Department recognised that bids might come from organisations entering this area of work for the first time. The prospectus stated, therefore, that such bidders must provide clear and realistic plans for meeting our requirements before the contract began. Grand Met Trust did so. The bid was submitted by Grand Met Trust, not a subsidiary. However, the trust stated its intention to form a subsidiary company to contract with the Department if preferred bidder status was awarded.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what occasions and on what date Grand Met Trust expressed an interest in partnerships to run local authority careers services; and on what dates it notified her Department of withdrawals of interest. [10533]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Grand Met Trust submitted its bid to run the careers service in London's area 5 the boroughs of Greenwich, Lewisham, Lambeth and Southwark by the closing date of 10 April 1995. It confirmed its intention to withdraw from contract negotiations on 10 January 1996.

Business Links

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many universities in the United Kingdom have participated in the launch of local business links initiatives. [10896]

Mr. Page: I have been asked to reply.

Precise numbers are not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, universities and other higher and further institutions have been closely involved in developing most business link partnerships.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to improve the provision by employers of national vocational qualifications; and if she will make a statement. [8788]

Mr. Paice: Decisions on the usage of national vocational qualifications are a matter for individuals and employers. The Government are, however, providing funds for the marketing of these qualifications. In the 1994 competitiveness White Paper, the Government announced a package of £31 million over three years to help ensure NVQs are fully up to date, rigorous and of high quality; and provide funds for their attainment in training programmes for young people and unemployed adults.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish for the last available two years for each of the constituent nations and standard regions of the United Kingdom and for the United Kingdom as a whole the total number of employers using national vocational qualifications to train their work force, indicating this figure as a percentage of the total number of employers in each case. [8919]

Mr. Paice: Estimates from the "Skill Needs in Britain" surveys show that the percentage of establishments with 25 or more employees in Great Britain offering national vocational qualifications or Scottish vocational qualifications to their employees increased from 31 per cent.—approximately 46,000—in 1994 to 40 per cent.—approximately 61,000—in 1995. The "Skill Needs of Small Firms 1994–95" survey estimated that approximately 144,000 establishments, or 13 per cent., with fewer than 25 employees offered NVQs or SVQs to their employees.

The requested data are not available for Northern Ireland or the United Kingdom or for standard regions but data for Great Britain, Wales, Scotland, England and training, enterprise and education directorate—TEED—regions are given in the following two tables:

Table 1: Establishments offering NVQs to their employees

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the mobile phones which have been supplied to her Department in each of the last eight years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11008]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, South (Mr. Donohoe) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1036.

Employment Service

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of overpayments to unemployed claimants as a result of the industrial dispute in the Employment Service agency; and if he will make a statement. [11205]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 23 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the number of overpayments made to unemployed claimants as a result of the current industrial dispute with the CPSA in the Employment Service.

Details of overpayments made are collected quarterly. The next set of figures will relate to the period ending 31 March. No current information is available about changes in levels of overpayments during the period since the industrial action started.

Overpayments can, and do, arise for a variety of reasons and it would be very difficult to identify separately overpayments which are directly attributable to the industrial action. To do this would require complex analysis and reporting arrangements additional to those presently in place. These would add to the burden on those ES people continuing to work in the affected offices and further hinder the ability of the Employment Service to maintain customer service during this period of industrial action.

I am sorry that I am unable to provide the information you requested.

HEALTH

Mortuaries

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mortuaries in (a) NHS trusts and (b) elsewhere had insufficient accommodation to meet demand over the Christmas period; and what plans he has to ensure adequate accommodation in the future. [9908]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. It is for individual trusts and local authorities to plan their mortuary accommodation to meet local needs.

Medical Negligence

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many medical negligence cases were taken out against hospitals in the north-west region in each year since 1987–88 and in 1995–96, to date; [10560]

(2) how many medical negligence cases were taken out against (a) hospitals in the north-west region and (b) each hospital in the region in each year since 1987–88; and if he will list (i) the solicitors' practices used by each hospital and (ii) the number of cases they undertook and at what cost for each of these years. [10640]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Sir Donald Wilson, chairman of North West regional health authority, for details.

Methadone

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what change there has been in methadone prescribing in south-east Northumberland since 1990; and what was the cost. [10626]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. Jackie Axelby, chief executive of Northumberland Health, for details.

Meals on Wheels

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in ascending order the amount charged by each county council for the provision of meals on wheels. [10419]

Mr. Bowis: The information requested is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to contact the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, which publishes information on charges for services in its "Personal Social Services Statistics, Actuals and Estimates".

Acute Beds

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of acute beds (a) closed in 1995 and (b) opened since 1 January 1996. [10752]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally provides details of the average daily number of available acute beds in each national health service trust. The latest year for which data are available is 1994–95 and this information is published annually in "Bed Availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library. Organisational changes may mean that the data for each trust may not be strictly comparable over time.

NHS Staff (Assaults)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many assaults occurred against NHS staff in each of the last five years. [10919]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 948.

NHS Finance

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1141, on health authority general allocations, in what way the national weighted capitation formula differs from the York university recommendations. [10921]

Mr. Horam: The national weighted capitation formula does not differ from the recommendations made by York university in its report entitled "A Formula for Distributing NHS Revenues Based on Small Area Use of Hospital Beds".

Consultants

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many whole-time equivalent female and male consultants there were in England at September 1994. [10751]

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the table.

Male and female consultants in England as at 30 September 1994—whole-time equivalents

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Female | 2,710 |

Suicide

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list his policies to reduce the suicide rate. [10747]

Mr. Bowis: The Government's "The Health of the Nation" strategy set a target of reducing the rate of suicide by 15 per cent. between 1990 and the year 2000. Figures based on estimates provided by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys show that the suicide rate in England fell by around 7 per cent. between 1992 and 1994. A wide range of initiatives are being pursued to this end. The key themes of our suicide prevention work are improving mental health services, increasing public awareness of mental health issues, targeting occupational and demographic groups at particular risk of suicide, and reducing access to means.

Patient Hotels

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the NHS trusts which have opened patient hotels indicating in each case (a) the location, (b) number of beds, (c) average bed occupancy rates, (d) the revenue cost of provision per occupied bed per day, (e) the opening date and (f) and the capital cost and in each case if the funding was (i) from NHS capital, (ii) by the private finance initiative and (iii) from other sources. [11109]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. It is a matter for local management.

Specialised Services

Mr. Coe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he has made to support the purchasing of highly specialised services. [11704]

Mr. Malone: Following an internal review initiated by the chief medical officer into the provision of specialised services within the national health service, I have agreed that a new group be established to advise on the purchasing of specialised services. The new group is to be known as the national specialist commissioning advisory group and I have today placed in the Library the group's terms of reference and a list of its appointed members. The NSCAG will take over work currently carried out by the supra-regional services advisory group.

Long-term Care

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will respond to the Health Committee's first report, HC19, on long-term care. [11821]

Mr. Bowis: We have today published the Government's response to this report, copies of which are in the Library.

We welcomed the report's recognition of the priority we are attaching to implementation of our guidance on national health service responsibilities for continuing health care. Our response emphasises our commitment to securing, over time, significant improvements in the provision of continuing health care and much greater consistency in these services across the country.

Residential Care

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the statutory responsibilities to the social services departments of local authorities in respect of the provision of permanent residential care for those individuals who have exhausted their savings paying for private residential care. [8802]

Mr. Bowis: Since April 1993 local authorities have had a responsibility to arrange accommodation in residential care and nursing homes for elderly people who, for whatever reason, are assessed as needing such care but are unable to meet the cost.

Elderly people who entered independent sector homes before April 1993 will have preserved rights to the higher rates of income support and are the statutory responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security. If they face eviction from a residential care home, local social service authorities have powers to make alternative arrangements.

Regulations and guidance were issued to local authorities and health authorities in March 1993 detailing their powers to help people who were resident in independent sector residential care and nursing homes on 31 March 1993 and who have preserved rights to the higher levels of income support. Copies of circular LAC(93)6 are available in the Library.

Intensive Care Beds (Yorkshire)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many adult intensive care beds were available in each health area in Yorkshire in each of the last 15 years; and what was their occupancy rate. [10326]

Mr. Horam: Available information on the average daily number of adult intensive care beds, for 1988–89 to 1994–95, is published annually in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library. Information on bed occupancy rates is not available centrally.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive care beds for children were available in each health area in Yorkshire in each of the last 15 years; and what was their occupancy rate. [10362]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. The national health service executive arranged for Sheffield children's hospital to co-ordinate the monitoring of occupancy and demand for beds at 17 paediatric intensive care units in England for the period to 31 March.

Deaths (Winter Months)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of deaths of those aged 60 years or above, registered in each week, in each region, since the beginning of November 1995 until the most recent week. [10553]

Mr. Horam: Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' weekly death figures are a best estimate of the number of deaths registered over the whole of England and Wales. A regional analysis is not available for the most recent weeks. The latest available regional data are for the last week of 1995.

The provisional numbers of deaths of those aged 60 years or over, registered in each week, in each health region of residence, from the beginning of November to the end of December 1995, are shown in the table.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have been held between his Department and local authority associations concerning the Children Act 1989 and its implementation for the need of asylum seekers' children following the implementation of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendment Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [11079]

Mr. Bowis: The implications of the benefit changes of asylum seekers and their children were discussed as part of a regular series of meetings between my officials and officers of the local authority associations. Discussions have continued informally. Department of Health and Department of the Environment officials are meeting the local authority associations to discuss details of a special grant which will assist local authorities with any unavoidable additional costs arising under homelessness legislation of the Children Act.

We regret that the Chinese Government and the Tibetan religious leaders have been unable to reach agreement on the selection of the new Panchen Lama. Mr. Douglas Hogg: Responsibility for this matter is delegated to agency chief executives and I have asked them to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

ACTION TO SAFEGUARD THE PROVISION OF PRE-RETIREMENT COURSES

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses. The Minister has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

CSL has a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with the Establishments Group of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. Under this MOU the Ministry's Welfare Branch is required to invite CSL staff aged 58 years and over to attend pre-retirement courses at some stage during their last two years of employment. Whilst staff are encouraged to attend such courses there is no compulsion to do so. There are no proposals at present to alter these arrangements.

In cases of Voluntary Early Retirement or Severance the Department has negotiated with consultants to provide counselling and career services and with financial advisers to provide independent advice to Agency staff. Again this is on a voluntary basis and there is no compulsion on staff to take advantage of the services offered.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on action being taken by the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (known as the Central Veterinary Laboratory until 30 September 1995) to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses.

MAFF provides pre-retirement courses which staff from the Veterinary Laboratories Agency attend as appropriate, and for which the Agency repays the service provider.

Letter from C. J. Lawson to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

In my Chief Executive's absence, the Minister has asked me to reply to your question about pre-retirement courses for staff of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate (VMD). This is an operational matter for which my chief executive is responsible. (9145)

The VMD has a formal agreement with the Establishments Group of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for the provision of personnel services. Under this agreement the Welfare branch of the Ministry is required to invite all VMD staff aged 57 or over (or otherwise if appropriate) to "Preparation for Retirement" seminars. This arrangement works well and VMD staff have benefited from the pre-retirement courses run by the Ministry. There are no proposals to change this arrangement.

Letter form G. K. Bruce to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question about the provision of pre-retirement courses for staff within the Agency. (9145)

PSD has a Service Level Agreement with its parent Department—the Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food. Under this agreement the Welfare Branch of the Ministry is required to invite all PSD staff aged 57 or over (or otherwise if appropriate) to "Preparation for Retirement" seminars. This arrangement works well and I am not aware of any proposal to change it.

Letter from P. Needham to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to you concerning your Parliamentary question (PQ384) in which you asked what action heads of his Department's Executive Agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses.(9145)

ADAS will continue to offer pre-retirement courses as appropriate.

Letter from J. McNeill to Mr. M. Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning pre-retirement courses has been passed to me for reply with regard to this Executive Agency.(9145)

As you may know, the Meat Hygiene Service was established on 1 April 1995. The Agency is committed to the providing staff with suitable preparation for retirement and intends to make use of MAFF's training facilities in this respect, as the need arises.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was spent on official hospitality by agencies associated with his Department in (a) 1993–94 and 1994–95; what is projected for 1995–96. [9167]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 15 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter is delegated to agency chief executives and I have asked them to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question concerning hospitality.[9167]

The following amounts have been spent on official hospitality for the three years concerned:

| | | £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | Actual expenditure | 380 |
| 1994–95 | Actual expenditure | 422 |
| 1995–96 | Projected expenditure | 1,400 |

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

EXPENDITURE ON OFFICIAL HOSPITALITY

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to provide information for his executive agencies on official hospitality expenditure in each financial year since 1993/94. The Minister has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

Total expenditure for each of the years in question is as follows:

1993/94: £4.7K

1995/96: £23.0K (estimated)

The Agency was significantly enlarged in April 1994 following the merger with the MAFF Food Science Laboratories at Norwich and Aberdeen, and this is reflected in increased expenditure from 1994/95.

Letter from P. Needham to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to you concerning your Parliamentary question (PQ385) in which you asked how much was spent on official hospitality by agencies associated with his Department in (a) 1994–95 and 1994–95; and what is projected for 1995–96.

The costs incurred by ADAS on official hospitality for each of the last two years are as follows:

There is no projected figure available for 1995/96.

Letter from J. McNeill to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service, your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food concerning official hospitality has been passed to me to reply with regard to this Executive Agency.

As you may know, the Meat Hygiene Service was established on 1 April, 1995. Therefore, there was no such expenditure in the year 1993/94. In 94/95, prior to the Agency's launch, £10,580 was spent on hospitality and current projections for this financial year are for a total of circa £7,000.

Letter from J. M. Rutter to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on official hospitality by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, for each year since 1993/94, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.(9167)

Expenditure on official hospitality, which principally covers buffet lunches for industry liaison meetings and advisory groups, was as follows:

It is anticipated that expenditure in 1995/96 will not exceed £1,000.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question concerning spending on official hospitality in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (known as the Central Veterinary Laboratory until 30 September 1995).(9167)

The amounts spent on official hospitality in 1993/94 and 1994/95 were £16,720 and £12,076 respectively. I will write to you next week with projected figures for 1995/96.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 23 January 1996:

I promised to write this week with the projected figures for spending on hospitality in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA) for 1995/96.

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service. To provide this information it was necessary to incorporate expected spending from October 1995 to March 1996 by the former VI Service.

Full year spending on official hospitality in the Agency is projected to be £16,400.

Intervention Beef

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his estimate of the average cost in the United Kingdom of storing 1 tonne of intervention beef for one year, including the depreciation of the value of the beef; [9468]

(2) what is his estimate of the average cost in the United Kingdom of storing 1 tonne of intervention beef for one year, excluding the depreciation of the value of the beef; [9467]

(3) what is his estimate of the difference between the value of a tonne of beef taken into intervention in the United Kingdom, and the value of that beef upon leaving intervention after one year in intervention. [9469]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 17 January 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Intervention Board to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from G. Trevelyan to Dr. Gavin Strang, dated 23 January 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Questions (9467, 9468 and 9469) tabled for answer on Wednesday 17 January 1996:

"To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the average cost in the United Kingdom of storing one tonne of intervention beef for one year, excluding the depreciation of the value of the beef. (9467)

To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate for the average cost in the United Kingdom of storing one tonne of intervention beef for one year, including the depreciation of the value of the beef. (9468)

To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the difference between the value of a tonne of beef taken into intervention in the United Kingdom and the value of that beef upon leaving intervention after one year in intervention. (9469)"

Intervention beef is stored in commercial cold stores. The rates paid by the Agency are determined by open competition and can vary in line with changes in the demand for cold storage. The average costs of storing intervention beef for one year, including inspection, receipt, handling and delivering out charges is about £120 per tonne (excluding VAT).

For budgetary purposes the EC Regulations require the book value of beef taken into intervention to be depreciated on entry by 60% of its purchase price to bring it more into line with the foreseeable price at which it might subsequently be sold. Beef is purchased in the form of fresh carcasses which have a higher market value than the stored frozen product. Currently depreciation on entry would be £1,759 on a tonne of beef purchased at £2,932. Decisions are taken by the Commission at the end of each of their financial years, ending 15 October, as to whether further changes in the valuation of stocks are needed to reflect market price movements. It is not possible to predict the extent to which this may give rise to further costs in the form of depreciated stock values.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the House of Commons Library and the Public Information Office.

Whales

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received on the under-reporting of whale species by the former Soviet Union. [10150]

Mr. Baldry: At the meeting of the International Whaling Commission held in Mexico in 1994 the Russian Federation gave details of the inaccurate catch reporting by the former Soviet Union. Revised historical catch data were submitted to the scientific committee at the IWC meeting in Dublin in 1995 and further revised information is expected to be submitted to the scientific committee at this year's meeting of the IWC in Aberdeen.

Set-aside Payments

Mr. Allason: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of set-aside payments are made after the date recommended by the European Commission. [10682]

Mr. Baldry: So far as possible, MAFF aims to make main payments under the arable area payments scheme between 16 October and 31 December, as required by European Community regulations. This year some 83 per cent. of claims were paid in that period. I regret the delay to the remainder, which was caused by the need to validate claims to the exacting standards required under the Community rules. Payment of these claims will be made as soon as possible.

Egg Imports

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many eggs were imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; and how many of those were successfully sold as British after grading. [11213]

Mr. Baldry: Total imports of poultry eggs in shell-fresh, preserved or cooked, not for hatching were as follows:

|---|---|
| 1990 | 57.2 |
| 1991 | 34.2 |
| 1992 | 24.8 |
| 1993 | 20.7 |
| 1994 | 32.2 |
| 1995[1] | 16.7 |

[1] Year to September inclusive (provisional figure).

No records are kept on the destination of imported eggs once they have entered the UK, but we understand that the majority go for processing into egg products. We are not aware that imported shell eggs have been passed off as British.

TRANSPORT

National Rail Timetable

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy that Railtrack should be required to continue to publish a national rail timetable. [8491]

Mr. Watts: It is a condition of Railtrack's network licence that it must publish, or procure the publication of, a national timetable of railway passenger services unless the Rail Regulator consents otherwise.

Railways (Public Service Obligation Grant)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what revenue subsidy was paid through the PSO grant to each of the rail services comprising (a) Great

Western Intercity, (b) South West Trains and (c) London Tilbury and Southend in (i) 1993–94 and (ii) the last year in which British Rail was wholly responsible for these services. [8492]

Mr. Watts: The year 1993–94 was the last year in which support payments to British Rail were made entirely under the PSO grant provisions; in 1994–95 payments were made under both the PSO provisions and under section 52 of the Railways Act 1993. In 1993–94, InterCity services received no PSO grant. Network SouthEast—formerly responsible for the services now operated by South West Trains and London Tilbury and Southend—received no PSO grant in support of revenue, but received some £372 million of PSO grant in support of investment.

Grant payments in 1994–95, the last year in which BR will have been wholly responsible for these services, are not comparable with those in 1993–94, because the basis for payment was changed, as a result of restructuring the railway industry. In 1994–95, Great Western received £57.5 million, South West Trains £93.7 million and London Tilbury and Southend £30.7 million. These figures included administered profits of £3 million, £3.7 million and £900,000 respectively.

Local Authority Transport Packages

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total bid for transport packages by local authorities for the year 1996–97; how much in total has been allocated in response to these bids; and how much is represented by (a) grants and (b) loans sanctions. [8525]

Mr. Norris: Local authorities outside London bid a total of £685.586 million for major highway schemes, major public transport schemes and minor work in packages.

Some £78.7 million in supplementary credit approval has been allocated towards minor works in the 53 packages that were accepted for funding in 1996–97. In addition, £115.227 million has been allocated in that year towards major schemes in areas with approved packages, of which 50 per cent. is grant and 50 per cent. credit approval.

Traffic Signs (Environmental Impact)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if roads circular 3/95 "Traffic Signs to Tourist Attractions and Facilities in England" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", produced by the Department of the Environment; and if he will publish the appraisal. [10612]

Mr. Watts: The policy advice in circular roads 3/95 was developed in accordance with the guidance in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment". The circular itself makes it clear that consideration of environmental factors is an on-going process in signing policy decisions. We will consider whether to publish additional material in the light of developments.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of roads circular 3/95 "Traffic Signs to Tourist Attractions and Facilities in England". [10615]

Mr. Watts: Arrangements for monitoring are still under discussion with other interested Government Departments, including the Department of the Enviornment.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what alternative courses of action from those listed in roads circular 3/95 "Traffic Signs to Tourist Attractions and Facilities in England" were considered in the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [10613]

Mr. Watts: The purpose of the circular is to develop existing traffic signing policy and practice in an environmentally acceptable way. It empowers local authorities to take appropriate decisions in individual cases in the light of local circumstances, bearing in mind environmental and other factors.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how roads circular 3/95 "Traffic Signs to Tourist Attractions and Facilities in England" was modified by the results of the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [10614]

Mr. Watts: Following public consultation, the circular was modified to give greater prominence to environmental factors.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the mobile phones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11014]

Mr. Norris: Eleven mobile phones have been cloned as follows:

| | Number | Date |
|---|---|---|
| Central Transport Group | 4 | January 1995 |
| | 1 | May 1995 |
| | 1 | November 1995 |
| Highways Agency | 3 | September 1995 |
| Driving Standards Agency | 1 | April 1995 |
| Coastguard Agency | 1 | April 1993 |

National Rail Information System

Mr Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what obligations (a) franchisees already appointed and (b) potential franchisees are under (i) to participate in and (ii) to fund, a national rail information system; and if he will make a statement. [11519]

Mr. Watts: Existing and potential franchisees are already required to participate in a national railway information scheme. All train-operating companies on the domestic passenger railway are members of a contractually binding scheme, administered by the Association of Train Operating Companies, which requires them, among other things, to provide the full range of information contained in the national railway timetable. The scheme ensures the continuation of the existing network of railway telephone enquiry bureaux—TEBs—sets demanding standards for improving their performance, and requires TEBs to provide impartial information to passengers. TEBs are funded by train operators under arrangements specified in the scheme.

British Rail is examining ways of increasing the capacity of the national telephone enquiry bureaux network. It will finalise its recommendations in due course.

Rail Users' Consultative Committees

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints were received by the rail users' consultative committees concerning quality of service in each of the past 12 months. [11520]

Mr. Watts: The information is not available in the form requested. The number of complaints about quality of service received by the RUCCs in the first three quarters of 1995 is as follows:

1st quarter: 2,592 complaints

2nd quarter: 2,209 complaints

3rd quarter: 3,322 complaints.

Figures for the last quarter of 1995 are not currently available.

Seat Belts

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice the Department of Transport has offered to drivers of vans with regard to the wearing of seat belts; and what additional publicity on the need to wear seat belts and the value of doing so is planned. [11247]

Mr. Norris: Van drivers, like all drivers, are advised to wear seat belts whenever they are in their vehicles, using the legal exemptions only as far as necessary. The message is simple: seat belts save lives. We are planning a further publicity campaign for March to emphasise this fact.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the latest available annual figures for the number of deaths, serious injuries and slight injuries to van drivers and passengers; what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of seat belts in reducing injury to van occupants; what is the current seat belt wearing rate for van drivers and passengers; and what percentage of journeys made by van is exempt from the requirement that their occupants must wear seat belts because the vehicle is engaged in local deliveries. [11248]

Mr. Norris: Some 53 drivers and 11 passengers were killed in light goods vehicles in 1994. Some 734 drivers and 303 passengers were seriously injured and 4,552 drivers and 1,901 passengers were slightly injured in these vehicles in that year. The proportion of these not wearing seat belts is not known. A survey in October 1995 showed that 65 per cent. of drivers and 56 per cent. of van passengers were wearing belts. We do not know, however, how many of those not wearing belts were carrying out local deliveries and therefore exempt. Clearly, seat belts play a vital role in saving drivers and passengers in vans, as in other vehicles, from death and serious injury.

Kerbside Emission Tests

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many kerbside emission tests have been undertaken by the Vehicle Inspectorate in each of the last three years; and how many notices have been issued to drivers as a result of these tests. [11243]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. J. Oliver to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 23 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of kerbside emission tests in each of the last years and how many notices have been issued.

Information is not held which differentiates between checks carried out as the roadside and those done, for instance, at operators' premises. The attached table shows the total number of special checks for emissions and the total number of prohibitions issued in each of the last three years.

The reason for the increase in prohibition rates between 1992/3 and 1994/5 is due mainly to the introduction of objective measurement of diesel smoke.

Number of emission inspections and prohibitions issued for the last three years

| | 1994–95 | | 1993–94 | | 1992–93 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Inspections | Prohibitions | Inspections | Prohibitions | Inspections | Prohibitions |
| HGV | 12,959 | 450 | 10,589 | 219 | 5,706 | 37 |
| PSV | 7,292 | 184 | 5,165 | 145 | 4,647 | 77 |
| Cars and light commercial vehicles | 70,899 | 2,580 | 33,103 | 223 | 4,759 | 23 |

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees; [10972]

(2) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10973]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Attracting private finance for infrastructure investment affects policy work throughout the Department and the related expenditure on running costs cannot be estimated in isolation.

Departmental expenditure on external consultants engaged in work related to tendering private finance projects over the period in question is as follows:

Expenditure (£ thousand)

| | (a) 1995–96 prices | (b) Cash terms |
|---|---|---|
| (i) Legal fees | 5,950 | 5,850 |
| (ii) Publicity costs | 50 | 50 |
| (iii) Accountancy fees | 700 | 700 |
| (iv) Management consultancy fees | 5,650 | 5,600 |

Transport Blueprint

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which individuals and organisations have responded to the consultation exercise instigated by his Department to produce a transport blueprint for the next century; if he will make the responses publicly available; and what plans he has to issue a Green Paper on these issues. [11241]

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the replies given to him on 7 November, Official Report, column 755.

Motorway Services

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current cost of managing the freeholds of motorway service areas. [11192]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 16 January, Official Report, columns 498–99.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department is taking to ensure that motorway service stations provide (a) adequate toilet facilities 24 hours a day and (b) disabled toilet facilities. [11631]

Mr. Watts: The operator of any motorway service area signposted from the motorway is required to provide a range of specified facilities 24 hours a day. The requirements include sufficient free toilets to cater reasonably for the amount of traffic using the motorway and facilities for disabled people. The Highways Agency investigates any report that these facilities are not being provided and, where necessary, takes action to ensure that the position is remedied.

Rail Privatisation, (Isle of Wight)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy in respect of the franchising of rail services on the Isle of Wight; and if he will make a statement. [11228]

Mr. Watts: The island line has been vested as an autonomous wholly owned subsidiary of the British Railways Board and will be franchised in accordance with the franchising director's timetable in due course.

Minibuses

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions exist to ensure that the safety of minibuses conforms to an agreed standard, with particular reference to safe seating. [11097]

Mr. Norris: All minibuses are subject to the general safety requirements of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986. Minibuses first used on or after 1 April 1988 must comply with the seating standards laid down in schedule 6 to these regulations.

I intend to lay regulations in February which will require minibuses used specifically for the carriage of children to be fitted with a minimum of a lap belt on a forward facing seat for each child carried.

Technology Foresight Panel

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made on the recommendations of the technology foresight panel on transport; if he will list the organisations involved; and what funding his Department is providing. [11317]

Mr. Norris: My Department welcomes the findings of the technology foresight initiative, particularly the recommendations of the transport panel. The Department's research activities already reflect a reasonable alignment with the transport panel's recommendations, and will develop taking its findings fully into account.

The Department aims to lend support as far as possible to the panel's two infrastructure projects: the informed traveller and urban clear zones. My officials are actively pursuing, with the members of the transport panel, how these projects can best be supported.

My Department will be announcing shortly a new LINK research programme which will reflect the technology foresight recommendations. In addition, my Department is participating with other public and private sector organisations in a project which has been submitted for support under the foresight challenge scheme—launched by my hon. Friend the Minister for Science and Technology on 25 September 1995. However, I am not yet in a position to list any organisations or the resources involved.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the result of the channel tunnel rail link competition; and if an international and domestic station will be built at Stratford as part of the channel tunnel rail link project. [10879]

Mr. Watts: We expect to make an announcement soon about the choice of private sector promoter for the channel tunnel rail link project. We hope to make an announcement about a station at Stratford to a similar time scale.

Railway Freight

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number and locations of railway freight handling facilities in and around London which (a) can handle containers and (b) are warehouses where goods carried by train can be broken down and forwarded by road. [10881]

Mr. Watts: This information is not held centrally.

Lorry Drivers (EC Sight Testing Regulations)

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about new EC sight testing regulations for lorry drivers; if under these regulations moderately sighted drivers wearing glasses would be permitted to drive; and if he will make a statement. [10672]

Mr. Norris: In response to a public consultation on implementing the eyesight requirements of the second EC directive on driving licences, a wide range of representative bodies and individuals offered comments. The directive introduces a higher standard of vision without glasses for lorry, and bus drivers who need to wear them for driving, in that both eyes must have an uncorrected acuity equivalent to at least 3/60 on the Snellen scale, rather than, as at present, one eye only. On that basis, the overwhelming majority of moderately sighted drivers wearing glasses would continue to be able to drive.

Driving Licences

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he plans to make driving licences issued in the Republic of South Africa directly exchangeable for licences issued by the Drivers and Vehicle Licensing Agency. [10681]

Mr. Norris: We shall shortly be consulting on proposed changes in the law which would enable most South African driving licences to be exchanged for British ones. Subject to a satisfactory outcome, we expect these changes to come into force later this year.

Vehicle Excise Duty Evasion

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions for vehicle excise duty evasion there were in 1994 and 1995 in the Greater London area. [10833]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is as follows:

(a) prosecutions—43,229, (b) successful convictions 40,396.

(a) prosecutions—34,190 (b) successful convictions 32,063.

Light Rapid Transit Schemes

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what budget provisions exist for light rapid transit schemes in 1994–95; and what is planned for 1995–96. [11038]

Mr. Norris: There is no specific provision for the funding of light rapid transit schemes; these schemes are funded from the local transport capital budget, in competition with other types of local transport scheme. Some £60.2 million was allocated to light rapid transit schemes in 1994–95, and £67.7 million in 1995–96.

Buses (North-west Region)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what support his Department has given for the greater use of buses in the North-west region. [11039]

Mr. Norris: In the local transport settlement for 1996–97 my Department has allocated £9 million to the Greater Manchester transport package, and a total of £1.05 million to packages in Macclesfield, Northwich, and Preston and South Ribble. All these proposals put emphasis on measures to promote the use of buses. We shall continue to fund these initiatives in future as far as resources allow.

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the size of Her Majesty's Government's shareholding in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company; and if he will make a statement. [10332]

Mr. Norris: The Government hold 12,411,795 ordinary shares in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company. This shareholding is one of a number of residual holdings held by the Government in privatised companies. Her Majesty's Treasury announced on 19 September 1995 that it had appointed a financial adviser in connection with proposals, in 1995–96 and 1996–97, of residual equity holdings in these privatised companies. No decision has yet been taken on the timing or method of sale of the Government's shareholding in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial support Her Majesty's Government have given to the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company since 1989. [10333]

Mr. Norris: No direct financial support has been given by the Government since the financial reconstruction of the company in 1989.

However, the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company is in receipt of grant aid from several schemes with the backing of the European regional development fund. Since 1989, some £13.3. million has been made available to the company for various infrastructure and regeneration projects.

Railtrack (Station Sales)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if it remains his policy that Railtrack should dispose of 13 independent stations; and if he will make a statement. [10310]

Mr. Watts: No. All stations owned by Railtrack, including the 14 major stations which it operates, will pass into the private sector with the company when it is floated in May.

Porous Asphalt

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to increase the use of porous asphalt for road surfacing motorways and A roads. [9904]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 January 1996:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking the Secretary of State for Transport, what plans he has to increase the use of porous asphalt for road surfacing motorways and 'A' roads.

The Highways Agency has developed with industry a general specification to permit the use of porous asphalt. Its adoption is encouraged where conditions are suitable and where the benefits can be shown to outweigh the higher costs associated with its use.

Coastguard Agency

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what proposals he is considering for further efficiency cuts in the Coastguard service; [9557]

(2) which Coastguard offices or stations are under consideration for closure. [9558]

Mr. Norris: No further efficiency measures for the Coastguard agency, other than those contained in the agency's published 1995–96 business plan, have been decided. The process of considering the 1996–97 budget is currently under way.

Driving Standards Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what has been the change in the number of unprocessed applications at the Driving Standards Agency over the last two years; [10491]

(2) what has been the average waiting time for tests from the Driving Standards Agency on a monthly basis over the last two years in each region; [10493]

(3) what assessment has he had made of the effect of the recent reduction in the number of Driving Standards Agency regional offices from 10 to five on service levels to the public; [10437]

(4) how many people have applied for driving tests in each month of the last two years at the Driving Standards Agency; [10438]

(5) how many driving tests have been cancelled by the Driving Standards Agency at short notice in the last year; [10556]

(6) what have been the annual funding and staffing levels at the Driving Standards Agency since it was established; [10492]

(7) how much compensation has been paid to people whose driving tests have been cancelled in each of the last five years. [10436]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Driving Standards Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from B. L. Herdan to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 23 January 1996:

DRIVING STANDARDS AGENCY SERVICES—PQS 680, 683, 688, 696, 698, 699 AND 705

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Questions about the Driving Standards Agency's services.

PQ Numbers 680 and 696/95/96: Numbers of applications and unprocessed applications over the last two years

We have taken the reference to unprocessed applications to mean those who have applied for but not yet received a driving test. The table at Annex A shows the monthly level of applications for tests and the numbers awaiting a test at the end of each month over the last two years.

PQ Number 683/95/96: Average waiting times

Annex B shows the monthly average waiting time for each region over the same period. The more recent data reflects the merging of regions into our new 5 Area structure. Wales and Western were merged first; the Eastern regions (Nottingham and Cambridge) were merged with West Midlands; North West was merged with North East and the majority of South East was merged with Metropolitan (although some south eastern centres are now managed from Birmingham and some from Cardiff). We are pursuing a number of measures to improve service levels.

We recognise that the reorganisation changes have resulted in a number of temporary problems. These include a backlog of postal applications, misdirected mail, and poor telephone answering performance. These have been exacerbated by extremely high demand on the telephones because of the increase in queries about the new theory test and vocational test changes.

Additional staff together with new and more efficient telephone systems are now in place which provide much better management information. We are setting higher service standards in next year's business plan and are confident that once the transition period is over the service offered by the 5 offices will be superior to that offered previously by the ten.

PQ Numbers 698 and 705/95/96: Short notice cancellations and compensation levels

Annex C shows the numbers of driving tests we have had to cancel at short notice, other than when the weather was too poor to enable a test to be conducted, over the last year. The following table summarises the compensation paid to customers whose tests were cancelled at short notice:

| Year | Compensation |
|---|---|
| 1990–91 | 264,665 |
| 1991–92 | 244,468 |
| 1992–93 | 186,912 |
| 1993–94 | 205,853 |
| 1994–95 | 124,435 |
| 1995–96 | [1]79,021 |

PQ Number 699/95/96: Funding and staffing levels

The Agency is a non statutory on-Vote trading body whose current expenses are not classified as public expenditure. Its full costs are recovered through fees and charges and it has been producing audited commercial style accounts since 1992–93. The following table shows the Agency's net resource costs in cash prices and the numbers of full time equivalent staff employed for the five years since the Agency was established. The figures for the current year are our latest forecasts of outturn.

| Year | Costs £000s | Staffing |
|---|---|---|
| 1990–91 | 49,914 | 2,105 |
| 1991–92 | 51,808 | 2,192 |
| 1992–93 | 50,786 | 1,898 |
| 1993–94 | 48,064 | 1,805 |
| 1994–95 | 48,505 | 1,789 |
| 1995–96 | 50,288 | 1,811 |

SCOTLAND

Bail Hostels

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to establish a bail hostel in each sheriffdom in Scotland. [7752]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Accommodation for persons on bail is currently available in the sheriffdoms of Glasgow and Strathkelvin, Lothian and Borders, Grampian, Highlands and Islands, and Tayside, Central and Fife. There are plans to establish further provision within the sheriffdom of Tayside, Central and Fife. There are no plans to establish a bail hostel in every sheriffdom.

National Museums and Galleries

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the attendance figures for 1995 reported by the national museums and galleries in Scotland, broken down into the individual institutions but including their substations, with figures in each case of the percentage increase or decrease on the attendance figures for 1994. [9016]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The information is as follows:

| | 1995 | Percentage change since 1994 |
|---|---|---|
| National museums of Scotland | 1,114,587 | -0.5 |
| National galleries of Scotland | 901,783 | +2.0 |

Figures for the national museums of Scotland relate to the Royal Museum of Scotland, the Museum of Antiquities, the Scottish Agricultural Museum, the Scottish United Services Museum, the Museum of Flight, the Museum of Costume and the Gasworks Museum. The national galleries of Scotland figures relate to the National Gallery of Scotland, the Scottish National Portrait Gallery, the Scottish National Gallery of Modern Art, National Galleries of Scotland exhibitions held in the Royal Scottish Academy and, for the first time, Duff house in Banff.

Health Boards (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance has been issued by his Department to (a) local authorities and (b) health board and NHS trusts in Scotland on when they should enter into a competitive tendering exercise before awarding contracts for goods or services. [9850]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 January 1996]: The Scottish Office Environment Department has issued a number of guidance circulars to local authorities on compulsory competitive tendering. In particular, circular 13/93 offers advice on the avoidance of anti-competitive behaviour. Circular 13/95 provided guidance on compulsory competitive tendering during local government reform.

Comprehensive guidance on market testing for NHS services in Scotland issued from the management executive of the NHS in Scotland to health boards and national health service trusts on 6 October 1993. This consolidated all earlier guidance which had issued since 1987 when competitive tendering was introduced in the national health service in Scotland. The guidance addresses all aspects of market testing involving non-clinical services. Separate guidance which issued in 1992 covers the circumstances in which health boards and national health service trusts are required to use contracts negotiated centrally by the supplies division of the Common Services Agency for goods, services and equipment.

Local authorities and health boards and national health service trusts must also have regard to the EC procurement directives.

Child Offenders

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of children made subject to a supervision requirement by a children's hearing, having been referred for a commission of an offence, reoffend within two years of the making of the order where the child remains in the community for two years after leaving a children's home or residential school. [10645]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not maintained in the form requested.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what percentage of cases referred by the police to a reporter on the grounds that a child has committed an offence are the grounds for referral accepted at a children's hearing. [10644]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Currently 30 per cent. of all cases referred to the reporter on the grounds that the child has committed an offence are subsequently referred to children's hearings. In 75 per cent. of the cases considered by hearings the grounds are accepted.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the average cost of a children's hearing per case referred (a) on offence grounds and (b) on non-offence grounds; [10646]

(2) what is the average cost per case from referral until completion of cases referred to a reporter on offence grounds including the cost to the police, the reporter's department, social services, education and the children's hearing. [10647]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Cost information is not collected in the form requested.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average time taken between a referral by the police to a reporter on the grounds that a child has committed an offence and the case being dealt with by a children's hearing (a) where the grounds for referral are accepted and (b) where the grounds for referral are not accepted. [10643]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not maintained in the departments of reporters to children's panels.

Private Prisons

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the site for the new private prison; and if he will make a statement. [10299]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No final decision about the site for the new privately financed prison has yet been made and a number of options are still under consideration. I expect that an announcement will be made in the near future.

Residential Mobile Homes

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to assess the impact of the park home owners charter and to carry out more thorough research into the use of residential mobile homes in Scotland and the effectiveness of the legislative framework governing residential mobile homes. [10418]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Research to assess the working of the park home owners charter in Scotland, England and Wales has been commissioned by the Department of the Environment from the university of Birmingham. The research findings are expected to be made available in the next few months. The need for further research into the use of residential mobile homes in Scotland will be considered in the light of these findings.

Housing Finance

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Scottish Homes budget in 1995–96 for publication and promotion. [10714]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: It is £800,000.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the proposed housing revenue account capital budget borrowing consent minimum and maximum levels for each council in Scotland in 1996–97; [10719]

(2) if he will list the resource planning assumptions for each council in Scotland for its 1996–97 housing revenue account capital budget. [10715]

Mr. Robertson: No decisions have been taken yet on the housing revenue account capital budget borrowing consent levels for individual councils in Scotland for 1996–97. These will depend on the final estimates of capital receipts which authorities are expected to achieve in 1996–97 which are currently the subject of consultation.

The information on resource planning assumptions for each council in Scotland for 1996–97 is set out in the table.

Pregnant Women Prisoners

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if pregnant women prisoners are handcuffed while in labour and during childbirth; and if he will make a statement; [9024]

(2) if he will make a statement about the supervision of pregnant women prisoners; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidelines issued to the Prison Service on this issue. [9025]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the questions relate to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked the chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 23 January 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your two Questions about the handcuffing and supervision of pregnant women prisoners.

All security category A and B prisoners, including women prisoners, who are required to be taken outside the prison are subject to security precautions including the use of handcuffs. However women prisoners would not be handcuffed whilst in labour, and staff would be expected, with the approval of the prison Governor, to have regard to individual circumstances in the supervision which would apply.

Fishing (Norwegian Territorial Waters)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 2 November, Official Report, column 461, what were the total landings of fish caught in Norwegian territorial waters by (a) United Kingdom-registered fishing vessels and (b) other

European Union fishing vessels; and what were the species of fish included in these landings in (i) 1992, (ii) 1993 and (iii) 1994. [9413]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The table shows landings by UK vessels from the Norwegian exclusive economic zone by species for 1992, 1993 and 1994. Information from other member states in the same form is not available.

Student Grants

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many postgraduate social work students have received grants at the discretion of the Secretary of State for Scotland in each of the years 1990 to 1995. [10775]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: None. The responsibility for providing student support for Scottish domiciled students undertaking postgraduate studies in social work was transferred to the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work with effect from academic year 1990–91. This enabled the council to operate a uniform UK-wide policy in its area of responsibility.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the regulations on the award of student grants in Scotland. [10777]

Mr. Robertson: Grants to Scottish domiciled students undertaking full-time courses of higher education are offered under the Students' Allowances (Scotland) Regulations 1991 (SI 1991 No. 1522), as amended. The regulations are made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State under powers contained in the Education (Scotland) Act 1980.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans there are to bring the criteria for award of student grants for postgraduate students in Scotland in line with the provisions for England and Wales. [10778]

Mr. Robertson: For subjects where awards for postgraduate study in England and Wales are subject to national criteria, the arrangements in Scotland are already broadly in line, subject to minor variations to meet Scottish circumstances. Where the award in England and Wales is at the discretion of the local education authority, arrangements can vary and alignment is not possible.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what financial assistance is available to postgraduate students in Scotland; and what plans there are to extend the availability of the student loans scheme to postgraduate students. [10776]

Mr. Robertson: The standard rates of means-tested maintenance allowance for non-loan-bearing postgraduate courses in the academic year 1995–96 are:

£2,690: for students living in a hall of residence or in lodgings and attending establishments outside the London area.

£3,295: as above, but attending an establishment in the London area

£1,965: for students living at their parents' home.

Additional weeks' allowances are payable for attendance exceeding 30 weeks and three days. Tuition fees are also payable without means testing.

There are no plans to extend the availability of loans to postgraduate students other than those undertaking PGCE courses who already qualify, and receive the lower undergraduate maintenance rates. Unlike those at undergraduate level, postgraduate rates of maintenance grant have been uprated annually in line with inflation in recent years.

Mrs. Liddell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the criteria for the award of student grants in Scotland relating to postgraduate students. [10779]

Mr. Robertson: To be eligible for an award a student must generally have been ordinarily resident in the British islands for at least three years preceding 31 August of the year in which the course, or continuous series of courses, starts and also be ordinarily resident in Scotland on 30 June of that year.

Under the postgraduate students' allowances scheme, an award may be offered to an eligible student who has completed a first degree or comparable course and who then wishes to take a short, usually one-year, course of professional or vocational training. Not all postgraduate diploma courses are covered by the scheme and, outwith the fields of science and technology, engineering and teacher training, the numbers of awards available are limited by quota and eligible students compete for assistance. There are also restrictions related to previous study at postgraduate level.

Under the Scottish studentship scheme, support is offered to a limited number of eligible students who wish to undertake postgraduate higher degree study in the arts and humanities. Applicants must hold either a first class or a very good second class honours degree. The number of applications received significantly exceeds the studentship awards available each year and the successful candidates are selected on merit by a committee of academics appointed from Scottish universities.

These arrangements are set out more fully in the booklet "Student Grants in Scotland—A Guide to Postgraduate Allowances." I am sending a copy to the hon. Member and copies have been placed in the Library.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the mobile telephones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last eight years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11006]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

| Year | Instances of cloning | Dates |

| 1994 | 4 | [1] December |

[1] Day unrecorded.
[2] Two clonings on same date.

There were no instances of cloning in the previous six years.

Rural Scotland White Paper

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will invite representatives of the Scottish Crofters Union to join the Scottish National Rural Partnership to discuss his White Paper "Rural Scotland: People, Prosperity and Partnership"; and if he will make a statement. [10685]

Mr. Kynoch: To date, invitations to serve on the Scottish National Rural Partnership have been limited to organisations with a national remit or, in the case of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, to the two bodies which, taken together, have the national remit. However, my right hon. Friend would be prepared to consider any request from the Scottish Crofters Union to join the Scottish National Rural Partnership.

Forth Road Bridge

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on which date the capital cost of the Forth road bridge is expected to be paid off; and if he will make a statement on (a) his intentions for tolling thereafter and (b) the future allocation of toll revenues. [11517]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Forth Road Bridge Order Confirmation Act 1958 provides for income from bridge tolls to be used to service and repay loans, including those in respect of the capital cost of the bridge, and to pay for its operation, maintenance and repair. It also provides for tolling to continue until adequate provision is made for the latter. The capital cost of the bridge has been fully paid off.

The tolling period was extended in 1993 to 28 May 1998 to provide for essential strengthening and other maintenance works. The Forth transport working group, comprising representatives of the Forth Road Bridge joint board, Fife and Lothian regional councils and the Scottish Office, is examining future tolling arrangements as part of a wider consideration of transport issues across the Forth. The group will report to the Secretary of State and the convenors of the regional councils in due course.

NHS (Public Relations Officers)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many public relations officers are employed by the NHS management executive in Scotland; and what was the annual expenditure by the NHS management executive for each financial year since 1987 on (a) public relations, (b) communications and (c) marketing. [11164]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no public relations officers employed by or in the NHS management executive in Scotland. A team of three whole-time equivalent information officers in the Scottish Office's information directorate reporting to a chief press officer provide advice and support to Ministers, the management executive and the remainder of the Scottish Office Department of Health on issues relating to health and to the national health service. There is no identifiable expenditure by the NHSME since 1987 which is readily attributable to (a) public relations, (b) communications and (c) marketing.

Monofilament Nets

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the areas he has identified as unsuitable for the use of monofilament nets for (a) conservation reasons and (b) because the area is used for sports diving. [11159]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: No such areas have been identified.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many responses to the recent consultation on the carriage of monofilament gill nets recommended that the use of such nets should be monitored to assess their impact on marine wildlife. [11156]

Mr. Robertson: Five respondents made such a recommendation.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he has had with representatives of scuba divers in relation to ending the ban on the carriage and use of monofilament nets. [11158]

Mr. Robertson: Since announcing the outcome of consultations on the proposed ending of the ban on large mesh monofilament gill nets, I have received representations from diving interests, whose views have been noted.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which organisations and individuals were consulted prior to changing the Inshore Fishing (Prohibition of the Carriage of Monofilament Gill Nets) (Scotland) Order 1986; and how many responses were (a) in favour of and (b) against changing the legislation. Twenty-seven responses were received, of which 16 were in favour of the proposed change, five were not opposed to it but had some qualifications, and four were opposed to it in varying degrees. Two respondents offered no view.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what measures he has instigated to prevent large-mesh monofilament nets presenting a threat to marine wildlife; [11163]

(2) what monitoring will be established to assess the impact of large-mesh monofilament nets upon marine wildlife in Scottish waters. [11157]

Mr. Robertson: Arrangements for monitoring the by-catch of cetaceans in fishing nets are already in place and these will be extended to any large-mesh monofilament gill nets.

Porpoises

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures his Department is taking to meet its commitments to protect the harbour porpoises in Scottish waters (a) under the biodiversity action plan and (b) under the habitats directive. [11162]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The harbour porpoise is a protected species under relevant provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and the Conservation (Natural Habitats, &c.) Regulations 1994, which make provision for the implementation of Council direction 92/43/EEC on the conservation of natural habitats and of wild fauna and flora. The report of the biodiversity action plan steering group submitted to the Government in December 1995 contains a suggested action plan for the conservation of the harbour porpoise. The Government will be responding to this report in the spring.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements exist to provide for the public accountability of the Scottish ambulance service for its management policies and practices and to ensure that its employees are not subjected to victimisation. [11204]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The chairmen and boards of NHS trusts are accountable to the Secretary of State via the management executive of the NHS in Scotland. Each trust is responsible for managing its own industrial relations and other personnel matters.

A copy of the policy and procedures for the resolution of differences between the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust and its employees is in the Library of the House. Disputes which cannot be resolved through this mechanism may be pursued through other appropriate channels, including industrial tribunals.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Rail Privatisation

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in introducing a private element into the management and operation of Northern Ireland Railways; and if he will make a statement. [11250]

Mr. Moss: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) on 18 May 1995, Official Report, column 355. Consultants commissioned by the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company have, this month, presented their final report dealing with the sale of non-core businesses and opportunities for market testing and contracting out of Northern Ireland Railway's activities. The Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company will now take forward the consultant's recommendations.

Public Meeting Halls (Attacks)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the Orange halls, (b) the churches and church halls indicating the denomination, (c) the Gaelic Athletics Association premises and (d) other halls, which suffered from (i) arson and (ii) other attacks which resulted in damage in each of the last two years, indicating in each case (1) the date, (2) the location of the premises, (3) the cost of repairing the damage and (4) if compensation was paid. [11004]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The Compensation Agency has been able to produce lists of claims lodged on Church properties, orange halls and GAA properties damaged giving date of incident, cause and the amount of settlement. Copies of the lists have been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Building Regulations

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has given to the Building Regulations Advisory Committee on the likely timetable for implementation of proposed amendments to part M of the Building Regulations. [10265]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Papers setting out my Department's views on a programme of work on various aspects of the building regulations, including part M, were discussed by the Building Regulations Advisory Committee at meetings in June and October last year. These papers included possible implementation dates taking into account, among other things, the time needed for consultation and analysis. Decisions on the timetable for individual items will depend on the rate of progress achieved at each stage.

Water and Sewerage

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many non-domestic customers in each of the water and sewerage areas pay separate bills for sewerage on the basis of the rateable value of their premises. [9943]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not held centrally.

Homelessness

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current estimate of the total number of homeless people in England. [10754]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities in England provide data to my Department about their activities under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 on the quarterly PI(E) return. Summary figures based on these returns are published in a quarterly information bulletin entitled "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England". The latest bulletin was released on 11 December and gives figures up to the third quarter of 1995; a copy is in the Library.

Housing Stock

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the total housing stock in England is derelict or uninhabitable. [10755]

Mr. Clappison: The 1991 English house condition survey found 7.6 per cent. of dwellings in England to be unfit for human habitation under section 604 of the Housing Act 1985, as amended by schedule 9 to the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Some 3 per cent. of these unfit dwellings were derelict at the time of the survey.

Conservation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures are followed when an application for a drought order is made which could potentially damage a special protection area designated under the European birds directive. [10241]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: In England and Wales, the National Rivers Authority is notified of applications for drought orders. Under section 17 of the Water Resources Act 1991 it must, except in an emergency, consult the relevant nature conservation agency if the proposal is likely to damage the special features of a site of special interest, including all special protection areas.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures are in place to review existing abstraction licences which could be potentially damaging to (a) a special protection area designated under the European birds directive and (b) a special area of conservation designated under the habitats directive. [10243]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: In England and Wales the National Rivers Authority has a statutory duty under section 17 of the Water Resources Act 1991 to consult the nature conservation agencies before carrying out or authorising any works, operations or activities which appear to the authority to be likely to affect adversely those sites of special interest which have been notified to the authority by one of the statutory notifying authorities. All special protection areas and, in future, special areas of conservation will be notified as such sites.

In August 1995, the NRA and English Nature signed a memorandum of understanding regarding a joint approach to river sites of special scientific interest, covering the production of a conservation strategy and consenting, licensing, protocol. This will also apply other habitats, SPAs and in due course, SACs. In addition, English Nature has agreed to provide a priority list of SPAs and SACs potentially vulnerable to certain activities, including the effect of abstraction. This will be used by the NRA in a planned programme for reviewing existing abstraction licences.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legal instruments are in place which require an assessment of environmental impacts of (a) new abstraction licences, (b) variations to existing abstraction licences and (c) a drought order. [10242]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: In England and Wales, the National Rivers Authority is the competent authority for issuing or varying abstraction licences and will comment as necessary on applications for drought orders. Relevant legislation includes the Water Resources Act 1991 sections 2(2), 4, 15, 16 and 19. In some cases, development proposals including abstractions fall within the remit of the environment assessment regulations and in these instances a full environmental statement will be required.

Where the environmental assessment regulations do not apply, the NRA requires an environmental report when it considers that the proposed abstraction would have more than a negligible impact.

In the case of new abstractions of variations to existing abstractions which may damage the special features of a site of special interest, the NRA is required under section 17 of the Water Resources Act 1991 to consult the relevant nature conservation agency. Under the Conservation (Natural Habitats, &c.) Regulations 1994 the NRA, as a competent authority, is required to review authorisations, including abstraction licences, which might affect the integrity of special protection areas and special areas of conservation.

Wild Animal Imports

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what number and species of terrapins have been imported under the provisions of the convention on international trade in endangered species since 1990. [10154]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Only one species of terrapin listed in CITES has been imported into the United Kingdom since 1990. Two hundred specimens of Pelomedusa subrufra—Marsh terrapin—were imported in 1991, and 10 in 1995.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many dangerous wild animals as defined by statute were imported into the United Kingdom during 1995; and how many exotic animals and reptiles were imported. [10156]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: In 1995, 2,250 live specimens of species listed on the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976, as amended, were imported into the United Kingdom.

Total figures for the import of exotic species are not available. In 1994—the latest year for which data are available—43,495 specimens of live animals, including reptiles, listed under the convention on international trade in endangered species were imported into the UK.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many American box turtles were imported into the United Kingdom in 1995. [10155]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Six Coahuila box turtles—Terrapene coahuila—were imported into the United Kingdom in 1995.

Recycling Projects (Local Authorities)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money was made available to local authorities through supplementary credit approvals with respect to recycling projects in each year since 1991–92, and the amount which is forecast to be made available to local authorities in each of the next three years. [10351]

Mr. Curry [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Provision for the recycling supplementary credit approval programme was £12 million for 1991–92, £15 million for each of the next three years, and is £16.4 million for 1995–96. Planned provision for 1996–97 is £10 million. In addition, from next year local recycling initiatives are likely to benefit from expenditure by environmental trusts established in consequence of the landfill tax as well as from increased industry funding as a consequence of the producer responsibility for packaging initiative. With regard to 1997–98 and beyond, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State explained in his statement on the rate support grant on 30 November 1995, Official Report, column 1338, we will shortly be consulting on the scope for bringing challenge funding more broadly to bear on local authority capital spending in future years, including SCAs for recycling. This should give greater scope for authorities that are keen to make major investment in recycling infrastructure, alongside the growing activities of industry and voluntary groups.

Sewerage and Water Service Bills

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what impact the last revaluation of rateable values of non-domestic premises for unified business rate purposes has had on bills for sewerage, drainage and water issued by sewerage undertakers in areas where sewerage and water services are provided by separate companies. [10457]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Most sewerage undertakers use the general rating valuation list as at 31 March 1990 for charging unmeasured non-domestic premises. For those few companies that use the unified business rate as a basis of charging for water, sewerage and drainage, the impact on bills would vary from customer to customer.

Drought (Yorkshire)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now publish the inspector's report of the public inquiry held into the drought in Yorkshire in November. [10769]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Copies of the inspector's report are available by applying to the Government office for Yorkshire and Humberside, PO Box 213, City house, New Station street, Leeds LS1 4JU.

River Derwent Emergency Drought Order

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the environmental impact on the Lower Derwent valley of the proposed River Derwent emergency drought order. [10734]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The hearing arranged to consider the application and the objections to it was postponed at Yorkshire Water's request. When the hearing takes place, the environmental impact will be one of the issues to be considered by the inspector in preparing his report.

Minerals Planning Guidance

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how the final draft minerals planning guidance note 1 "General Considerations and the Development Plan System" was modified by the results of the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [10605]

(2) if the final draft minerals planning guidance note 1 "General Considerations and the Development Plan System" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in his Department's document "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; and if he will publish the appraisal; [10603]

(3) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the final draft minerals planning guidance note 1 "General Considerations and the Development Plan System"; [10606]

(4) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the final draft minerals planning guidance note 1 "General Considerations and the Development Plan System" were considered in the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [10604]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" sets out an approach whereby environmental effects can be taken into account in policy development, while recognising that this will vary from case to case depending on the complexity and significance of the impacts. Minerals planning guidance note 1, general considerations and the development plan system, sets out the Government's policy on various issues concerning planning for minerals in England, including how policies for mineral extraction can be more consistent with the principles of sustainable development. This is being revised and developed following widespread consultation on a draft. It seeks to strike a balance between the aim of ensuring a supply of minerals and the need to protect the environment and conserve minerals as far as possible.

The final draft consultation document includes many modifications to the first draft reflecting the views expressed by environmental organisations and others. I do not intend to publish a separate environmental appraisal in addition to the draft advice already published and the final guidance when completed. The Government will monitor the effectiveness of the policy guidance through regular liaison with minerals planning authorities and other bodies and the Deparment's research programme.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if (a) the forthcoming housing discussion paper, (b) draft planning policy guidance note "Countryside and the Rural Economy", (c) the forthcoming annual review of the United Kingdom sustainable development strategy and (d) the forthcoming draft planning policy guidance note 1 "General Policy and Principles" will be subject to an environmental appraisal in accordance with the guidance contained in his document "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; and if he will make a statement. [10617]

Mr. Clappison: (a) No. The housing discussion paper is a consultation document. (b) and (d) environmental impacts are being fully considered during the revision of PPG7, "The Countryside and the Rural Economy", and PPG1, "General Policy and Principles". (c) No. "This Common Inheritance: UK annual report 1996" will not itself set new policies. I fully endorse the need for environmental impacts to be taken into account in the development of new policy.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the White Paper "Making Waste Work" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in his Department's document "Policy Appraisal and the Environment"; and if he will publish the appraisal; [10599]

(2) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the White Paper "Making Waste Work"; [10602]

(3) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the White Paper "Making Waste Work" were considered in the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [10600]

(4) how the White Paper "Making Waste Work" was modified by the results of the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department. [10601]

Mr. Clappison: It would not have been appropriate to undertake an environmental appraisal, using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", in relation to the White Paper "Making Waste Work". The White Paper sets out our strategy for achieving more sustainable waste management and includes a range of waste management practices. It emphasises that the choice of a waste management method for a particular waste stream will be guided by the principle of using the best practicable environmental option which would take into account both the environmental and economic costs and benefits of different methods of waste management.

Indeed, such an appraisal could be undertaken only on the basis of reliable statistical information which is equally true of monitoring environmental impacts. The White Paper acknowledges that much of the necessary information is not readily available or is available with insufficient precision to enable reliable estimates to be made. An important part of the waste strategy is, therefore, to ensure that better information relating to waste is available and the White Paper sets out how this will be achieved.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the forthcoming rural White Paper, annual review, will be subject to an environmental appraisal in accordance with the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", published by the Department of the Environment; and if he will publish the environmental appraisal. [10616]

Mr. Clappison: A progress report on the commitments contained within the rural White Paper, "Rural England: A Nation Committed to a Living Countryside", will be produced later this year. Environmental impacts will be taken into account in following up the commitments contained within the White Paper.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many councils will have to reduce their capital spending as a result of the new rent capping proposals. [10507]

Mr. Clappison: If local authorities budget sensibly, they should be able to maintain their existing revenue contributions to housing revenue account capital expenditure.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the amount of credit approvals to fund local authority capital spending on housing in each of the last five years; what is his forecast for 1996–97 and 1997–98; and if he will express each statistic in (a) real terms and (b) as a percentage change on the previous year. [10500]

Mr. Clappison: The figures are provided in the table.

| Year | Local authority credit approvals (cash £ million) | Local authority credit approvals at 1994–95 prices (£ million) | Percentage change on the previous year (in cash terms) |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1991–92 (outturn) | 1,441 | 1,572 | — |
| 1992–93 (outturn) | 1,194 | 1,252 | –17 |
| 1993–94 (outturn) | 1,120 | 1,141 | –6 |
| 1994–95 (outturn) | 872 | 872 | –22 |
| 1995–96 (est outturn) | 869 | 846 | 0 |
| 1996–97 (plans) | 789 | 747 | –9 |
| 1997–98 (plans) | 752 | 695 | –5 |

These figures exclude credit approvals for the estate action scheme, which has been subsumed into the single regeneration budged; the scheme has been grant-funded since 1995–96. The supplementary credit approvals issued to provide cover for specified capital grants are also excluded.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much revenue local authorities will lose in 1996–97 following the introduction of the new housing revenue account subsidy system. [10503]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities which budget within the Government's guideline rent increases will be unaffected by the new arrangements to limit rent rebate subsidy.

Rent Capping

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation was held with local authorities with respect to the new rent capping proposals. [10502]

Mr. Clappison: Our proposals for the limitation of subsidy on rent rebate costs in 1996–97 were circulated for consultation to the relevant local authority associations and to all local authorities on 21 November 1995. We asked for comments by 15 December.

Housing Benefit (Council Tenants)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council tenants in the United Kingdom currently claim housing benefit. [10504]

Mr. Clappison: When claiming housing revenue account subsidy, local authorities in England supply my Department with information about the number of council tenants in receipt of rent rebate. Based on these returns, there are an estimated 2,394,000 council tenants in England in receipt of housing benefit in 1995–96. My Department does not receive any information about the number of claimants in the other parts of the United Kingdom.

Rent Increases

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the 1996–97 guideline rent increases expressed in (a) real terms and (b) as a percentage increase on the 1995–96 amount. [10505]

Mr. Clappison: There is no real terms increase in the 1996–97 average guideline rent per dwelling compared with 1995–96. In cash terms, the increase is 2.75 per cent.

Air Quality Assessments

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what consultation he has had with local authority associations as to the capacity of their members to carry out the necessary assessments of air quality to comply with part IV of the Environment Act 1995; [10772]

(2) by what date he expects local authorities to complete assessments of air quality in their areas to comply with the air quality provisions in part IV of the Environment Act 1995. [10773]

Mr. Clappison: My Department, together with the Scottish Office and Welsh Office, established a working group last November, with representatives of the local authority associations, to advise on implementation and operation of the local air quality duties under the Environment Act 1995. The working group is considering the timing of reviews and assessments and developing the necessary guidance for local authorities, before the commencement of the relevant sections of the Act.

Asylum Seekers (Benefits)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the dates and attendance of all meetings between his Department and local government associations concerning the costs of implementing the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Regulations; and if he will make a statement; [11000]

(2) what is his estimate of the costs to local government of the implementation of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendment Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [11001]

Sir Paul Beresford: This subject was discussed at a meeting on 6 December 1995 between my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration and the Association of London Government, and with all the local authority associations at the Housing Consultative Council on 7 December. My officials will be having further discussions with the local authority associations in the near future, to help us to identify these costs and to decide what financial assistance to make available to local authorities.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the mobile phones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last four years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11015]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information available to my Department suggests that 13 mobile phones have been cloned during the past four years. The precise dates when cloning took place are not available.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what bids he has received from authorities that have been, or are to be, reorganised on 1 April 1995, 1996 or 1997 for reorganisation costs. [11068]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 923.

Drought Orders

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of state for the Environment (1) how much notice water companies are required to give to the public of an application for a drought order; [10849]

(2) what provisions govern the publicity given to an application for a drought order. [10850]

Mr. Clappison: Applicants for drought orders are required under schedule 8 to the Water Resources Act 1991 to serve notices on a range of specified persons and cause notice of the application to be published in one or more local newspapers and in the London Gazette.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, columns 10–11, what is the latest position in respect of drought orders (a) applied for, (b) under consideration, (c) refused, (d) agreed and (e) withdrawn, by region. [10851]

Mr. Clappison: The figures since August 1995 by National Rivers Authority regions are as follows:

| | (a) | (b) | (c) | (d) | (e) |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Northumbria and Yorkshire | 30 | 2 | 0 | 24 | 4 |
| North-west | 26 | 2 | 0 | 24 | 0 |
| South Western | 15 | 5 | 0 | 7 | 3 |
| Southern | 4 | 0 | 0 | 4 | 0 |
| Severn Trent | 3 | 0 | 0 | 3 | 0 |

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation with other statutory or voluntary agencies is required before a water company makes applications for a drought order. [10852]

Mr. Clappison: The proceedings on applications for drought orders, as set out in schedule 8 to the Water Resources Act 1991, require the applicant to cause notice to be served on the National Rivers Authority and every local authority, other than county councils, and water undertaker whose area would be affected by the order. It is the Department's practice to consult both the NRA and English Nature on each application.

Leaseholders (Estate Action)

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he intends to take to help leaseholders of local authorities facing bills for estate action repairs and improvements where these costs are also met by Government-funded schemes. [11822]

Mr. Clappison: We have today invited comments on proposals to remove this anomaly. We propose to require local authorities, and other social landlords, to reduce charges for works to the extent that these are funded by central Government—for example, under the single regeneration budget challenge fund. For schemes already in process or completed—for example, under estate action—when the measure comes into effect, we propose to permit landlords to reduce charges. I have placed in the Library a copy of our consultation paper "Leaseholders of local authorities, housing action trusts, urban development corporations, registered housing associations and other registered social landlords: proposals to reduce charges for estate repairs and improvements funded by central government." We have invited comments by the end of February, as we wish to introduce our proposals at the earliest suitable legislative opportunity. The Welsh Office will be consulting similarly in Wales.

Hydrofluorocarbons

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in the negotiation of voluntary agreements with industry on the use of hydrofluorocarbons. [11823]

Mr. Gummer: The Government have today concluded separate voluntary agreements with the four principal users of hydrofluorocarbons—the aerosols, air conditioning and refrigeration, fire and foams industries. These are the first agreements of their kind in Europe, and reflect the Government's desire to achieve environmental objectives through voluntary action by industry, rather than regulation, wherever possible.

The agreements recognise that in certain applications, HFCs are important alternatives to chlorofluorocarbons and hydrochlorofluorocarbons which are ozone-depleting substances. HFCs are, however, greenhouse gases with a high global warming potential. The agreements with the industries concerned therefore ensure that, where HFCs are used, emissions to the atmosphere are minimised; and that they are not used where emissions are unavoidable, if safe, practical and more environmentally acceptable alternatives are available.

Under the UN framework convention on climate change, the United Kingdom is committed to returning its emissions of greenhouse gases to 1990 levels by the year 2000. Although currently emitted in smaller quantities than some other greenhouse gases, HFCs are significant due both to their high global warming potentials and to the potential increase in their use as replacements for ozone-depleting substances. These agreements will lead to a reduction in HFC emissions and so contribute to the UK climate change programme.

NRA (Prosecutions)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each prosecution by the National Rivers Authority against the privatised coal companies since coal privatisation, indicating (a) the date of infringement, (b) the date of prosecution, (c) a summary of the nature of the offence and (d) any resultant conviction. [9509]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 15 January 1996]: No prosecutions have been brought by the National Rivers Authority against the privatised coal companies.

WALES

Disabled Pupils

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are in place to ensure that the inaccessibility of school transport is not a restricting factor in integrating disabled children into mainstream schools; and if he will make a statement. [9248]

Mr. Richards: Local education authorities have responsibility for identifying and assessing children with special educational needs. They have a qualified duty to ensure that children with special educational needs are educated in mainstream schools. They also have to comply with parental preference for a maintained school, subject to it being appropriate for the child and compatible with the efficient use of resources. If LEAs identify a particular need appropriate to a child's education, which may include school transport outside the authority's normal arrangements, they have to ensure that suitable provision is made.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what guidance he intends to issue to health authorities and trusts about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9242]

(2) what guidance he intends to issue to local authorities about the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9246]

(3) what guidance he intends to issue to (a) Departments, (b) executive agencies, (c) non-departmental public bodies and (d) outside bodies and arm's-length organisations which he has responsibility for, or an interest in, regarding the implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9231]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 417. I will ensure that my Department and any bodies for which it is responsible are made aware of their responsibilities under the Act.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to enable members of town and community councils to be represented on community health councils as of right. [9546]

Mr. Richards: Current legislation does not provide for town and community councils to be represented on community health councils as of right.

Primary legislation allows for at least one half of a community health council's membership to be made up of local authority nominees: these nominees can be drawn from any organisation, including town and community councils.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many community and town councillors sit on community health councils in Wales. [9547]

Mr. Richards: This information is not held currently.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the community health councils in Wales. [9548]

Mr. Richards: This information can be found in the 1995 health services year book prepared by the Institute of Health Services Management. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy in respect of consultation on community health council matters where town and community councils are concerned. [9549]

Mr. Richards: There is no central policy for consulting on community health council matters directly with town and community councils. It is for the representative local authority to consult locally with its constituent councils on CHC matters.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the prospects for community health councils with respect to the impending changes in health authority organisation. [9550]

Mr. Richards: An important function of the new health authorities will be to act as the major local NHS presence, keeping in touch and working with local people and organisations to develop local services at a pace and in ways that local people will accept. As one of the most effective local representatives of the patient interest, CHCs fulfil the vital role of ensuring that the new commissioners are made fully aware of the need to make services more responsive to local needs and patient views.

A copy of briefing paper No. 4, "A Fresh Start for Community Health Councils", drafted by an NHS Wales working group will be placed in the Library. This offers a more detailed assessment of how the role of CHCs may need to develop over the coming years.

Teachers (Retirement and Redundancy)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many teachers in each local education authority have taken early retirement (a) on grounds of ill health and (b) for other reasons in each of the last five years; and how many of those have subsequently returned to teaching; [9716]

(2) how many teachers in each local education authority have had their employment terminated by voluntary redundancy agreements in each of the last five years; and how many of these have subsequently returned to teaching. [9704]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Homelessness

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the reasons for homelessness among those households accepted as homeless by local authorities in Wales who were in priority need by reason of old age, in each quarter in 1993 and 1994, and in the first two quarters of 1995. [10264]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is provided in the following table.

Cardiff Bay Opera House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations, on how many occasions, and on which dates he has had with the members of the Millennium Commission on the proposed Cardiff Bay opera house. [11210]

Mr. Hague: I have had no such consultations. The chairman of the commission notified me, shortly before the public announcement, of the conclusions the commission had reached about the opera house application.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions consultants working for the Millennium Commission on the proposed Cardiff Bay opera house have contacted his Department. [11209]

Mr. Hague: None.

Cancer Registration

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of Wednesday 17 January, Official Report, column 559, if he will ensure that the new management of the Cancer Registry provides up-to-date cancer registration statistics. [11214]

Mr. Hague: The invitation for proposals to manage the Cancer Registry issued to Velindre and the combined centres set out clear performance targets that the successful organisation will be expected to meet. These targets include a timetable by which the backlog of registrations should be cleared and a future maximum operational delay of one year for registration data.

Red Squirrels

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his assessment of the red squirrel population over the last decade and the measures he proposes to promote re-population of red squirrels; and if he will make a statement. [8918]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The red squirrel has continued to decline throughout Wales, as it has throughout southern Britain, over the past 10 years. Remnant populations are now confined to a few large conifer forests on the mainland and on Anglesey. This decline is at least partly attributed to the continued spread of the non-native grey squirrel. The Countryside Council for Wales, in partnership with the Forestry Commission research division, Forest Enterprise and Forestry Authority are continuing to research the habitat requirements of both red and grey squirrels in Clocaenog forest, Clwyd to identify ways in which conifer plantations can be managed to promote red and minimise grey squirrel populations. The same organisations are also considering a method of enhancing red squirrel populations on Anglesey, which involves reducing grey squirrel populations.

Wild Birds

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the latest populations of wild bird species; what were the equivalent figures for 1985 and 1990; if he will indicate the estimated total and percentage change in each case; and if he will make a statement. [9023]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The most recent estimates of the populations of wild birds are presented in "The New Atlas of Breeding Birds in Britain and Ireland: 1988–91", Gibbons, Reid and Chapman, 1993. Earlier estimates were published in "The Atlas of Breeding Birds in Britain and Ireland", Sharrock 1976. Trends in populations of wild birds are addressed in "Population trends in British Breeding Birds", Marchant et al, 1990.

Information on how the size of wild bird populations changes over time is collected and reported annually through specially designed monitoring schemes, including the breeding birds survey, the wetland bird survey and the common birds census.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the mobile telephones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last five years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11013]

Mr. Hague: One, on a number of occasions during August and September 1995.

Nurses (Training)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average amount of time nurses undergoing project 2000 training are available for national health service hospital duty as a percentage of the figure for whole-time trainee nurses in employment; and if he will make a statement. [11206]

Mr. Hague: Forty per cent.

Hospitals (Emergency Admissions)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many days each acute hospital in Wales was closed to emergency medical admissions in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995. [11207]

Mr. Hague: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has issued to the health authorities and national health service acute hospital trusts on assessing the need for emergency medical admissions beds; what representations he has received in relation to the joint meeting of these trusts with their commissioning authorities on 17 January; and if he will make a statement. [11208]

Mr. Hague: Recognising the likely pressure on Welsh hospitals from emergency medical admissions over the Christmas and early new year period, my Department asked senior NHS managers and health care professionals to develop an action plan aimed at minimising the risk of disruption to patient services.

An outline plan was developed before Christmas and senior managers met on 17 January to review its implementation. My officials are in regular contact with those co-ordinating action in the NHS and are monitoring the position closely.

I have not received any representation on this issue following the meeting on 17 January 1996.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Rearing Costs

13. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the relative costs of bringing up children by lone-parents and by couples. [8801]

Mr. Burt: There is no consistent evidence that the financial requirements of a lone-parent household in bringing up a child are different from those of a two-parent household, with the exception of a potentially greater need to pay for child care when the lone parent is in employment.

Seasonal Workers (Benefits)

14. Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to make the eligibility rules for income support and family credit for seasonal workers fully compatible. [8803]

Mr. Roger Evans: The eligibility rules for seasonal workers in income support and family credit are compatible with the aims of the respective benefits. Where possible, the eligibility rules for these benefits are aligned.

Housing Benefit

15. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received on the subject of the recent changes to the system of payment of housing benefit; and if he will make a statement. [8804]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have received a number of representations regarding the changes which came into effect on 2 January. They were the subject of consultation with local authority associations and the Social Security Advisory Committee last year. The outcome of the SSAC consultations was published in Cm 2902 in July 1995.

22. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had following the announcement of the change to housing benefit rules. [8812]

Mr. Evans: There have been a number of representations to the Secretary of State on these changes. However, the proposals are still subject to consultation with local authority associations and the Social Security Advisory Committee. The committee's report will be published in March and my response to it will be published in a Command Paper later this year.

25. Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the estimated cost of young people leaving local authority care who will require shared accommodation as a result of changes in housing benefit for the under 25-year-olds; and if he will make a statement. [8816]

Mr. Evans: No separate estimate has been made. Under the proposed changes, young people who have been in the care of local authorities are to be treated no differently from other young people living independently.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total cost of housing benefit paid to homeless families living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation in the last year for which figures are available. [9260]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. It is estimated that the cost of housing benefit paid to homeless families housed by local authorities as boarders, in 1994–95, was approximately £9 million.

Notes:

1. Homeless is defined as those families accepted as homeless by the local authority and placed in accommodation by the local authority and paying rent to the local authority.

2. Families are defined as single people or couples with children.

3. Bed-and-breakfast accommodation is not directly identified by departmental statistics; the estimate relates to those counted as boarders—i.e. rent includes an amount for meals.

Source:

The annual 1 per cent. sample of housing benefit cases.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in respect of each of the constituent nations of the United Kingdom and for the United Kingdom as a whole his estimate of the total cost to local authorities of administering the new rules on housing benefit introduced in January 1995; and if he will make a statement. [8782]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the table and relates to Great Britain only. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland is responsible for the administration of housing benefit in Northern Ireland.

Estimate of local authorities' administration costs for 1995–96 arising from housing benefit changes introduced January 1996

|---|---|
| England | 6.00 |
| Wales | 0.25 |
| Scotland | 0.75 |
| Total GB | 7.01 |

1. Totals include first year set up costs.
2. Individual figures do not sum because of rounding.

Benefit Payment Card

16. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to introduce a benefit payment card. [8805]

Mr. Heald: We intend to start phasing in the replacement of order books and girocheques with benefit payment cards in the autumn.

Benefit System Reform

17. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from political parties over the past three months concerning reforms of the benefit system. [8806]

Mr. Lilley: Opposition parties have criticised all the reforms of the social security system which I have announced over the last three months, as they have opposed all my previous reforms, which will save more than £5 billion by the end of the century and more than £15 billion in the longer term.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what effect he estimates his social security reforms will have had on public spending by the year 2050 in 1994–95 prices. [9472]

Mr. Burt: The major reforms announced in the last three years are expected to reduce public spending by about £15 billion per year in the longer term. It is estimated that this long-run figure will be reached by around 2030.

Fraud

18. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is assessing to combat fraud; and if he will make a statement. [8807]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Member to the oral answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam (Lady Olga Maitland).

Child Support Agency

19. Mr. Win Griffiths : To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases are being dealt with by the CSA. [8808]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The Child Support Agency is currently working on 833,000 cases.

21. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to review the current operation of the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [8811]

Mr. Mitchell: The performance of the Child Support Agency is continually reviewed against agreed targets.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the co-operation of the Child Support Agency with the parliamentary commissioner in his investigation into the working of the agency. [9541]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. William O'Brien, dated 22 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency co-operation with the Parliamentary Commissioner.

All Agencies of the Department of Social Security (DSS) liaise with the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration (PCA) through the Department's DSS PCA Focal Point. The Child Support Agency has a dedicated PCA Unit which deals with all complaints and correspondence with the PCA. This PCA Unit works closely with colleagues at the DSS PCA Focal Point.

In addition to the PCA Select Committee's strict and short deadlines for Departments to respond to new complaints referred by the PCA, the DSS is the only Department to have additional agreed deadlines with the PCA for the other stages of his investigation process. Since its inception the Child Support Agency has met all the deadlines on all the cases referred to it.

The Agency (and the Department) has a very clear policy in its dealings with the PCA: if mistakes have been made, this is explained clearly and objectively to the PCA and appropriate apologies given.

The PCA has previously commented to the PCA Select Committee that he has very good liaison with the DSS and singled out the work of the Department, through the offices of the Focal Point, for their excellent work.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 11 January, Official Report, column 324, on computer services, on what basis the Child Support Agency's operational accounting system records the amount of down time; what factors led him to give information for only 17 weeks; what has been the amount of down time up to the present for each week since 7 June 1994; and what procedures were in place to carry out the tasks carried out by the operational accounting system before 7 June 1994. [10357]

Mr. Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 11 January 1995, Official Report, column 324.

Service availability of the Child Support Agency's operational accounting system is recorded and reported on a weekly basis.

Information was given for the whole of the period since the system went live. The answer states that there has been 100 per cent. availability except for the 17 weeks tabulated. The table shows the availability in those 17 weeks.

Before 7 June 1994, the CSA obtained management information either clerically, or by special scans of the child support computer system database.

Funded Pension Schemes

20. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the aggregate level of funded pension schemes in the United Kingdom; and what is the level in other EU countries. [8809]

Mr. Heald: In 1993, the total value of funds in funded pension schemes in the United Kingdom was nearly £600 billion. This is substantially more than the latest estimate of £480 billion for all the other countries in the European Union.

Income Support

23. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current cost of income support. [8813]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated cost of income support is £16 billion for the current year.

State Pension

24. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration he has given to relating the state pension to the inflation rate and average earnings. [8814]

Mr. Heald: I have no plans to change the current legislation, which provides for the annual uprating of the state pension in line with the rise in prices.

Pensions (Rebate Contributions)

26. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the percentage of people who bought appropriate pensions in 1987–88 who have made full rebate contributions in each subsequent year. [8817]

Mr. Heald: Nearly half the people who started an appropriate personal pension with effect from 1987–88 have received a rebate of contributions in each year up to 1992–93, the latest year for which figures are available. Approximately 80 per cent. of those people who took out an appropriate personal pension with effect from 1987–88 and who still held it in 1992–93 received rebates for at least four of the six years involved.

Benefit Costs

27. Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost of all social security benefits paid out in 1978–79; what is the estimated outturn this financial year; and what is the relationship between these figures after allowing for inflation. [8818]

Mr. Lilley: Spending this year is estimated to be £87.1 billion compared to £49.2 billion in 1978–79, in today's prices. This represents average real growth of 3 per cent. a year over the period.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each week since 1 December 1995, for each Benefits Agency area, (a) the average minimum daily temperature, (b) if cold weather payments were triggered and (c) how many people received payments. [9623]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 18 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list, for each week since 1st December 1995, for each Benefit Agency (BA) area, (a) the average minimum daily temperature, (b) if Cold Weather Payments (CWPs) were triggered and (c) how many people received payments.

Data relating to average minimum daily temperature is collected by weather stations. A weather station covers a geographical area within which there can be several BA Districts. Information on temperatures for each BA area is not available.

Statistics on the number of CWPs made for each month is placed in the House of Commons Library. The data for December 1995 will be available by 26 January 1996.

Information on the areas triggered is provided at Annex A and copies will be placed in the Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful

Claimants (Peterlee and Seaham)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many single parents are currently claiming benefits in the areas covered by the Peterlee and Seaham benefit offices; [9502]

(2) how many people in the areas covered by the Seaham and Peterlee offices are in receipt of (a) state retirement pension, (b) incapacity benefit (c) income support, (d) family credit and (e) disability living allowance, broken down into its various components. [9500]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Cummings, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many single parents are currently claiming benefits and how many people are in receipt of (a) State Retirement Pension (RP), (b) Incapacity Benefit (IB), (c) Income Support (IS), (d) Family Credit (FC) and (e) Disability Living Allowance (DLA), broken down into its various components, in the areas covered by the Peterlee and Seaham benefit offices.

The information requested is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is shown at Annexe A. The number of people claiming IS and DLA for Peterlee and Seaham could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

The North Durham District includes the areas of Durham, Chester-le-street, Peterlee, Seaham and Stanley. The number of single parents currently in receipt of IS in the North Durham District is 6,258. Details of claims from single parents to other benefits is not available. The total number of people receiving IS in the District is 39,116, at November 1995.

I hope you find this reply helpful

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Benefits Agency will begin its exercise to identify and review cases where retirement allowance is mistakenly being paid in place of reduced earnings allowance; how long he expects this review to last; how many cases, approximately, he expects to be involved; and how quickly any arrears will be paid to claimants. [8952]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of retirement allowance, payable under the industrial injuries scheme, is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Chris Smith, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when the Benefits Agency will begin its exercise to identify and review cases where Retirement Allowance (RA) is mistakenly being paid in place of Reduced Earnings Allowance (REA); how long he expects this review to last; how many cases, approximately, he expects to be involved; and how quickly any arrears will be paid to claimants.

The Benefits Agency is currently trawling all their Industrial Injuries Benefit cases, approximately 4 million, to identify all RA and REA customers who have attained pension age since April 1989 when RA was introduced. The trawl which started in December 1995 is due to be finished by the end of February 1996. Once amending legislation is in place all identified cases will then be examined and where necessary referred to independent Adjudication Officers who will review the benefit entitlement.

The review exercise will be undertaken as soon as possible. Approximately 8,500 RA and 19,000 REA cases will need to be re-examined. It is not possible to say, at this stage, when this exercise will be completed but the situation will be closely monitored.

Arrears of benefit will be paid to each customer whose case is favourably reviewed as soon as the mandatory overlapping benefit enquiries have been undertaken.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress of the updating of the "Incapacity Benefit: Medical Advisers Guide" to incapacity benefit. [9540]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. William O'Brien, dated 22 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will make a statement on the progress of the updating of the Incapacity Benefit: Medical Advisors Guide to Incapacity Benefit.

The Medical Advisers' Guide to Incapacity Benefit is currently being brought up to date. A revised version will be available from April 1996.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Pension Contributions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) the total number of the work force who are currently members of (i) State earnings-related pension scheme, (ii) company pension schemes and (iii) personal pension schemes, (b) the average percentage of the wage or salary being paid into each scheme and (c) the average length of time in years for which these contributions have been made. [7591]

Mr. Heald: The following are the latest figures available for the numbers of individuals falling into each category at some time during the year in question, with one exception—see footnote 2. In certain cases some people may, in the course of a year, be in more than one type of scheme and so the numbers in separate schemes cannot be sensibly totalled. Nor can they be compared to numbers in employment or the work force, measured at a single point in time. This is because more people will work at some time during the year than will be working at any single point in time.

The cumulative number of people who paid some class 1 national insurance contributions at the not-contracted-out rate over the year 1992–93 was 9.1 million. Of those, the number whose earnings factor was equal to or above the annual lower earnings limit is 6.5 million[1]; these will accrue entitlement to additional pension as will a number of people whose earnings factor was just below the LEL, provided they reach state pension age before April 2000.

Individuals reaching state pension age from April 1999 onwards may also receive an enhancement to their entitlement to additional pension in respect of periods of caring responsibilities and incapacity since 1978.

In 1991, 10.7 million people were members of occupational pension schemes[2]. This figure includes members of both contracted-in and contracted-out schemes.

In 1992–93, the latest year for which all the relevant data is available, 5.7 million employees were members of appropriate personal pension schemes[3] and 600,000 self-employed people held non-appropriate personal pensions[4]. There were also 1.1 million self-employed holders of retirement annuity contracts[4]. In addition, 2.5 million non-appropriate personal pension arrangements[5] were held by employees, some of whom may also have held an appropriate personal pension or a number of non-appropriate arrangements.

Information relating to the average percentage of the wage or salary paid into each type of scheme and the length of time for which contributions have been made is not available.

1. Source 1 per cent. sample from the National Insurance Recording System.
2. Source: GAD 1991 survey of occupational pension schemes which records membership at points in time rather than cumulatively over a year.
3. Source: 1 per cent. sample from the national insurance recording system.
4. Source: Inland Revenue survey of personal incomes.
5. Source: Inland Revenue tax returns from all providers.

In certain cases some people may, in the course of a year, be in one or more types of schemes and so the numbers in separate schemes cannot be sensibly totalled.

Mental Illness

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 795, on sick days related to mental illness, if he will estimate the value of benefits in each year since 1979. [7789]

Mr. Burt: The information requested is not available.

Voluntary and Charitable Payments

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the increase from £10 to £20 in the disregard for voluntary and charitable payments. [8503]

Mr. Roger Evans: The increase in the disregard on charitable and voluntary payments is likely to be achieved at negligible cost.

Child Support Appeal Tribunals

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action his Department is taking to improve the average clearance time at child support appeal tribunals. [9103]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: In conjunction with the independent tribunal service, we are continually looking for ways to improve the clearance time on appeals. For example, the Child Support Agency has set up a central unit to deal with appeals which in the second half of 1995 processed twice as many appeals as in the first half.

Pensioners (Consumer Durables)

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of the lowest income quintile of pensioner households had access to a (a) fridge or fridge/freezer, (b) car or van, (c) freezer or fridge/freezer, (d) telephone and (e) television in (i) 1975 and (ii) 1995. [10206]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Estimated percentages of pensioner benefit units in the bottom quintile of the income distribution possessing various durable goods

[1] This figure is for 1992 as the data is not available from the Pensioners' Incomes Series 1993.

1. A pensioner benefit unit is defined as a single person over state pension age or a couple where the husband, or head, is over state pension age.
2. The earliest date for which information is available is 1979.
3. The latest date for which information is available is 1993.
4. The information is based on pensioner benefit units rather than pensioner households.

War Pensions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the representations his Department received during 1995 from individual war pensioners, their associations, charities, local authorities and other politicians on the issue of disregard of war pensions by local authorities. [9973]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. In 1995, this Department received a number of such representations. From the information that is available, this included some 60 letters from hon. Members and some 144 letters from members of the public, local authorities and other interested parties.

Pensioners (Income Support)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners claiming income support in 2025 and 2035, assuming that the income support level remains at its current proportion of average earnings; [10511]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in 2025 and 2035 who will have a state earnings-related pension scheme entitlement or other second-tier pension entitlement which, in combination with their basic pension entitlement, will leave them with an income below current income support levels, assuming that the basic state pension and the level of income support remain constant in real terms; [10513]

(3) what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners claiming income support in 2025 and 2035, assuming that income support levels remain constant in real terms; [10510]

(4) what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners in 2025 and 2035 who will have a state earnings-related pension scheme entitlement or other second-tier pension entitlement of under £20 in 1996 prices; [10512]

(5) what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners claiming income support over the period of the Government Actuary's quinquennial review of the national insurance fund; and what assumptions he has used to make this estimate. [10514]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. However, some information is now available from the departmental pensioner incomes simulation model, which projects changes in pensioner incomes to the year 2025. The results from the model are heavily dependent on the economic and behavioural assumptions used, and should be treated as a broad indication of the likely order of magnitude of any figures given, and should in addition be rounded heavily[1]. Details of the methodology and assumptions used in the model, and a brief overview of basic results, will appear in a technical paper released in the coming months.

In 2025, assuming that basic state pension and the level of income support remain constant in real terms at 1994 prices, PENSIM projects that approximately 1.5 million pensioner benefit units[2] will have a SERPS pension entitlement or other second-tier pension entitlement which, in combination with their basic pension entitlement, will leave them with a pension income below income support levels.

However, due to income from other source, such as earnings and investment income, and other income support rules, such as capital limits, PENSIM estimates that in 2025 there will be approximately 0.5 million pensioner benefit units in receipt of income support. In 2010 PENSIM estimates there will be approximately 1 million pensioner benefit units in receipt of income support, assuming that income support levels remain constant in real terms.

If income support levels had been uprated to remain at the same proportion of average earnings as in 1994, PENSIM projects that in 2025 there would be approximately 1.5 million pensioner benefit units in receipt of income support.

PENSIM can be used to estimate relative changes over time but cannot produce robust estimates of absolute values. It cannot therefore be used to estimate the number of pensioners in 2025 who will have a SERPS pension entitlement or other second-tier pension entitlement of under £20 in 1996 prices.

Notes

[1] All figures rounded to the nearest 500,000.

[2] Pensioner benefit unit is defined as a single pensioner over state pension age in 2025, or a couple with at least one partner over state pension age.

National Insurance Fund Subsidy

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the level of annual subsidy to the national insurance fund in each year since 1985 to (a) meet spending commitments and (b) compensate for those who have taken out private pension insurance. [10845]

Mr. Heald: The amounts paid to the national insurance fund for each year in the period from 1985–86 to 1994–95 are shown in the table. These payments are a general contribution to the fund and are not attributed to any particular aspect of its expenditure.

Payments into the national insurance fund[1] 1985–86 to 1994–95

| Year | Amount £ million |

State Earnings-related Pension Scheme

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total number of people in SERPS for each year since 1985 and for each year the number (a) entering, (b) leaving and (c) re-entering the scheme. [10846]

Mr. Heald: Information relating to the number of people in the state earnings-related pension scheme for each year since 1985–86 to 1992–93 is given in the table. Information relating to the number of people who entered, left, and re-entered SERPS is not currently available and I will write to the hon. Member with these details shortly.

| Year | Number of people (millions) |
|---|---|
| 1985–86 | 10.2 |
| 1986–87 | 10.4 |
| 1987–88 | 7.2 |
| 1988–89 | 7.6 |
| 1989–90 | 7.5 |
| 1990–91 | 7.5 |
| 1991–92 | 6.7 |
| 1992–93 | 6.5 |

1. Figures are for UK and rounded to nearest .1 million.
2. Figures for 1987–88 are provisional.
3. Figures for 1992–93 are not complete as some employers' tax returns may not yet have been input to the national insurance recording system.
4. Source: 1 per cent. trawl of NIRS.
5. Excludes appropriate personal pension holders.

The table gives the numbers of people who have a qualifying year for additional pension purposes by virtue of having paid some class 1 national insurance contributions at the not contracted-out rate during the year with relevant earnings greater than or equal to the lower earnings limit applicable to that year.

State Pension (Earnings Link)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of restoration of the link with earnings of the state pension from April 1996: and if he will make a statement. [10848]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that restoring the link with earnings in uprating retirement pension in 1996–97 would increase pension expenditure by £10.1 billion.

Habitual Residence Rule

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been denied benefits under the habitual residence rule; and what number were (a) British citizens and (b) foreign nationals. [9348]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 16 January 1996]: The information requested is set out in the table and covers the period August 1994 to November 1995. It relates only to income support; housing benefit figures will not be available until December 1996 at the earliest.

| | Fail |
|---|---|
| EEA nationals | 11,946 |
| British citizens | 7,489 |
| Others | 13,835 |
| Total | 33,270 |

The Benefits Agency has placed figures relating to the habitual residence test in the Library since April 1995.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 24 January 1996

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Small Claims Limit

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what advice he received on his proposal to raise the small claims limit in housing cases other than possession proceedings from £1,000 to £3,000 for representatives of consumers and the legal profession. [10261]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor received responses from representatives of housing advice groups, including the National Association of Citizens Advice Bureaux, the Law Centres Federation and Shelter, from consumer groups such as the National Consumer Council, from the legal professions, including the Law Society and the Housing Law Practitioners' Association, and from members of the judiciary.

PRIME MINISTER

Civil Servants (Opposition Contacts)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Prime Minister if he has now authorised confidential pre-election contacts between senior civil servants and Opposition spokesmen. [12001]

The Prime Minister: The Leader of the Opposition, the right hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair), has now asked me to authorise the conventional pre-election contacts between senior civil servants and Opposition spokesmen and I have done so. The purpose of these contacts is to allow Opposition spokesmen to inform themselves of factual questions of departmental organisation and to inform senior civil servants of any organisational changes stemming from Opposition policies in the event of a change of Government. Such meetings are confidential on both sides.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs; [10977]

(2) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private fiance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10976]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given yesterday by the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Executive Agencies

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action heads of his Department's executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses in the event of such agencies seeking to make economies; and if he will make a statement. [9148]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the chief executives of the National Resources Institute and Wilton Park executive agencies to reply to the hon. Member's question.

Letter from Richard Latter to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 15 January 1996:

Wilton Park arranges its pre-retirement courses for staff utilising the good offices of the FCO Training Department.

Letter from Anthony Beattie to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 19 January 1996:

In your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs you asked what action the heads of his executive agencies are taking to safeguard the provision of pre-retirement courses. It has been agreed that I should provide this information in respect of NRI.

Pre-retirement seminars organised by ODA are offered to NRI staff nearing retirement age. Provision of courses or seminars by a third party (as is presently being done for staff leaving NRI under a current severance/early retirement programme) would be arranged if ODA facilities were not available.

Chernobyl Explosion (Compensation)

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what approaches have been made to the Governments of the former Soviet Union, under the principles of the polluter pays, to seek compensation for the effects in the United Kingdom of the Chernobyl explosion. [11154]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Just after the 1986 nuclear disaster at Chernobyl, on 10 July 1986, we notified the Soviet Union that we were reserving the right to file claims for damage which had occurred in the United Kingdom.

However, we came to the conclusion that it was unrealistic to expect the Soviet Union to honour such claims.

It was not possible to base a claim for compensation against the Soviet Union on relevant international conventions, in particular the 1968 Vienna convention on civil liability for nuclear damage, as it was not a party to these conventions. The Soviet Union now no longer exists. The Russian Federation and Ukraine are considering accession to the 1968 Vienna convention. However, any such accession would not have retrospective effect.

We are participating in the work in progress internationally to achieve an enhanced global regime for nuclear liability. We expect that this issue will be discussed during the G7/G8 nuclear safety summit in Moscow in April.

Pakistan

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Pakistan in respect of the abuse of human rights in Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [10358]

Mr. Hanley: We regularly raise our concerns about humans rights issues with the Government of Pakistan and will continue to do so.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people have been killed in Karachi and Sindh in Pakistan in the past two years; and if he will make a statement. [10360]

Mr. Hanley: The figures we have from the Pakistani authorities for people killed in the last two years are:

| | 1994 | 1995 |
|---|---|---|
| Sindh (including Karachi) | 2,112 | 2,823 |
| Karachi | 919 | 1,847 |

We have consistently stressed the importance of respect for human rights and have urged all parties to refrain from violence and to negotiate a sustainable political settlement.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent arrest by the Pakistan security forces of the secretary-general of Human Rights International. [10361]

Mr. Hanley: Dr. Halepota, the secretary-general of Human Rights International, who is a dual British-Pakistani national, was detained by the Pakistani police on 28 November 1995. Under international law, we are not entitled to afford protection to a dual national in the country of his or her second nationality. However, on humanitarian grounds our high commission made informal representations to the Pakistani authorities. Dr. Halepota was deported to the UK on 5 January.

TREASURY

Tax Returns

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number and proportion of taxpayers aged 65 years or over who complete tax returns. [7648]

Mr. Jack: It is estimated that in 1995–96 there will be around 10 million people aged 65 or over, about 3 million of whom will pay income tax. It is estimated that around 750,000 or 7.5 per cent. of the total will complete tax returns.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consultations he has undertaken with the Plain English Society on the self-assessment tax forms currently being proposed; what has been the response; and if he will place a copy of all correspondence in the Library. [8319]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue has won several plain English awards for its forms over the years and has been in correspondence with the Plain English Campaign about obtaining a crystal mark accreditation for the new self-assessment tax return. It continues to consult extensively with prospective users about the wording of the return and has invited PEC to contribute to that consultative process.

It would not be appropriate for me to place copies of the correspondence on this in the House Library without the consent of the parties to it.

Incomes (Budget Effects)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) single persons, (b) married couples and (c) married couples with two children he estimates will benefit by £9 per week net following his Budget; and what considerations underlay his estimate that taxpayers would benefit by this sum. [9779]

Mr. Jack: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer made clear in his Budget statement, a married couple with two children and one earner on average earnings gain around £190 per year from the Budget tax changes, including the effect of changes to indirect tax. Taking higher earnings into account, the same family should be around £450 per year better off next year, after tax and inflation.

Sunday Trading

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total value of receipts from sales generated through Sunday trading (a) to retailers and (b) to the Treasury; and if he will make a statement. [10431]

Mr. Jack: No such estimates have been made. It would be extremely difficult to isolate the effects of Sunday trading from the many other factors that influence retail sales and tax revenues. However, it is clear that many people have welcomed the opportunity to shop on Sunday, and that retailers judge it worth their while to trade on Sundays.

Disabled People (VAT)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the Customs and Excise head office directive on the charging of VAT on computers and printers supplied to registered disabled people. [10918]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have placed in the Library a copy of the Customs notice, "VAT reliefs for people with disabilities," which is freely available in local VAT offices. Customs head office has not issued any general directive on the liability of computers and printers for disabled people.

Taxpayers (Lancashire)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number and percentage of standard rate and higher rate taxpayers in (a) Lancashire and (b) the United Kingdom for the most recent year for which figures are available. [10872]

Mr. Amory: The table provides estimates for 1993–94, the latest year for which information can be provided:

Basic and higher rate taxpayers 1993–94

| | Taxpayers liable at basic rate but not higher rate | | Taxpayer liable at higher rate | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Thousands | Percentage[1] | Thousands | Percentage[1] |
| Lancashire | 413 | 73.0 | 25 | 4.5 |
| United Kingdom[2] | 18,090 | 72.3 | 1,740 | 7.0 |

[1] Of total number of taxpayers, including those liable only to the lower rate of tax.
[2] Includes members of HM forces, the Merchant Navy, civil servants serving overseas and non-residents liable to UK tax who cannot be allocated to regions.

Income Tax (Relief and Allowances)

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many taxpayers there are with income tax reliefs and allowances in excess of (a) £7,000, (b) £8,000, (c) £9,000, (d) £10,000, (e) £11,000 and (f) £12,000 (i) including and (ii) excluding profit-related pay. [11191]

Mr. Jack: Available information was given in my reply to the hon. Member for York (Mr. Bayley) on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 83.

Tax Yields

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage of taxation taken as (a) income tax, (b) corporation tax, (c) capital gains tax, (d) VAT and (e) other taxes in 1979–80, 1985–86 and 1995–96. [11125]

Mr. Jack: The table gives the requested figures. The figures for 1995–96 are Budget forecasts.

Income tax, corporation tax, capital gains tax, VAT and other taxes as a percentage of total taxes and NICs[1]

| Year | Income tax | Corporation tax | Capital gains tax | VAT | Other taxes[2] |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1979–80 | 28¾ | 6¾ | ½ | 11½ | 52¼ |
| 1985–86 | 24¼ | 7 | ½ | 13¾ | 54½ |
| 1995–96 | 27 | 9¾ | ¼ | 16½ | 45¼ |

[1] Total taxes and NICS includes council tax for 1995–96 for consistency with earlier years.
[2] Other taxes include excise duties, stamp duty, council tax and NICs.
Totals may not sum to 100 due to rounding.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10073]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Treasury's policy continues to be not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10061]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

National Helpline

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the national Customs, Inland Revenue and Contributions Agency helpline will be launched; when and where he made announcements about the launch; what will be the start-up costs and running costs; if all the required new technology needed is in place; and what pilot studies have been undertaken indicating (a) the period covered, (b) the cost, (c) the numbers using the helpline and (d) if his Department has evaluated the results. [10535]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Our proposals for a national telephone helpline to give advice to employers on PAYE and national insurance contributions issues and to VAT traders were announced by the Deputy Prime Minister at a press conference on 19 September. The conference was held in response to the first report of the deregulation task force, chaired by the right hon. Francis Maude, and coincided with a joint press release from the Inland Revenue, Customs and Excise, the Department of Social Security and the Contributions Agency which gave more detail on the helpline. This confirmed that a helpline would be piloted in Scotland from October 1995, with the aim of extending it to cover the whole country in October 1996. A press conference hosted by officials from Inland Revenue, Customs and Excise and the CA was also held in Glasgow on the same day to give more details on the pilot.

The pilot has been running successfully since 2 October and is being closely monitored by all three Departments. The helpline has attracted more than 12,500 calls; the final cost of the pilot will be dependent on the volume of calls received over the year. The final scope and design of the national helpline is not yet settled; decisions will be made in the light of the pilot which, as well as testing systems, is also taking soundings from businesses on how helpful they are finding the service. The final costs and technological requirements will depend on the design chosen.

Environmental Appraisal

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what alternative courses of action from those detailed in the White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money" were considered in the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [10608]

(2) if the White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money" has been subject to an environmental appraisal using the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", produced by the Department of the Environment; and if he will publish the appraisal; [10607]

(3) how the White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money" was modified by the results of the environmental appraisal undertaken by his Department; [10609]

(4) what procedures have been put in place by his Department to monitor the environmental impacts arising from the implementation of the White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money". [10610]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The White Paper, "Better Accounting for the Taxpayer's Money", was not subject to an environmental appraisal. There are no plans to monitor the environmental impact.

Duty-free Sales (Eurostar)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take the legislative steps necessary to allow duty-free sales to Eurostar passengers at (a) Waterloo station, (b) Ashford station and (c) on board trains; and if he will make a statement. [11518]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 23 January 1996]: No. International convention precludes the sale of duty-free goods on international rail journeys both on trains and at stations. The United Kingdom, and our European Union partners, have accepted recommendations of the Customs Co-operation Council to that effect. There are, for example, no duty-free sales for trains travelling between Dublin and Belfast, or between Paris and Bonn.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Fatal Accident, Yorkshire

Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General if he will review the Crown Prosecution Service decision in respect of prosecution of the operator of the truck with defective brakes which killed six people at Sowerby bridge in Yorkshire. [11093]

The Attorney-General: On 1 December 1995, the divisional court refused an application for judicial review of the decision of the Crown Prosecution Service not to prosecute any individual or company for manslaughter arising out of the accident at Sowerby bridge. In doing so, the court commented on the evidence. Once the transcript of the judgment is received a decision can be made on what further action, if any, should be taken.

British Bus (Fraud Investigation)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General if British Bus is the subject of a Serious Fraud Office investigation. [10936]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office is investigating possible offences relating to the conduct of certain directors of British Bus.

ENVIRONMENT

Construction Industry

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received as to employment prospects in the construction industry in 1996. [10276]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I regularly meet senior representatives of the construction industry to discuss a range of issues including their concerns about workload and employment prospects. My Department prepares jointly with the industry a twice yearly "State of the Industry" report which is next due for publication on 29 February.

Pollution (Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to reduce pollution in the Greater Manchester area. [10301]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have put in place a number of mechanisms to control pollution which apply throughout the country. The Environment Act 1990 introduced two systems for controlling polluting emissions from industry: integrated pollution control, which limits emissions to all environmental media from large installations; and local authority air pollution control, covering emissions to air from small and medium enterprises. Both these systems apply best available techniques not entailing excessive cost, and authorisations are reviewed periodically. The main control on air pollution from domestic sources is the smoke control areas system, introduced in the Clean Air Act 1956. Emissions from the transport sector are mainly controlled through European Community legislation, and we shall be negotiating new vehicle emission and fuel quality standards for the year 2000 and beyond in the Council of Ministers this year.

The Environment Act 1995 introduced a duty on local authorities to assess and review air quality in their areas, and to establish local air quality management areas where standards or objectives are being or are likely to be breached. In such areas, authorities must draw up action plans to help bring ambient pollution down to acceptable levels. The Government are currently developing guidance for local authorities to help them discharge those duties.

As regards water quality, in 1994, for the north-west as a whole, 84 per cent. of river and canal length was classed as good or fair compared to 74 per cent. in 1990. More specifically, the Government have sponsored the Mersey basin campaign, a major initiative to clean up the rivers, canals and estuary of the Mersey basin. Increasingly stringent controls have been applied to both direct industrial and sewage discharges and the pollution load in rivers flowing into the estuary has been reduced by 80 per cent. over the last 25 years.

House Building (Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the house building industry in the Greater Manchester area. [10300]

Mr. Clappison: The value of new orders for house building in the Greater Manchester area in 1994, the last complete year for which statistics are available, was £61 million local authority and housing association and £250 million private. This compares with £24 million and £100 million respectively in the first half of 1995.

The value of new orders for private housing in Great Britain in the three months to November 1995 was 1 per cent. higher than in the previous quarter. The Government welcome this small improvement and continue to promote economic policies based on low inflation, sustainable growth and sound public finances which will encourage a return of consumer confidence and help ensure the long-term health of the housing market. The affordability of housing for purchase is excellent, with mortgage rates at their lowest for 30 years.

Service Charges

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to monitor the value for money of service charges in the public and private sectors; and if he will make a statement. [10297]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have no plans to monitor the value for money of service charges in the private sector. We have, however, received many representations on the subject and I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment to my hon. Friend the Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) on 18 January 1996, Official Report, column 668.

The Department commissioned research into council leaseholders' service charges in 1994 and the findings have been published. This included information about the level of service charges and the attitude of leaseholders to them. We are considering further research.

Metropolitan District Employees

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many full-time equivalent employees there are (a) in total and (b) per head of population in the service of each metropolitan district. [10430]

Mr. Curry: The available information is as follows. The levels of employment in individual authorities are not directly comparable because of variations in, for example, population structure and social characteristics, the extent of the use of private firms and contractors and the level of work undertaken for other authorities and public bodies on an agency basis.

| | Staff at June 1995 | |
|---|---|---|
| | Whole-time equivalents | Staff per thousand population |
| Barnsley | 8,056 | 35.6 |
| Birmingham | 35,755 | 35.5 |
| Bolton | 9,335 | 35.2 |

Aquifers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many aquifers currently supplying wholesome water have been sterilised following industrial or agricultural pollution or as a result of a traffic or railway accident in the last 30 years. [10633]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not held centrally. However, relevant National Rivers Authority monitoring data are recorded on public registers in each of the authority's regions.

Disabled People (Access)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation he has recommended (a) Government Departments and (b) local authorities to carry out with organisations representing disabled people regarding (i) the construction of access for disabled people to new buildings and (ii) making access easier for disabled people to older buildings. [10527]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Users and owners of buildings, including Government Departments, normally seek to make them accessible in accordance with recognised standards and guidelines, produced in consultation with organisations representing disabled people. Formal guidance is given in the approved document supporting part M of the Building Regulations 1991 and in the British Standards Institution's code of practice for access for the disabled to buildings, BS 5810, both of which were subject to consultation.

Following Department of the Environment circular 10/82, general advice on access issues is also available from local authorities, many of whom have appointed access officers specifically for the purpose. They liaise with access groups representing local disabled people.

Regulations and guidance on implementation of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, including access to existing buildings, will be subject to consultation with organisations representing disabled people by the Departments responsible for implementing the various parts of the Act.

Negative Equity

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the total value of negative equity in homes in (a) England and (b) the north-west in each year since 1992 at current prices. [10871]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of negative equity are sensitive to the underlying assumptions made, such as changes in house prices. Using the Department's house price index, adjusted for the mix of different dwelling types, it is estimated that the total value of negative equity in homes in (a) England and (b) the north-west in each year since 1992 at current (1995) prices is as follows:

| | 1992 | 1993 | 1994 |
|---|---|---|---|
| (a) England | 4,893 | 5,230 | 3,116 |
| (b) North-West | 2 | 29 | 5 |

Estimates for 1995 are not yet available.

These estimates provide only a very broad idea of the value of negative equity. The suitability of the assumptions used in compiling estimates of negative equity is currently under review.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households are currently in negative equity in each London borough. [10885]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of negative equity are not available for individual London boroughs.

Housing Costs

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average household rent in (a) privately rented, (b) council and (c) housing association dwellings in each London borough. [10889]

Mr. Clappison: The average weekly local authority and housing association rents in London boroughs in March 1994, the latest date for which figures for individual London boroughs are available for both local authorities and housing associations, were as follows:

£ per week

| | Local authority | Housing association |

| Barnet | 48.66 | 42.34 |

| Westminster | 59.65 | 42.18 |

The average rent figures are not directly comparable as they take no account of differences in the composition of stock, eg. size and type of dwellings, their age and condition.

Figure for average private sector rents are available only from sample surveys which are not large enough to produce reliable figures for individual local authorities. The average weekly private sector rent in London in 1993–94, from the survey of English housing was £89; this figure, which covers all types of tenancy, is subject to sampling variability.

Mrs. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is (a) the average mortgage level and (b) the number of households with mortgages in each London borough. [10887]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates from the survey of English housing indicate that in London as a whole the average mortgage payment was £330 a month in 1994–95 and that just over 1 million households were buying with a mortgage. These estimates are subject to sampling variability. Estimates are not available for individual boroughs.

Repossession

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many repossessions there were in each London borough in each year since 1992. [10886]

Mr. Clappison: Data are not held centrally on the number of repossessions in each London borough.

Producer Responsibility Group on Packaging

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who are the current members of the producer responsibility group on packaging. [11180]

Mr. Clappison: The producer responsibility group presented its final report to Government in November 1994 and subsequently disbanded. At present, many businesses in the packaging industry are members of the Valpak working representative advisory committee—V-WRAG. Industry has also proposed that a committee be set up to advise the Secretary of State on the drafting and implementation of the regulations on producer responsibility for packaging, and on arrangements for carrying out review of the legal obligation. The Government intend to make an announcement on this shortly.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sums remain to be distributed by the London residuary body to the London boroughs; and what residual rights and liabilities remain to be transferred. [10164]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 22 January 1996]: I understand that the London residuary body intends to distribute in early March some £6.2 million in revenue balances to the London boroughs and to the City of London. We are currently consulting the London boroughs on proposals to wind up the residuary body by 31 March 1996, to transfer responsibility for producing the LRB's final report and accounts to the royal borough of Kensington and Chelsea, and to transfer all other remaining rights and liabilities to the London borough of Bromley as lead borough. Under these proposals, which would be effected by order, Bromley would be responsible for distributing among the London boroughs and the City any sums received by it as lead borough.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the emoluments paid to each board member of the London residuary body in the year 1995–96 to date; and what plans there are to scale them down. [10158]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Between 1 April and 30 September 1995 the chairman of the London residuary body was paid £7,908 and the three other board members were each paid £4,775. The board was reappointed on 1 October and thereafter remuneration has been paid on the basis of one day a month at a rate of £370 per day for the chairman and £225 per day for each board member.

Rather than scaling down expenditures, we are consulting the London boroughs on proposals to wind up the residuary body by 31 March 1996.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10069]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 22 January 1996]: My Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. Officials are required to draw Ministers' attention to any elements of proposed regulations which go further than the EC directive concerned strictly requires, and I am exploring ways of ensuring that implementing regulations clearly explain which elements derive from the directive and, where relevant, why additional elements have been included. The presumption is always against any addition. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10051]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Official guidance on gold-plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments. In addition, the Health and Safety Executive has already issued an instruction to its staff that other options should always be considered before the possibility of new regulations or approved codes of practice are considered, and that where such regulations or codes are proposed to Ministers they should be accompanied by a memorandum explaining any points where the requirements go beyond any EC directive. A copy of instruction, "General Administrative Procedures (GAP) No. 8—A Short Guide to Regulating in HSE", is being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of local authorities run their housing rent accounts on a surplus; and if he will list those authorities. [10506]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 23 January 1996]: Based on returns submitted to the Department, local authorities' housing revenue account opening balances for 1994–95 totalled £745 million. Their end-year balances totalled £756 million; 46 per cent. of authorities increased their balances during the year. Those authorities are as follows:

Housing Allocations

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he plans to use the regulation-making powers on housing allocations contained in part VI of the Housing Bill. [12185]

Mr. Curry: I have placed in the Library of the House today a copy of a consultation paper that invites views on the content of regulations about the allocation of housing accommodation by local authorities. The Government are committed to ensuring that social housing goes to those households with the greatest underlying needs, and the paper seeks views on ways to achieve this. It is proposed that the regulations should provide a framework within which each local authority would establish the allocation policy best suited to local needs.

HEALTH

Health Service Employees

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines he has issued to health authorities or NHS hospital trusts regarding priority treatment to (a) key and (b) other NHS employees. [10255]

Mr. Malone: Decisions on treatment must be based on clinical need. Guidance was issued to the national health service in June 1991 in executive letter EL(91)84, "Joint Guidance (NHSME/JCC) to hospital consultants on GP Fundholding", and EL(94)19, "Clinical Priority on Waiting Lists", copies of which are available in the Library, underlining the principle.

Electric Wheelchairs

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the number of new electrically-powered wheelchairs supplied by the national health service in the Greater Manchester area over the past three years. [11033]

Mr. Bowis: The number of powered wheelchairs issued in the Greater Manchester area in each of the last three years is shown in the table. South Manchester health authority and South Manchester University Hospitals trust are the only Manchester authorities which have issued powered wheelchairs.

| | | Number |
|---|---|---|
| 1992–93 | South Manchester DHA | 467 |
| 1993–94 | South Manchester DHA | 551 |
| 1994–95 | South Manchester University Hospitals | 484 |

Nurse Training, Manchester

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was allocated to the training of nurses in the Greater Manchester area for the last year for which figures are available. [11034]

Mr. Horam: Manchester college of midwifery and nursing and the Northern college of nursing, midwifery and health studies are the major establishments training nurses in the Greater Manchester area. The table shows the contracts for the financial year 1995–96 that North-West regional health authority has with these two colleges.

| College | Column 1 £ | Column 2 £ | Column 3 £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| Manchester | 7,894,967 | 1,780,789 | 4,200,000 |
| Northern | 7,182,052 | 1,497,164 | 3,777,629 |
| Total | 15,077,019 | 3,277,953 | 7,977,629 |

Manchester: Manchester college of midwifery and nursing.
Northern: Northern college of nursing, midwifery and health studies.
The figures in column 1 include the costs relating to:
(i) all Project 2000 and midwifery first registration training;
(ii) some traditional RGN training;
(iii) some second registration nursing programmes and all second registration midwifery;
(iv) some post basic programmes including the higher award.
Column 2 relates to payments to trusts, teacher development, redundancy provision etc.
Column 3 relates to student bursaries.

Mental Illness

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 December 1995, Official Report, column 383, to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) on mental illness, if he will provide a regional breakdown of the figures. [11094]

Mr. Bowis: Regional information on the number of beds and on finished consultant episodes is contained in "Bed availability for England" and in "Ordinary and day case admissions for England", respectively, copies of which are available in the Library.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the cost to Dorset social services of implementation of the care programme approach for the mentally ill in the next year; and what support it will receive from Government funding. [10737]

Mr. Bowis: The care programme approach is a key element in the delivery of local mental health services. Local agencies should collaborate to ensure its implementation. In the year 1996–97, Dorset social services will receive £93.8 million for personal social services. It will also receive an allocation of mental illness specific grant, from which this year it has received £589,000.

Anti-malaria Treatment

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received on adverse side effects arising from the new anti-malaria treatment Lariam, also known as Mefloquine; and if he will make a statement. [10664]

Mr. Horam: From 1990, when Lariam was marketed in the United Kingdom, to 19 January 1996, the Medicines Control Agency has received 605 reports of 1,561 reactions. However, the receipt of a report of a reaction does not necessarily mean that it has been caused by Lariam.

Mental Health Services

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total budget of each health authority, indicating the percentage devoted to mental health services. [10740]

Mr. Horam: For details of the planned 1996–97 initial cash limits for the new health authorities, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 19 December at column 1138. It is for health authorities to purchase health care for their resident population, taking account of local circumstances and characteristics and within the framework of national policies and priorities.

Private Health Insurance

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of (a) people and (b) retired people taking out private health insurance in each of the last five years. [10750]

Mr. Horam: The available information is shown in the table. Separate information on retired people is not available.

Meningitis

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to produce an educational video to be made available for general practitioners and school teachers to aid the early detection of meningitis. [10890]

Mr. Horam: The Department, working with the National Meningitis Trust, has produced an information leaflet about meningitis for parents and for young people entering further education. Copies of the leaflet are available through general practitioners surgeries and have been distributed through the college bags which are given to all new students. It is most unlikely that children who are ill with meningitis would be sent to school.

The National Meningitis Trust produced an information video, together with an information pack, in 1989; this pack was sent free of charge to every health education unit and public health department in the United Kingdom.

GP Budgets

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if (a) family health services authorities and (b) health authorities are able to provide information to hon. and right hon. Members on (i) drug budgets by named general practitioner practices, (ii) staff budgets by named general practitioner practices, (iii) development budgets by named general practitioner practices, (iv) computer reimbursement by named general practitioner practices and (v) the amount of funding holding savings; and what they have been spent on by named general practitioner fundholding practice. [10746]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for family health services authorities.

Hospital Readmissions, Manchester

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in the Greater Manchester area were readmitted to hospital within one month of their discharge in the last three years. [11035]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Finance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide an analysis of final allowed external finance limits compared with actual external finance limits outturn for each NHS trust for each year since 1991–92; [10932]

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authority planned 1996–97 initial revenue cash limits per head of population by health authority. [10920]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library.

Hepatitis

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the types of hepatitis that can be transmitted in blood for which the Blood Transfusion Service (a) tests and (b) does not test. [10753]

Mr. Horam: The National Blood Service tests donated blood for hepatitis B and C before use. New strains of hepatitis are identified from time to time. An expert advisory committee advises Ministers on whether suitable tests for these are available and should be introduced.

Doctors (Alcohol)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department issues on the amount of alcohol doctors can drink while on duty. [10743]

Mr. Malone: None.

Cancer Patients

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of terminally ill patients with cancer in acute hospital beds. [10763]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

"NHS Magazine"

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS management executive has spent so far on producing the "NHS Magazine"; and how many copies have been produced and distributed. [11105]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 15 January 1996, Official Report, at columns 344-45 for information on production costs/gross revenues.

Information on the number of magazines produced and distributed is as follows:

Issue 1: 30,000

Issue 2: 35,000

Issue 3: 35,000

Health Information Services

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 227, if he will set out the differences between NHS guideline HSG(95)44 and guideline HSG(92)21. [11144]

Mr. Horam: The revised health service guidance, HSG(95)55, devolves responsibility for ensuring the provision of the freephone health information service to the new health authorities with effect from 1 April 1996. This is because of the abolition of regional health authorities, who are currently responsible for the provision of the service.

In addition, the guidance sets out a revised core mandatory service specification and performance indicators for the service.

Copies of HSG(95)44 will be placed in the Library.

"Employment of Children"

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of all the submissions that he receives in respect of his document, "Employment of Children", at the end of the period for consultation. [11592]

Mr. Bowis: I have no plans to do so.

Children Act 1989

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any plans to amend the Children Act 1989 following the ruling of the House of Lords on the appeal of Nottinghamshire county council; [11022]

(2) if he will make a statement on the implications for applications for care orders and related issues following the ruling of the House of Lords on the appeal by Nottinghamshire county council; [11023]

(3) what are the implications for the principle of the paramountcy of the child's welfare, set out in the Children Act 1989 of the decision of the House of Lords on the appeal by Nottinghamshire county council. [11024]

Mr. Bowis: The implications of the judgment are being considered, but preliminary indications are that it will not be necessary to amend the Children Act 1989 and that existing guidance on good practice is not affected by the judgment.

Unregistrable Children's Homes

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 228, what is the status of the advice given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State to a director of social services in a letter dated 14 November 1995 on action to be taken in respect of poor practice in unregistrable children's homes. [11030]

Mr. Bowis: Common sense.

Breast Screening

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the percentage of women aged 50 years who have breast screening, broken down by (a) district health authority and (b) regional health authority. [11028]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Drug Addicts

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his calculation of the numbers of people who are addicted to (a) benzodiazapines, (b) other medicinal drugs, (c) heroin and (d) other illegal drugs. [11255]

Mr. Bowis: It is not possible to measure the exact extent of a covert activity such as drug misuse. The available information is given in the Department of Health's Statistical Bulletin, "Drug Misuse Statistics" and, with respect to heroin, other opiate drugs (some of which are medicinal drugs) and cocaine, in tables 1 and 2 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin, "Statistics of Drug Addicts notified to the Home Office", United Kingdom 1994. Copies of both these publications are held in the Library.

Deaths (Winter Months)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the ratio of deaths of those aged 60 years or above, occurring in December to March relative to the average figures for the following and preceding four months, by region, for each of the past five years; and if he will indicate the number of deaths involved in each case. [10552]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The information is shown in the table.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Works of Art (Royal Collection)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her latest estimate of when the compilation of the inventory of royal collection of works of art will be completed. [10636]

Mr. Sproat: The royal collection—which is a department of the royal household and is not a responsibility of my Department—is responsible for compiling the inventory of the works of art. However, I understand that the inventory is scheduled for completion by the end of 1997.

Tourism (North-East)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what measures are being taken by her Department to promote tourism in the north-east; [10916]

(2) what has been the level of funding of the Northumbrian tourist board over the last five years. [10915]

Mr. Sproat: Government support for tourism is channelled through the statutory British Tourist Authority—BTA—and English tourist board, ETB. Through the ETB, support is made available to the 11 non-statutory regional tourist boards, including the Northumbria tourist board, which helps them undertake a variety of marketing and development activities of benefit to the tourism industry in their regions.

The total funding made available to the Northumbria tourist board is as follows:

1991–92: £479,000

1992–93: £505,000

1993–94: £484,000

1995–96: £364,000[1]

[1] Figure for 1995–96 is an estimate as the Northumbria tourist board has until 31 March 1996 to complete the draw-down of funds from ETB.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the value of tourism to the north-east of England in the last five years. [10917]

Mr. Sproat: The estimated value of tourism to the north-east of England in the last five years is:

£ million

Churches

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will seek powers to enable her to intervene to protect the internal fabric of churches whose construction and decor is of architectural or historical importance. [10905]

Mr. Sproat: Since 1 October 1994, ecclesiastical exemption from statutory listed building and conservation area controls has been confined to specified denominations which have satisfactory internal procedures to protect listed churches and unlisted churches in conservation areas. The Government are monitoring the operation of the procedures and have undertaken to review the position formally after two years. In the meantime, my right hon. Friend retains power to remove the exemption in any in individual case and will consider doing so wherever necessary.

Libraries (North-West)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many libraries in the north-west region have been closed since 1987. [11055]

Mr. Sproat: This information is not held centrally. However, the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy's public library statistics, copies of which are held in the House Library, provide information about the total number of libraries in each library authority at the end of every financial year. These do not, however, record the opening or closure of library facilities.

National Lottery

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) which official of her Department is responsible for monitoring Oflot's compliance with guidance provided by her Department; [8612]

(2) which official of Oflot is responsible for ensuring that the Department is informed of any failure to observe guidance provided by the Department. [8611]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996]: None. Oflot is an independent, non-ministerial Government Department. As head of the Department, the director-general is responsible for compliance with various central guidance issued to Departments.

Royal Parks

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what (a) number and (b) species of animals and birds were killed under licence in the royal parks during 1995. [10151]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Responsibility for the subject of this question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its chief executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from V. Robertson to Mr. Tony Banks, dated 24 January 1996:

In the absence of the chief executive, I have been asked by the Secretary of State for National Heritage to reply to your parliamentary question on the number and species of birds and animals that were killed under licence in the royal parks during 1995.

|---|---|---|
| Hyde park and Kensington gardens | 0 | 63 |
| St. James's park | 15 | 19 |

Environmental Appraisal

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if the forthcoming heritage Green Paper will be subject to an environmental appraisal in accordance with the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", published by the Department of the Environment; and if she will publish the environmental appraisal. [10611]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: My right hon. Friend has considered the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" and is satisfied that an appraisal of the environmental effects in relation to the proposed heritage Green Paper is not appropriate at this time. The main purpose of the Green Paper will be to consult on a range of proposals for improving the statutory protection of the built heritage. We will keep this decision under review as appropriate.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Stamps (Direct Selling)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value of direct sales of postage stamps by the Royal Mail in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9489]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Post Office advises me that the total actual and estimated values of direct sales of postage stamps by post, excluding philatelic items, by the Royal Mail in 1993, 1994 and 1995 are as set out in the table. Sales of postage stamps by post office outlets are also shown.

£000

|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 1,128,944 | 590 |
| 1994–95 | 1,126,216 | 3,087 |
| 1995–96 | [1]1,140,000 | [1]8,300 |

[1] Figures provided for 1995–96 represent estimated sales.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research he has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned into the effect of directly selling postage stamps by post on the viability of sub-post offices throughout the British Isles; and if he will make a statement. [9487]

Mr. Oppenheim: None. Decisions on the methods by which postage stamps are sold to customers are the operational responsibility of Post Office management.

However, I understand that the Post Office considers it unlikely that direct sales of postage stamps by post, excluding philatelic items, which it is estimated will constitute approximately 0.6 per cent. of total postage stamp sales in 1995–96, will have any significant impact on the viability of the nationwide network of sub-post offices.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many representations he has received on the subject of direct postal selling of postage stamps to businesses by the Royal Mail; and if he will make a statement. [9488]

Mr. Oppenheim: I am not aware of any representations made to my Department on the subject of direct postal selling of postage stamps to businesses by the Royal Mail.

Overseas Investment

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the level of overseas investment in 1979; and what it is currently at constant prices. [9579]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information, in current prices, is set out in the table. Information in constant prices is not available.

Book value of foreign direct investment

£ billion, current prices

| | UK investment overseas | Overseas investment in the UK |
|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 31.4 | 22.0 |
| 1994 | 183.3 | 139.7 |

Investment

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the annual level of investment in the United Kingdom in 1979; and what it is currently at constant prices. [9580]

Mr. Oppenheim: Total fixed investment in the United Kingdom in 1979 amounted to £75.8 billion at 1990 prices. For the four quarters ending in September 1995, the latest period for which figures are available, the level of investment was £100.2 billion, a third higher than the 1979 level.

Chocolate Exports

Mr. Bayley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much chocolate and chocolate products by (a) volume and (b) value was exported from the United Kingdom to (i) other EU states and (ii) elsewhere in each of the last five years; and if he will estimate how many United Kingdom jobs depend on these exports. [9944]

Mr. Oppenehim: Information on UK exports of cocoa, chocolate and their products[1] is given in the following table. In 1993, employment in the cocoa and chocolate manufacturing industry[2] was 25,500 in Great Britain. Estimates are not made of the number of jobs that depend upon chocolate and cocoa exports.

Sydney Olympics

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what actions he is taking to ensure that British firms secure construction work for the Sydney olympics. [10029]

Mr. Oppenheim: My Department has established the Sydney olympics UK business task force to identify and disseminate business opportunities arising from the preparations for the Sydney games. Working with the UK and Australian public and private sectors, it is the job of the task force to ensure that UK industry is well positioned to win contracts in a range of areas, including construction.

Overseas Exhibitions

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the overseas exhibitions for trade fairs displaying military, security, police or paramilitary services or products his Department has provided support or joint venture funding for British companies to attend or exhibit at since 1988; what has been the value of such DTI support; and which companies have received such funding. [10272]

Mr. Oppenheim: The DTI provided support to United Kingdom firms to exhibit towards the cost of participation at the following overseas exhibitions in the form of grants towards the cost of participation:

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what DTI support is provided to (a) the Defence Manufacturers Association and (b) Association of Police and Public Security Suppliers to support British companies to attend or exhibit at overseas military, security, police or paramilitary exhibitions. [10273]

Mr. Oppenheim: Both associations are recognised sponsor organisations which may organise official groups of United Kingdom firms and are therefore eligible for support under the terms of the trade fairs support scheme and the outward mission scheme. Support under the former is in the form of grants towards the cost of participation and in the latter it is in the form of a travel grant.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Parliament of the Board of Trade what support or joint venture funding his Department has provided to British companies to attend or exhibit at the forthcoming Indepo, Dubai from 14 to 16 January; what is the value of such support; and to which companies it was given. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support or joint venture funding his Department has provided to British companies to attend or exhibit at the defence services Asia exhibition, Kuala Lumpur 1995; what was the value of such support; and to which companies it was given. [10275]

Mr. Oppenheim: There was no exhibition in 1995. The most recent exhibition took place in 1994. The DTI provided support for United Kingdom firms to exhibit in the form of grants towards the cost of participation. Support totalling £241,906 was provided to 59 exhibiting companies. The provisions of the Data Protection Acts precludes the release of information about individual companies.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support his Department provided in the last five years for British companies attending and exhibiting at Covert operations and police exhibition—COPEX—exhibitions throughout the world; what was the value of such support; and to which companies it was given. [10198]

Mr. Oppenheim: The DTI provided support to United Kingdom firms to exhibit in the form of grants towards the cost of participation. Support totalling £81,641 was provided at six COPEX exhibitions throughout the world in the last five years. The provisions of the Data Protection Acts precludes the release of information about individual companies.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support or joint venture funding is being provided to British companies to attend or exhibit at the forthcoming COPEX Jordan scheduled for 26 and 27 March; at what cost; and to which companies. [10195]

Mr. Oppenheim: No DTI support is being provided to any British companies exhibiting at COPEX Jordan taking place on 26 to 27 March 1996.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support his Department provided for British companies attending and exhibiting at COPEX Miami in February 1991; what was the value of such support; and to which companies it was given. [10197]

Mr. Oppenheim: The DTI provided support for United Kingdom firms to exhibit in the form of grants towards the cost of participation. Support totalling £15,680 was provided to 17 companies exhibiting at this event. The provision of the Data Protection Acts precludes the release of information about individual companies.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what support or joint venture funding was provided to British companies which attended or exhibited at the international defence industry and civil aviation fair held in Turkey in November 1995; at what cost; and to which companies. [10196]

Mr. Oppenheim: This event took place in Ankara in September 1995. The DTI provided support for United Kingdom firms to exhibit in the form of grants towards the cost of participation. Support totalling £75,850 was provided to eight companies exhibiting at this event. The provisions of the Data Protection Acts precludes the release of information about individual companies.

Insurance Claims (Settlements)

Mr. Walden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps the Government have taken to encourage speedy settlements by insurance companies. [10307]

Mr. Oppenheim: None. This is a matter primarily for the insurance industry. The Association of British Insurers, the industry's principal trade association, has a code of practice which requires member insurers to settle valid claims without delay.

Dealing swiftly with claims is in the interest not only of policyholders but insurers. By settling claims quickly, they reduce their administrative costs. Failure to do so will encourage customers to turn to insurers offering better service.

Exports to Saudi Arabia (Outstanding Debt)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimates he has made of the total amount of debt outstanding for (a) six months and (b) 12 months in respect of (i) pharmaceutical products an (ii) other manufactured goods exported to Saudi Arabia. [10624]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Export Credits Guarantee Department has no debts outstanding in respect of goods exported to Saudi Arabia. Short-term cover for goods such as pharmaceutical products is provided by the private sector and estimates of total debts outstanding are not available.

Inward Investment

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current level of overseas investment in the United Kingdom; and what it was in (a) 1979 and (b) 1990. [11062]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information, in current price terms, is as follows:

Book value of overseas direct investment in the United Kingdom

|---|---|
| 1979 | 22.0 |
| 1990 | 113.2 |
| 1994 | 139.7 |

Retailers (European Exports)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to encourage British retailers to expand their activities into the rest of the European Union. [10901]

Mr. Oppenheim: Through the "Business in Europe" service, this Department, and Foreign and Commonwealth Office commercial staff based in other member states, offer a wide range of information, advice and practical assistance to help firms do business in European Union countries. Many British retailers are already well established on the continent, and I encourage all UK companies, including retailers, to make full use of the support we can offer.

Export Opportunities (California)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what programmes exist to enable United Kingdom companies to identify export opportunities in California. [10883]

Mr. Oppenheim: Overseas trade services, administered jointly by my Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, provide a wide range of support functions to UK exporters. This support is available to companies interested in opportunities in California where there are two commercial posts, in Los Angeles and in San Francisco, to offer help and assistance.

My Department's north America now campaign, which was launched in March 1993, provides additional support for companies interested in business opportunities in the United States. A team of export promoters seconded to the Department from the private sector is also available to give advice to exporters to the United States.

Exports (US)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list, in the order of their introduction, all current initiatives which give information and assistance to companies which wish to export to the United States. [10882]

Mr. Oppenheim: Overseas trade services, administered jointly by my Department and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, provide a package of support measures to help exporters to all markets including the United States. These include help with market research, finding representatives in the United States, support at trade fairs, outward and inward trade missions and information on export opportunities. A team of export promoters seconded to my Department from UK industry is also available to help exporters.

In addition, my Department's north America now campaign provides additional help for UK companies seeking to do business in the United States. Seminars and clinics are held on a range of topics, both sectoral and cross-sectoral in nature, to alert UK companies to the opportunities in the market and the methods of doing business there. A range of publications is available to exporters and help is offered with finding strategic partners in north America.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notices and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated; [10050]

(2) what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10070]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answers 22 January 1996]: My Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the additon of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in the UK. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments. Any guidance prepared by my Department on this subject will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what levels of export credit guarantees have been provided in each of the last 10 years in respect of contracts with (a) Nigeria, (b) Saudi Arabia, (c) Oman and (d) Indonesia; and what amounts related to the sale of defence equipment. [9823]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 17 January 1996]: I understand that the Post Office has undertaken to maintain the existing level of postal charges until at least 31 March this year. It will be for the Post Office in the first instance to put forward a specific proposal on the amount and timing of the increase it believes will necessary thereafter.

Character Ceramics, Falmouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department received from hon. Members about grant aid by his Department to Character Ceramics. [10110]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 18 January 1996]: No such representations were received.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much Character Ceramics, Falmouth, received from his Department in grant aid and on what date. [10173]

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 18 January 1996]: A total of £104,000 was paid in three tranches between March and September 1993.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Mechanical Restraints)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the (a) shortest, (b) longest and (c) average time during which inmates at HMP New Hall, Wakefield, have been detained in a body belt or mechanical restraint, since January 1990; [8444]

(2) how often the Home Office official at HMP New Hall, Wakefield, responsible for the punishment of inmates has authorised the use of (a) body belts, (b) ankle straps, (c) handcuffs and (d) special segregation unit cells for each year since January 1990; [8422]

(3) on how many occasions since January 1990 inmates in HMP New Hall, Wakefield, have been kept in body belts for more than 12 hours; [8438]

(4) on how many occasions since January 1990 inmates at HMP New Hall, Wakefield, have been (a) detained in a strip cell and (b) restrained by body belts for (i) medical or (ii) non-medical purposes. [8441]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 24 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the use of restraints, the segregation unit and the strip cell at New Hall prison since January 1990.

Since January 1990, inmates have been detained in a strip cell for medical reasons on 136 occasions. New Hall prison did not have a segregation unit until 1992. Since then, inmates have been detained on 46 occasions in the unit for non-medical reasons.

On no occasion since January 1990 has any inmate at New Hall prison been restrained by bodybelts or other mechanical restraint.

No official responsible for the punishment of inmates at New Hall prison has, since January 1990, authorised the use of bodybelts, ankle straps or handcuffs. Use of the special segregation unit cells has been authorised on the following occasions, 1992—twice; 1993—once; 1994—once; 1995—once.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 24 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the handcuffing of pregnant prisoners.

The Home Secretary announced on 18 January revised arrangements on the use of restraints on prisoners attending hospital. The Prison Service implemented the revised policy on 19 January. Amendments to the Prison Service security manual reflecting the revised policy will be issued as soon as possible and placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at what stage labour is deemed to have begun in the context of paragraph 60.18 of the current edition of the Prison Service security manual. [9492]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 15 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 24 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking at what stage labour is deemed to have begun in the context of paragraph 60.18 of the current edition of the Prison Service Security Manual.

All decisions about the onset of labour are made by nursing and medical staff attending the mother at the time.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures govern requests by (a) a doctor and (b) a midwife for the removal of handcuffs from a prisoner giving birth; and what discretion prison officers have on whether to comply with such a request. [9491]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 12 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 24 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what procedures govern requests by (a) a doctor and (b) a midwife for the removal of handcuffs from a prisoner giving birth; and what discretion prison officers have on whether to comply with such a request.

The Home Secretary announced on 18 January revised arrangements on the use of restraints on prisoners attending hospital, which were implemented by the Prison Service on 19 January. Amendments to the Prison Service security manual reflecting the revised policy will be issued as soon as possible and placed in the Library of the House.

From now on, no female prisoner admitted to hospital to give birth will have physical restraints applied from the time she arrives at the hospital until she leaves.

Fraud

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total value of fraud cases reported in the last five years. [9562]

Mr. Maclean: Figures are collected centrally on the number of fraud offences recorded by the police, but not on their total value.

Bull Bars

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if all bull bars have now been removed from police vehicles. [9938]

Mr. Maclean: As I stated in my reply to an earlier question from the hon. Member on 29 November 1995, Official Report, columns 781–82, this is an operational matter for chief constables. The information requested is not available centrally, but the Association of Chief Police Officers has written to every force suggesting that they remove bull bars from their vehicles.

Internet

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what legal controls there are in respect of material providing instructions on explosives and weapons on the Internet; and if he will make a statement; [10479]

(2) if he will press for the prosecution of those Internet providers who publish the detailed processes of making explosives and bombs; and if he will make a statement. [10483]

Mr. Maclean: There are no specific legal controls in respect of material providing instructions on explosives and weapons whether that material is contained on the Internet or any other medium. A person could, however, be liable to prosecution under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 if they actually carried out the instructions to make an explosive device, or the Control of Explosives Regulations 1991 for simply acquiring or keeping explosives without an explosives certificate from the police.

In such cases, it is the responsibility of the police to decide whether there are sufficient grounds to launch a criminal investigation, and that of the Crown Prosecution Service to decide whether to prosecute those alleged to be responsible for the material.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to meet the Internet providers so as to eliminate the practice of the Internet making available chemical and other data required for making bombs and incendiary devices; [10481]

(2) how he proposes to prevent children and students having access via the Internet to material illustrating how explosives and bombs might be made; [10480]

(3) what legislation he plans to bring forward to prevent Internet providers publishing manuals on bomb making and terrorist activities; and if he will make a statement. [10482]

Mr. Maclean: Officials have discussed with Internet service providers concerns about the availability of unsuitable material on the Internet, and ways of controlling access by children and young people to such material. The Government are currently considering the most suitable way of tackling the issue.

The general question of regulation of the Internet and other computer networks is a matter for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, who has commissioned a short study on the subject of unsuitable material on the Internet to identify the issues and possible solutions.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the availability on the Internet of information on the making of bombs and the materials required for the making of bombs and on the techniques of terrorism. [11032]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has received one letter expressing concern about the availability of information on the Internet providing instructions on how to make bombs and on terrorist techniques.

Prison Service (Director General)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional help and support the Deputy Director General of the Prison Service is receiving pending the appointment of a new Director General. [10878]

Miss Widdecombe: The temporary Director General of the Prison Service receives the same administrative support as his predecessor.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 966, against whom a case was brought by the Commission for Racial Equality on the basis that the ethnic profile of employees was such as to be inconsistent with appointments made purely on merit; if he will indicate in that case the percentage of employees who were from (a) white European and (b) ethnic minority backgrounds; and if he will make a statement of the implications of that case for (i) employers generally and (ii) the Commission for Racial Equality in particular, which employs high percentages of its work force from the ethnic minorities. [11048]

Mr. Kirkhope: My reply of 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 966, was incorrectly printed and should have read:

"None of the cases brought or supported by the commission against employers in the last year was on the basis that the ethnic profile of its employees was such as to be inconsistent with appointments made purely on merit.

Information on whether such a profile has been a significant factor in other cases could be obtained only at disproportionate cost".

Arrangements have already been made to amend the bound volume of the Official Report.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy in future to appoint to the Commission for Racial Equality such members that its ethnic profile broadly reflects that of the United Kingdom as a whole. [11046]

Mr. Kirkhope: We believe that it is desirable for the 15 members of the Commission for Racial Equality to be drawn from a broad range of communities in the United Kingdom and we shall continue to take this into account when making appointments.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 965, if he will require the Commission for Racial Equality in future to record the ethnic background both of complainants and of those against whom the complaint is made. [11047]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Commission for Racial Equality already monitors the ethnic origin of complainants. It is not practicable to monitor the ethnic origin of those against whom the complaint is made as these will usually be organisations rather than individuals.

West Yorkshire Police

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of constables employed by the West Yorkshire police force currently; what the figures were in (a) 1990, (b) 1985 and (c) 1980; and what is the projected figure for 1999. [10733]

Mr. Maclean: The number of constables employed by West Yorkshire police in these years was:

(a) September 1980: 3,660

(b) September 1985: 3,739

(c) September 1990: 3,992

(d) September 1995[1]: 3,961

[1] Latest date centrally available.

Between March and September 1995 the number of constables in the force increased by 89. The chief constable has also said that he expects overall police strength in West Yorkshire to increase by 135 in the year to March 1996. Projections for 1999 are a matter for the chief constable and police authority. However, West Yorkshire police's share of the extra funding being provided to recruit 5,000 additional officers nationally over three years is likely to be sufficient to enable 200 extra constables to be recruited by March 1999.

Young Offenders

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the total annual cost of dealing with young people aged 10 to 17 years in the judicial and custodial systems; [10940]

(2) what is the average cost of processing the case of a juvenile offender from offence to completion, to (a) the police, (b) the Crown Prosecution Service, (c) the social services, (d) the education system and (e) the courts, and in total. [10866]

Mr. Maclean: We estimate that, including police, court, legal aid, Crown Prosecution Service, probation and prison service costs, the total annual cost to the criminal justice system in 1994–95 of dealing with juvenile offenders aged 10 to 17 years was about £130 million. We estimate that the average cost was about £1,000. These estimates do not include the costs to social services and the education system, which are not available.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions have taken place between the Whittington hospital county midwifery services and Her Majesty's Prison Holloway concerning access to medical care for women prisoners; and if he will make a statement. [11640]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 24 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what discussions have taken place between the Whittington Hospital County Midwifery Services and Holloway prison concerning access for medical care for woman prisoners.

Discussions have taken place between Holloway and the Whittington Hospital over the provision of and access to a range of medical services. These discussions are continuing.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 19 October, 16 November and 13 December 1995 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs. Shah Shrana Ahmed of 18 Harcock close, Manchester. [11615]

Mr. Howard: I wrote to the right hon. Member about Mrs. Shah Shuara Ahmed on 22 January 1996.

Identity Cards

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will report on the responses he has received to the Green Paper on identity cards, Cm 2879. [12136]

Mr. Howard: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the Government's memorandum of evidence on identity cards to the Home Affairs Committee containing a summary of the responses received to the Green Paper.

Merseyside Police

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to visit Merseyside to discuss the police authority's budget; and if he will make a statement. [10473]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend would be happy to visit Merseyside when a suitable opportunity arises.

My right hon. and learned Friend has proposed that Merseyside police authority's basic funding allocation for 1996–97 should increase by 3.2 per cent. over 1995–96. If it sets a budget for 1996–97 at the cap, spending could increase by £8 million—3.7 per cent. over the current financial year.

National Lottery

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent by the National Lottery Charities Board on start-up and running costs since its inception. [9175]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 January 1996]: From August 1994 to November 1995—the latest date for which figures are available—the National Lottery Charities Board spent £7.8 million, of which £2 million was on start-up costs and the remainder on running costs. This is around 3½ per cent. of the money then available to it from the national lottery distribution fund and is comparable with the corresponding figure for other general purpose grant givers.

TRANSPORT

Rail Privatisation

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, columns 26–29, what instructions he has issued to the franchising director regarding the assessment of the costs of a passenger rail franchise continuing to be operated by the British Railways Board rather than by private franchisee. [9940]

Mr. Watts: The franchising director has a duty under section 5(1) (b) of the Railway Act 1993 to ensure that any payments made in pursuance of an agreement under section 52 of the Act, which enables the franchising director to secure provision by the British Railways Board or any wholly owned subsidiary of the board of railway passenger services that are not provided under a franchise agreement, achieve economically and efficiently and objectives given to him by the Secretary of State. The franchising director has an objective to encourage efficiency and economy in the provision of railway services.

Upper Thames Piers

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what expressions of interest have been received by the Port of London Authority in the public piers on the upper Thames; what criteria he proposes to adopt in respect of access, charging policy and other operational considerations; and what safeguards will be required in respect of access by potential future riverbus services. [10260]

Mr. Norris: These are matters for the Port of London Authority.

A1 (Construction Work)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors underlie the areas where construction work on the A1 (a) is delayed and (b) is taking place. [9688]

A19 (Emergency Telephones)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to install emergency telephones on the A19 between the River Tees and the River Tyne. [10914]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. John Cummings, dated 24 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking when emergency telephones will be installed on the A19 between the River Tees and the River Tyne.

This stretch of the A19 is included in the A19 Dishforth to Tyne Tunnel DBFO contract. Tenders have been received, and the contract is currently being negotiated with the bidders. Under the terms of the contract, the DBFO Co will be obliged to provide emergency telephones between the River Tees and the River Tyne. The timescale for implementation will be agreed as part of the contract negotiations, but every effort will be made to achieve installation of the emergency telephones as soon as possible.

Vehicle Owners

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the percentage of households who have (a) cars and (b) motor cycles for each shire county in England. [11153]

Mr. Norris: The 1995 county estimates of the percentage of households owning cars are shown in the table.

Comparable information for motor cycles is not available.

Bus Deregulation, Warrington

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with the Office of Fair Trading in relation to bus deregulation in Warrington. [11198]

Mr. Norris: My officials have frequent discussions with the Office of Fair Trading about various matters concerning the bus industry. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, it is not my practice to disclose the details of any such discussions.

Rail Privatisation, Manchester

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what payment is planned to be made to the Office of Passenger Franchising in respect of additional costs of supporting rail services in the Manchester passenger transport executive area arising from the privatisation of British Rail [11319]

Mr. Watts: The amount has not been finalised. It will be published in the transport report in due course.

London Transport (Funding)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what allocation his Department has made for core funding for London Transport for each of the years 1995–96 to 1998–99. [11223]

Mr. Norris: The grant allocation for the London Transport core business for 1995–96 is £442 million. For later years, a combined allocation of grant has been made for the core business and the Jubilee line extension project, as follows: 1996–97, £939 million; 1997–98, £648 million; 1998–99, £429 million. The apportionment of grant between the two areas will be determined by London Transport in the light of the precise requirements of the Jubilee line extension. The final allocation of grant at outturn will be reported in the DOT departmental report for the relevant year.

Nottingham City Transport

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from Nottingham city council on the sale of shares in Nottingham City Transport to (a) First Bus and (b) the employees; and if he will make a statement. [11222]

Mr. Norris: For reasons of commercial confidentiality it is not my practice to disclose the details of any discussions between the Department and an owning local authority on such an issue.

Taxi Drivers

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to regulate local council policy on the adoption of group II medical status for taxi drivers. [11134]

Mr. Norris: In their response to the Transport Committee's report on taxis and private hire vehicles (CM 2715) the Government agreed with the Committee's recommendation that applicants for taxi and private hire vehicle driver licences should pass a medical similar to that required for bus and coach drivers. This will require primary legislation, and will thus depend upon a suitable legislative opportunity becoming available.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the SACTRA report was taken into consideration in the value for money assessment of the Newbury bypass. [11193]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr Graham Allen, dated 24 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking if the SACTRA report was taken into consideration in the value for money assessment of the Newbury Bypass.

The Highways Agency Study last year looked at the potential for induced traffic in line with the SACTRA report. It concluded that even if a severe test were to be applied, and very high levels of induced traffic assumed, the scheme would still represent good value for money.

Yellow Lines

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which authorities are involved in the authorisation of yellow lines on roads. [11306]

Mr. Norris: Traffic authorities may cause or permit yellow lines to be placed on a road in support of an order that they have made restricting waiting or loading. In England, the Secretary of State is the traffic authority for trunk roads and motorways; the traffic authority for other roads is the relevant London borough, county council, metropolitan district council or unitary authority. The Traffic Director for London has powers to introduce stopping and loading restrictions on priority—red—routes, and his consent is required when proposals affect or are likely to affect the strategic road network in London. Under certain circumstances, orders made by local traffic authorities require the consent of the Secretary of State.

Seafarers (Employment Prospects)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the employment prospects for British seafarers; and if he will make a statement. [9447]

Mr. Norris: We are pursuing a package of positive measures to improve the attractiveness of the red ensign and the employment prospects of UK seafarers. These include:

Foreign earnings deduction for seafarers; 100 per cent. allowance on earning made abroad;

Crew relief costs scheme: grants to alleviate the cost of flying British crews to and from distant ports.

Government assistance for training scheme: grants for the training of British officer trainees to first certificate of competency;

Development of certificated seafarers scheme: grants for British junior officers training for their second certificate of competency.

Port Waste Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to improve port waste facilities. [12068]

Mr. Norris: My noble Friend, the Minister for Aviation and Shipping, has today announced 18 new measures to reduce the discharge of waste from ships, including measures to improve the provision and use of port waste reception facilities. Copies of the announcement have been placed in the House Libraries.

Indian Sub-continent (Travellers)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of people arriving and departing on flights to and from the Indian sub-continent in (a) each of the last 10 years and (b) each of the last 20 months. [10463]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The information requested is shown in the attached table.

CAA Airport Statistics

Notes:

1. Includes non-revenue passengers.

2. Indian sub-Continent defined as India, Pakistan and Bangladesh.

3. Departures/Arrivals equate to embarkation/disembarkation from the flight in the UK. It does not indicate the origin of the journey.

4. Passengers may only be travelling to the UK to connect with other flights. Not all will enter the United Kingdom.

5. Passengers embarking/disembarking in the Indian sub-Continent may do so only to connect with other flights and may have a final origin/destination outside the area.

6. Where the airport authority is unable to supply a breakdown of the embarkation/disembarkation points of a flight serving more than one airport on the route, all passengers are allocated to the aircraft origin/destination. Mid points will therefore be understated and end points overstated. This affects inbound flights more than outbound.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what options are available to the Child Support Agency in cases where an absent parent refuses to complete and return an assessment form. [9542]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Dennis Canavan, dated 21 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency assessment forms.

If the absent parent (AP) fails to return a completed Maintenance Enquiry Form (MEF) or Review Form (RF) within 14 days of it being issued, the Agency will contact the AP to establish the reasons for non-completion and, where there are no issues regarding paternity or CSA jurisdiction, will advise the AP on completion of the form and where necessary allow the AP extra time to complete and return the form.

If, despite this action, a completed MEF is not returned the options available to the Child Support Office (CSO) depend upon what is known of the AP's circumstances:

a) If nothing is known of the AP's circumstances or they are known to have income and the CSO considers that the AP is deliberately not co-operating in providing the required evidence he will consider the imposition of an interim maintenance assessment (Category A) calculated at 1.5 times the Maintenance Requirement. If necessary an IMA can be collected by a Deduction from Earning Order (DEO) direct from the absent parent's salary. Imposing a DEO in these circumstances often results in the completed MEF being returned and for many months we have placed increased emphasis on this work.

b) If the AP has a Partner and is not able to provide evidence of the Partner's income but provides all other required evidence the CSO can consider imposing an interim maintenance assessment (Category B) based solely on the Absent Parent's circumstances and making no allowance for their Partner.

c) If the AP is self-employed and is having genuine difficulty in supplying details of their earnings the CSO can consider imposing an interim maintenance assessment (Category C) at a standard rate (currently £30). A lower amount can be considered at the AP's request and after consultation with the parent with care. If the AP fails to make IMA payments and does not come to an arrears agreement, the Agency will consider enforcement action to recover those arrears. Such action commences by obtaining a liability order in a Magistrates' Court and leads to committal proceedings as a last resort.

d) If the AP is receiving Income Support the CSO can request the Benefits Agency to make a standard deduction (currently £2.35) from the AP's Income Support as a contribution to maintenance.

Under current legislation if a completed Review Form is not returned the CSO is unable to impose an interim maintenance assessment. The CSOs only option is to review the current MA. This involves the CSO in considering the evidences already held to see if they are still reasonable and updating those evidences independently where possible, using the powers available to the Secretary of State.

Revised legislation from 22 January 1996 will allow the CSO to consider the imposition of an interim maintenance assessment in the same way as when a completed MEF has been returned.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to replace the Child Support Agency computer system. [10508]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 21 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency computer system.

As part of its normal management of business operations the Child Support Agency regularly reviews the role of the information systems it utilises. This review includes ongoing assessment of the cost effectiveness of the system and cost of change.
There are no current plans to replace the Child Support Computer System.

I hope this is helpful.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that the hon. Member for Dewsbury receives a prompt response to all outstanding inquiries about Child Support Agency cases in the Dewsbury constituency that she has raised with the CSA chief executive. [11246]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mrs. Ann Taylor, dated 21 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about constituency cases you have raised with my office.

I have looked into the three cases you have written to me about, and I will write to you shortly on each individual case.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates he has made of the number of complaints filed in relation to the operation of the Child Support Agency (a) with Ministers and (b) the agency itself in each quarter since the agency was set up. [9535]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 21 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about complaints received in relation to the Child Support Agency.

It should be noted at the outset that complaints are not raised exclusively in relation to CSA administration. Many concern the financial amounts as calculated under the formula set by the Child Support Act.

We do not have a detailed breakdown of the categories of Ministerial correspondence, and are therefore unable to provide information relating specifically to complaints filed with Ministers. Figures for all Ministerial and Chief Executive correspondence, including complaints, are as follows:

| | Ministerial | Chief executive |
|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | | |
| Total | [1]6,275 | — |
| 1994–95 | | |

| Quarter 1 | 346 | 2,127 |
| Quarter 2 | 294 | 2,041 |
| Total | 640 | 4,168 |

[1] This is an aggregate figure; separate details for Ministerial and Chief Executive correspondence are not available for 1993–94.

Statistics are collated for complaints handled by the Agency as a whole, and the details from inception are as follows:

| 1993–94 | |
| Total | [1]10,886 |

| Quarter 2 | 8,086 |
| Total | 16,725 |

[1] A quarterly breakdown for 1993–94 is not available.

As details for December 1995 are not yet published, we are unable to provide information for the third quarter of 1995/96.

I hope this is helpful.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Children Order

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what account will be taken of spending levels in England in the Children Order. [10314]

Mr. Moss: The level of spending on personal social services for children following introduction of the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 will reflect local circumstances and priorities in Northern Ireland. No meaningful comparison can be made with the spending levels of local authorities in England.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much additional money will be spent in implementing the Children Order in Northern Ireland; [10312]

(2) what impact the saving requirement that boards are expected to make will have on the amount available to service the requirements of the Children Order. [10313]

Mr. Moss: Before taking final decisions on allocations to boards and efficiency savings targets for 1996–97, no comment can be made on the amount available to service the requirements of the Children Order.

Psychiatric Beds

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the change in the number of psychiatric beds available in each of the Northern Ireland health boards since 1991. [10568]

Mr. Moss: The information is as follows:

| Board area | 1990–91 | 1994–95 |
|---|---|---|
| Eastern | 1,401 | 901 |
| Northern | 555 | 419 |
| Southern | 465 | 320 |
| Western | 1,113 | 499 |

Magherafelt Bypass

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Department of the Environment intends to commence the Magherafelt bypass. [10579]

Mr. Moss: A scheme to by-pass Magherafelt is included in the Department's long-term programme of major road works, although its precise timing will be subject to future funding levels.

Education Building Programme

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much of the planned building programme budget for education will be spent directly on construction in Mid-Ulster 1996–97; and what were the figures for 1995–96. [10571]

Mr. Ancram: Expenditure of £160,000 in 1995–96 and £310,000 in 1996–97, has been earmarked for construction work in Mid-Ulster within the major works building programme for the education service.

Vegetable Industry, Ards

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of damage to the vegetable industry in the borough of Ards resulting from the recent severe weather conditions. [10305]

Mr. Ancram: Damage to the vegetable industry in the borough of Ards as a consequence of recent adverse weather conditions has been variable. The degree of damage varied from farm to farm, the stage of growth and the crop and variety grown.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he had made of the size and quality of the current year's vegetable crop in the borough of Ards relative to those of recent years; what plans he has to refer the matter to the Commission of the European Communities for financial assistance; and if he will make a statement. [10306]

Mr. Ancram: Vegetable quality in 1995, before the adverse weather spell, had been very good. Supplies were below 1994 levels, which was an abnormally good year. The harsh weather has, however, caused quality to deteriorate, depending on the crop grown, and has resulted in reduced supplies of some locally produced vegetables.

There are no plans to refer the matter to the EC Commission for financial assistance.

Alcohol-related Problems

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much the NHS will spend this year on treatment for alcohol-related problems, and what were the equivalent figures for each of the last two years. [10629]

Mr. Moss: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Patient Statistics

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients were treated at the (a) Mid Ulster hospital, (b) South Tyrone hospital, (c) Tyrone County hospital and (d) Erne hospital during the last two years. [10570]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is as follows:

| | Mid Ulster hospital | South Tyrone hospital | Tyrone County hospital | Erne hospital |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Ordinary admissions | | | | |
| 1993–94 | 7,226 | 10,252 | 8,820 | 8,258 |

Sean Quinn Cement Ltd.

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what Government grants have been received by Sean Quinn Cement Ltd. in each of the last 10 years. [10632]

Mr. Ancram: In 1991–92, £1,800 was paid to Sean Quinn Cement Ltd. in respect of assistance under the Industrial Development Board's marketing development grant scheme. No other grants were paid to this company over the past 10 years.

Anti-social Tenants

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to introduce new measures to deal with (a) anti-social tenants in the public sector, (b) anti-social tenants in the private sector and (c) anti-social neighbours in the owner-occupied sector of housing in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [10578]

Mr. Moss: The need for new measures to deal with anti-social tenants in the public sector will be considered as part of the housing policy review in Northern Ireland, the consultation stage of which expires on 31 March 1996. There are no plans at present to introduce new measures to deal with anti-social tenants in the private sector or anti-social neighbours in the owner-occupied sector.

Job Creation

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what jobs have been announced by the Department of Economic Development since the ceasefire in each of the 17 Ulster constituencies. [10574]

Mr. Ancram: The Industrial Development Board has made a series of job announcements since the terrorist ceasefires. Details are as follows:

| Mid Ulster | 218 |
| Newry and Armagh | 771 |
| Strangford | — |
| Upper Bann | 1,111 |
| Total | 7,016 |

An additional 316 jobs have been announced but no definite location is yet known.

Heath Services (Privatisation)

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has further to involve the private sector in the provision of health services. [10569]

Mr. Moss: The provision of health services is the responsibility of the Department of Health and Social Services and will remain so. The private sector routinely provides goods and services to support care and treatment, and supplies necessary capital works and equipment. In addition the provision of care and treatment may be procured on a patient's behalf from private or voluntary providers, where this represents the most economical, efficient and effective solution. With regard to any extension of private sector involvement, there are no plans which have this as their objective. It may arise indirectly as part of the Government's private finance initiative; from the White Paper, "Competing for Quality"; or from purchasing decisions by health boards or GP fundholders in light of the patient's need for the best available treatment.

Flooding, Campsie

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Department of the Environment plans to install a new pump to prevent flooding at Campsie, Omagh. [10576]

Mr. Moss: When I wrote to the hon. Member on 10 December 1995 I informed him that it was intended to bring forward work on the scheme to the financial year 1997–98. I am now pleased to inform him that the Water Executive has just recently reviewed priorities in its capital works programme and it is possible to advance the work further. This is now scheduled to commence in the autumn of 1996.

Health Boards (Finance)

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the savings proposed by his Department in each of the Northern Ireland health board areas in 1996–97. [10567]

Mr. Moss: The 1995 survey outcome provides for a small increase of 0.22 per cent. in real terms in the overall resources for the health and personnel Social Services in 1996–97. When one excludes the cost of drugs, the resources available to health and social services boards for hospital, community health and personal social services is 1.03 per cent. less than 1995–96 in real terms. In addition the survey outcome assumes 3 per cent. cash releasing efficiency savings. I have arranged to meet health and social services board chairmen and the local branch of the NHS Trust Federation before taking final decisions on allocations to boards for 1996–97.

Pre-school Education

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by board the number of four-year-olds participating in pre-school education in Northern Ireland. [10563]

Mr. Ancram: Available statistics relate to pupils' age at 1 July. Measured at that date, there are no four-year-olds participating in pre-school education as four is the compulsory school age in Northern Ireland.

Housing Executive

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when funds will be made available to clear the backlog of grant applications and awards by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. [10580]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The chief executive has advised me that, in response to the very high demand for grant aid for home improvements, the budget for 1995–96 has been increased by £10 million over the previous year to some £44 million. These substantial resources should enable further in-roads to be made in improving housing conditions in Northern Ireland.

Birth Statistics

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many babies were born at the maternity units at (a) Erne hospital, (b) South Tyrone hospital and (c) Mid Ulster hospital during the past three years. [10572]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is as follows:

| | Erne hospital | South Tyrone hospital | Mid Ulster hospital |
|---|---|---|---|
| Live births | | | |
| 1992–93 | 737 | 957 | 788 |
| 1993–94 | 790 | 890 | 763 |
| 1994–95 | 911 | 1,066 | 765 |
| Still births | | | |
| 1992–93 | 3 | 1 | 5 |
| 1993–94 | 3 | 3 | 4 |
| 1994–95 | 7 | 7 | 4 |
| Totals | | | |
| 1992–93 | 740 | 958 | 793 |
| 1993–94 | 793 | 893 | 767 |
| 1994–95 | 918 | 1,073 | 769 |

Owner Occupation

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest estimates of the level of owner occupation in Northern Ireland and what were the figures for the previous three years. [10582]

Mr. Moss: The estimated level of owner occupation expressed as a percentage of the total occupied housing stock in Northern Ireland is:

1994: 67 per cent.

1993: 67 per cent.

1992: 66 per cent.

1991: 66 per cent.

Planning (Belfast)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to address the future planning of the Belfast city region; and if he will make a statement. [12067]

Mr. Moss: Recent studies by the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland) of urban regeneration, housing and transportation have pointed up the need for a review of strategic planning issues in the Belfast city region. I propose, therefore, to initiate debate about the future of Belfast and its environs and to help shape that debate I have today launched a discussion paper entitled, "The Belfast City Region: Towards and Beyond the Millennium". Copies of the discussion paper have been placed in the Library of the House.

Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of ex-service (a) men and (b) women resident in Northern Ireland and ex-members (i) male and (ii) female of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and its reserve suffering from combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder distinguishing between service inside and outside Northern Ireland. [10541]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The first part of the question is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

In the inclusive period 1987 to 1995, 37—33 male and four female—RUC officers were medically retired from the RUC/RUC Reserve as a result of suffering post-traumatic stress disorder.

The term "combat-induced" is not a recognised medical definition and therefore no distinction can be made on this.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what provision is made by his department for the treatment of combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder; [10540]

(2) what provision is made by his Department for respite care for sufferers of combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder. [10543]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 January 1996]: Health and social services boards in Northern Ireland provide a comprehensive range of mental health services and social services, including respite care, to meet the needs of all mentally ill people, including those suffering from combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research is undertaken by his Department (a) directly and (b) indirectly by financing research elsewhere into combat-induced post traumatic stress disorder; and if he will indicate for (b) the organisations involved and the total funding provided. [10542]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 January 1996]: No research into combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder is being funded directly or indirectly by the Department of Health and Social Services in Northern Ireland at present. The Department has not received any applications for support of research into combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder in recent years.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Funding (Wolverhampton)

19. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent representations she has received from schools in Wolverhampton regarding the local authority finance settlement for 1996–97. [9434]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received a small number of representations from schools in Wolverhampton about funding for 1996–97.

Nursery School Vouchers

20. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she will take to ensure that a nursery place in a state school will be available to every holder of a nursery voucher who wants one. [9435]

Mr. Robin Squire: The number of additional places created through the nursery voucher scheme in the maintained sector will depend on individual local education authority decisions influenced by parental choice.

Youth Unemployment

21. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the statistics for youth unemployment in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other European Union countries. [9436]

Mr. Paice: On internationally comparable figures the International Labour Organisation unemployment rate in November 1995 for those aged under 25 was 13.4 per cent. This is among the lowest in the European Union, and almost 7 percentage points below the EU average.

25. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government in respect of youth unemployment. [9440]

Mr. Paice: We will continue with the economic and employment policies that have reduced unemployment among young people under 25 by 225,000 since October 1992 and to less than half the rate in France or Spain where a minimum wage and other regulations discourage employment of young people.

Student Loans

22. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what factors led her to delay the introduction of subsidised private sector student loans. [9437]

Mr. Forth: Following consultation with the major banks and building societies, we decided to defer implementation of the new arrangements until 1997 to allow time for the development of new systems.

School Standards

23. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when a Minister in her Department last met Sir Geoffrey Holland, vice-chancellor of Exeter university, to discuss his views on the outputs of the school system. [9438]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend discussed these issues with Sir Geoffrey Holland earlier this month at the annual conference of the Council of Local Education Authorities, where issues of school standards were at the top of the agenda.

Education Budget (Lancashire)

24. Mr. Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from Lancashire county council about its education budget settlement. [9439]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received no representation from Lancashire county council about its education budget for 1996–97.

Social Chapter

26. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the employment implications for Britain of agreeing to the social chapter. [9441]

Mr. Forth: The social chapter would have damaged the United Kingdom's competitiveness and destroyed jobs. That is why we could not, and will not, accept it.

Training and Enterprise Councils

27. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she last met representatives of the training and enterprise councils to discuss their budgets. [9443]

Mr. Paice: I regularly meet TEC representatives to discuss a wide range of topics including TEC budgets.

Schools (London)

28. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made since the Greenwich judgment of the percentage of children who attend schools in London boroughs outside the one in which they reside. [9444]

Mrs. Gillan: According to information provided by local education authorities in January 1994, approximately 11 per cent. of children of compulsory school age were then attending schools outside the London borough in which they resided.

Single-sex Grammer Schools

29. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many single-sex grammar schools there are in England. [9445]

Mrs. Gillan: There are at present 116 single-sex maintained grammar schools in England.

Employment Opportunities (Workington)

30. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will introduce new measures for the creation of employment opportunities for the Workington travel-to-work area. [9446]

Mr. Forth: New jobs are being created all the time. The latest labour force survey shows that the number of people in employment in Great Britain rose by over 300,000 in the year summer 1994 to summer 1995.

The priority for the Department is to help unemployed people get these jobs. In November, I announced a programme of 1.5 million opportunities to do that, which has more than doubled the number of places on 1-2-1, a programme of intensive help tailored to the needs of the individual jobseeker.

Education Budget (Birmingham)

31. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the standard education spending assessment for Birmingham local education authority in 1996–97; and what was Birmingham's budget for education in 1995–96. [9448]

Mr. Robin Squire: Birmingham's provisional education standard spending assessment for 1996–97 is £448.7 million, an increase of 5 per cent. This year Birmingham's education SSA is some £427 million, and its education budget is some £456 million.

Assisted Places Scheme

32. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children currently have assisted places. [9449]

Mrs. Gillan: About 30,200 children are now estimated to hold assisted places at schools in England in the current academic year 1995–96.

Grant-maintained Schools

33. Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many schools have balloted in the last six months to become grant-maintained. [9450]

Mrs. Gillan: Forty-nine schools in England have balloted parents on the question of grant-maintained status since 1 July 1995.

Labour Statistics

34. Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many men were in full-time employment in (a) 1979 and (b) 1995 or the most recent year for which figures are available. [9451]

Mr. Forth: In June 1979 there were 14,213,000 men in full-time employment in Great Britain, compared with 12,037,000 in June 1995.

National Curriculum

35. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on quality and the diversity of the curriculum in school education. [9452]

Mr. Paice: The national curriculum aims to ensure that all pupils at maintained schools benefit from a broad and balanced curriculum. The Office for Standards in Education has confirmed that it is already proving to be a successful vehicle for raising standards in school education. The revised national curriculum, introduced in August 1995, removed overload and gave teachers in primary and secondary schools more time to use at their discretion. Diversity is further guaranteed by the ability to choose between different elements of programmes of study.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to consult on what changes are desired to the national curriculum during the moratorium period. [11131]

Mr. Robin Squire: The revised national curriculum was introduced into schools only last term and is intended to take them into the next century without further major change. The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority has already begun to monitor the revised national curriculum and will, in due course, consider the need for further revision.

Older Workers

36. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to improve employment opportunities for older workers. [9453]

Mr. Forth: We will continue our successful economic policies which produced growth in jobs for all age groups. And we will pursue the campaign for older workers which seeks to persuade employers to eliminate age discrimination from their employment and recruitment practices.

Special Needs

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and which schools for educationally disadvantaged pupils in England are able to offer a full programme of GNVQ foundation courses for key stage 4 pupils provided by staff all qualified to TDLB—Training Development Lead Body—D32/33 or D34. [10884]

Mr. Paice: This information is not held centrally.

Education and Employment Departments (Merger Costs)

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the total costs that will be incurred by her Department in amending stationery as a result of the merger of the Departments of Education and of Employment, the costs of new signs on buildings; and what other costs have been identified to her Department as a result of the merger of the Education and the Employment Departments. [11101]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total cost for printing new stationery and production of new signage following the adoption of the merged Department's corporate identity is some £33,000. An estimated additional £57,000 has been incurred in developing the design of the identity and in the associated cost of its implementation throughout the Department, including production of a detailed set of guidelines. There have been significant savings elsewhere as a consequence of the merger.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the cost to her Department of producing its new logo; which company produced the logo; and what was the cost to her Department of this contract. [11106]

Mr. Squire: The design of the new logo and corporate identify for the Department for Education and Employment cost £15,000. The design work was carried out by the Central Office of Information after winning a free six-way creative pitch. The total cost of the contract, covering all aspects of design, production of all materials needed for the new Department and the production of a guidelines document is estimated at £90,000—this includes the original design cost of £15,000.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people have applied for assistance through the access to work scheme over each of the last 12 months; and how many of these applicants have received assistance. [11465]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated 24 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the monthly number of Access to Work applicants.

The attached table shows the number of people accepted for Access to Work support in each month since December 1994. We do not collect information centrally about the numbers of people who apply for support but are not eligible.

I hope this is helpful.

Access to work beneficiaries: December 1994 to November 1995

| Month | Beneficiaries |
|---|---|
| 1994 | |
| December | 622 |
| 1995 | |
| January | 785 |
| February | 830 |
| March | 868 |
| April/May[1] | 1,058 |
| June | 929 |
| July | 934 |
| August | 854 |
| September | 896 |
| October | 794 |
| November | 866 |

[1] New procedures for recording information were introduced during April. The first count covered the period from 1 April to 31 May 1995.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects the review of access to work to be completed; and when the information from that review will be made available. [11466]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Blunkett, dated 24 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the Access to Work review.

The review of Access to Work is an internal exercise carried out by the Employment Service. A report of the review will soon be sent to the Minister of State and he has already announced that he will discuss the operation of the programme in 1996/97 with the principal organisations concerned before any recommendations are implemented.

The Employment Service commissioned research from Social Community Planning Research to feed into the review. That research is complete and we intend to publish it during February.

I hope this is helpful.

Information Technology

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what new information is being collected by her officials in the current survey into the levels of provision of information technology in schools. [11129]

Mr. Robin Squire: Some questions have been updated in the survey to be carried out in March 1996 to reflect the changing provision of information technology in schools resulting from new technology developments. No new categories of information are involved.

Mrs. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many local education authority advisory information technology centres there were in each year since 1991. [11113]

Mr. Squire: The information is not held centrally. It is a matter for individual local education authorities to decide how to provide IT support arrangements in the light of demand from schools. The Department's statistical bulletin "Survey of Information Technology in Schools", issue No. 3/95, ISSN 0142-5013, gives information on sources of technical support.

Mrs. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of teachers in the current work force have received some formal training in information technology. [11116]

Mr. Squire: A sample survey of information technology provision in schools carried out by the Department in 1994 showed that the proportion of teachers who had received some training in information technology was 94 per cent. in primary schools, 86 per cent. in secondary schools and 92 per cent. in special schools.

The ability to make constructive use of IT is among the competencies now required of all newly qualified teachers.

Mrs. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the current survey by her Department into the level of provision of information technology in schools. [11128]

Mr. Squire: The Department will be carrying out a further survey of information technology provision in a representative sample of schools in England in March 1996. The results of the survey should be available around the end of the year.

Education Multi-media Industry

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action she is taking to represent the views of the United Kingdom education multi-media industry in the European Commission. [11130]

Mr. Forth: The Government are maintaining dialogue with the Commission and with relevant interests, including the British Educational Suppliers Association. Most recently, this has involved discussion of work by the European Commission's task force on multi-media educational software. UK interests will be represented in formal discussions within the Council of Ministers later this year.

Schools Renewal Challenge Fund

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals she has received from the Isle of Wight education authority for bids under the schools renewal challenge fund for capital projects involving renewal, repair, replacement or improvement of the island's school capital stock. [11151]

Mrs. Gillan: Local education authorities have not yet had the opportunity to bid for support from the schools renewal challenge fund, which we propose should operate in the 1996–97 financial year.

School Budgets (Manchester and Trafford)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the levels of capital funding requested and capital spending allowed for school buildings in 1996–97 to the city of Manchester and the borough of Trafford. [9428]

Mrs. Gillan: The annual capital guidelines for capital work in schools for the city of Manchester and the borough of Trafford in 1996–97 are £6.378 million and £2.153 million respectively. These figures represent 12.52 per cent. and 30.75 per cent. respectively of the amounts bid for, compared with the national average of 23 per cent. Grants for building work at voluntary aided schools to the value of £3.463 million in Manchester and £285,000 in Trafford were also approved in the recent capital round.

ACGs do not constitute limits on capital spending by these authorities on their schools. Local education authorities can, and do, supplement their borrowing from other sources, including capital receipts and revenue budgets.

Violent Pupils

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to issue guidelines in respect of the protection of head teachers and teachers from violent pupils. [9773]

Mr. Robin Squire: The working group established by my right hon. Friend following the tragic murder of Philip Lawrence is considering urgently what more should be done to improve security in and around schools. Measures to protect school staff against violence—wherever it comes from—are a vital element in that work. DFEE circular 9/94, "The Education of Children with Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties", already contains advice to schools on the physical containment of pupils, where this is necessary to prevent them causing harm to themselves or to others.

National Vocational Qualifications (L

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of those aged 18 to 21 years have achieved NVQ level 2 or its equivalent; and what are the equivalent figures for (a) Germany and (b) Japan. [10165]

Mr. Paice: The latest estimate for the proportion of 18 to 21-year-olds in the United Kingdom who have achieved at least national vocational qualification level 2 or equivalent is 63 per cent. This figure is taken from the summer 1995 labour force survey.

Comparable information for Germany and Japan is not available.

Nursery Education

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates he has made of the proportion of families in England that have state nursery education available to them in each education authority for children aged (a) three to four and (b) four to five years. [11087]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is not collected centrally.

Information about pupils under five being taught in maintained nursery and primary schools in each local education authority area in England in January 1995 is contained in statistical bulletin 1/96 "Pupils Under Five Years of Age in Schools in England—January 1995", which is available in the Library.

Job Insecurity

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to reduce levels of job insecurity. [9442]

Mr. Forth: Concerns about job insecurity will be reduced by sustainable economic growth, falling unemployment, and rising employment, which the Government's policies are achieving.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will provide the GCSE average point scores per pupil in 1995 for each individual 20th group, and also for the cumulative 20th group, of all 15-year-old pupils when ranked according to their average point scores, where A* = 7 for (a) all such pupils in England, (b) all such pupils of the local education authority maintained sector only, excluding those of grant-maintained schools, (c) all such pupils of the grant-maintained sector only, (d) all such pupils of the whole maintained sector only, excluding those of independent schools and (e) all such pupils of the independent sector only. [42202]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 8 November 1995]: The GCSE average point scores per pupil in 1995 for each individual 20th group, and also for the cumulative 20th groups of all 15-year-old pupils when ranked according to their average point scores where A* = 7 are shown in the following tables:

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects meetings of the Scottish Grand Committee to be held in (a) Ayr, (b) Kilmarnock, (c) Cumnock, (d) Dumfries, (e) Stranraer, (f) Prestwick, (g) Troon and (h) Girvan. [8566]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am delighted with the enthusiasm now being shown by Opposition Members for my proposals to take the Scottish Grand Committee to locations throughout Scotland. Possible venues in Scotland must first of all be assessed by the House authorities before they can be added to the list of suitable locations. Decisions are then taken through the usual channels on where the Scottish Grand Committee should meet.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11358]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11355]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Expenditure by the Scottish Office and its associated agencies on external consultants including management consultants was:

1989–90: £2,095,000

1991–92: £10,836,000

1993–94: £5,383,000

1994–95: £4,079,000

No details are currently available centrally on the expenditure during 1979–80, the expenditure to date on external consultants for 1995–96, the estimate of expenditure for 1996–97, or the expenditure by non-departmental public bodies. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Not all consultancy projects are capable of being measured in terms of identifiable savings. The Scottish Office is currently preparing a report summarising the benefits obtained from major projects since April 1992. I shall write to the hon. Member on this subject as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to review the pensions element of the police funding allocation formula. [11902]

Mr. Maclean: No. The present mechanism for allocating money for police pensions is the best available to us. We shall continue to refine it.

Mrs. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the Minister of State's letter of 30 November 1995, if he will give details of those aspects of the police funding allocation formula which are in need of further work. [11901]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the report entitled "Critical Analysis of the Police Funding Formula", produced last summer by the independent consultants Price Waterhouse. We have carried out the further work recommended by the consultants, but in some instances it has proved inconclusive and investigations will continue into 1996. Copies of the report are in the Library.

Prisoners (Mechanical Restraints)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how often the Home Office official at Doncaster prison responsible for the punishment of inmates has authorised the use of (a) bodybelts, (b) ankle straps, (c) handcuffs and (d) special segregation unit cells since the prison was opened; [8424]

(2) what is the (a) shortest, (b) longest and (c) average time during which inmates at Doncaster prison have been detained in a bodybelt or mechanical restraint since it opened; [8442]

(3) on how many occasions since it opened inmates in Doncaster prison have been kept in bodybelts for more than 12 hours; [8421]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 25 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the use of restraints, special segregation unit cells and strip cells at Doncaster prison since its opening in June 1994.

The use of ankle-straps has twice been authorized on one inmate, for medical reasons, to prevent him causing himself serious and permanent injury. The first occasion was for 24 hours 37 minutes and the second was for six days and 55 minutes.

The use of the special cell was authorized on 57 occasions during the period 20 June 1994 to 31 December 1994. It was also used without authorization on 44 occasions. This resulted in the operating company Premier Prison Services being issued with a default notice for use of the cell without the Controller's authorization. From 1 January to 31 December 1995 the special cell was used on 41 occasions with the authorization of the Controller of each occasion.

Bodybelts have been used on two occasions since the prison opened, once for medical and once for non-medical reasons. The longest time spent in a body belt is two hours. The shortest time spent in a body belt was 1 hour 55 minutes. This gives an average time of 1 hour 57 minutes.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list for each prison in England and Wales the number of occasions that restraints were used on (a) men and (b) women prisoners during December 1995; [11603]

(2) how many (a) men and (b) women were placed in restraints when taken outside prisons, in England and Wales, for whatever reason, during the week beginning 1 January 1996. [11604]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 25 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about restraints used on prisoners in England and Wales.

This information is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the protection of remand prisoners under 18 years of age from bullying at Doncaster prison. [9900]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 25 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the protection of remand prisoners under 18 years of age from bullying at Doncaster prison.

Doncaster has already taken a number of steps to minimise bullying among young offender remand prisoners. Those considered to be bullying are isolated from other prisoners until they cease such activities. Doncaster has also installed cameras to help staff in monitoring the movement and behaviour of juvenile offenders and employed a full-time anti-bullying co-ordinator and removed personal cell keys from young offenders, in order to prevent them being forced to hand them over to other prisoners.

Anti-bullying measures are subject to continuous review and appraisal. A "Safe Inside Doncaster" Committee has recently been formed, which has been tasked with helping to increase further the safety and comfort of prisoners inside the prison environment. Doncaster takes very seriously its commitment to try and prevent bullying among this age group.

Holloway Prison

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the ethnic breakdown of women prisoners in Holloway prison in December 1995 or at the latest available date. [10084]

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 25 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the ethnic breakdown of women prisoners in Holloway prison.

Miss Widdecombe: Mr. Fenton's case was last considered by the Parole Board on 1 December 1995. The board did not recommend his release on life licence.

Prisons Budgets and Staff

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each prison, including those which are privately managed (a) the projected budget in monetary terms, (b) the percentage change and (c) the change in staffing levels for each financial year between 1996–97 and 1999–2000, inclusive. [10296]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 25 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the budget allocation and staffing levels for each prison establishment for each financial year 1996–97 and 1992–2000.

The process of setting budgets for public sector establishments for 1996–97 is not yet complete. I will send you details of budgets once they are finished.

Governors are in the process of working out staffing projections for their establishments in 1996–97. I will send you their estimates once governors have had the opportunity to discuss them with their staff locally. I will also send you the provision made for payments to private sector prisons for 1996–97. These are not exactly the same as cash-limited budgets, as the terms of the contract may trigger additional payments in some circumstances.

We do not at present have budget figures at establishment level more than one year ahead. But later this year we shall be issuing indicative spending figures for the years 1997–98 to 1998–99.

Stoke Heath Young Offenders Institution

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the highest number of visitors strip searched in a single day during November 1995 at Stoke Heath young offenders institution without the police being present; and how many visitors to Stoke Heath young offenders institution have been strip searched in each of the last six months. Mr. Kirkhope: We have not made any estimates of the cost of tape recording immigration and asylum interviews at ports of entry or at the Home Office. We have no plans to introduce the tape recording of such interviews.

Prison Service (Director General)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the previous Directors General of the Prison Service, the dates of their retirement, resignation or dismissal and the dates on which their successors took over. [10877]

Miss Widdecombe: Mr. Richard Tilt was appointed temporary Director General of the Prison Service on 16 October 1995. The available information in respect of previous Directors Generals—a term used since 1967—is as follows:

Mr. Derek Lewis (6 January 1993–16 October 1995. Dismissed)

(b) incapacitant products containing oleoresin capsicum. [11515]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has concluded that CS presents no significant risk to human health, but that not enough is currently known about oleoresin capsicum for us to be reassured as to its effects on human health.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have at any time used copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to prepare the Government's response to Sir Richard's report. [11887]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No decision about the response to Sir Richard Scott's report will be taken until the report has been received.

In considering issues relating to the Scott inquiry, all Departments naturally take account of material properly available to them.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report are in the possession of Ministers or officials in his Department other than those to whom draft sections of the report were sent by Sir Richard Scott. [11886]

Mr. Clarke: In forwarding draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to Ministers and officials, the inquiry expressly stated that individuals could, at their discretion, make a copy for a legal or other adviser and another for the Department concerned.

Employment Statistics (Accuracy)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new proposals he has to improve the accuracy of employment statistics. [9414]

[10690]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information is contained in tables which I am placing in the Library.

Part-time Workers

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of (a) manual part-time workers and (b) non-manual part-time workers, broken down into men and women, work less than (i) eight hours a week and (ii) 16 hours a week. [10862]

Employment (Maastricht Treaty)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the effect on employment in the United Kingdom of the Maastricht treaty when full implemented. [9798]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government have made no estimates of the effect on employment in the United Kingdom of the convergence criteria under the Maastricht treaty when fully implemented. The UK opt-out from the social chapter means that the Maastricht treaty will have no adverse effect on employment via that mechanism. However, the Government will agree to join a single currency only if it is in our national interest to do so, given the circumstances at the time.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the impact on manufacturing jobs of the United Kingdom adopting a common EU currency in its currently proposed form. [9805]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Protocol No. 11 annexed to the EC Treaty means that the United Kingdom shall not be obliged or committed to move to the third stage of economic and monetary union without a separate decision to do so by the Government and Parliament. The Government will only agree to take part in a single currency if it is in our national interest to do so, given the circumstances at the time. Clearly employment forms a vital part in the assessment of our national interest.

The Government have made no estimates of the impact on manufacturing jobs of the United Kingdom adopting a single currency. It is impossible to say at this stage what the impact will be. Studies by others have produced a wide variation of estimates.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

ISDN Lines

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure that the price of integrated services data network lines falls in line with the real terms price reductions for all telecommunications services. [10426]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The detailed answer on the supply of ISDN lines which I gave my hon. Friend last November, 22 November 1995, Official Report, column 210, set out the variety of ways in which use of ISDN is being stimulated. The Director General of Telecommunications has now issued his consultation document on the BT price cap. This document discusses whether ISDN services should be brought within the price control regime, and Oftel has asked for responses by 2 February.

There will also be downward pressure on prices from the increasing competition in the supply of ISDN services with cable companies entering the market. In the future, radio fixed access systems at 10Ghz should also offer an alternative to the current services available from BT and Mercury. I was particularly pleased to learn of the deal between Energis and Research Machines which will allow many schools to access the Internet via ISDN at attractive rates.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what (a) advisory committees and (b) working parties have been established by his Department to advise him on the implications of changes in legislation regarding packaging, recycling and waste management. [11184]

Mr. Page: As far as the implication for legislation are concerned with regard to these matters, the Government consult widely and take into account the views of all interested parties. No committees or working groups have been set up specifically to address the implication of changes in legislation.

The Government are currently considering the recommendation by companies in the packaging chain at their meeting on 15 December 1995 that an advisory committee be established to advise on the drafting and implementation of the regulations and on arrangements for carrying out a review of the legal obligation, including consideration of actual burden on individual companies.

Directors' Remuneration (Disclosure)

Mr. French: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will publish a consultative document on proposals for amending the Companies Acts to take account of the recommendations on disclosure of directors' remuneration contained in the Greenbury report. [12291]

Mr. Lang: I have today published a consultative document seeking views on proposed changes to the requirements of the Companies Act 1985 relating to disclosure of directors' emoluments. The proposals are designed to remove overlap with the Greenbury recommendations for full disclosure of the emoluments of individuals directors by listed companies, now implemented by the stock exchange listing rules, and generally to ensure consistency of approach between the Companies Act provisions and the Greenbury recommendations. Copies of the consultative document have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Royal Family (Free Postage)

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade under which statute free postage to members of the royal family is authorised. [11027]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 24 January 1996]: This facility is not granted by statute. The provision of free postage to members of the royal family is a facility which has been provided by the Post Office since the earliest days of its inception.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which members of the royal family receive free postage for their official mail. [11026]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The following members of the royal family and their households receive free postage for their official mail:

> the Queen, Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Prince Edward, the Princess Royal, the Princess Margaret, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Kent, Prince and Princess Michael of Kent, and Princess Alexandra.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11380]

Mr. Hanley: Total expenditure on publicity—that is, promotional material and recruitment advertising—in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office—diplomatic wing and Overseas Development Administration—since 1979 at 1995–96 prices was:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1979–80 | 809,559 |
| 1980–81 | 569,578 |
| 1981–82 | 734,682 |
| 1982–83 | 675,220 |
| 1983–84 | 809,117 |
| 1984–85 | 645,986 |
| 1985–86 | 688,390 |
| 1986–87 | 873,338 |
| 1987–88 | 802,582 |
| 1988–89 | 1,348,555 |

| 1992–93 | 2,193,224 |
| 1993–94 | 2,229,921 |
| 1994–95 | 2,384,083 |
| 1995–96 | 2,707,000 (Estimate) |

An estimate for 1996–97 is not yet available.

It is not possible to break these figures down between (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. However, the expenditure outturn figures for 1994–95 comprise:

At 1995–96 prices

| | £ | £ |
|---|---|---|
| Newspaper advertising for recruitment purposes: | (DW) 80,575 | 82,791 |
| | (ODA) 727,000 | 746,993 |

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report are in the possession of Ministers or officials in his Department other than those to whom draft sections of the report were sent by Sir Richard Scott. [11880]

Mr. Hanley: In forwarding draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to Ministers and officials, the inquiry expressly stated that individuals could, at their discretion, make a copy for a legal or other adviser and another for the department concerned. Whether they did so is entirely a matter for the individuals concerned.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 January 1996, Official Report, columns 691-92, how much of the sum spent by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry has been spent on legal advice. [11882]

Mr. Hanley: All of it.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have used copies o draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to prepare the Government's response to Sir Richard Scott's report. [11881]

Mr. Hanley: No decision about the response to Sir Richard Scott's report will be taken until the report has been received.

In considering issues relating to the Scott inquiry, all Departments naturally take account of material properly available to them.

China

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the recent television programme, "The Dying Rooms", was discussed during his recent visit to China; and if he will make a statement. [10329]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 23 January 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 10 January, Official Report, columns 206-7.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings have been held by his Department with Saudi Arabian opposition groups (a) in Saudi Arabia and (b) elsewhere. [11025]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 23 January 1996]: I am unaware of any requests from such groups for any meetings during 1995 to date and can confirm that none took place. We are similarly unaware of any previous meetings, but could not research this without incurring disproportionate cost.

Government Borrowing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the implications of the Maastricht treaty for (i) the creation of credit, (ii) Government borrowing through ways and means advances and (iii) Government borrowing through the banks. [9797]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Under article 105(2) of the EC treaty, the primary objective of the European system of central banks shall be to maintain price stability, and the basic tasks to be carried out through the ESCB include the definition and implementation of monetary policy of the Community, which would have implications for the creation of credit. As a result of article 109k(3) and protocol 11 there would no direct implications in countries not participating in the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Under article 104(1) of the EC treaty, central Governments are prohibited from having an overdraft facility or any other credit facility with the European central bank or with the national central banks. However, article 11 of protocol 11 annexed to the EC treaty makes clear that, notwithstanding article 104, the United Kingdom may maintain the ways and means facility with the Bank of England, if and so long as the United Kingdom does not move to the third stage of EMU. If the United Kingdom were to participate in the third stage of EMU, the Government would be unable to maintain the Ways and Means facility.

Under article 104a(1) of the EC treaty, public authorities are prohibited from establishing "privileged access" to financial institutions. This provision is already in effects and the United Kingdom is in compliance. There are no other treaty provisions directly concerned with the ability of central Governments to borrow through banks.

Under protocol 11 annexed to the EC treaty, the United Kingdom shall not be obliged or committed to move to the third stage of economic and monetary union without a separate decision to do so by the Government and Parliament. We will agree to take part in a single currency only if it is in our national interst to do so, given the circumstances at the time.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 25 January. [10166]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 25 January. [10167]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings late today.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Prime Minister if officials in (a) his private office and (b) the Cabinet Office have used copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to prepare the Government's response to Sir Richard's report. [11889]

The Prime Minister: No decision about the response to Sir Richard Scott's report will be taken until the report has been received.

In considering issues relating to the Scott inquiry all Departments naturally take account of material properly available to them.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Prime Minister if copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report are in (a) his possession and (b) the possession of officials in the Cabinet Office other than those to whom draft sections of the report were sent by Sir Richard Scott. [11888]

The Prime Minister: In forwarding draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to Ministers and officials the inquiry expressly stated that individuals could at their discretion make a copy for legal or other advisers and another for the Department concerned. Whether they did so is entirely a matter for the individuals concerned.

Hafey Dalkamouni

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will discuss with Chancellor Kohl the proposed release of Hafey Dalkamouni. [11733]

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set out the arrangements for compliance cost assessments. [12328]

Mr. Freeman: Compliance cost assessments are a vital tool for helping to minimise the costs to business arising from new legislation. Under the Government's deregulation initiative, I am today publishing a revised guidance booklet on compliance cost assessment and am arranging for copies to be placed in the House Libraries. The new booklet includes:

- the requirement for Ministers to personally sign-off all CCAs and to certify that the regulatory proposal strikes an appropriate balance between cost and benefit.
- the requirement for a CCA to be prepared and published with all legislative proposals presented to Parliament.
- extension of the requirement to complete a CCA to regulatory proposals which impact on charities and the voluntary sector.
- the arrangements for carrying out the small business litmus test.
- the parliamentary scrutiny arrangements for CCAs dealing with EC legislative proposals.

I have also presented to Parliament today a Command Paper listing 75 CCAs published between 1 January 1995 and 30 June 1995. Copies of the CCAs listed are available in the House Libraries. This is the third such Command Paper and further Command Papers listing CCAs published in the preceding six-month period will be published at six-monthly intervals.

DEFENCE

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have used copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to prepare the Government's response to Sir Richard Scott's report. [11879]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No decision about the response to Sir Richard Scott's report will be taken until the report has been received.

In considering issues relating to the Scott inquiry, all Departments naturally take account of material properly available to them.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report are in the possession of Ministers or officials in his Department other than those to whom draft sections of the report were sent by Sir Richard Scott. [11878]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In forwarding draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to Ministers and officials, the inquiry expressly stated that individuals could at their discretion make a copy for a legal or other adviser and another for the Department concerned. Whether they did so is entirely a matter for the individuals concerned.

Munitions Dumping

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations his Department has received from (a) the European Commission and (b) other countries in relation to the sea dumping of conventional and chemical munitions around Britain's coast. [11811]

Mr. Soames: There have been contacts between the Ministry of Defence and the Irish Government about sea dumping of munitions, but there have been no representations from other Governments or the European Commission.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11914]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department initiated the use of the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol and is an accredited user. Departmental organisations, including agencies funded directly from defence votes, are entitled to use the symbol for both external and internal recruitment and promotion. The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, which operates on a trading fund basis, and the Meteorological Office, which is planning to operate on this basis later this year, are not covered by the departmental accreditation, but both agencies are currently working towards obtaining authorisation from the Employment Service to use the symbol in their own right.

NATO (Interoperability)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts concerning the interoperability of ambulances within the alliance. [10102]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 18 January 1996]: My Department continues to explore ways of achieving greater interoperability with our NATO partners, although there have been no recent discussions specifically related to ambulances. In preparing the staff requirement for the replacement medium mobility ambulance, full account was taken of the need to ensure interoperability with NATO allies, particularly with regard to airportability, stretcher and stretcher mountings. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement announced the order for the medium mobility ambulance on 18 January 1996.

Departmental Contracts (Chelmsford)

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all contracts placed by his Department with (a) GEC Marconi Radar in Chelmsford, (b) GEC Marconi

Communications in Chelmsford, (c) the English Electric Valve Company in Chelmsford and (d) other companies based in Chelmsford since June 1987, and what each contract was worth. [10844]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The number and total value of contracts with (a) the GEC-Marconi Ltd. group of companies in the Chelmsford area, (b) EEV Ltd.—the English Electric Valve Company—and (c) other companies in the Chelmsford area which were extant during the period from 1990 to date are shown in the table.

The following points should be noted:

(1) the records from which this data have been obtained do not differentiate between the various divisions and management companies within the GEC-Marconi Ltd. group.

(2) where a contract was current in two or more financial years, it is included in the figures for each year concerned.

(3) the figures do not include any contracts placed by Defence agencies since they took over their own contract administration.

I regret that the figures before 1990 are not immediately available and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dodman Exercise Area

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the success rate of the Dodman exercise area for training; and if he will make a statement about its current use by members of his Department. [11810]

Mr. Soames: The exercise areas off Dodman point in Cornwall are used for a variety of naval training purposes, including naval gunfire support training, which is part of essential operational sea Training, and simulates the provision of gunfire support from ships at sea to forces operating ashore. I am satisfied, as is the Navy, that acceptable levels of training are being achieved at Dodman, including steadily improving success rates for NGS firings, and that the area itself fully meets our training requirements.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staffing his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11333]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In 1991, 1992, 1993 and 1994, the average numbers of working days absence for non-industrial staff were 7.8, 7.9, 8.7 and 7.6 respectively. Figures are not yet available for 1995. Those for years before 1991 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Data for industrial staff are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Civilian Posts

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilian Ministry of Defence jobs there are within a 25-mile radius of (a) Bath and (b) Cheadle. [11258]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The number of MOD civil servants employed within a 25-mile radius of (a) Bath and (b) Cheadle was 8,674 and 600 respectively on 1 April 1995.

LSD Experiments, Porton Down

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will specify which Porton Down technical papers contain the descriptions and results of the LSD experiments which were conducted (a) in the laboratory and (b) in the field by the Chemical Defence Establishment; and which are currently unclassified. [11809]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. David Clark, dated 25 January 1996:

Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking which Porton Down Technical Papers contain the descriptions and results of the LSD experiments which were conducted (a) in the laboratory and (b) in the field by the Chemical Defence Establishment; and which are currently unclassified has been passed to me to reply as the Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency which now includes the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment (CBDE).

A search of the CBDE Information Service's list of technical papers produced by CBDE and its predecessor organisations at Porton Down has identified four published papers concerning the work conducted with LSD in the 1960s. Three of these reports are concerned with the field studies. These are Porton Technical Paper 936 "A field experiment using LSD25 on trained troops", Porton Technical Paper 979 "Recount—A second field experiment to assess the effects of T3456 on trained troops" and Technical Note 53 "Small Change—A brief preliminary report". As you know we have recently arranged for these papers to be made available in the Public Record Office at Kew at the end of January in response to your earlier request to see information relating to trials with LSD involving service volunteers. We have recently located a fourth report, Technical Note 5 "The determination of T3456 in human plasma following oral administration" which concerns the laboratory based development of an analytical method to detect low levels of LSD in human plasma. This report is not yet in the Public Records Office but arrangements can be made for its early release should this be required. The library search also identified eight papers which include references to laboratory work involving LSD and other substances being tested on animals. The work was primarily concerned with analytical methods and the papers remain classified.

I hope this information is helpful.

Married Housing Sales

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the sums to be paid to the Treasury from the sale of his Department's married housing. [11807]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As I told the hon. Member in my reply of 18 December 1995, Official Report, columns 988–89, our assessment of the value of the married quarters estate under the terms of the proposed sale is commercially confidential.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Attorney-General if (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have used copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to prepare the Government's response to Sir Richard Scott's report. [11884]

The Attorney-General: No decision about the response to Sir Richard Scott's report will be taken until the report has been received.

In considering issues relating to the Scott's inquiry, all Departments naturally take account of material properly available to them.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, columns 705–6, how much of the sum spent by his Department on external advice in relation to the Scott inquiry has been spent on legal advice. [11885]

The Attorney-General: All of it.

Mr. Cook: To ask the Attorney-General if copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report are in the possession of Ministers or officials in his Department other than those to whom draft sections of the report were sent by Sir Richard Scott. [11883]

The Attorney-General: In forwarding draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to Ministers and officials, the inquiry expressly stated that individuals could at their discretion make a copy for a legal or other adviser. Whether they did so is entirely a matter for the individuals concerned; the Government do not disclose details of communications, if any, between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on cases in each of the last 10 years in which the total legal aid bill exceeded more than £1 million. [11867]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information is available, however, for the period 1 April 1989 and 31 March 1994. During that period, there were 20 cases involving final bills where the total costs to the legal aid fund exceeded £1 million. Of those, 19 were in respect of criminal proceedings.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11377]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information for 1979–80 is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the public purse. The figures for the year 1989–90 and thereafter are shown in the table. The Public Trust Office is shown separately for the year 1994–95 since it assumed agency status in July 1994. Details for the current financial year 1995–96 will not be available until after the end of this financial year.

Sick absence in the Lord Chancellor's Department 1989–95

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11375]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Before 1995–96, information has not been held centrally for the full period in question, and information before 1992–93 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Expenditure by the Department and non-departmental public bodies on external consultants was as follows:-

1993–94: £3.455 million

1994–95: £1.640 million

1995–96: £0.853 million (to date)

Forecast expenditure for the whole of the year 1995–96 is £1.234 million, and for 1996–97 is £7.018 million.

The chief executives of the Court Service and Public Trust Office will reply separately for the periods for which they have been agencies. The chief executives of the Land Registry and Public Record Office will reply direct.

In many cases, consultants are employed to contribute particular skills to an element of a much larger process. As a result, their work will be only one of several factors leading to the eventual outcome. There is therefore no ready way of apportioning their particular contribution to savings achieved.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 19 January 1996, regarding the expenditure on all consultants for each of the years 1979–80, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) an estimate for the whole year; the estimated expenditure for 1996–97 and an estimate of the savings accruing from the use of consultants in each of these years.

The Public Trust Office became an Agency on 1 July 1994 and figures prior to that date are included in the departmental Headquarters response. The cost of consultants for the financial years 1994–95 onwards are as follows:

1994–95: £70,242.55

1995–96: £43,753.01 (total to date)

£77,252.01 (estimate for year)

1996–97: £70,000 (estimate)

Consultants are employed to provide a particular skill and their work is only one element of a much larger process and as such it is difficult to assess the savings to the Office as a result. However, the consultants used for the Business Process Re-engineering in 1994/95 estimated that there would be a saving of £800,000 to the Office over time.

Letter from Duncan Simpson to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, who is away from the Office on official business, I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about expenditure on consultants and the savings accruing.

1. The Public Record Office's annual expenditure on consultants was:

(a) 1979–80: nil

(b) 1989–90: £46,745

(c) 1991–92: £349,111

(d) 1993–94: £674,305

(e) 1994–95: £315,669

(f) 1995–96: £213,500 to date

1995–96: £585,075 budget

The estimated expenditure for 1996–97 is £775,500.

2. The above includes £120,942 spent between 1992–93 and 1994–95 on consultancy to support the market testing programme, which resulted in an annualised net saving to 1994–95 of £291,000 per annum, with additional but not yet quantified savings expected in 1995–96 and subsequent years.

3. Other consultancies have been to carry out necessary specialised work beyond this department's normal scope, rather than to realise direct cost savings. They have related primarily to the construction of a new building, also to the installation of computer systems and training.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's department, to reply to your recent question on expenditure on external consultants for each of the years a) 1979–80 b) 1989–90, c) 1991–92, d) 1993–94, e) 1994–95 and f) 1995–96 i) to date and ii) as estimated for the whole year and the estimated savings accruing to the Land Registry from the use of consultants in each of these years. I can provide the following information:

a) 1979–80 No record of any expenditure on consultancy

b) 1989–90 £42,900

c) 1991–92 £98,539

d) 1993–94 £157,022

e) 1994–95 £196,011

f) 1995–96 i) £236,000 (at 31.12.95)

ii) £468,000

HM Land Registry has not used consultancy services extensively (the actual cost in 1994–95, for instance, represented only 0.1% of its total expenditure) and its main engagements are for specialist tuition, Information System business services, and consultancy arising from the Market Test programme. It is not possible to quantify annual cost savings but consultants services have made a contribution to the overall cost savings achieved by the Registry which, for example, in 1994–95, amounted to a 2.9% reduction in unit costs in real terms over the previous year.

I do hope that this answers the points raised with the Parliamentary Secretary but please contact me if I can be of any further assistance.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to the above Question about expenditure on external consultants.

Since April 1995, the date on which the Court Service was established, £1.11m has been spent on external consultants. Forecast expenditure for the whole year 1995–96 is £3.49m. The estimate for 1996–97 has yet to be finalised.

In many cases consultants have been used where it has not been possible to provide the same service 'in-house' or where their contribution has been a small part of a much larger project. It is therefore not possible to assess what specific savings have been achieved as a result of their contribution.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11376]

Mr. Evans: The expenditure on publicity by the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service, was as follows: 1989–90—£33,616; 1991–92—£35,734; 1993–94—£46,667; 1994–95—£78,961; 1995–96 to date—£83,339. The estimate for the year 1995–96 is £113,000. The estimate for 1996–97 has not yet been finalised but will be approximately £125,000. The figure for publicity expenditure for the year 1979–80 is not available.

These figures represent expenditure on press and public relations, excluding staff costs. There was no expenditure on publicity advertising in any of the years specified, and none is planned for 1996–97.

The Lord Chancellor is responsible for three agencies other than the Court Service: Her Majesty's Land Registry, the Public Record Office, and the Public Trust Office. The question concerns specific operational matters on which the chief executives of these three agencies are best placed to provide answers. I have accordingly asked the chief executives to reply direct.

The Lord Chancellor's Department is responsible for two non-Departmental public bodies, the Legal Aid Board and the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct. Publicity expenditure by the Legal Aid Board, which was established in 1989, was as follows: 1989–90—£103,000; 1991–92—£132,000; 1993–94—£141,000; 1994–95—£207,000; 1995–96 to date—£153,178 and estimated for the total year—£218,000. The latest estimate for 1996–97 is £244,000. Publicity expenditure by the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct is contained within its budget for postage and telephone and is not separately itemised.

Letter from Duncan Simpson to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, who is away from the Office on official business, I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the annual expenditure on publicity by the agencies for which he is responsible.

1. Total expenditure has been:

| | Advertising £ | Press and Public Relations £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1989–90 | nil | 47,000 |
| 1990–91 | 28 | 50,000 |
| 1991–92 | 20,666 | 53,000 |
| 1992–93 | 77,392 | 57,000 |
| 1993–94 | 86,505 | 58,000 |
| 1994–95 to date | 82,900 | 45,000 |
| 1995–96 budget | 107,500 | 59,500 |
| 1996–97 budget | 70,000 | 61,000 |

2. Figures for 1979–80 could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.3. The advertising figures are for staff recruitment and, since 1991–92, for approximately £1,500 per annum spent on advertising our own products for sale.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 19 January 1996, regarding the assessment made of the total expenditure for publicity for the financial years 1979–80, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95 and the estimated cost for the same in 1996–97.

It is Government policy that the Public Trust Office does not advertise for the services it provides.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on expenditure on publicity for each of the years a) 1979–80 b) 1989–90, c) 1991–2, d) 1993–94, e) 1994-95 and f) 1995–96 i) to date and ii) as estimated for the whole year and estimated expenditure for 1996–97. I can provide the following information:

| | Advertising £ | Press and Public Relations £ |
|---|---|---|
| (a) 1979–80 | 23,696 | — |
| (b) 1989–90 | 36,434 | 2,684 |
| (c) 1991–92 | 6,342 | 22,322 |
| (d) 1993–94 | 16,233 | 10,554 |
| (e) 1994–95 | 10,070 | 71,765 |
| (f) 1995–96 | (i) [1]9,248 | [1]82,164 |
| | (ii) 13,000 | 131,800 |

[1] At 31 December 1995.

The increase in 1995–96 is mainly due to the production of a Land Registry Corporate Video.

Estimated expenditure figures for 1996–97 are not yet available. The annual non-staff budget setting process is currently taking place and the Land Registry Budget Committee has yet to decide the final budget allocation.

I do hope that this answers the points raised with the Parliamentary Secretary but please contact me if I can be of any further assistance.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11378]

Mr. Evans: Details of expenditure on telephones for LCD headquarters and associated offices, the Legal Aid Board and the Advisory Committee on Legal Education and Conduct are set out in the table, where figures are available.

The chief executives of the Court Service, the Public Trust Office, the Land Registry and the Public Records Office will be replying separately.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on expenditure on telephone costs for each of the years i) 1979–80 ii) 1989–90, iii) 1991–92, iv) 1993–94, v) 1994–95, vi) 1995–96 and vii) 1996–97 and if internal telephone directories are available. I can provide the following information:

i) 1979–80: £341,149

ii) 1989–90: £1,198,010

iii) 1991–92: £1,067,855

Significant savings were achieved between 1993–94 and 1994–95 due mainly to the change of management in the Government Telecommunications Network (GTN).

Internal telephone directories are available throughout the Land Registry.

I do hope that this answers the points raised with the Parliamentary Secretary but please contact me if I can be of any further assistance.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply in respect of the Court Service to your Question about estimated annual telephone costs.

The projected figures for estimated annual telephone costs from 3 April 1995, the date on which the Court Service was established, are:

1996–1997: £3,044,761

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 19 January 1996, regarding the estimated annual telephone costs for each financial year since 1979 and for the forthcoming financial year. You also asked whether internal telephone directories were available to all staff.

The Public Trust Office became an Agency in July 1994 and the estimated figures prior to that time for the year 1979–80, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1992–93, and 1993–94 form part of the LCD total figures and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. For the following years to 1997 the figures are as follows:

1994–95: £105,000

1995–96: £98,000

1996–97: £98,000

Each member of staff within the Public Trust Office has access to an internal telephone directory.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 25 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about annual telephone costs, and the availability to staff of internal telephone directories, in the executive agencies for which he is responsible.

1993–94: £124,739

1994–95: £101,170

1995–96: £125,050 (budget)

1996–97: £130,350 (budget)

Figures for earlier years could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas.

Wayne Thompson

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much is owed in respect of legal aid to Wayne Thompson, solicitor, 9 Wimpole street, London; and when payment will be made. [10474]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: It is not possible to assess the total amount owed to Mr. Thompson in respect of legal aid where work is on-going. Payments from the legal aid fund are made only in response to claims submitted. As at 18 January 1996, the London area office of the Legal Aid Board was not aware of any claims submitted by Mr. Thompson which remain unpaid. For criminal higher legal aid, one outstanding claim for an interim payment has been identified for which payment is expected to be made within the next few days.

Repossessions

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) proceedings have been commenced to repossess homes and (b) homes have been repossessed in Northern Ireland since 1989. [10562]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The number of writs and originating summonses issued in respect of mortgages by the Chancery division of the Northern Ireland High Court for each year since 1989 is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1989 | 2,459 |
| 1990 | 2,599 |
| 1991 | 3,061 |
| 1992 | 1,646 |
| 1993 | 1,728 |
| 1994 | 1,372 |
| 1995 | 1,220 |
| Total | 14,085 |

There are no reliable figures available on the number of decrees for possession granted on foot of these.

The Enforcement of Judgments Office, which is responsible for delivering vacant possession in Northern Ireland, has received the following number of notices of intention to enforce decrees for possession for each year over the period.

1989: 718
1990: 748
1991: 832
1992: 683
1993: 492
1994: 468
1995: 396

The figures relating to the number of these which resulted in actual repossessions taking place are not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fish Farming

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how often trout fattening ponds are visited by his Department's officials; [10666]

(2) what have been the wild fish losses at fish farm intakes over the past 21 years; [10667]

(3) if Department staff report the number of dead wild fish observed at the intake of fish farms when monitoring the farms. [10668]

Mr. Baldry: All farms holding trout in England and Wales are inspected by fish disease inspectors once every six months, and fish sampled every 24 months on a routine basis; visits and sampling would also occur whenever there is suspicion of disease. Should inspectors observe dead wild fish or be notified of such occurrences, they would take appropriate disease control action. Inspectors would also notify the National Rivers Authority, which is responsible for the regulation and management of salmon and freshwater fisheries in England and Wales, including pollution control measures. However, no record is kept of wild fish losses at fish farm intakes.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to review procedures for the veterinary inspection of live animals for transport; and if he will make a statement; [11118]

(2) what representations he has received in relation to the efficiency of veterinary inspection of live animals for transport. [11117]

Mrs. Browning: The Department is considering recent allegations that our detailed inspection procedures for live exports have not been followed. We will take firm action if a full assessment of all the available facts shows that there has been any failure to observe the rules or certification instructions.

Chernobyl Explosion (Compensation)

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost of providing compensation to farmers who were affected by the Chernobyl incident, in both England and Wales. [11155]

Mrs. Browning: As at 30 November 1995, the total cost of compensation to farmers who were affected by the Chernobyl incident in England has been £1,335,757 and in Wales the total cost has been £7,903,872.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees; [10949]

(2) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10950]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The Department has not incurred significantly increased consultancy and running costs in the tendering process of the private finance initiative, compared with those which would have been incurred in a more traditional approach.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the mobile phones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last six years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11005]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 23 January 1996]: There is no information available prior to May 1994 on the cloning of mobile telephones supplied to the Ministry. Since then it is known that a total of 13 of the Ministry's mobile telephones have been cloned.

There is no information available on the specific dates when cloning took place, only the date when it was discovered. This information, broken down by years, is as follows:

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Young Entrepreneurs (Training)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to encourage the provision of high quality training for young entrepreneurs. [10893]

Mr. Paice: The enterprise in higher education programme encouraged the development of enterprising graduates, whose skills fit them for a wide range of opportunities in both the private and pubic sectors.

Enterprise in higher education commenced in 1987. More than 60 universities have participated in the initiative, which ends this year. Good practice is being disseminated to other higher education institutions.

University Facilities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many universities in the United Kingdom have developed joint programmes with their local authority economic development units. [10895]

Mr. Forth: The required information is not collected centrally by the Department.

Information Technology

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of officials within her Department have attended a training course on information technology skills. [11227]

Mr. Robin Squire: Around 90 per cent. of DFEE staff have received training in information technology skills

Much of the training is devolved and takes place locally, and a more precise estimate could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Home-to-school Transport

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals she has to change the law concerning responsibilities for home-to-school transport. [11237]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has no proposals to change the law governing the provision of home-to-school transport.

Education Multi-media Industry

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the involvement of the United Kingdom in the EU task force on multi-media in education. [11132]

Mr. Forth: Members of this task force were appointed by the European Commission. A number of United Kingdom organisations were consulted by the task force in producing drafts of its report. Formal discussions between the Commission and member states on the proposals arising from the work of the task force are expected later this year.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if providers of early learning education associated with (a) supermarkets, (b) franchised retail suppliers of early learning materials and (c) companies providing early-years schools in several locations will, under the proposed legislation, be permitted to operate within the voucher scheme on similar conditions as local education authorities or other providers. [11896]

Mr. Robin Squire: To join the voucher scheme, all private and voluntary providers must either be registered under the Children Act 1989 or finally registered as an independent school, and must undertake to meet the quality criteria and inspection arrangements as set out in "Nursery Education Scheme: The Next Steps."

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many provider institutions have expressed interest in participating in phase one of the nursery voucher scheme in (a) Wandsworth, (b) Westminster, (c) Kensington and Chelsea and (d) Norfolk. [11482]

Mr. Squire: In the three London boroughs, all eligible maintained schools have applied to join the scheme through their local education authority and around 50 private and voluntary providers have applied so far. In Norfolk 154 are maintained schools and 178 private and voluntary providers have so far applied to join the scheme.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 472-73, (1) what estimates she has made of the cost of employing (a) 200 registered nursery education inspectors in phase one and (b) 4,000 registered nursery education inspectors in phase two of the voucher scheme; [11480]

(2) what estimate she has made of the cost of carrying out (a) 600 inspections of voucher-redeeming institutions in phase one and (b) 12,000 inspections of voucher-redeeming institutions in phase two of the voucher scheme. [11481]

Mr. Squire: The costs of inspection and administration together are estimated to be £5 millions for phase 1 and £20 million for phase 2. My Department is in discussions with Ofsted about the likely cost of employing sufficient inspectors and carrying out inspections in both phases of the voucher scheme.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what procedures will be established to ensure the prevention of fraud in the nursery voucher system. [11478]

Mr. Squire: We have worked closely with the voucher agency to set up a system which will deter and detect fraud. Vouchers will incorporate a number of security features to prevent counterfeiting and will be issued only to parents whose children are on the child benefit centre database or who provide full documentation.

Voluntary Aided Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she now expects to publish her Department's analysis of the responses to the consultation paper on self-government for voluntary aided schools. [11483]

Mrs. Gillan: A summary of responses has been placed in the Library. Copies are available from the Department on request.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the expenditure of her Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate she has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if she will estimate the savings accruing to her Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11343]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in her Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11345]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information in the form requested is not available.

Nursery Education

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 15 January, Official Report, columns 471-72, what estimates have been made of the shortfall of places for four-year-olds in (a) Wandsworth, (b) Westminster, (c) Kensington and Chelsea and (d) Norfolk, taking into account provision in the private, voluntary and maintained sectors, expressed in each case as (i) a number and (ii) a percentage of all four-year-olds in each local education authority. [11479]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on the numbers of four-year-olds in nursery education other than maintained and independent schools in individual local education authorities is not held centrally.

Local Government Finance, Cheshire

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total value of the standard spending assessment for the Cheshire county council; how much was passed on to local schools by the county council; what was retained by the county council to cover schools' administration and other services; what average figure per school in Cheshire this total represents; and what was the average cost of employing (a) a primary and (b) a secondary school teacher in Cheshire in 1995–96. [11836]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the education standard spending assessment for Cheshire in 1995–96, together with the size of the general schools budget—total local education authority spending on its schools—the aggregated schools budget—the sum delegated to schools—and the balance of the general schools budget not delegated to schools, with each figure also expressed as an average per school. The last three figures are taken from the budget statement published by the Cheshire LEA in accordance with section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988.

| | £ million | £ per school |
|---|---|---|
| Education SSA | 332.027 | 639,744 |
| General schools budget | 340.071 | 655,243 |
| Aggregated schools budget | 261.938 | 504,697 |
| Balance of general schools budget retained by LEA | 78.133 | 150,545 |

The LEA also has to meet the cost of recoupment of annual maintenance grant paid to grant-maintained schools, and I have asked the chairman of the funding agency to write to the hon. Member about the level of recurrent grant paid to Cheshire GM schools in 1995–96.

Information about the cost of employing teachers individual LEAs in 1995–96 is not held centrally.

National Curriculum

Sir Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the future of the national curriculum assessment and testing arrangements. [12230]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In January 1995, I asked the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority to conduct a full review of national curriculum assessment and testing arrangements for seven, 11 and 14-year-olds.

SCAA's report on its wide-ranging and thorough review is published today. It draws on teachers' comments, evaluation reports, evidence from Her Majesty's inspectors and studies by teacher associations, local education authorities and other organisations.

I accept in full the recommendations made by SCAA concerning the future of the assessment programme. We announced earlier this month the availability of a new grant in 1996–97 to fund additional assessment training for the primary school teachers who need it most—those at key stage 2.

SCAA's review showed that most teachers want a period of stability. That is what we now intend. We shall introduce changes only if they will bring real improvements and if they will: maintain rigorous and reliable assessment for all seven, 11 and 14-year-olds; be consistent with the complementary roles of tests and teacher assessment; and take into account the work load on teachers.

Some of SCAA's recommendations have already been or are being implemented, to ensure the benefits are available as soon as possible. For example, in the wake of our consultation last summer, SCAA has already set out for schools the 1996 assessment arrangements, but, for the most part, SCAA's review focuses on 1997 and beyond. I intend to carry out extensive consultation on my provisional decisions on these proposals and have today published a consultation document accordingly.

I have also announced today the national results of the 1995 assessments for seven, 11, and 14-year-olds and my decision to give greater access to schools' assessment results in order to raise standards, following our consultation in the autumn.

Copies of my exchange of correspondence with Sir Ron Dearing about SCASS's review; the Government's consultation document; a letter from Her Majesty's chief inspector; and the national curriculum assessment results of seven, 11 and 14-year-olds have been placed in the Library.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what occasions since her appointment (a) she or her Ministers and (b) her officials have held meetings with (i) the chief executive of S4C, (ii) the chairman of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority and (iii) members of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority. [11069]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: Ministers and officials have held meetings with the chairman and chief executive of S4C, as with other bodies for which my Department is responsible, from time to time. Most recently, the Under-Secretary of State, Lord Inglewood, met the chairman and chief executive of S4C to discuss the Broadcasting Bill on Monday 15 January.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will place in the Library all correspondence sent by her Department to the chairman or members of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority or to the chief executive of S4C communicating the Department's intention to change the funding basis of S4C. [11071]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: I have placed in the Library of both Houses a copy of my right hon. Friend's letter to the chairman of S4C of 15 December.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) whether the figures for the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority spending plans in the years 1997–98 and 1998–99 contained in table 2 of her press release of 28 November 1995, were calculated on the basis of the planned new formula for calculating S4C income announced on 15 December 1995; [11073]

(2) what is her estimate of the funding of the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority from her Department in the calendar years (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999 and (d) 2000 if no change were to take place in the basis of funding S4C; and if she will additionally express these figures as a year on year percentage change. [11077]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The figure for 1996–97, contained in the press release to which the hon. Gentleman refers, derives from best available estimates of the application of the Broadcasting Act 1990 formula, although uncertainties for later years led the Department to uprate the estimated 1996–97 figure by £2 million for each of the following years for planning purposes in the expectation that additional funding would be found if needed in later years of the survey to meet S4C's statutory entitlement.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will express the income of S4C on a calendar year basis from 1994–1999, inclusive using the financial spending plan figures for the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority contained in table 2 of her press release of 28 November 1995. [11076]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The information the hon. Member requests, based on the particular table he specifies, is as follows:

£ million

| | Estimated outturn | | Spending plans | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1994[1] | 1995 | 1996 | 1997 | 1998 | 1999 |
| Not applicable | 64.0 | 67.9 | 73.3 | 75.3 | 77.3 |

[1] The figures for the 1994 calendar year did not appear in the table to which the hon. Member refers. In 1994, S4C received £57.971 million from the Department of National Heritage.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will express as a percentage the year on year increase in the figures for the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority for 1994–95 To 1998–99 which were issued in table 2 of her press release of 29 November 1995. [11074]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The information the hon. Member requests is as follows:

| | Outturn | Estimated outturn | | Spending Plans | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 1994–95 | 1995–96 | 1996–97 | 1997–98 | | 1998–99 |
| £ million | 64.0 | 67.0 | 73.3 | 75.3 | | 77.3 |
| Percentage increase between above figures | | 6.0 | 7.9 | 2.7 | 2.7 | |

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are her estimates of S4C income for the years (a) 1997, (b) 1998 and (c) 1999 and (d) 2000 taking into account the changes she announced on 15 December 1995; and if she will additionally express these figures as a year on year percentage change. [11078]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: My Department estimates that S4C funding in 1997 will be in the region of £73.3 million, but that figure cannot be assessed with certainty at this stage. Firm estimates of income for S4C in later years deriving from the proposals in the Bill cannot be made until the level of payment to S4C for 1997 is finalised.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are her estimates of the percentage change in qualifying terrestial advertising revenue year-on-year for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96, (c) 1996–97, (d) 1997–98 and (e) 1998–99; and if she will additionally express these as calendar year percentage changes for the years (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 (iii) 1996, (iv) 1997 and (v) 1998. [11075]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: My Department does not compile estimations of terrestrial television advertising revenues. That is a matter for the Independent Television Commission.

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) when her Department communicated the intention to change S4C's funding basis to the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority and the chief executive of S4C; [11070]

(2) when she or her Ministers or officials told the Welsh Office of their plans to change the funding basis of S4C. [11072]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The Broadcasting Bill was published on 15 December 1995. It reflected discussions with all interested Government Departments. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State spoke and wrote to the chairman of S4C on the morning of 15 December about the contents of the Bill.

Millennium Projects

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations she held with people from Wales, or what consultation she required the millennium commissioners to hold with people in Wales before reaching a decision on the respective merits as perceived by the people of Wales, in respect of the various schemes being proposed for major millennium projects in Wales; and if she will make a statement. [9393]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall reply to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in her Department for each of the years (a) 1991–92, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96. [11341]

Mr. Sproat: The absenteeism rate in days for the Department of National Heritage since it was created in April 1992 are shown in the table:

| Year | Number of days |
|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 1,839 |
| 1994–95 | 2,489 |
| 1995–96 | [1]2,752 |

[1] Estimated figure for whole year based on actual figure as at end of December 1995.

TRANSPORT

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what public funds have been allocated by (a) the Franchising Director and (b) other sources to offset the liabilities which Railtrack faces, in respect of penalty payments under the track access agreements with train operating companies with special reference to schedules 4 and 8 of these agreements. [9945]

Mr. Watts: As foreshadowed in his policy statement in January 1995, the Rail Regulator has recently issued advice to BR and Railtrack on the level of additional charges which Railtrack should raise in consequence of its additional liabilities under schedules 4 and 8 to passenger track access agreements. This time limited measure is intended to allow Railtrack to adjust to the demanding targets in its performance regime, which will place on Railtrack strong financial incentives to improve its performance.

For 1995–96, no additional public expenditure will be associated with these arrangements. No decisions on funding matters for 1996–97 have yet been taken.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what basis the debt of the British Railways Board was shared between BRB and Railtrack, upon the formation of Railtrack. [9941]

Mr. Watts: The apportionment of long-term debt between BR and Railtrack on 1 April 1994 was as follows:

BRB: £1,269 million

Railtrack: £1,973 million

This was judged to be the most appropriate apportionment of debt, given the nature and size of the two bodies, when Railtrack was formed.

Rail Grant (Strathclyde)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what level of metropolitan rail grant was paid to the regional passenger transport executives and Strathclyde regional council for the financial year 1995–96. [11233]

Mr. Watts: The estimated level of metropolitan railway grant to be paid in 1995–96 to the English passenger transport authorities is £72 million. The estimated level of MRG to be paid to Strathclyde regional Council is £60.2 million.

Trains (Speed Restrictions)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains speed restrictions imposed for a period of greater than six weeks are currently in place on the (a) London, Tilbury and Southend line, (b) Great Western line, (c) South West main line and South West suburban lines, (d) InterCity east coast main line, (e) Midland main line, (f) South London line and Sussex coast line and (g) Gatwick Express line, indicating the information also for spur lines; how long the restrictions have been in place; when the restrictions are due to be lifted; and what is the estimated cost of the works required to lift those restrictions. [11234]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack informs me that the number of all speed restrictions currently in place are (a) London, Tilbury and Southend Line: none; (b) Great Western Line: 16; (c) South West main line and suburban lines: four; (d) InterCity east coast main line: six; (e) Midland main line: two; (f) south London line and Sussex coast line: six; (g) Gatwick Express line: none.

Details of how long the restrictions have been in place, details of spur line restrictions, and estimated repair costs are not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, Railtrack confirms that repair time scales are in accordance with both operational requirements and Railtrack's rigorous safety standards.

Railway Property

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of property currently owned by (a) the British Railways Board and (b) Railtrack plc is classified as contaminated. [11235]

Mr. Watts: This information is not available in the form requested.

It is to be expected that some railway activities have had the potential to cause contamination of land. The British Railways Board takes protective action where there are known problems with land formerly in operational railway use and carries out investigations prior to the sale of property where significant contamination is a possibility because of the previous uses. Railtrack seeks to identify and manage those operational sites and facilities which may represent a significant actual or potential risk of harm to the environment.

East Lancashire Railway Line

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sources of public funding are available for improvements to the east Lancashire railway line; what decision the Government office north-west has made in respect of this project for regional challenge funding; and if he will make a statement. [11606]

Mr. Watts: Although the proposal for improvements to the East Lancashire railway line formed an unsuccessful bid for funding under regional challenge in 1995, the Government office for the north-west is continuing to work with the promoters to examine other funding options, including the possibility of carrying forward some elements of the project through mainstream European regional development fund grant. Lancashire county council can also seek funding in 1997–98 through the transport policies and programmes process, by making a renewed bid for funds as part of the Blackburn/Hyndburn local transport package.

Highways Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the work to date of the Highways Agency's environmental unit; and what plans there are to increase its resources. [11242]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 25 January 1996: -

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the work to date of the Highways Agency's environmental unit and what plans there are to increase its resources.

The Agency Environmental Policy Division (AEPD) was set up on 31 January 1995 and is approaching the end of its first year of operation. The work of the Division to date has been directed towards the development of an Environmental Strategy for the Highways Agency. The Division has also established itself as the HA focal point for contact with statutory and non-statutory environmental organisations.

The Division has coordinated the preparation of the environmental section of the Agency's first Annual Report and produced a booklet on the archaeological work carried out on the trunk road network in 1994/95. Both of these were published in October 1995. I enclose a copy of the archaeology booklet. You should have received a copy of the Annual Report.

In line with good management practice the resources needed to discharge the duties of the division are kept under review. There are no plans to increase the complement of the Division for the present.

I hope that this is useful.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 13 December to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers), Official Report, column 677, on what date he learned that the costs of the Newbury bypass were to increase to £101 million. [11220]

Mr. Watts: The estimated cost of the Newbury bypass is £101 million; it has not increased by that sum. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State was aware of the revised cost during the review of the roads programme last year. The estimate reflects current price trends.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11347]

Mr. Norris: The figures requested are as follows:

| Year | Expenditure £ million |
|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 24.2 |
| 1994–95 | 29.0 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 31.0 |
| 1995–96[1] (whole year) | 51.5 |
| 1996–97[1] | 26.6 |

[1] Estimated.

Figures from 1979–80, 1989–90 and 1991–92 are not available except at disproportionate cost.

The totals exclude expenditure on road scheme consultancies as they relate largely to production and planning work.

It is not possible to estimate the savings accruing from this expenditure, the vast majority of which was for specific deliverables such as privatisation; and very little of which had the aim of achieving savings.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11348]

Mr. Norris: The expenditure by the Department is as follows:

1979–80: 6,686,000
1989–90: 5,386,000
1991–92: 7,380,000
1993–94: 8,275,000
1994–95: 8,039,000
1995–96: 7,472,000
1996–97: n/a

A forecast for 1996–97 is not yet available. All figures include vat.

The figures cover all publicity expenditure, including television, radio, press advertising and other promotional material. It is not possible to break these figures down between advertising and press and public relations.

Information on non-departmental public bodies and agencies is not held centrally, or otherwise readily available. Available data is given in the table.

Road Salting

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effects of road salting on (i) roadside flora, (ii) roadside fauna, (iii) vehicles and (iv) bridges. [11644]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 25 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question asking what assessment he has commissioned and evaluated on the effects of road salting on roadside flora, fauna, vehicles and bridges.

A comprehensive study of the effects of road salting on roadside flora was carried out by the Transport Research Laboratory in 1982. The subsequent report was "An Assessment of The Conditions For Shrubs Alongside Motorways" by Colwill, Thompson and Rutter, Laboratory Report 1061.

A study was also commissioned in April 1989 into the performance of concrete in bridges. Known as the "Maunsell Report", its findings have been included within the 15 year bridge rehabilitation programme.

There has not been any separate assessments on evaluating the effects of road salting on roadside fauna or on vehicles.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11349]

Mr. Norris: Information on sickness absence in the Department of Transport, which is available only for calendar years, is as follows:

| Year | Average working days of sickness per staff year |
|---|---|
| 1989 | 8.1 |
| 1990 | 9.4 |
| 1991 | 9.9 |
| 1992 | 10.2 |
| 1993 | 10.7 |
| 1994 | 9.4 |
| 1995 | [1]9.0 |

[1] Estimated.

In 1979–90 sick absence rates were not separately recorded for the Department.

Chiswick Flyover

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the cost of refurbishment of the Chiswick flyover on the London A4, the cause of its deterioration and the time taken to repair it. [11645]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 25 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking him if he will estimate the cost of the refurbishment of the Chiswick flyover, the cause of its deterioration and the time taken to repair it.

My reply relates to work to the M4 elevated section which extends from Junction 1 (east of Chiswick roundabout) to Boston Manor playing fields.

It is too early to be precise about the cost of the refurbishment of the elevated section of the M4. In order to maintain access on this busy route between London, Heathrow and the west and to minimise disruption to road users, the work will have to be phased and could take up to ten years. Preliminary estimates suggest that the cost will be in the region of £30m.

The M4 elevated structure is some 30 years old. Repairs are required because over the years water containing de-icing salts has leaked from the road surface into the crossheads at the top of the piers. When this occurs steel reinforcement in the piers begins to rust loosening and pushing off the protective surface concrete.

There is an ongoing maintenance programme to install new bridge deck joints to prevent further deterioration of the structure and to review loose surface concrete. This work is being undertaken at night.

Investigations to prepare a programme a further repairs are still ongoing. There are no plans for weekday or daytime closures of this section of the M4 motorway.

Sight Tests

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he expects to be made in the eyesight test for public service vehicle and lorry drivers; and what number of these drivers he expects will fail the new test. [11897]

Mr. Norris: From 1 July, all those who wish to drive large goods or passenger-carrying vehicles—whether for the first time or to continue doing so—will, when they apply for or to renew their licence, have to meet the minimum uncorrected vision standard in both eyes, rather than in one eye only as at present. We estimate that some 3,000 current licence holders will not meet this requirement.

Global Warming

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what revisions of emission targets will be made to accord with the findings of the intergovernmental conference on climate control on human influence on the global climate. [10304]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The UK target for reduction of greenhouse gas emissions remains that set down for all developed countries in the climate change convention—to return emissions to 1990 levels by the year 2000—although we now expect to surpass this. For the period after 2000, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has called for developed countries to agree to aim to reduce their emissions by a figure in the range of 5 to 10 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. He intends to take every opportunity to press his international colleagues to support that target and will be highlighting the important findings of the intergovernmental panel on climate change whenever he does so.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Research

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has carried out and with what findings into what happens to claimants aged (a) 16 and 17 years and (b) 18 years and over who have become disentitled to state benefit; and if he will make a statement. [8069]

Mr. Roger Evans: Vulnerable 16 and 17-year-olds who meet the qualifying conditions have access to social security benefits including income support and housing benefit. In 1990, the Department of Social Security commissioned research by MORI into the circumstances of young people aged 16 and 17 who claimed income support via the severe hardship provision. This was published in 1991 and is in the Library. People who are aged 18 or over qualify for benefits if they meet the entitlement conditions. We have not conducted research into people who fail to meet those conditions.

Mortgage Interest Payments

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate savings since 1 October 1995 as a result of his measures announced on 30 November 1994 to limit or withdraw income support for mortgage interest payments indicating the figures for (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) the projected figures for 1996–97; what further plans he has to (i) limit and (ii) restrict mortgage interest payments under income support; and if he will make a statement. [9391]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated savings from the measures announced by the Secretary of State on 30 November 1994 and introduced on 10 April 1995 and 2 October 1995 to restrict the amount of mortgage interest met by income support are £30 million in 1995–96, £170 million in 1996–97 and £240 million in 1997–98.

We have no further plans of the kind described but all aspects of social security are kept under review.

One-parent Families

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of (a) families with children, (b) one-parent families, (c) one-parent families headed by a divorced or separated person, (d) one-parent families headed by a widow or widower and (e) one-parent families headed by a single unmarried mother receive income support. [9605]

Mr. Roger Evans: The available information is set out in the table.

Income support recipients: GB 1993

| | Number of IS recipients (thousands) | As a percentage of the relevant population |
|---|---|---|
| Families with dependent children | 1,600 | 23 |

Parents with Care

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of parents with care for whom good cause has not been accepted by the Child Support Agency have had a reduced benefit directive imposed, broken down by centre, since April 1995; and how he explains variations between centres. [10181]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11394]

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

Internal telephone directories are available to staff in the Department, its agencies and its non-departmental public bodies.

Family Credit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are currently in receipt of family credit in (a) the City of Durham constituency and (b) the northern region; and what has been the cost of this benefit in each year since 1989–90. [10641]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 24 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about how many families are currently in receipt of Family Credit (FC) in (a) the City of Durham constituency and (b) the Northern Region; and what has been the cost of this benefit in each year since 1989-90.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies, the borders of which are not the same as those of benefit offices. Statistics are available for the North Durham District which includes the Durham, Chester le street, Peterlee and Seaham offices. The number of families claiming FC in North Durham District is 4080, as at 10 November 1995. These figures are provisional and subject to change.

The Benefits Agency is no longer organised on a regional basis and is now divided into Areas and Territories. FC figures for Scotland and Northern Territory could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Annexe A gives details of the national cost of FC since 1989/90.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

A detailed, 64 page leaflet "A guide to the Social Fund", published in English.

A series of three posters, publicising the help available and outlining the basic conditions people would need to satisfy before they might be eligible for an award from the Social Fund.

The leaflets are made available to the public from Benefits Agency (BA) offices. They are also available to welfare advisers, Post Offices, Doctors Surgeries and Libraries external to the BA on request, from BA offices and HMSO, Chadderton. Posters are displayed in Benefits Agency offices and are also available to welfare advisers.

The Social Fund publicity budget for 1995–96 is £77,300.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Evans: The administration of the Social Fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 24 January 1996:

The information is not available in the format requested. With the creation of the Benefits Agency in April 1991, former Departmental Local Offices and Regions were grouped into Districts and Area and Territorial Directorates. The information that is available is contained in Annex A - C, for the financial years 1993\94, 1994\95 and 1995\96 year to date. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the numbers of people in receipt of incapacity benefit who are no longer eligible for invalidity benefit at the most recent date for which information is available. [11088]

Mr. Burt: On 13 April 1995, all recipients of invalidity benefit transferred to incapacity benefit at the rate of the benefit in payment. At 31 August 1995, the latest date for which information is available, 1.64 million [1]people were in receipt of incapacity benefit who had, before 13 April 1995, been in receipt of invalidity benefit.

[1]Note: Figures excludes a small number of cases paid clerically.

National Disability Council

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he is in a position to announce the chairman and membership of the National Disability Council. [12066]

Mr. Burt: I am delighted to announce that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security has appointed David Grayson[1] of Business in the Community, as the chairman of the National Disability Council, and the following council members:

Ann Foster[1], Director of The Scottish Consumer Council
Tanni Grey[1], Chairman of the British Wheelchair Racing Association

Jenny White, Deputy Legal Advisor to the Electricity Association

[1] indicates that the member is either a disabled person or the parent or guardian of a person with disabilities

My right hon. Friend will also be inviting the chairman of the Northern Ireland Disability Council to become a member once he or she has been appointed.

In making these appointments, the Secretary of State has met the commitments given in Parliament that membership will be drawn from throughout Great Britain and sought to provide common membership with the National Advisory Council on the Employment of People with Disabilities and the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Council. More than half of the membership of the council are disabled people or the parents or guardians of people with disabilities. Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by region, the figures for city grants approvals and achievements since May 1988 in terms of (a) schemes approved, (b) grants approved (c) total private sector investment and (d) the gearing ratio and jobs created. [10188]

Sir Paul Beresford: The following table provides the information requested for city grant applications administered either centrally by my Department, or by English partnerships since 10 November 1993, city challenge partnerships and the urban development corporations.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responsibilities local authorities have to house asylum seekers whose applications (a) are under consideration and (b) have been refused; and if he will make a statement. [11203]

Mr. Clappison: At present the homelessness legislation requires local authorities to secure accommodation for asylum seekers who are unintentionally homeless and in priority need, if there is no other accommodation available for them. When the Asylum and Immigration Bill becomes law we propose to make an order that would remove entitlement under the homelessness legislation from those persons who apply for asylum after they have entered this country, and from those asylum seekers who remain in this country pending the outcome of an appeal against an initial negative decision. This will align entitlement under the homelessness legislation with entitlement to housing benefit.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment how much each local authority took from balances to fund budget expenditure in 1995–96. [11596]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have placed the information in the Library of the House.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment what would be the effect of an 8 per cent. increase in council tax on (a) the total yield of council tax in Great Britain, (b) the total yield of council tax in England, (c) the council tax bill in England for each valuation band, (d) the average council tax in England, expressed as the total yield from the council tax divided by the total number of chargeable dwellings, (e) council tax benefit, (f) the retail price index and (g) index-linked benefits. [11728]

Mr. Gummer: The information relating to Wales and Scotland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland.

If council taxes in England had increased in 1995–96 by an additional 8 per cent. compared to actual levels, the approximate effect is estimated as follows:

(b) the gross yield of council tax would increase by £780 million;

(c) average council tax levels, before council tax benefit or transitional relief, would increase

Band A: by £32 to £439

Band B: by £38 to £512

Band C: by £43 to £585

Band D: by £49 to £658

Band E: by £60 to £804

Band F: by £70 to £950

Band G: by £81 to £1,096

Band H: by £97 to £1,316

(d) the average bill per chargeable dwelling, before council tax benefit or transitional relief, would increase by £40 to £538;

(e) council tax benefit would increase by £170 million;

(f) the increase would add around 0.2 percentage points to the percentage change over 12 months in the all items retail prices index.

(g) the precise effect on those benefits linked to the retail prices index would depend on whether this marginal change resulted in benefit levels moving up or staying unchanged. As an approximate guide, an additional 0.2 percentage points on the rate of inflation would add around £80 million to the cost of those benefits in a full year. There would be no effect on those income related benefits which are usually linked to the Rossi index.

Chicken Litter Fuelled Power Station

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the proposal to establish a chicken litter fuelled power station at Poole farm, near Wellington, Somerset; and if he will make a statement. [11826]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government office for the south west has received two representations objecting to the proposed electricity generating station at Wellington, Somerset.

Copies of the relevant papers have not yet arrived from the local planning authority, Somerset county council. Upon receipt it will be considered whether the issues raised merit my intervention.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94,

(v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c); [11398]

(2) what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11395]

The Department, along with other MTS users, maintains a current directory of staff, location and telephone extensions. The MTS service provides an annual estimate of telephony charges.

The Government telephone network connects more than 1,000 Government offices nationwide. As users of the GTN, and GTN dialling codes booklet is available to all staff in this Department. It enables staff to identify the operator in any other Government building for inquiry services.

3. Managerial staff consist of general senior managers for health authorities and executive board members and senior managers for NHS trusts.
4. The figures are based upon gross costs including employers' National Insurance and superannuation contributions.

Early Retirement

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department collects on (a) general practitioners and (b) other medical staff taking early retirement. [10931]

Mr. Malone: Statistical information about general practitioners and other medical staff are recorded, along with all other groups of national health service employees by the NHS Pensions Agency, and are categorised by reason of termination. This covers the type of retirement and age. Data are not readily identifiable for specific posts.

Efficiency Scrutiny

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) by how much the total budget of the North Mersey Community Health Trust has been reduced as a result of his efficiency scrutiny; [10713]

(2) what plans he has to maintain the present efficiency scrutiny arrangements into 1996–97, and beyond. [10711]

Mr. Malone: The efficiency scrutiny into the burdens of paperwork in national health service trusts and health authorities will complete its report within 90 working days. There are no plans at present to extend its remit beyond the end of March 1996. The efficiency scrutiny team will report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, and the Prime Minister's efficiency adviser, Sir Peter Levene, with recommendations for implementations within two years.

The aim of the efficiency scrutiny is to make proposals to cut down on unnecessary bureaucracy in the NHS so that more time and effort can be devoted to patient care. It is not within the terms of reference of the scrutiny to reduce the total budget of any particular trust. Copies of the terms of reference will be placed in the Library.

Continuing Health Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's analysis of the responses to HSG(95)8. [10929]

Mr. Bowis: Yes, in due course.

Medical Negligence Claims

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount of money was paid out by the NHS in relation to medical negligence claims in each of the last five years. [10741]

Mr. Horam: Data on medical negligence alone are not collected centrally. For the estimated costs of overall clinical negligence claims, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Health gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 6 March 1995, Official Report, columns 40–42, for 1991–92 to 1993-294. Figures for 1990–91 and 1994–95 are £60 million and £155 million respectively.

Promotional Calendars (Cost)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will indicate how much "The New NHS Number is for every 1" desktop calendar cost to the NHS Management Executive to produce and send; to how many people it was sent; and if he will list the recipients. [10736]

Mr. Horam: The costs of production and distribution totalled £28,000, and it was sent to 30,000 people. The recipients were general practice managers for distribution within their practices, and those officers with responsibility for implementation of the new NHS number in family health services authorities and acute hospitals.

The purpose of the calendar is to raise awareness of the new NHS number and to provide a visual reminder on a daily basis of the importance of using it. The total cost will be more than offset if as few as 1 per cent. of GP practices use the new NHS number.

School Dental Service

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pupils in Lancashire were both inspected and re-inspected by the school dental service in each year since 1990. [10874]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Mental Health Services

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the expenditure on mental health services as a proportion of total NHS spending in each year since 1988–89. [11053]

Mr. Bowis: Information in the form requested is not available.

Elderly Mentally Ill

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how may EMI beds there are in the Sunderland, Hartlepool and Durham health authority areas; and how many there were in each year since 1990. [11092]

Mr. Horam: Information is published annually in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library. Information for 1990–91 to 1992–93 is available for individual health authorities. For subsequent years, the information was collected by national health services trust or directly managed unit.

Tomlinson Projects

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been allocated to Tomlinson projects in each year since the programme started; and what was the allocation in each year to each health commission in the London area. [11110]

Mr. Malone: The information requested on the London initiative zone programme, since it was established in 1993, is shown in the table:

1. LIZ funds comprise central top-sliced resources together with funds from the Thames regions and local HAs.

2. Figures are based on total LIZ plans, excluding funds carried forward from previous years.

3. The table excludes payments made centrally by the NHS executive and regions in respect of the voluntary sector initiative (1993–94 and 1994–95) and GP educational initiatives (1994–95 and 1995–96).

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the projects funded by Tomlinson moneys to date stating the budget location, name and purpose of each project. [11111]

Mr. Malone: Information on individual London initiative zone projects are available from the chief executives of the health authorities concerned. These are:

Camden and Islington HA

Brent and Harrow HA

East London and the City HA

Kensington and Chelsea and Westminster HA

Redbridge and Waltham Forest HA

Earnings

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS employees earn less than £4 an hour. [11152]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Surgical Beds

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current ratio of surgical beds to head of population (a) nationally, (b) in the northern region and (c) at Sunderland general hospital. [11137]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally is shown.

| | Number |
|---|---|
| England | |
| Annual average daily available beds | 144,803 |
| Population (mid 1994) | 48,707,459 |
| Ratio (beds per 10,000 population) | 29.7 |
| Northern Regional Health Authority | |
| Annual average daily available beds | 10,184 |
| Population (mid 1994) | 2,927,525 |
| Ratio (beds per 10,000 population) | 34.8 |
| City Hospitals Sunderland NHS Trust | |
| Annual average daily available beds | 1,044 |
| Population (mid 1994) | n/a |
| Ratio (beds per 10,000 population) | n/a |

Data on bed availability are collected by broad ward classification. "Surgical beds" has therefore been interpreted as "General and acute" which comprises beds for general patients (including the elderly), the younger physically disabled, neonatal cots not in maternity wards and beds for the terminally ill or those receiving palliative care.

Sunderland Hospitals

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which premises previously operated by Sunderland Hospitals NHS trust have been deemed surplus to requirements in the trust's site and services review; [11150]

(2) what is the annual maintenance cost of the empty hospital and buildings formerly used by Sunderland City Hospitals NHS trust. [11138]

Mr. Horam: These are matters for City Hospitals Sunderland NHS trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. David Graham, chairman of the trust for details.

Personal Information

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research he has evaluated into patients' willingness to share personal health information with NHS administrators; and what studies into patients' views on access to their data by non-clinical staff he proposes to commission; [11472]

(2) what arrangements are in place for patients to give unambiguous consent for the sharing of their identifiable personal health information; and what plans he has to alter such arrangements; [11471]

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given when preparing his guidance booklet for the NHS on the protection of patient information to the principle of obtaining informed consent from patients for the sharing of their identifiable personal health information; [1190]

(4) to what extent the Department requires health service bodies to (a) monitor and (b) control the practice of NHS administrative personnel accessing identifiable personal health information; and if he will make a statement. [11473]

Mr. Horam: We issued a consultation document on the protection of patient information in 1994 and have taken into account the many responses received, including from patients' organisations. We shall shortly be promulgating detailed guidance to the national health service. All NHS bodies and staff have a legal duty to keep patient information confidential. This is also a patients charter requirement.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what penalties exist for unauthorised access to identifiable patient health data; and on how many occasions these penalties have been used in each of the last three years. [11475]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 4 December 1995, Official Report, columns 42–43. The Department of Health does not hold figures about the imposition of legal penalties in such circumstances. National health service employers are responsible for any disciplinary action against staff.

Surgical Wards

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of dedicated surgical wards required at Sunderland district general hospital to meet the needs of the population of Sunderland and north Easington. [11139]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for Sunderland health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. George Bedell, chairman of the authority, for details.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 553, how many trusts have been assessed in respect of their long-term financial viability; and what has been the outcome in each case. [11115]

Mr. Horam: The financial viability of all trusts is assessed as a part of each trust's annual business planning cycle. The outcome in the vast majority of cases has been the continued existence of the trusts as they were established.

Trusts are merged or reconfigured for a number of operational reasons. Those which have resulted largely from concerns over their long-term financial viability are:

West Dorset Community Health NHS trust with West Dorset Mental Health NHS trust to form the Dorset Community NHS trust.

Royal Liverpool University NHS trust and Broadgreen NHS trust to form Royal Liverpool University and Broadgreen NHS trust.

There are also two further proposals subject to public consultation for the following trusts:

Louth and District Healthcare NHS trust and Lincoln Hospital NHS trust.

Royal Free NHS trust and the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital NHS trust.

Public Information Lines

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 812, if he will list those companies currently operating health information lines on behalf of his Department, the value of the contracts involving these companies and the period of their duration. [11145]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 22 January, Official Report, columns 13–14. The additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 December, Official Report, column 227, if he will make a statement indicating the number of calls that have been made to the health information service on a regional health authority basis; and what has been the cost of operating and publicising the health information service to each of the regional health authorities. [11143]

Mr. Horam: Details of the number of calls received by the health information service, on a regional basis, since its establishment in April 1992 to the end of December 1995, and details of the cost of providing the health information service, on a national basis, for the financial years 1992–93 to 1995–96, are shown in the tables.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many intensive care (a) beds and (b) admissions there were for (i) infants, (ii) children and (iii) adults in each health region in each year since 1987. [11197]

Mr. Horam: The information available centrally is published in "Bed availability for England" and "Ordinary and day case admissions for England", both of which are available in the Library.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of expenditure by each health authority in England and Wales for speech and language therapy services for (a) children with a record of needs and (b) children without a record of needs in (i) 1992, (ii) 1993 and (iii) 1994. [11589]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Childhood Cancer Study

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the United Kingdom childhood cancer study organised by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee for Cancer Research is expected to be completed; when the research project was first started; if his Department will ensure that the findings of the report are widely disseminated; and what is the total amount that his Department is contributing to the project. [10662]

Mr. Horam: The United Kingdom childhood cancer study organised by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee on Cancer Research commenced in April 1992, following preliminary studies from 1 January 1992 to 31 March 1992.

Field work and the collection of data are expected to be completed by the end of 1997 with subsequent analysis of the data.

The findings of the whole report will be submitted for publication in peer reviewed scientific journals. The UKCCCR will also disseminate the results more widely after publication.

The total amount that the Department of Health is contributing to the project is currently £635,853.

Employment of Children

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses to the "Employment of Children" consultation document have so far been received; if he will publish them, what action he will take after the close of consultations; and if he will make a statement. [11544]

Mr. Bowis: To date, some 40 responses have been received. I have no plans to publish them. Future action will take into account the views expressed in response to the consultation.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11337]

Mr. Horam: The available absenteeism rates for the Department of Health in the years 1992, 1993 and 1994 are shown in the table.

| Year | Number of days sickness absence per staff year |
|---|---|
| 1992 | 9.4 |
| 1993 | 9.7 |
| 1994 | 8.9 |

Information is not available for 1995 nor for the years prior to 1992.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11338]

Mr. Horam: Annual telephone costs incurred by the Department and its agencies are as follows:

1990–91: £4,739,561

1991–92: £3,017,000

1992–93: £3,490,000

1993–94: £3,419,000

1994–95: £2,951,740

1995–96: £2,914,000 Estimated outturn

1996–97: £3,734,000 Forecast

The figure for 1996–97 additionally includes the telephone costs of approximately 1,100 staff in the eight new national health service executive regional offices at seven separate sites.

Separate figures for the Department of Health are not available before 1990–91 since such costs were incurred by the combined Departments of Health and of Social Security.

No central records are available for the telephone costs of non-departmental public bodies.

Internal telephone directors are available to all staff in the Department, its agencies, and non-departmental public bodies.

Transplant Patients

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has given to health authorities and trusts in the light of the recent case of Mr. Peter Sumners; if he will conduct an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the kidney transplant to Mr. Peter Sumners; what steps he has taken to minimise the risk to transplant patients in the light of the experience of Mr. Peter Sumners; and if he will make a statement. [11832]

Mr. Horam: The question of whether to conduct an investigation into this case, which was as a result of transplant which took place in 1986, is for the local trust. The decision about the suitability of a donor organ for transplant is a clinical one; however, we are confident that the stringent protocols that are now in place will exclude the possibility of such an incident in the future.

Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has evaluated regarding the possible causes of MRSA; and what advice he has issued to doctors regarding prescribing practice in the light of increases in the incidence of MRSA outbreaks. [11834]

Mr. Horam: Methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus is the term used for strains on the bacterium staphylococcus aureus which have become resistant, principally to methicillin, but also to other antibiotics. Clinicians are expected to consider a number of factors, including resistance to infection, before prescribing antibiotics for a patient.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the number of (a) beds and (b) wards closed and i) admissions and (ii) operations postponed or cancelled as a result of outbreaks of MRSA. [11833]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the financial cost of MRSA in terms of isolating and treating patients; and what action he is taking to reduce or control the incidence of MRSA outbreaks. [11835]

Mr. Horam: Information on the costs of methicillin resistant staphylococcus aureus is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 22 January, Official Report,columns 16–17 for information on the action the Department is taking to reduce or control the incidence of outbreaks of MRSA.

Meningitis

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department is taking to ensure early diagnosis of and fast treatment for bacterial meningitis. [11726]

Mr. Horam: Guidance on the early management and treatment of cases and contacts of meningitis has been issued by the Department of Health, the Public Health Laboratory Service and the National Meningitis Trust, which receive funding from the Department of Health. In October 1995, the chief medical officer wrote to all doctors and health authorities alerting them to the expected winter rise in cases of meningococcal infection and reminding doctors of the benefits of early administration of benzylpenicillin. Directors of public health were reminded in November of the need for local plans to respond to outbreaks of meningococcal infection, especially those involving schools. Since issuing its guidelines on control of meningococcal infection in 1989, the PHLS has issued regular updates. The guidelines are sent to all DPHs and local consultants in communicable disease control, the most recent being published in the communicable disease report of 8 December 1995.

The Department and the National Meningitis Trust have collaborated in providing an information leaflet for parents of small children and for teenagers. The leaflet is included in the college bag for students, a group where there is a higher risk of meningitis than for other adults.

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to make available vaccination against bacterial meningitis for all children. [11727]

Mr. Horam: There is no vaccine available against the most common form of meningococcal infection, meningitis group B. Vaccine is available against group C meningitis but this vaccine is not appropriate for use on a routine basis. The vaccine is not effective in children under age two, the group at highest risk of group C meningitis, and in older individuals the protection it provides is only short lived. Because the available vaccine is not very effective, the independent expert committee, the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, which advises the United Kingdom Health Departments, does not recommend the meningitis C vaccine for general immunisation. The vaccine may be used in clearly identified target groups, such as school contacts, whenever local circumstances indicate. No country in the world uses this vaccine for all children.

The Department of Health has invested considerable resources in trials of new meningococcal vaccines.

Haemophilus influenzae b (Hib) used to be the most common form of bacterial meningitis in the under-fives, but Hib meningitis has now been virtually eliminated since the introduction of Hib vaccine into the childhood immunisation programme in 1992.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Democratic Accountability

9. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to improve the democratic accountability of the Northern Ireland Office. [9634]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Our overall objective is, as part of a three-stranded process, to establish locally accountable political arrangements in Northern Ireland, on a widely accepted basis.

Until there is agreement on such arrangements and they are in place, I want to improve the democratic accountability of the Northern Ireland Office and the Northern Ireland Departments. I need therefore to consult the Northern Ireland parties which I shall shortly do. The remit of the Northern Ireland Grand Committee is, for example, an area with a promising potential.

Republican Terrorism

10. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) violent attacks and (b) murders have been committed by republican terrorist organisations in Northern Ireland in the last year. [9635]

Sir John Wheeler: In the period 15 January to 14 January 1996 there were 225 punishment attacks, of which 144 have been attributed to republican groups. Over the same period there have been 10 terrorist-related deaths, of which eight have been attributed to republican groups.

Arms and Explosives

12. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current positions taken by paramilitary organisations in Ulster on the surrender of weapons. [9637]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The international body concluded that the paramilitaries will not decommission any arms prior to all-party negotiaions. We see no sufficient reason why they should not begin. But no one should be allowed to block the path of peace. That is why we hope that an elective process may now be considered by the parties which, together with the recommendations the body has made, may well offer an alternative means to generating the necessary confidence which the body found to be lacking.

Paramilitary Murders

13. Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will give the number of murders committed in Northeren Ireland involving the use of firearms since the declaration of a ceasefire by paramilitary organisations in the Province. [9638]

Sir John Wheeler: Since the Provisional IRA ceasefire on 1 September 1994 there have been 17 murders committed in Northern Ireland which involved the use of firearms. Of these, 10 have been categorised by the RUC as having a terrosit involvement.

Peace Process

14. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent developments in the peace process. [9639]

20. Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current political situation in Northern Ireland and recent progress on the peace process. [9646]

21. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on the Government's "twin-track" approach to the Northern Ireland peace process [9647]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. member to the replies I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink) and to the hon. Members for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing) and for Lewisham, East (Mrs. Prentice).

19. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the impact of the peace process on living standards in the Province. [9644]

Mr. Ancram: It is not possible to link the peace process directly to any general measure of the standard of living in Northern Ireland. however, in the first 12 months after the ceasefire employment increased by almost 11,000—1.9 per cent.—to the highest level ever recorded; unemployment fell by just over 9,000—9.5 per cent.—to its lowest level for 14 years and house prices increased, on average, by 5 per cent.

Inward Investment

15. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current annual level of inward investment in Northern Ireland; and what was the level prior to the ceasefire. [9640]

Mr. Ancram: During the nine months of the current financial year to 31 December 1995 Northern Ireland has secured eight inward investment projects promoting 2,306 jobs. In the 12 months of 1994–95 there were 10 projects promoting 1,969 jobs, and in the 12 months of 1993–94 there were 13 projects promoting 2,309 jobs.

Food Companies

16. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants are available to food companies wishing to conduct inward investment in Northern Ireland. [9641]

Mr. Ancram: The range of grants available to food companies wishing to invest in Northern Ireland is the same as that for any other potential inward investor engaged in manufacturing industry or in internationally tradeable services.

Mitchell Commission

17. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of the Mitchell Commission. [9642]

25. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy in respect of the form the decommissioning of weapons and ordnance by paramilitary groups should take; and if he will make a statement. [9651]

28. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress is being made on the decommissioning of paramilitary arms. [9655]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Castle Point (Dr. Spink).

Shootings and Beatings

18. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current levels of shootings and punishment beatings in Northern Ireland. [9643]

Sir John Wheeler: I strongly condemn these wicked attacks on people. Such attacks divide the community and destroy the trust in Northern Ireland. The Government's position is clear. These murders, senseless shootings and attacks are appalling and must cease. There is no excuse of any kind. I am in no doubt that terrorists are involved in all such incidents and I call on all those genuinely committed to peaceful methods unreservedly to condemn such acts.

Economic Prospects

22. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the prospects for the economy of Northern Ireland during 1996. [9648]

Mr. Ancram: Prospects for the Northern Ireland economy are very encouraging. Business confidence is high, employment is at record levels and output and trade are increasing. With continuing peace we can look forward to this excellent progress being maintained.

Pensioners

23. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of (a) pensioners and (b) pensioners on income support in Northern Ireland. [9649]

Mr. Moss: The latest available figures show that at September 1994 there were 219,109 pensioners in Northern Ireland and at November 1995 there were 65,931 pensioners—excluding partners over pensionable age—in receipt of income support.

Licensed Weapons

24. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many licensed weapons were in private hands in Northern Ireland; and what proportion of these weapons are owned by (a) Catholics and (b) Protestants. [9650]

Sir John Wheeler: At 30 November 1995 there were a total of 133,869 weapons held on 88,092 firearms certificates received under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981.

There is no information held which would indicate the religious background of an applicant.

Housing Executive

26. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future proposals involving the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. [9652]

Mr. Moss: The housing policy review entitled "Building on Success" was published on 19 December and copies placed in the Library. The conclusions confirm the Executive's role as a single, comprehensive, regional housing authority for Northern Ireland, and also propose to strengthen and enhance that role. I would welcome comments on those proposals by 31 March.

Elderly Physically Handicapped

27. Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the care of the elderly physically handicapped in Northern Ireland. [9653]

Mr. Moss: Care services for elderly physically disabled, and other vulnerable people, in Northern Ireland are provided on the basis of individual assessed health and personal social services care needs. In securing the delivery of services which respond flexibly and sensitively to the needs of individuals, and the relatives and friends who care for them, boards are expected to ensure that priority is given to those in greatest need and to secure value for money.

Nursery Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many four-year-olds are currently receiving education; what proportion of their age group this represents; what is the cost to public funds; and if he will make a statement. [10168]

Mr. Ancram: Available statistics relate to pupils' age at 1 July. 26,089 four-year-olds were receiving education at the 1995 census date. This represents 100 per cent. of the four-year-old age group, as this is the age of commencement of compulsory schooling. The cost to public funds for the education of four-year-olds cannot be separately identified.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11401]

Sir John Wheeler: The estimate number of days absence for non-industrial staff in (d) 1993–94 was 335,780 and in (e) 1994–95 was 362,438. Information for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90 and (c) 1991–92 is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The estimated number of days lost in the first six months of 1995–96 was 165,765.

Child Care

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average money spent per capita on child care in Northern Ireland; and what is the figure for English local authorities. [10311]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available in the form requested. HPSS bodies produce statements in support of the annual accounts which provide supplementary analyses of the expenditure in the accounts over programme of care. One programme of care is family and child care. The total expenditure on this category in Northern Ireland for 1993–94 amounted to £44 million. This expenditure figure has been related to the child population in Northern Ireland 1993 to give an average cost per child of £100. The equivalent figure for English local authorities is not held centrally.

Care of the Elderly

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines he has issued about the provision of care to the elderly living in the community. [10565]

Mr. Moss: Policy and practice guidance has been issued by my Department to health and social services boards in relation to their community care responsibilities. "People First: Community Care In Northern Ireland in the 1990s" was issued in March 1990 and practice guidance on care management and assessment was issued in August 1991. In addition, the social services inspectorate produced a report on assessment and care management arrangements in Northern Ireland in June 1995.

Radioactive Land

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will now publish and place in the Library a map showing the changing areas of land in Northern Ireland to which the restrictions consequent upon the Chernobyl incident apply, indicating the dates of the different changes and the levels of radioactivity at each such date in those areas at the latest available date; and when he estimates all the remaining restrictions will be removed. [9515]

Mr. Ancram: On each occasion that derestriction takes place a press release is issued along with a small scale map outlining the changes per derestriction. Arrangements have been made to have copies of these maps placed in the Library. Derestriction is based on monitoring levels of radioactivity in live sheep and can be considered only where the levels are found to be below the action level of 1,000 becquerels per kilogramme.

Although the continued downward trend is encouraging, it is not possible to indicate at this time when all restrictions may be removed.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish and place in the Library a map showing the area and land use, of the areas of land in Northern Ireland to which the restrictions consequent upon the Chernobyl incident have applied; and what uptake of radioactive material by trees in such areas there has been. [9516]

Mr. Ancram: On each occasion that derestriction takes place a press release is issued, along with a small-scale map outlining the changes. Arrangements have been made to have copies of these maps placed in the Library. These maps do not indicate the land use, which in the main is rough grazing with some forestry. There is no data available on uptake of radioactive material by trees.

Incontinence Pads

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his policy is in relation to the supply of incontinence pads to those who require them because of disability; what plans he has to review these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [9210]

Mr. Moss: The organisation of continence services in Northern Ireland and the manner in which they are delivered, including the provision of incontinence pads, are matters for health and social services boards and trusts. They are under a general obligation to provide these services where the need exists and in the light of their resources and priorities. There are no current plans to review these arrangements.

Fire Authority

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to change the membership of the Fire Authority; and if he will ensure that present representation from local authorities is maintained. [9862]

Mr. Moss: I am currently reviewing the constitution of the Fire Authority. No decision has yet been taken, but there will be full consideration about any proposed changes.

Rural College, Draperstown

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are employed at the Rural college at Draperstown, County Londonderry; how many are (a) Catholics and (b) Protestants; and if he will make a statement. [9860]

Mr. Ancram: Staff at the Rural college, Draperstown are employed directly by the college. I am therefore not in a position to answer the question.

Six Mile Water (Effluent)

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many consented discharges are in operation on the Six Mile Water; and what was the river flow regime used in granting these consent discharges. [9915]

Mr. Moss: Four consents granted by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland under the Water Act (Northern Ireland) 1972 for effluent discharges to the Six Mile Water are currently in operation. The consents are based on the low flow in the river, known as the Q95, which is the flow exceeded for 95 per cent. of the time.

Water and Sewerage Systems

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) water treatment plants and (b) sewage treatment plants are operating in County Antrim. [9914]

Mr. Moss: The Department of the Environment's Water Executive operates 17 water treatment works and 158 sewage treatment works in County Antrim.

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to improve the water and sewerage systems serving (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Mid Ulster. [10575]

Mr. Moss: The Water Executive will continue the programme of improvements commenced six years ago to enable it to meet the standards set by EC directives on drinking water quality, urban waste water treatment and bathing waters. New sources of water supply will be developed and refinements made to the water distribution system and sewerage system to make them more effective in dealing with current and future demand for services. On top of the £370 million already spent in the last six years on these objectives throughout Northern Ireland a further £66 million has been committed for the 1996–97 year. In Mid-Ulster planned capital investment over the next five years amounts to £35 million with particular emphasis being placed on strengthening the water supply infrastructure serving the towns of Omagh and Cookstown.

Power Stations

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many power stations in Northern Ireland use aluminium sulphate in the treatment of water used in cooling towers; and what arrangements are in place for the disposal of the residue. [9913]

Mr. Moss: None of the four power stations in Northern Ireland use towers for cooling water. Consequently, aluminium sulphate is not used for this purpose.

Road Deaths and Injuries

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the number of road deaths and serious injuries in the years 1994 and 1995. [10577]

Mr. Moss: The number of road users killed in 1994 was 157 and the provisional figures for 1995 is 144. The number seriously injured in 1994 was 1,648 and the provisional figure for the 11 months to 30 November 1995 is 1,520. good progress is being made towards achieving the Northern Ireland road safety target of reducing the number of people killed and seriously injured on Northern Ireland's roads by one third, compared with the average for 1981 to 1985, by the year 2000.

Health Boards (Private Finance Initiative)

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many private finance initiative schemes he (a) has agreed and (b) is considering in respect of Northern Ireland health boards. [10566]

Sir John Wheeler: No scheme under the private finance initiative has been approved to date in the Northern Ireland health boards. One scheme has been approved to proceed to tender stage and eight other cases are currently under consideration which may lead to private finance solutions.

Psychiatric Community Nurses

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the change in the number of psychiatric community nurses since 1989 in each of the Northern Ireland health boards. [10564]

Mr. Moss: The information is as follows:

Community psychiatric nurses for each health board in Northern Ireland

| | Eastern Board | | Northern Board | | Southern Board | | Western Board | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Number | WTE | Number | WTE | Number | WTE | Number | WTE |
| 1991 | 61 | 61.00 | 12 | 12.00 | 16 | 16.00 | 26 | 26.00 |
| 1992 | 67 | 66.80 | 18 | 18.00 | 13 | 13.00 | 24 | 24.00 |
| 1993 | 72 | 72.00 | 24 | 24.00 | 18 | 18.00 | 32 | 32.00 |
| 1994 | 68 | 66.80 | 22 | 22.00 | 16 | 16.00 | 40 | 40.00 |
| 1995 | 66 | 65.50 | 26 | 25.40 | 17 | 17.00 | 40 | 39.60 |

WTE = Whole time equivalent. Number = Head count (staff in post).

General Practitioner Fundholding

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what evaluation has been made of the results of the general practitioner fundholding initiative in the west of the Province. [10573]

Mr. Moss: The Western health and social services board is responsible for the monitoring of the GP fundholding scheme within its area and no separate evaluation of the scheme's operation there has been undertaken. On the basis of monitoring reports supplied by the board, I am satisfied that the scheme is working well in the Western board area and that patients of fundholding GPs are receiving a high standard of service.

Homelessness

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if accommodation approved by the Northern Ireland tourist board is used by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to accommodate the homeless. [10316]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, whose chief executive has advised me that he is aware of one establishment approved by the Northern Ireland tourist board and used by the Executive to accommodate the homeless. While tourist board approval may exist for some other properties used by the Executive for similar purposes, a property's suitability is determined by the Executive on the basis of its own technical inspections and tourist board approved status is neither a pre-requisite nor the subject of inquiry by the Executive. In the light of recent interest, I understand that the chief executives of the tourist board and the Executive will be meeting to discuss these matters.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations have been received about the need for proper liaison between the RUC, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, the Northern Ireland tourist board and health and social services authorities on the placement of homeless families or individuals; and what response has been given. [10317]

Mr. Moss: I understand that a representation has been made to my noble friend who has responsibility for the Department of Economic Development about liaison between the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and other agencies on the placement of homeless applicants including instances where the accommodation used by the Housing Executive has attained the tourist board's approval status. The reply indicated that there was no evidence that the standard of accommodation in tourist board approved establishments has deteriorated as a result of the placing of homeless there and that present liaison arrangements were satisfactory.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about liaison arrangements between the RUC, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the health and social services authorities on the placement of homeless people with a criminal record. [10315]

Mr. Moss: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive whose chief executive has advised me that, when considering both the temporary and permanent housing needs of homeless applicants, the Executive will liaise where appropriate with the RUC, the Health and Social Services Board and the Probation Board for Northern Ireland. Liaison arrangements operate on a case by case basis at local level between the Executive's district office staff and their counterparts in the agencies involved.

Regional inter-agency meetings involving the Executive, the Health and Social Services Board and the Probation Board are held at least twice a year to discuss general issues relating to homelessness.

WALES

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is, in respect of the nursery voucher scheme in Wales, (a) the amount of new money he intends to make available, (b) the amount he intends to reduce from the budget allocation for local authorities, (c) the cost of providing a full time place for a four-year-old pupil, (d) the number of four-year-olds taking up nursery places in April 1997, (e) the number of places he estimates (i) local authorities, (ii) the voluntary sector and (iii) the private sector will provide and (f) the number of places available in Ysgolion Meithrin. [9047]

Mr. Richards: The total cost of the scheme in 1997–98 is not expected to exceed £43 million. The scheme will be funded by a mixture of new money and a proportion of present local authority expenditure on provision for four-year-olds in the maintained sector. There will be a one-off transfer of money from the local authorities total, but this will be at the all Wales level and not deducted from individual authorities' budgets. The maximum amount of this transfer will not exceed a sum equivalent to the value of the voucher multiplied by the number of four-year-olds receiving education in the maintained sector. A final decision on the relevant levels of new money and present expenditure funding will be taken in the context of the public expenditure settlement for 1997–98.

The cost of providing a full-time place for a four-year-old pupil will vary according to the sort of provision made and the sector in which it is made.

The number of four-year-olds taking up places in April 1997 will depend on parental choice, though I would not expect it to be less than current levels. The sectors in which places are taken up will also depend on parental choice, which will be enhanced by the voucher scheme.

Regeneration Scheme (Caernarfon)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the expenditure to date under the provision of the 1992 regeneration scheme for the town of Caernarfon; and how many new jobs have so far been facilitated by this expenditure. [9335]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Office's strategic development scheme has contributed £1.11 million for the period 1993–94 to 1994–95 towards environmental improvements and infrastructure works in Caernarfon. The Welsh Development Agency has contributed £2.91 million for the same period. Information on the number of jobs created to date is not available. However, the agency will shortly be conducting an evaluation to determine the number of jobs created and other results of the regeneration programme.

Unemployment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in (a) Alyn and Deeside and (b) Clwyd are (i) long-term unemployed and (ii) unemployed in the age group 18 to 24 years; and if he will make a statement. [9554]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In October 1995 the number of claimants in the Alyn and Deeside constituency who were long-term unemployed—over 52 weeks—was 617; the number of claimants in the age group 18 to 24 years was 621. The corresponding figures for Clwyd were 3,794 and 3,780, respectively. Over the last two years, the numbers in each of these categories have fallen by between a fifth and a third.

calls each received in each of the last five years; and how much money each received from his Department in each of the last five years. [9802]

Schools (Deficit Budgets)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the grant-maintained and (b) the locally-managed schools which had deficit budgets in the last financial year for which information is available, indicating in each case the number of years deficits have been carried over, the measures each school has been asked to take to get rid of the deficits and the legal obligations on school governors if the deficits are not removed. [9475]

Mr. Richards [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

The audited accounts for 1994–95 show that two grant-maintained schools—Cwmcarn in Gwent and Bishop Vaughan Catholic comprehensive in West Glamorgan—had deficits at the end of March 1995. This is the first year in which Bishop Vaughan had a deficit; that for Cwmcarn was carried over from 1993–94.

The financial memorandum agreed between the Welsh Office and grant-maintained schools says that governing bodies must plan and conduct their affairs so as to remain solvent. If it becomes apparent to its governors that their school is in overall deficit, they must inform the Welsh Office. Officials then discuss with the school a strategy to extinguish the deficit. The Department is currently in discussion with both schools on action appropriate to eliminate the deficits.

Should the governing body fail to implement the agreed strategy, then it is open to the Secretary of State to appoint additional governors to the governing body in accordance with section 67 of the Education Act 1993. If, however, it is his opinion that the governing body's actions are prejudicial to the provision of education at the school then, under section 64 of the 1993 Act, he can replace all or any of the first governors. In extreme cases, where the Secretary of State is of the view that the school is unsuitable to continue, he can, under section 109 of the Act, give the school notice of his proposed date for cessation of his duty to maintain the school.

As regards LEA-maintained schools, the position as detailed in the section 42 outturn statements for the period 1990–91 to 1994–95 is as follows:

Local management of schools schemes in general prohibit governing bodies from planning deliberately for deficits, except to the extent that the LEA may think it reasonable to make provision in its scheme to allow schools, in certain specified circumstances, to anticipate their budget shares for the following year in order to finance some major planned item of expenditure for which the full cost cannot readily be accommodated within the current year's budget share. Where deficits nevertheless arise, LMS schemes must make appropriate provision for their recovery, normally from the following year's budget share, except where clear practical considerations preclude recovery on this timescale. It is for LEAs to pursue any appropriate action in respect of deficits incurred by LEA maintained schools.

Repossessions

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the extent of repossessions in Wales over the past two years; and what are his estimates of likely trends in (a) repossessions and (b) negative equity in 1996. [10258]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information is not recorded centrally on the number of cases in which mortgage possession orders lead to warrants to have the defendants evicted. However, recent figures on the number of possession orders and suspended orders are given in the table. Estimates of likely trends in repossessions and negative equity are not available for 1996.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Juvenile Offenders

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the average cost of a case in the juvenile court from first hearing to completion. [10867]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The unit cost for court time for criminal cases in the youth court is estimated to be £140 in 1995–96, or £180 where an application for legal aid is made. These unit costs are average costs, and cover both trials and guilty pleas. These figures are based on the total revenue provision for the magistrates' courts, including local authorities' 20 per cent. contribution, and case load figures and weightings derived from the management information system for magistrates courts which are currently being reviewed. They do not take into account capital costs.

For defence costs paid through legal aid, it is not possible to identify separately the costs of proceedings in the youth court from all criminal cases dealt with in the magistrates courts. Most cases are remunerated under the standard fee scheme, and the level of the fee will depend on the nature and complexity of the proceedings. The average cost of a magistrates courts criminal bill in 1995–96 is £460.

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what number and percentage of the English Bar are Queen's Counsel. [10869]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: At 1 October 1995, there were 891 Queen's Counsel in practice at the English Bar. This comprises 10.48 per cent. of all barristers in private practice.

Capital Building Programme

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if he will list each law court's capital buildings programme, costing more than £1 million completed in each of the years 1979–80 to 1992–93 by or on behalf of his Department, or local magistrates' committees, together with the cost expressed in 1995–96 prices. [10861]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: A schedule of all Crown, combined court and county court schemes is at annex A. The readily available information on magistrates court schemes is at annex B. The Department does not hold detailed records of all magistrates court schemes completed prior to 1992, when responsibility transferred from the Home Office.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fireworks

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for changing the law on fireworks. [12486]

Sir John Wheeler: The control of fireworks in Northern Ireland is governed by the Explosives Act 1875 as amended, the Explosives Acts (Northern Ireland) 1924 and 1970, together with the Explosives (Control of Fireworks) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1970. Fireworks in the Province also come under the scope of consumer safety legislation.

The 1970 regulations were introduced in special circumstances 25 years ago, and have remained unchanged since then. They were introduced primarily because of the security situation and the real fear that the setting-off of fireworks, particularly so-called "bangers" by young people, could be misinterpreted by security force patrols as terrorist action with potentially serious consequences for the innocent participants. There was also concern at that time about the rising number of accidents and injuries caused by fireworks. There seems little doubt that the present regulations have contributed to the low level of injuries from fireworks in Northern Ireland.

However, the present system is inherently bureaucratic and costly because it requires any person who wishes to purchase or use fireworks—with two minor exceptions—to obtain a licence from the Secretary of State. Failure to obtain such a licence is an offence. The present arrangements therefore consume an inordinate amount of police and administrative resources. This situation contrasts sharply with the legal position in the rest of the United Kingdom.

I am aware that there have been criticisms levelled at the present law, to the effect that it was inadequate and should be strengthened. Paradoxically, I have also heard claims that the present legal controls are disproportionate and unnecessary and should therefore be repealed. Whatever the law on fireworks should be, it is clearly essential that it should allow for the efficient use of public resources; pay due regard to public safety yet be no more restrictive than absolutely necessary, and be capable of being effectively applied and not open to abuse.

In the light of all these factors, I asked my officials in late 1994 to undertake a thorough, painstaking review of the law on fireworks, to see whether it was still relevant and effective in today's circumstances and to consider ways in which it might be changed. The proposals, which I am releasing today for wider public consultation, are the outcome of that review. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library of the House. As the paper points out, before I make any final decisions about what changes are required, I should like to hear from those individuals, organisations and agencies which have an interest in the manufacture, retail sale, safety and use of fireworks in Northern Ireland. To that end, I am writing today to Northern Ireland hon. Members and my officials are similarly writing to the political parties, and other interested groups inviting comment and proposals on what changes to the law they would like to see.

My intention would be to introduce the necessary amending legislation during 1996.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Charter Marks (Police Authorities)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account he takes of the variation in the opening hours of police stations or their closure contrary to local police wish when considering the award of a charter mark to a police authority. [10868]

Mr. Willetts: Charter mark is an award for organisations that provide an excellent service to the public. Police forces may apply for a charter mark if they consider that they meet the criteria. User satisfaction and consultation and choice form two of the criteria that applicants have to meet.

Deregulation Advisory Committee

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the members of the Deregulation Advisory Committee stating, for each member, the firm they are employed by; and how many people that firm employs. [11942]

Mr. Freeman: There are 16 members of the deregulation task force, which is chaired by the right hon. Francis Maude of Morgan Stanley and Co Ltd.

The other members are:

David Band (Barclays de Zoete Wedd); David Campbell (Laporte Fine Organics Ltd); Maurice Denyer (Fowler Bros (Cowfold) Ltd); Michael Fallon (Quality Care Homes plc); Mike Fisher (Whale Tankers Ltd); George Goring (The Goring hotel); Teresa Graham (Baker Tilly); Janet Morgan (Sainsbury Family Charitable Trusts); Archie Norman (Asda Group plc); Timothy Parker (C&J Clark Ltd); David Parry (formerly BP); Tony Rammelt (Regis Europe Ltd); Roger Singleton (Barnardo's); Dan Wright (Albion Automotive Ltd); and Peter Wyman (Coopers and Lybrand).

Figures detailing the number of people employed by each of the firms mentioned are not readily available. However, members have been drawn from a wide range of firms which vary greatly in size, as well as from the charitable sector.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing (Backlogs)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the backlog of unmet housing need; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement. [10515]

Mr. Curry: The Department does not produce estimates of backlog of unmet housing need. It does, however, monitor a range of indicators of housing stress. These show housing stress has been falling. The Department has provided the Environment Select Committee with a note on this as part of the Committee's inquiry into housing need, and I have today placed a copy of this note in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the authorities that have made oral representations to Ministers as part of the consultation on his proposals for local government finance for 1996–97, showing in each case the Minister seen by the authority, the duration of the meeting and the main topics raised. [11992]

Mr. Gummer: The table lists authorities which made oral representations to me and other Ministers in my Department on the proposed local government finance settlement for England for 1996–97. The main topics raised in the meetings are listed on the table. No note was made of the duration of meetings but I and other Ministers have sought to make time available for the fullest consultation.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will public (a) the current cost of providing housing to asylum seekers broken down by type of landlord, numbers of people and by regional location and (b) any guidance or procedures issued which are currently in force on the housing of asylum seekers. [12107]

Mr. Clappison: Information about the cost of housing asylum seekers is not held centrally. Guidance on dealing with homelessness applications from asylum seekers is included in the "Homelessness Code of Guidance for Local Authorities" (revised third edition), a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on publication in December 1994.

Water Pollution

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) the date of infringement, (b) the date of prosecution, (c) the nature of the offence with special reference to pollution, water abstraction and water quality infringements and (d) any resultant convictions, for each prosecution against a water company by (i) the drinking water inspectorate and (ii) the National Rivers Authority for each year since water privatisation. [9510]

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The arrangements for privatisation introduced a much more comprehensive and effective regime ensuring that water undertakers and sewage undertakers adhere to the legal requirements and are subject to enforcement or prosecution if they do not do so. This system has given greatly enhanced protection of water consumers and the environment. The figures demonstrate that this is so.

When there is an infringement of a drinking water standard, the main weapon is enforcement to secure improvements to quality; prosecution is only available when the infringement is so serious that water unfit for human consumption has been supplied.

Between 1990 and 1994, the drinking water inspectorate, on my behalf, has initiated almost 2,000 enforcement actions against the water companies. Many of these resulted in the companies concerned taking action very quickly to rectify the infringement and the remainder, where action could not be completed quickly, resulted in the water companies concerned giving legally binding undertakings to take action by a specified date to improve drinking water quality.

Severn-Trent Water Ltd. pleaded guilty at Hereford Crown court on 24 April 1995 to three charges brought under section 70 of the Water Industry Act 1991 for the offence of supplying water unfit for human consumption and was fined £45,000. The prosecution was brought by me following an investigation by the drinking water inspectorate into a serious drinking water contamination incident on or about 15 April 1994 affecting a large number of consumers in the Worcester area and beyond following pollution of the River Severn.

The number of prosecutions of the privatised water and sewerage companies by the National Rivers Authority for water pollution offences, their dates and the number of resulting convictions for each year since 1989–90 were set out in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary to the Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 18 December 1995, Official Report, columns 914-16.

The tables show the information on water pollution infringements, corresponding to that given previously on prosecutions and convictions, plus equivalent information for water abstractions.

HEALTH

NHS (Management Costs)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were (a) the management costs and (b) the establishment of the national health service in England in (i) 1988–89 and in (ii) 1994–95; and what estimate he has made of changes in those figures over the current planning period. [9827]

Mr. Malone: Information on management costs is not available on a comparable basis for 1988–89 and 1994–95.

As we announced in October, we are requiring a cash reduction of 5 per cent. in the costs of running health authorities and trust management costs in 1996–97 compared with the 1995–96 planned spend. The savings generated from these cost reductions will be available for patient care.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the redundancy and early retirement costs per head in respect of his proposed reduction in national health service managers. [9828]

Mr. Malone: It is not possible centrally to estimate the redundancy or early retirement costs of staff who are made redundant or retire early as a result of reductions in the costs of running health authorities and in trust management costs.

Doctors and Nurses (Recruitment)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for a national recruitment campaign for doctors and nurses. [10749]

Mr. Malone: There is a long-term information campaign to young people aged 12 to 18 years, those over 18 and their advisers, providing materials designed to encourage a flow of suitably qualified, high calibre and well-informed applicants for training as nurses, midwives, health visitors and professionals allied to medicine, and to retain them in the national health service when qualified.

Last year, we accepted the recommendation of the Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee to increase medical student intake to 500 to reach a target intake of 4,970 by the year 2,000. The overall number of both medical students and doctors has increased steadily and will continue to do so. Entry to the medical profession—medical students—is over-subscribed in terms of applications to medical schools.

It is for local employers to determine their human resources strategies and to take appropriate action to recruit and retain sufficient qualified staff to deliver those services which they are contracted to supply.

National Review of Contracting

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the 1995 national review of contracting will be published; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [10930]

Mr. Malone: The 1995 review of contracting will be finalised in March. We do not intend to circulate the review, but key messages will be incorporated in wider purchasing guidance. A copy of the review will be placed in the Library when it is finalised.

Public Information Lines

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 812, if he will list the eight main information lines under the jurisdiction of his Department; and if he will make a statement on the information given out by these information lines. [11146]

Mr. Horam: Information on the eight main information lines are as listed. Unless stated otherwise, all these services are available free of charge and are open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Health information service 0800 66 55 44

The health information service is a national network of local telephone helplines. By dialling the national telephone number callers are automatically routed through to their local helpline service. The helplines give information and advice about NHS services, waiting times for treatment, common illnesses and treatments, maintaining and improving health, NHS complaints procedures and local NHS charter standards. The helplines are open 10.00am to 5.00pm Monday to Friday, but may vary locally. Calls are confidential. The health information service cannot give a medical diagnosis.

National drugs helpline 0800 77 66 00

The national drugs helpline offers a complete range of confidential advice, information and support. Callers are able to speak to trained, experienced advisors who will respond to requests for basic information about drugs and solvents, through to information about local services and to helping those concerned about their own or others drug problems.

Leaflets and literature are supplied to callers on request. The service is also available in a range of other languages.

National Aids helpline 0800 567 123

The national AIDS helpline offers advice and information about HIV and AIDS. Callers can also request free leaflets on aspects of HIV and AIDS. Calls to the helpline are confidential.

Health literature line/organ donor telephone service 0800 555 777

The health literature line is the telephone ordering service for free Department of Health publications on a range of health issues. Publications available free of charge include "The Patient's Charter", "A Traveller's Guide to Health" (a guide to fee or reduced cost emergency medical treatment abroad), and the NHS league tables.

The organ donor telephone service issue registration forms for the NHS organ donor register and answer some related questions.

Blood donor telephone service 0345 711 711

The blood donor telephone service offers advice to people who would like to become a blood donor or who want to know where their nearest blood donor centre or session is. Calls to the service are charged at local call rates.

Drinkline 0345 711 711 (UK only); 0171 332 0202 (London only)

The drinkline service informs callers about alcohol, helps callers who are worried about their own drinking, supports families and friends of people with drinking problems and puts people in touch with local alcohol advisory services where appropriate. Calls to the service are charged at local call rates.

Sexwise 0800 282930

The sexwise telephone service offers advice and counselling on sexual matters for young people. Calls to the helpline are confidential. The line is open from 7am to midnight seven days a week.

Cosmetic Surgery

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects of the European Specialist Medical Qualifications Order 1995 when implemented on the private cosmetic surgery industry; and if he will make a statement. [11593]

Mr. Malone: None. The European Specialist Medical Qualifications Order implements the United Kingdom's obligations under European Council directive 93/16/EEC. This sets minimum standards for specialist medical training and facilitates the free movement of doctors throughout the European community through the mutual recognition of their diplomas, certificates and other evidence of formal qualifications. It was implemented following a full consultation exercise and extensive discussions with representatives of the medical profession and the General Medical Council.

Temazepam

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated in respect of medical conditions for which treatment using temazepam is essential and where no alternatives are available. [11259]

Mr. Bowis: None.

GP Co-operatives

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the quality of service provided by general practitioner co-operatives. [11868]

Mr. Malone: I have been impressed by the quality of service in the general practitioner co-operatives I have visited. GPs, whether providing services individually or as members of co-operatives, retain full responsibility for the quality of care they offer.

NHS Staff Assaults

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many attacks against NHS staff have been reported in each of the last five years. [11870]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 18 December 1995, column 948.

Human Embryos

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what scientific research has been commissioned by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority concerning the freezing of human embryos; when the research was commissioned and published; and if he will list the actual and expected dates of completion and publication. [12160]

Mr. Horam: The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority has no powers to commission research. The authority's report to United Kingdom Health Ministers on the statutory storage period for embryos refers, at paragraphs 24 to 25, to work done to review current scientific knowledge.

Copies of the report are available in the Library.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of the research material considered by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority in relation to its report on the statutory storage period for human embryos. [12158]

Mr. Horam: I have placed in the Library a copy of a bibliography, supplied by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, which was prepared by its working group on embryo freezing.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's responses given by clinics to the Authority's Survey to questions concerning the freezing of human embryos. [12159]

Mr. Horam: I shall be writing to the hon. Member following my meeting with him on 24 January 1996.

Manchester Health Commission

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 21, if he will publish in the Official Report the joint press statement issued by the Under-Secretary following his meeting of 17 January with representatives of the Manchester Health Commission and the city's community health councils; and when he expects to be able to announce the outcome of his consideration of potential solutions to the problems raised with him in respect of health councils. [11994]

Mr. Horam: The text of the press statement, issued on 17 January, is as follows:

"Mr John Horam, Parliamentary Secretary of Health, today met representatives of Manchester Health Commission and the three community health councils which cover the city of Manchester.

The visitors gave a presentation on their criticisms of the current formula for weighted capitation, under which the level of funding received by the commission is adjusted to take account of the age and needs of the local population.

The Minister also heard an account of the health needs of the people of Manchester, as measured against the targets set out in the Government's "Health of the Nation" initiative.

He was told that the city has some of the worst figures in the country for cervical cancer, lung cancer, coronary heart disease, psychiatric illness, dental decay and infant mortality.

The Minister heard about intense pressures on community and acute hospital services throughout the year.

He was told that the city's health service continues to make vigorous efforts to make the best use of resources available, but was nevertheless one of only two authorities in the entire country to receive no growth money for 1996–97.

Mr Horam listened sympathetically and said he respected the fact that the commission and the three community health councils had joined forces to represent Manchester as a whole.

He said he fully understood there was an exceptional problem in Manchester which needed to be addressed. Further work was in hand to try to refine the weighted capitation formula and he hoped that any subsequent refinement would deliver a good result for Manchester from 1997–98.

He also said that if there was anything that could be done in a transitional way, he would certainly be sympathetic to Manchester's problems."

The representations form Manchester were mainly concerned with the impact on their funding of certain elements of the weighted capitation formula. Work is in hand to review the elements of the formula concerned and the results should be ready to inform 1997–98 allocations.

TREASURY

Mortgage Tax Relief

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer from the tax year 1996–97, what the mortgage tax relief will be for home income plans. [11045]

Mr. Jack: Tax relief for interest paid by someone over 65 who takes out a loan, secured on their home, to buy and life annuity, often called a home income plan, is given at the basic rate of income tax. For the tax year 1996–97, this will be 24 per cent.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the redeployment of staff from corporation tax pay and file to self-assessment development within the Inland Revenue on the collection of corporation tax arrears. [11120]

Mr. Jack: There has been no impact on the collection of corporation tax arrears as a result of the redeployment of staff from CT pay and file to self-assessment development.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the extent to which EDS has complied with conditions set out in the original contract on the Inland Revenue's corporation tax pay and file system; and what changes to the terms of that contract were subsequently made by the Inland Revenue. [11122]

Mr. Jack: Since taking over computer operations in July 1994, EDS has complied fully with the relevant condition in the original contract which required it to deliver the existing levels of service.

Subsequently detailed service levels have been agreed for each system and EDS has met or exceeded the key performance criteria in relation to CT pay and file. These contractual service levels have recently been enhanced to reflect the increased stability and maturity of the system.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) Inland Revenue staff and (b) contracted staff have been transferred from corporation tax pay and file to computer environment for self-assessment in each quarter of 1995. [11119]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue and EDS—its private sector information technology partner—have managed a team of appropriately skilled people in the development, implementation and subsequent maintenance of CT pay and file alongside the development of self-assessment. Those people have been deployed in line with the priorities from time to time.

The table shows the broad balance of movement of staff from CT pay and file to self-assessment as the former moved from its development and implementation phases into live running.

| | Revenue staff | Contractors | Total |
|---|---|---|---|
| Quarter January 1995 to March 1995 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Quarter April 1995 to June 1995 | 8.5 | 5.5 | 14 |
| Quarter July 1995 to September 1995 | 5 | 2 | 7 |
| Quarter October 1995 to December 1995 | 12 | 9 | 21 |
| Total | 25.5 | 16.5 | 42 |

Taxation

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was, in constant 1995 figures, the value of tax receipts from lifetime transfers in each year 1974 in respect of (a) capital transfer tax and (b) inheritance tax. [11124]

(2) what was, in constant 1995 figures, the value of tax receipts on death in each year since 1970 of (a) estate duty, (b) capital transfer tax and (c) inheritance tax, indicating when each type of tax replaced another. [11123]

Mr. Jack: The available information is as follows:

£ million at 1994–95 prices[1]

|---|---|---|---|
| | | Estate Duty | Capital transfer tax/inheritance tax |

| 1971–72 | — | 3,214 | — |

| 1982–83 | 68 | 21 | 814 |
| 1983–84 | 53 | 15 | 958 |
| 1984–85 | 95 | 10 | 962 |
| 1985–86 | 81 | 9 | 1,260 |
| 1986–87 | 87 | 10 | 1,373 |
| 1987–88 | 64 | — | 1,450 |
| 1988–89 | 53 | — | 1,356 |
| 1989–90 | 44 | — | 1,472 |
| 1990–91 | 44 | — | 1,418 |
| 1991–92 | 48 | — | 1,369 |
| 1992–93 | 46 | — | 1,224 |
| 1993–94 | 29 | — | 1,328 |
| 1994–95 | 24 | — | 1,387 |

[1] Converted using the GDP market price deflator.

For deaths on or after 13 March 1975, capital transfer tax—CTT—replaced estate duty and applied to transfers made after 26 March 1974. CTT was replaced by inheritance tax—IHT—for transfers on or after 18 March 1986. The figures for estate duty exclude receipts in Northern Ireland before 1973–74. Small residual amounts of estate duty receipts from 1987–88 are included with receipts from inheritance tax and capital transfer tax, separate estimates of which are not available.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10974]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The information requested for the Chancellor's Department, expressed in thousands of pounds, is as follows:

| | £000 |
|---|---|
| (i) Legal fees | — |
| (ii) Publicity costs | 4 |
| (iii) Accountancy fees | — |
| (iv) Management consultancy fees | 75 |
| Total | 79 |

The overwhelming majority of the expenditure was incurred in the last financial year, so the difference between real and cash terms is insignificant. Conventional procurement often involves such costs too.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs. [10975]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The information requested for the Chancellor's Departments, expressed in thousands of pounds, is as follows:

| | £000 |
|---|---|
| (i) Staff costs | 61 |
| (ii) Information technology | — |
| (iii) Other costs | — |
| Total | 61 |

The overwhelming majority of the expenditure was incurred in the last financial year, so the difference between real and cash terms is insignificant.

In the case of individual projects, if the private finance route had not been the route preferred, traditional public sector procurement methods would, in any case, have incurred tendering costs. The important issue is that the chosen method should be that which provides best overall value for money for the taxpayer.

National Lottery

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total revenue accruing to the Treasury from all national lottery operations so far. [11903]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The total amount of lottery duty accruing to the Exchequer was £559 million at the end of December 1995. Lottery duty was set at a level that should ensure that the displacement of consumer spending by spending on lottery tickets is neutral in its effect on Government revenue. The total amount of funds received by the national lottery distribution fund was £1,374 million over the same period.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Museums

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what method is used by non-charging national museums to count the numbers of their visitors; and what assessment she has made of (a) the accuracy of the method and (b) the auditing of the figures. [7055]

Mr. Sproat: It is for the trustees of each national museum to determine how to assess the number of visitors, and the different methods used for this purpose by different museums. In the context of the review of museum policy which I am currently undertaking, and given the importance of having accurate figures for visitors, my officials will be writing to each of the national museum and galleries that the Department sponsors asking them what methods they use to count visitors, what arrangements they have for ensuring accuracy of the figures, and how they conduct their audit of figures.

National Lottery (Disbursements)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the disbursements made by the National Lottery Charities Board to organisations in (a) Heywood and Middleton and (b) the Greater Manchester area. [11054]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. and learned Friend has written to all hon. Members on each occasion that the National Lottery Charities Board has made grants, enclosing a list of the grants. I understand that the charities board has also written to individual Members whenever a grant has been made in their constituency.

This information is available in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

CD-ROM Industry

Mrs. Ann Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of developments in the United Kingdom CD-ROM industry. [11127]

Mr. Ian Taylor: This is an active and fast-moving market for which reliable and comprehensive data are sparse. A number of reports have been commissioned by my Department, either alone or in conjunction with the European Commission, analysing specific aspects of the CD-ROM market. The reports reached various conclusions. I am placing copies of them in the Library of the House.

Gas Consumer Council

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received as to how this year's allocation to the Gas Consumer Council will affect its safety advisory service. [11721]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have received no such representations.

Trade Unions

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those organisations where trade unions have been de-recognised each year since 1985; and how many employees were involved in each case. [11943]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government do not hold records on organisations where trade unions have been de-recognised or on the number of employees involved in each case.

Viners of Sheffield plc

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from businesses in Sheffield regarding Viners of Sheffield plc; and if he will make a statement. [10835]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have received representations which my hon. Friend passed to me from eight businesses and one trade association objecting to the company name "Viners of Sheffield public limited company". My officials will be writing to the company seeking its comments.

Training

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to encourage the development of training for young entrepreneurs. [10900]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the measures outlined by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Education and Employment in his reply of 25 January 1996, Official Report, columns 336–37.

Anglo-French Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list on a quarterly basis the ratio of electricity supplied via the cable link to and from France and the United Kingdom for the years 1993–94 and 1994–95. [10628]

Mr. Page: In 1993–94 and 1994–95, the interconnector was exclusively used to import electricity from France.

Disability Discrimination Act

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated cost during 1996 of industrial tribunal proceedings under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. [11676]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No firm estimate of the cost of industrial tribunal proceedings in 1996 can be made until a commencement date has been set for the employment provisions contained in the Disability Discrimination Act 1995. However, it is likely that these provisions will come into effect around the end of the year and, if so, the costs of proceedings (if any) in 1996 will be negligible.

Public Sector Research Establishments

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the timetable for the prior options reviews of public sector research establishments outlined in the Government's response to the multi-departmental scrutiny of public sector research establishments (Cm 2991). [12682]

Mr. Lang: The Government's response to the efficiency scrutiny announced our intention to carry out a programme of prior options reviews of public sector research establishments, with a view to the major part of the work being completed by the end of 1996.

Each review will address the relationship of establishments to others in similar or related fields and consider, amongst other things, the potential for privatisation or rationalisation. The results of these reviews will be considered by Ministers collectively.

The reviews will be carried out by the parent or sponsor Department or research council and are being phased as set out in the timetable. Each review will be announced and there will be an opportunity for interested parties to comment. Some of these announcements have already been made.

I am placing a copy of the guidelines for the conduct of these reviews in the Library of the House.

BMARC

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has anything to add to his answers of 19 June 1995, Official Report, column 59 and 14 July 1995, Official Report, column 797, about BMARC. [12681]

Mr. Oppenheim: The work of licence recovery, examination and cataloguing undertaken since the start of the BMARC affair has led to the identification of a number of export licence applications whose existence was not known at the time of the answers given on 19 June 1995, Official Report, column 59, and 14 July 1995, Official Report, column 796.

The problem of retrieving export licence documentation is complicated by the large volumes of papers involved, and the fact that the archived papers are not stored by company name. In order to retrieve papers it is necessary first to use various databases to identify the individual applications made by any given company; then to establish the individual reference numbers relating to the applications concerned; and finally to use these to identify the relevant archive locations. It is only following these steps that the papers can be called back and inspected.

While verifying and cataloguing the new findings, an unrelated search of licence application papers carried out towards the end of last year showed some weaknesses in the systems used for indexing applications. A wider search was then put in hand, with the aim of seeing whether the identification and recovery of any of BMARC's licence applications might have been hindered by similar problems. This further work led to the discovery of an additional batch of applications.

In the light of all these findings, it is necessary to update the figures provided in the answers given on 19 June 1995 and 14 July 1995. The figure for the number of export licence applications made by BMARC—including the period when the company was known as Astra Defence Systems—for which papers have been recovered from my Department's archives and which were dealt with under the military list between 1985 and 1990, should be increased in total by 43 over the figure which was given on 14 July 1995. The breakdown by year is as follows:

| Year | Number |
|---|---|
| 1985 | 148 |
| 1986 | 133 |
| 1987 | 186 |
| 1988 | 134 |
| 1989 | 105 |
| 1990 | 174 |
| Total | 880 |

In addition, over the same period, a further five cases have been identified of index records apparently relating to BMARC export licence applications, but where the absence of any surviving documentation makes it impossible to confirm this.

I am bringing these new findings to the attention of the Trade and Industry Committee in view of its current inquiry into the granting licences to BMARC for the export of naval guns to Singapore.

Departmental Publicity

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent by his Department on publicity and media relations for each year since 1990. [12482]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Expenditure from centrally managed budgets on publicity and media relations, excluding staff costs, has been as follows:

1990–91: £16,413,000
1991–92: £10,918,000
1992–93: £10,633,000
1993–94: £9,377,000
1994–95: £8,931,000

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92 (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11390]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Details of departmental telephone costs prior to 1991–92 are not readily available. Comparison of the figures for successive years must be treated with caution as they are affected by major accommodation moves and, for the DTI agencies and regional Government offices, only include the use of the Government telephone network, other charges being met from local budgets.

1991–92: £3.2 million

1992–93: £4.2 million

1993–94: £3.9 million

1994–95: £2.9 million

1995–96: £3.3 million (anticipated)

Internal telephone directories are available to staff in the Department and its agencies. Non-departmental public bodies are not listed in these but can receive copies.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations [11388]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Total Departmental expenditure on publicity is not held centrally and could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Total advertising expenditure from centrally managed budgets for the years in question is as follows:

1979–80: £1,554,000

1989–90: £10,492,000

1991–92: £966,000

1993–94: £784,000

1994–95: £561,000

1995–96: £530,000 (spend to end December 1995)

The budgets for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are not broken down by media.

Press and public relation costs, as reflected through the costs associated with the Department's press office, are as follows:

1993–94: £1,987,000

1995–96: £1,212,000 (spend to end December 1995)

Budgets for 1995–96 and 1996–97 do not specifically separate out press and public relations costs. For the comparable expenditure in earlier years, I refer the hon. Member to answer given by my hon. Friend the then Minister for Energy on 2 June 1992, Official Report, column 492–93.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11389]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The sickness absence database of the Occupational Health and Safety Agency shows the average number of days sick leave per employee for the Department is:

| Calendar years | Number |
|---|---|
| 1990 | 8.5 |
| 1991 | 8.4 |
| 1992 | 8.2 |
| 1993 | 8.9 |
| 1994 | 7.0 |

Comparable statistics are not available for earlier years. The 1995 figure is not expected to be published until August 1996.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agriculture Council

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 22 and 23 January; and if he will make a statement. [11850]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No decisions were taken at this short meeting. The only substantial item was a further discussion of the Commission's proposals for changes to the arrangements for bananas. The Commissioner expressed his intention of making some additional proposals with a view to securing agreement: but member states' views remain deeply divided. I underlined the need to protect the interests of the African, Caribbean and Pacific suppliers of bananas, in line with the Community's commitments.

The presidency held a dinner at which there was "informal" discussion of the use of hormones for fattening beef cattle, in the light of the scientific conference organised by the Commission last year.

During the Council, I took the opportunity to question the Commissioner about his promised proposals on the welfare of calves reared for veal. He said he expected to be able to table these very shortly.

Oil Dispersant Policy

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the conclusions of the review that the Government have been carrying out into oil dispersant policy; and if he will make a statement. [12065]

Mr. Baldry: The hon. Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry) announced to the House in April 1993 that the Government would conduct a review of oil dispersant policy. Two scientific reports were commissioned and published and we prepared a consultation paper setting out proposed improvements which was circulated to over 600 bodies. Sixty-four responses were received. We have responded on issues where suggestions were made; in general, there was broad agreement to our plans and we have now prepared a final report completing the review. We have concluded that it would be fully justified to retain oil dispersants as the UK's primary means of combating oil spills at sea in order to protect economic and environmental resources, although oil dispersants may not be appropriate in all instances. All products will continue to be required to pass efficacy and toxicity tests. These tests will, in future, incorporate some minor improvements designed further to protect the marine environment. I have initiated the development of protocols, in conjunction with the industry, that will enable bioremediation products to be licensed in the UK. These could, in due course, make an important contribution to clean-up operations. There will also be new arrangements for labelling products in line with our policies on openness. In carrying out the review, I have also managed to achieve modest deregulatory gains by enabling manufacturers to submit their own test results. Finally, I intend to publish a booklet explaining the approval process which will include a code of good spraying practice. A copy of the final report has been placed in the Library of both Houses.

Set-aside Payments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount paid in set-aside payments in each year since its inception; and what is the average amount paid each year per farm. [11256]

Mr. Baldry: Under the five-year set-aside scheme—and, in 1992–93 only, the one-year set-aside scheme—the Agriculture Departments made total payments of:

1989–90: £9,846,000

1990–91: £19,110,000

1991–92: £25,102,000

1992–93: £31,111,000

1993–94: £25,078,000

1994–95: £15,108,000

For set-aside under the arable area payments scheme, the Agriculture Departments paid £142,080,000 in 1993–94 and £200,440,000 in 1994–95.

Payments under both schemes for 1995–96 are not complete but at the beginning of the year were estimated as £225,125,000 for the arable area payments scheme and £7,483,000 for the five-year set-aside scheme.

Under the arable area payments scheme, payments are made against claims which may relate to more than one agricultural holding. Under the five-year set-aside scheme, more than one payment per farm could be made as separate agreements were allowed for different areas of land on the same farm. Hence, it is not possible to calculate an average amount paid each year per farm.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits Agency

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the future of the Benefits Agency offices in Seaham and Peterlee. [10913]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. John Cummings, dated 25 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will make a statement on the future of the Benefit Agency (BA) offices in Seaham and Peterlee.

As you are aware, the North Durham District is undertaking a long term review of its organisation. There is, however, no intention at present to close the Seaham and Peterlee offices. The aim of the Benefit Agency is to provide a high standard of service to all our customers and any organisational changes in North Durham District will be made with the assurance that this standard will be maintained.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Hardship Allowance (Greater Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people are currently claiming hardship allowance in the Greater Manchester area. [11036]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 25 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many young people are currently claiming hardship allowance in the Greater Manchester Area.

The District offices that cover the Greater Manchester Area are Oldham, Manchester Central, Manchester South, Manchester Trinity, North Cheshire, Sale/East Cheshire, Salford, Stockport, and Tameside.

The total number of young people who claimed hardship allowance in these offices in November 1995 was 482. This figure is provisional and may be subject to change. This is the latest figure available.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Habitual Residence Rules

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest calculation of the numbers and percentage of the total of appeals against decisions by his Department on the habitual residence rules that have been successful. [12203]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) adults and (b) children in receipt of disability living allowance mobility component are estimated to lose benefit for a period in hospital exceeding four weeks and 12 weeks in each of the next three years. [11995]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is in the table.

| Losers | 1996–97 | 1997–98 | 1998–99 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Adults | 35,000 | 35,000 | 40,000 |
| Children | 5,000 | 5,000 | 5,000 |
| Total | 40,000 | 45,000 | 45,000 |

Estimates rounded to nearest 5,000 and should be treated with caution.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in receipt of the disability living allowance mobility component have arrangements with firms other than Motability for the hire or purchase of (a) cars and (b) wheelchairs. [11996]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the expected savings to his Department of (a) removing and (b) reducing the disability living allowance mobility component for hospital stays in respect of (i) children and (ii) adults in (x) 1996–97, (y) 1997–98 and (z) 1998–99. [11998]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is in the table:

| Cash | 1996–97 | 1997–98 | 1998–99 |
|---|---|---|---|
| (i) Children | | | |
| (a) Removing | [1]— | [1]— | [1]— |
| (b) Reducing | 5 | 5 | 5 |
| (ii) Adults | | | |
| (a) Removing | 5 | 15 | 20 |
| (b) Reducing | 20 | 20 | 20 |
| Total | 30 | 40 | 45 |

[1] Denotes an estimate less than £2.5 million. Estimates rounded to nearest £5 million. Totals may not sum owing to rounding.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the additional cost or savings which will be made to the Exchequer as a consequence of the implementation of clause 10 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill; what representations he has received on the implementation of clause 10 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill; and if he will place copies of all such representations in the Library. [12105]

Mr. Heald: The information is set out in the table.

| | 1996–97 | 1997–98 | 1998–99 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Estimated savings | 5 | 15 | 25 |

1. Costs rounded to nearest £5 million. 2. It has been assumed that the average award of Child Benefit is £18.85 per week.

One letter has been received concerning the implementation of clause 10, and several from members of the public in support of the principle that child benefit should not be paid to people coming from abroad. Correspondence is not normally published without the express permission of the writer.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Saudi Arabia

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Saudi Arabian Government on (a) the detention of 70 members of the Indian Christian Fellowship followed by the imprisonment of seven leaders at Alkhobar on 22 December and (b) the imprisonment of three Filipino Christians in Riyadh last October; and if he will make a statement. [10322]

Mr. Hanley: We and our EU partners discuss human rights regularly with the Saudi Arabian Government. However, we have made no representations to the Saudis on the specific cases referred to by the hon. Member which we understand did not involve British citizens. We understand from the Indian embassy in Riyadh that those of its citizens who were being detained in connection with their attendance at a religious gathering have now been released.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11915]

Mr. Hanley: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office and its agencies are not currently users of the positive about disabled people symbol. However, we implement many of its recommendations on external and internal recruitment and promotion.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11382]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The information requested is not readily available and could be partially provided only at disproportionate cost. But the annual telephony cost figures are available for:

| | Diplomatic wing £ | Aid wing £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1989–90 | — | 452,070 |
| 1991–92 | 6,077,642 00 | 458,224 |

| 1996–97 | [1]4,000.00 | [1]185,000 |

[1] Estimate.

Our department makes use of CCTA's Metropolitan Telephony Service—MTS—which provides us with fully managed telephony and directory services. The MTS service provides an annual estimate of telephony charges.

Internal telephone directories are available to all staff in the United Kingdom and at major UK diplomatic missions overseas.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11379]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Consultants are employed in a number of roles, including contracted services and the design and management of projects. The work of external consultants is only one factor to be taken into consideration in assessing the results of such projects.

The table contains figures for expenditure on consultants for the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96. The table also contains estimates for 1996–97. Figures exclude the cost of consultants engaged on projects under the bilateral aid programme. The bulk of expenditure within the diplomatic wing was for technical expertise on capital projects and information technology.

Figures for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

| | Diplomatic wing £ million | Aid wing £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 14.2 | 618,700 |
| 1994–95 | 13.6 | 505,300 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 10.5 | 621,500 |
| 1995–96 (estimated outturn) | 15.8 | 869,000 |
| 1996–97 (estimate) | 13.5 | 530,000 |

Qualified Majority Voting

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the occasions on which decisions have been taken by qualified majority voting under title V of the Maastricht treaty on European Union; and if he will make a statement. [11260]

Mr. David Davis: No decisions have been taken using qualified majority voting under title V of the Maastricht treaty. The common foreign and security policy operates by unanimity. Article J.3.2 allows for use of qualified majority voting only in the implementation of joint actions and after prior unanimous agreement.

SCOTLAND

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which members of which non-departmental public bodies are current local authority councillors; how much time annually each spends on each body; and what is the salary paid for each position. [8473]

Mr. Kynoch: Fifty-five local authority councillors currently hold Secretary of State appointments to executive non-departmental public bodies, health boards and NHS trusts. These appointments are made on an individual basis, and not as a representative of any particular interest or group. The details are as set out in the table. The time spent is the minimum required and appointees usually will spend additional time, for example, in preparing for meetings or serving on sub-committees. The figures exclude appointments by local authorities to bodies on which they have statutory representation.

| Body | Rank | Number | Salary £ | Minimum annual time spent |

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the helplines, or schemes which include a helpline service, for which his Department provides any funding, stating which are (a) independent organisations, (b) run by his Department or agencies of his Department or (c) of another classification; how many calls each received in each of the last five years; and how much money each received from his Department in each of the last five years. [9801]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office contributes to two UK-wide national helplines. The Scottish figures recorded by financial year are set out in the following table:

| Helpline | Year commenced | Amount paid by The Scottish Office to operating company £ | Number of calls |
|---|---|---|---|

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) on 15 January, Official Report, column 805.

Maternity Services (Lothian)

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his office requires a response from Lothian Health on its proposals in respect of maternity services; and what the consequence of Lothian Health failing to meet that deadline would be. [11616]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is for Lothian health board to bring forward its proposals on the future configuration of maternity services when it has completed its considerations. I understand that the board is currently undertaking a further public consultation until 28 February 1996 on its proposals for maternity services. I look forward to seeing the board's final proposals as soon as possible thereafter.

Nursery Education

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the proportion of families in Scotland which have state nursery education available to them in each education authority for children aged (a) three to four and (b) four to five years. [11089]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: We do not hold information on the basis of families. The table shows the number of children at education authority nursery schools at September 1994 expressed as a percentage of the General Register Office's mid-1994 population estimates for three and four-year-olds.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much each regional authority in Scotland spends on nursery education. [11550]

Mr. Kynoch: The total gross revenue expenditure on nursery education in 1993–94—the last year for which figures are available—by each region and islands council was as shown in the table. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current grant-aided expenditure for nursery education for each regional authority; and how the figures are calculated. [11551]

Mr. Kynoch: There is not a separate grant-aided expenditure assessment for the total cost of nursery education. There is, however, an assessment for the cost of nursery teaching staff. Its distribution for the current year is shown in the table.

It is apportioned between relevant authorities pro-rata to the population aged three and four in each authority, based on the most recent available mid-year population estimate provided by the General Register Office of Scotland.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children in Scotland currently receive some form of nursery education in the year before statutory schooling, broken down by (a) the different types of provision and (b) region. [11559]

[1] Age at 31 December 1994.

Other pre-school care providers such as private nurseries, playgroups and day care centres may also provide education, but there will be no clear way of establishing this until the quality assurance arrangements planned under the Government's pre-school education vouchers initiative have been set up.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of children whose parents are currently paying for nursery education in the year before statutory schooling. [11561]

Mr. Robertson: I have made no such estimate.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what figures he has received from each regional authority for the cost of a part-time nursery education place in its area. [11556]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 24 January 1996]: These costs are not collected routinely. Participation in the pilot will give authorities an impetus systematically to collect such data, which would be part of our overall review of the initial phase.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to make the implementation statement on the nursery vouchers scheme, foreseen in the consultation paper issued on 15 August. [11548]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I made it on 11 December 1995.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the impact of the proposed nursery voucher scheme on nursery provision for three-year-olds. [11552]

Mr. Robertson: The nursery voucher initiative is not intended to have any impact on nursery provision for three-year-olds. I shall, however, keep this issue under review in course of the pilot year.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many extra nursery places he expects the nursery voucher scheme to create in its first year. [11553]

Mr. Robertson: The scheme will be driven by parental choice and parental demand.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of how children with special needs will be affected by the nursery voucher scheme. [11554]

Mr. Robertson: The powers and duties of local authorities to make provision for children with special educational needs will not be affected by the Government's nursery education initiative.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received concerning the proposed nursery voucher scheme; and how many of those representations were (a) in support of and (b) opposed to the scheme. [11555]

Mr. Robertson: In response to the formal consultation launched in August, my Department received over 170 replies.

Without exception, consultees welcomed the Government's commitment to extend education for children in the pre-school year, but there was concern about the implications of the voucher initiative. These concerns will be addressed in the pilot year.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the planned cost of the nursery voucher pilot project. [11558]

Mr. Robertson: Some £3 million of new money is being made available in 1996–97 for the pilot phase. There will, in addition, be funding which was hitherto part of participating authorities' nursery education provision.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money he plans to withhold from local authority settlements in consideration of the nursery voucher scheme; and by what mechanisms. [11560]

Mr. Robertson: In the 1996–97 pilot year, each participating local authority will be asked to agree to pay to the Scottish Office, or have deducted from grant, a sum equal to the voucher value multiplied by the base number of places provided by that authority and filled in the previous year. The mechanism for future years will be discussed with authorities.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to prevent a black market in nursery vouchers. [11562]

Mr. Robertson: A range of precautions will be taken to guard against dishonesty. For obvious reasons, these cannot be made public.

EC Nitrates Directive

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about implementation of the EC nitrates directive (91/676/EEC) in Scotland; and when he expects to announce the decision regarding the designation of nitrate-vulnerable zones. [12171]

Mr. Kynoch: In June 1994, the Government consulted publicly on two areas proposed as candidates for designation as nitrate—vulnerable zones in Scotland—the catchments of the Balmalcolm groundwater borehole in Fife and the River Ythan in Grampian. Some 189 replies were received.

Following careful consideration of the responses and the extent to which each of these areas meet the criteria laid down in the directive, it has been decided to designate the catchment of the Balmalcolm borehole as an NVZ.

Since a final link between higher levels of nitrate and the increased growth of the algae enteromorpha has yet to be determined scientifically, the Government have decided not to designate the catchment of the River Ythan as an NVZ on this occasion. There will, however, be continuing research into the extent of any link between the growth of the algae in the estuary and nitrate from agricultural sources in the catchment. A further review of the case for designation of NVZs throughout Scotland will take place, as required by the directive, by 19 December 1997 and this review will take account of the additional research.

The Government will now make it a priority to promote good practice in the use of nitrates by farmers throughout the Ythan catchment in line with the code of good practice "Prevention of Environmental Pollution from Agricultural Activity".

I can also announce that the Government have today issued a consultation paper on regulatory proposals and the action programme necessary to give effect to the directive's requirements in NVZs in Scotland. A copy of the proposals is available in the Library of the House. Comments are sought by 25 March 1996.

Local Government Reform

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the preparation of notional budgets for the new unitary authorities. [12172]

Mr. Kynoch: I have today laid before the House, in terms of section 94A of the Local Government Finance Act 1992—as inserted by section 24 of the Local Government, etc. (Scotland) Act 1994—the notional amounts report 1996. Subject to the approval of the report, the amounts specified therein for each of the new councils will be used as the baseline for considering any capping action in 1996–97. I announced my provisional capping principles for that year in my reply to a question from my right hon. Friends the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 28 November 1995, Official Report, columns 585–87.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9764]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Mobile phones and car phones are purchased on an as-required basis. Agreements are entered into with the supplier for the provision of airtime for a 12-month minimum period with 90 days notification of cancellation thereafter. The number of mobile phones held by the Scottish Office and its executive agencies is 454. These have been provided by the following suppliers:

Vodaphone; Cellnet; BT Mobile; Vodac Direct; HSW Systems; Mobile Direct; Veecom; Woodend Communications; Woodend Cellular: Comware.

The total operating cost per annum is approximately £135,000.

Elderly People (NHS Services)

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment his Department has made of changes in the costs of providing NHS treatments and services to elderly people in Scotland (a) over the last 10 years and (b) over the next 10 years. [11041]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The aim for all groups is to secure the most effective package of health and social care services, both in hospital and the community, that meet the specific needs of individuals and where appropriate, their carers.

Assessment of needs for care services for the elderly is primarily a matter for health boards and local authorities. Demographic change has led to the cost of providing NHS care and treatment for this age group increasing over the last 10 years by approximately 1 per cent. a year. On the same basis, the forecast to year 2005–06 is for an increase of about 0.9 per cent. per annum. In practice, these cost pressures will continue to be offset by further improvements in efficiency and quality of care.

Health Boards

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance his Department has issued to Scottish health boards in respect of retention of surpluses in their budgets at the end of the 1994–95 financial year. [11102]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Guidance is contained in the "Scottish Accounting Manual" which is issued to all health boards. This states that an underdrawing of up to 1 per cent. of a health board's cash limit may be carried forward from one year to another and that any overdrawing will be carried forward as a first charge against the following year's cash limit. There is, however, flexibility to allow a larger carry forward. Requests from health boards for carry forward in excess of 1 per cent. are considered on their merits.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his answer of 7 December 1995, Official Report, column 367, (1) if the under-drawings in the 1994–95 budgets of Greater Glasgow health board and Borders health board were carried forward into the 1995–96 budgets of these bodies; [11148]

(2) what was the outcome of his Department's discussions with the senior management of Greater Glasgow health board and Borders health board, concerning these bodies' under-drawing of their budgets for 1994–95. [11149]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Final agreement has been reached with senior management of Greater Glasgow health board and Borders health board concerning the carry forward of underdrawings in 1994–95. Borders health board carry forward is £815,925 which is the same amount it underdrew. Greater Glasgow health board carry forward is £8,043,180 which is £1,837,000 less than its underdrawing. The difference relates to ring fenced funds which cannot normally be carried forward.

Rail Privatisation

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what total payment (a) has been and (b) is projected to be made to Strathclyde regional council to provide for the additional costs of supporting rail services arising from the privatisation of British Rail. [11316]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1994–95, £79,103,000 was paid to Strathclyde regional council to cover the additional costs to it in that year resulting from rail restructuring. The Scottish Office expects to pay about £60 million to cover comparable costs in the current financial year. With effect from 1 April 1996, future costs will be met through provision in the annual local government finance settlements for the constituent authorities in the Strathclyde passenger transport authority.

School Meals

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each regional and island council in Scotland for each academic year since 1979–80 the average price of a school meal in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools. [11103]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The average cost to pupils of school meals is not collected centrally. Pupils can obtain either a fixed meal at a set charge or a cafeteria style meal for which the charge will vary depending on the individual pupil's choice. The table gives details of the fixed price meal charge levied by each education authority in each year since 1979. The level of the charge made is at the discretion of the education authority.

Schools Development Programme

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to require the provision of resource material relating to leaving home education as part of the social development programme in schools. [11177]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Government have no plans to require the provision of such material.

In 1993, the Scottish Office education department published national guidelines on personal and social development 5–14. Among other things the aims of this document include helping pupils to develop life skills to enable them to participate effectively and safely in society and to take increasing responsibility for their own lives. This document provides a basis for school managers to include leaving home education in the curriculum if they should consider it to be appropriate for their schools.

Housing Education

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to instruct Scottish Homes to take steps to (a) provide funding for and (b) promote a national housing education development unit. [11178]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to do so.

Students

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) men and (b) women from (i) the Irish Republic and (ii) Northern Ireland were studying at universities at the latest date for which figures are available as (1) undergraduates and (2) graduate students. [11516]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The latest available, but provisional, figures are for those studying at Scottish higher education institutions in 1994–95, and are as follows:

| | Postgraduate | | Undergraduate | | Total | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Irish Republic | Northern Ireland | Irish Republic | Northern Ireland | Irish Republic | Northern Ireland |
| Male | 104 | 19 | 542 | 234 | 646 | 253 |
| Female | 102 | 15 | 417 | 279 | 519 | 294 |
| Total | 206 | 34 | 959 | 513 | 1,165 | 547 |

Parole

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he held in respect of, and what estimate he has made of the costs of, the parole restrictions on early release which he recently announced. [11636]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend is consulting now on his proposals for changes to the arrangements governing the early release of prisoners in Scotland. A consultation document—"Making the Punishment Fit the Crime"—was published on 15 January and has been circulated to a wide range of interested parties in Scotland. We look forward to receiving responses which have been requested by 15 March.

In the light of responses, we shall then publish a White Paper containing specific proposals and an assessment of the financial implications.

Health Finance

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the capital allocations to (i) Scottish health boards, (ii) national health service trusts, (iii) the Common Services Agency and (iv) the state hospital in each of the most recent five years. [11199]

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the efficiency savings targets, expressed both in percentage and cash terms, set for Scottish health boards in each year since they were first introduced. [11147]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

These trains are being examined and will be returned to service only if their couplings are found to be in a satisfactory condition for use without restrictions, such as the locking of connecting compartment doors.

The Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate has requested the result of these examinations and will discuss the remedial measures to be implemented.

Socially Necessary Rail Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the criteria for determining that a rail service is essential for the purposes of designation as a socially necessary service; and if he will make a statement. [11973]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 22 January, Official Report, columns, 28–9. The Secretary of State's instructions to the franchising director require him to develop specific criteria for evaluating the benefits of loss-making but socially necessary services. These criteria are being developed and will be submitted to the Secretary of State for his approval in due course.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11350]

Mr. Norris [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The answer is as follows:

| | | (a) £ | (b) £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| (iii) 1991–92 | Actual | 5,389,147 | 3,722,495 |
| (iv) 1993–94 | Actual | 5,747,307 | 4,439,161 |

| | | (a) £ | (b) £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| (v) 1994–95 | Actual | 5,621,188 | 4,158,987 |
| (vi) 1995–96 | Forecast | 5,357,874 | 4,271,187 |
| (vii) 1996–97 | Estimate | 5,323,600 | 4,277,700 |

The information requested for earlier years (i) and (ii) and for non-departmental public bodies (c) is not available.

Internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Testing

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for the last year for which records are available (i) the number of heavy goods vehicles over 3.5 tonnes which were given an annual inspection for road worthiness, (ii) for how many of these it was the first test, (iii) what were the 10 most common test failures by (a) numbers and (b) percentage of the total, (iv) how many vehicles failed on re-test (y) in total and (z) as a percentage, (v) how many of the failures related to braking (a) in total and (b) as a percentage and (vi) of brake failures how many were in respect of (1) service brakes, (2) secondary brakes, (3) parking brakes and (4) brake components and how many were determined (A) visually and (B) otherwise; what consideration he has give to reducing the period between tests; and if he will make a statement. [11694]

Mr. Norris [holding answer, 25 January 1996]: The tables show:

Table 1 The total number of heavy goods vehicles tested in 1994–95

Table 2 (a) The 10 most common failure items in each category for motor vehicles

Table 2 (b) The 10 most common failure items in each category for trailers

Table 3 the number of vehicles failing retests and the percentage failure rates

Table 4 the total number of failures for each braking item and the percentage failure rates.

There are no plans for more frequent testing. The existing system is effective in relying on three complementary forms of control: roadworthiness testing, operator licensing and its maintenance conditions; and enforcement checks carried out both at the roadside and in operators' premises.

Table 1a: The total numbers of heavy goods vehicles tested in 1994–95, (the last full year for which figures are available)

| Type | Total tests | First and annual tests | Retests |
|---|---|---|---|
| Motor vehicles | 573,074 | 447,660 | 125,414 |
| Trailers | 267,443 | 225,648 | 41,795 |

Separate figures are not available for First Test volumes but estimated volumes are 48,000 for motor vehicles and 16,000 for trailers.

These figures are for all Heavy Goods Vehicles subject to testing under the Goods Vehicles (Plating and Testing) Regulations 1988.

Table 2a: The 10 most common failure items in each category for motor vehicles

| Parking brake performance | 4.708 | 21,076 | 6.844 | 15,443 |

These figures relate to first and annual tests. Detailed figures on failures for retests are not available.

It should be noted that the figures relate to the number of vehicles failing for a particular item. In many cases vehicles will fail for more than one item.

The inspection for all items other than brake performance—(the last three items in the table—is essentially a visual inspection. The brake performance is determined with the use of a roller brake tester.

Training Schemes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been allocated to the crew relief costs scheme, the Government assistance for training scheme for British officer trainees and the development certificated seafarers scheme for 1996. [12467]

Mr. Norris: Allocation for the financial year 1996–97 have yet to be finalised.

Marine Safety Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many surveyors have left the Marine Safety Agency in the last year; and how many have been recruited. [12194]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. Bradley to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 26 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of surveyors who have left the Marine Safety Agency and the number who have been recruited in the last year.

Between 1 January and 31 December 1995, 22 surveyors left the Agency, and 9 new recruits joined. A recent recruitment campaign for marine surveyors selected 20 successful applicants. These will be appointed to current vacancies, and any forthcoming vacancies over the next year.

Lorry Drivers (Convictions)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department takes in respect of British lorry drivers who are convicted in other member states of the European Union of carrying prohibited substances or articles of which they claim to have no knowledge. [12096]

Mr. Norris: Such matters are the responsibility of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs advises that any British citizen convicted of an offence in a foreign country will have full access to normal consular support. However, the British consulate has no authority to interfere with the due process of law in a sovereign state.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which sites of special scientific interest in England will be affected by trunk road and motorway schemes for which preferred routes have been announced. [11229]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Laurie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 26 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about sites of special scientific interest (SSSI) in England that will be affected by trunk road and motorways schemes for which preferred routes have been announced.

I enclose a list of Trunk Road and Motorway schemes in England, for which preferred routes have been announced, that are likely to involve permanent or temporary landtake from a SSSI, a list of schemes that may have an impact on a SSSI but do not involve landtake and a list of those schemes which remain under review following the 1995 Review which may affect a SSSI.

You will, I hope, appreciate that the lists are therefore dynamic and will be subject to change as, and when, scheme, designs are developed.

I hope this is helpful.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the minimum requirements for the refurbishment of the west coast main line (a) for signals, (b) for track and (c) for rolling stock. [11632]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack is developing modernisation proposals for the west coast main line which include the introduction of an in-cab signalling system and improved track and power supply equipment. All enhancements will be carried out in accordance with Railtrack's statutory duties, its rigorous safety standards, and its contractual obligations to the train operating companies. All new or altered works, which includes rolling stock, have to be approved by HM railways inspectorate, on behalf of the Secretary of State, under the Railway and Other Transport Systems (Approval of Works Plant and Equipment) Regulations 1994, before they can be used on the railway.

DEFENCE

F16 Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with (a) the Prime Minister and (b) the Deputy Prime Minister concerning the proposed leasing of American F16 aircraft. [12115]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 15 January, Official Report, column 430. Discussions between Ministers are confidential.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the remit of Mr. David Hart in respect of providing advice on the proposed leasing of American F16 aircraft. [12116]

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 October 1995, Official Report, column 360, and that from my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement on 15 January, Official Report, column 430.

Super-computers

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the name and addresses of the independent advisers appointed by him, or by the relevant agency, in the procurement of (a) the department of experimentation and research into Aviation Farnborough's most current super-computer, (b) the Meteorological Office Bracknell's current super-computer and (c) the atomic weapons establishment Aldermaston's recent super-computer. [12157]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The competition for a super-computer for the Atomic Weapons Establishment Aldermaston is being run by the AWE operating contractor. It is being assisted in the competition by an independent consultancy company, details of which are commercially confidential.

The Defence Evaluation and Research Agency and the Meteorological Office are executive agencies and matters of this nature fall to their chief executives. I have asked the chief executives of both agencies to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Michael Stern, dated 26 January 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the appointment of independent advisors on procuring supercomputers. I am responsible for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) which through its Defence Research Agency (DRA) division has recently procured a supercomputer at Farnborough, Hampshire.

The procurement of a massively parallel supercomputer by DERA acting on behalf of the members of the Farnborough Supercompter Centre (FSC) followed from a feasibility study carried out by Smith System Engineering Limited, Surrey Research Park, Guildford, Surrey GU12 5YP.

The FSC, which was opened in January 1995, is a Dual-Use Technology Centre (DUTC) with members from leading defence manufacturers together with DERA.

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from Julian Hunt to Mr. Michael Stern; dated 25 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about the procurement of the Meteorological Office's current supercomputers this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office.

The Meteorological Office's current supercomputer has been procured in accordance with normal Ministry of Defence practice. The procurement was agreed with the Department's DGICS organisation, in the course of which advice was taken from appropriate independent sources.

The identity of the provider of the relevant advice must remain commercially confidential.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the United States Department of Energy will share with the United Kingdom the data derived from the planned subcritical nuclear tests, Rebound (1) and Holog (1). [11720]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Rebound (1) and Holog (1) are the names which have been given to subcritical hydrodynamic experiments planned by the US for later this year. As regards the arrangements allowing for the exchange of nuclear weapons-related information, I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 23 November, 1995, Official Report, column 261.

Surplus Equipment Sales

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence under what conditions tanks, armoured personnel carriers and mobile guns are sold to private individuals and dealers; and how many have been sold in each of the past five years. [12200]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Current practice is to scrap surplus tanks and armoured personnel carriers. A limited number have been sold recently in a restricted access auction. Mobile guns are not now sold to individuals and dealers, and the majority of declarations have been the subject of a Government-to-Government sale. Previously, armoured vehicles have been sold by invitation to tender to approved individuals and traders, including collectors and museums; to UK defence companies; or they have been scrapped.

Where fighting vehicles normally carry armaments of any sort, the status of the final user will determine whether the vehicle is deactivated or not. Only those individuals or companies, including scrap dealers in the UK, who hold an appropriate licence under the Firearms Act 1968 may receive an active vehicle. Otherwise, the vehicles are demilitarised, (and officially certified or confirmed as such) in such a way as to render their ordnance unserviceable or inoperative—by barrel slotting, breach cutting/welding etc. The acquisition of parts which are essential to a weapon being fully operative are themselves the subject of the Firearms Act and current departmental policy is not to offer them for sale within the UK. Vehicles sold on the express condition that they are to be broken up or smelted are subject to confirmation that this has been done.

Buyers of MOD's vehicles for other purposes are required to formally seek my Department's permission before on-selling.

The following quantities of vehicles have been sold in the last five years:

1991: 15

1992: 205

1993: 403

1994: 583

1995: 758.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what precautions his Department takes to ensure that surplus tanks, armoured personnel carriers and mobile guns sold to dealers and the public are not used for criminal or other anti-social acts. [12202]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The sales process requires either deactivation of residual ordnance or production of an appropriate firearms licence. After-sale responsibility lies with the purchaser to observe the law concerning ownership and use of the vehicle.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the average original cost of (a) tanks, (b) armoured personnel carriers and (c) mobile guns sold by the services in each of the past five years; and what was the average price for which they were sold. [12201]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Vehicles declared for disposal have been in service for many years and records of original costs have been destroyed. Prices achieved depend on market forces. It is not MOD's policy to reveal individual prices achieved. The value of receipts for armoured vehicles and guns for each of the five years is:

| | Number | £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1991 | 15 | 16,250 |
| 1992 | 205 | 255,685 |
| 1993 | 403 | 390,477 |
| 1994 | 583 | 4,384,079 |
| 1995 | 758 | 984,523 |

Bosnia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the British bases as part of the implementation force operating in (a) Bosnia and (b) Croatia; and how much Britain is charged for these bases to be situated in each of those areas. [12114]

Mr. Soames: British forces contributing to the IFOR operation in Bosnia and Croatia occupy 34 major sites and a number of smaller buildings. Some of these sites are transitional and may be relinquished when the dispositions of troops within the British area of operations is finalised. Others have been occupied only recently and in many cases, negotiations with owners, where known, are continuing. The details of the bases and the charges so far agreed, are as follows:

| | Monthly charge |
|---|---|
| Location—Croatia | |
| Split—Divulje Barracks | No charge. Croatian Government property. |
| Split—port sites and facilities | Remains under UN lease at present. |
| Split—port warehouses | £17,045 |
| Split—Dalma warehouse complex | £83,681 |
| Split—workshops and warehouse | £44,545 |
| Split—factory | £42,610 |
| Location—Bosnia | |
| Tomislavgrad—factory and warehouse | £25,000 for warehouse, charge for factory not yet known. |
| Lipa | Not yet known. |
| Kupres | £34,090 |
| Gornji Vakuf—3 factories | £15,909 for one factory, others not yet known. |
| Sipovo—3 factories, sawmill and hotel | Not yet known. |
| Bugojno—factory | Not yet known. |
| Glamoc—sawmill and transport depot | £2,272 for saw mill, charge for depot not yet known. |
| Sanski Most—2 factories | Not yet known. |
| Mrkonjic Grad—2 factories, sawmill and dam | Not yet known. |
| Banja Luka—factory and offices | Not yet known. |
| Vitez—bulk fuel installation (BFI) and school | £636 for BFI, charge for school not yet known. |
| Jajce—factory | Not yet known. |
| Kljuk—depot | £909 |
| Bosanski Petrovac—depot | Not yet known. |
| Krupa—factory | £2,500 |

Overseas Units (Media Visits)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost in each of the past five years of visits by journalists to service units abroad funded by (a) the armed services and (b) his Ministry. [11622]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In the majority of cases, journalists travelling abroad to visit service units/naval ships are expected to fund their costs.

However, financial assistance is given, principally to journalists from provincial or regional media who could not otherwise afford to travel and where coverage is considered to be in the interest of the armed service.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what journalists, from which (a) newspapers and (b) other media organisations, were guests of (i) his Department and (ii) the armed services on visits to service units abroad in each of the past three years. [11623]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

RAF Turnhouse

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on the timing of his plan to close RAF Turnhouse; how many civilian staff are still employed there; and when he intends to notify redundancies. [11991]

Mr. Soames: Our proposal to close RAF Turnhouse by 1 April has been the subject of formal consultation. I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Super-computer (Nuclear Weapons Simulation)

Sir John Cope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek a second and independent opinion on the advice that no United Kingdom-designed and sourced super-computer could perform the task required for nuclear weapons simulation at atomic weapons research establishment, Aldermaston. [11617]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The technical assessment of the responses to the statement of requirement was made on purely technical grounds by AWE assisted by an independent firm of technical consultants. The SOR had been issued to all known massively parallel processor suppliers and placed in the MOD contracts bulletin. The SOR made it clear that the mini-proposal was not a tender, nor would it guarantee suppliers the right to tender.

Only one bid came from a United Kingdom company. It was based on a design not in manufacture and which did not reach the required specification; it was; therefore, rejected. The tenderer was de-briefed to this effect in May 1995.

HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when it is planned that new landing platform dock ships, replacing HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid; will enter service; [11852]

(2) when he plans to place an order for the ships to replace HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid. [11871]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Ministry of Defence is currently in no acceptable price, no contract—NAPNOC—negotiations with VSEL to replace HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid. The size and timing of any order, and therefore the exact date of entry into service, depend on a satisfactory outcome to these discussions. Assuming this can be achieved, we would envisage entry into service around the turn of the century.

Trident

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he intends to publish the annual report on progress of the Trident programme; and if he will send a copy of the report to all right hon. and hon. Members; [11705]

(2) what plans he has to inform Parliament of the updated progress of the Trident programme. [11706]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The annual report on the progress of the Trident programme will be published shortly and, as usual, copies will be placed in the Library of the House. It would not be sensible use of resources to send individual copies to all right hon. and hon. Members as not all may wish to receive one.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Gaming Laws

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish his consultation document on his proposals for reforming the gaming laws. [12110]

Mr. Kirkhope: We are reviewing the present controls on bingo clubs and casinos as part of the Government's deregulation initiative. The review is well advanced and we hope to consult on proposals shortly.

Identity Card Scheme

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made in respect of the feasibility studies for the introduction of a nationwide identity card scheme. [11464]

Mr. Sackville: We received over 3,000 replies to the Green Paper on identity cards (CM 2879) and have placed in the Library a copy of the Home Office memorandum of evidence to the Home Affairs Committee inquiry on identity cards which contains a summary of the responses.

The Government have yet to reach a final decision on whether an identity card should be introduced and, if so, what type of card scheme to propose but all of the options set out in the Green Paper remain open.

Gambling (Fruit Machines)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the percentage of (a) the population and (b) 16 to 24-year-olds who are addicted to gambling on fruit machines. [11754]

Mr. Kirkhope: There are no official statistics on the use of gaming machines.

Research has tended to focus on machine gaming by adolescents. It is not possible to estimate from existing research the incidence of problem gambling specifically on amusement-with-prizes—fruit—machines in the national population or in young adults.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the level of addition to gambling on fruit machines, with particular reference to young people. [11755]

Mr. Kirkhope: Following consultation, on 11 December 1995, I laid in draft the Deregulation (Gaming Machines and Betting Office Facilities) Order 1996. This measure, which is currently being scrutinised by the deregulation committees, would, for the first time, give local authorities power to impose an age limit in arcades which install proposed all-cash amusement-with-prizes machines with a maximum payout of £10. Young people under 18 would not be allowed access to these new machines in arcades. Elsewhere, these machines would be allowed only in premises to which children have restricted access—liquor licensed premises, bingo clubs, casinos and betting offices.

It is expected that most arcades will switch to the cash machine which should go some way towards alleviating the problem of addiction amongst those under 18.

Local authorities already have powers to ban fruit machines from premises such as cafes and leisure centres.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Streatham (Mr. Hill) of 16 January, Official Report, column 483, if he will set out the reasons for the unreliability of the information requested on the route of arrival of applications for asylum. [11723]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information in question is not available because many port asylum applicants destroy or dispose of their travel documents and it is often not possible to establish from which country they have travelled to the United Kingdom. Where the information is known in individual cases, it is not recorded centrally.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Minibus Safety

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the guidance issued by local education authorities on minibus safety with particular reference to the meeting of agreed safety standard. [11099]

Mr. Robin Squire: Schools and local education authorities which own minibuses must comply with vehicle safety standards, as determined by the Secretary of State for Transport generally in the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986. LEAs are responsible for any advice they may give in relation to construction standards and other safety issues, and are not required to submit it for assessment by the Secretary of State.

New regulations will be introduced by the Department of Transport next month to require the compulsory fitment of seatbelts on minibuses and coaches used specifically for transporting school children.

WALES

School Governors

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the number of vacancies which will arise on school governing bodies when the present period of office comes to an end; and of these how many will be parent governor vacancies. [10026]

Mr. Richards: According to a survey of school governors commissioned by the Welsh Office in 1994, there are around 24,300 school governorships in Wales. Of these, the term of appointment of approximately 60 per cent. will come to an end this year. No estimate has been made as to how many of these are parent governors.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many seats there are on school governing bodies (a) in each county and (b) in Wales; what is the number and percentage of such places known to be vacant at the last available date; and if he will make a statement. [10619]

Mr. Richards: According to a survey of school governors commissioned by the Welsh Office in 1994, there are around 24,300 school governorships in Wales. Of these, it was estimated in the report that 22,375, or 92 per cent. were filled. The figures are not broken down by county.

Further and Higher Education Funding

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the finance made available in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 to (i) the Further Education Funding Council for Wales and (ii) the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales; and what is the number of students being financed in each of the years and the spending per head in (1) cash and (2) real terms; [10024]

(2) what estimates he has made up to 2000 of the number of students to be financed by (a) the FEFCW and (b) the HEFCW; and if he will give the cost per head in each sector over these years. [10025]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is included in the table.

Metticillin-resistant Staphylococcus Aureus

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of metticillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus there have been in Welsh hospitals in each of the last five years. [10295]

Mr. Richards: I refer my right hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 22 January 1996, Official Report, column 102.

Sea Fishing Industry

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many individuals were employed in the sea fishing industry within (a) the boundaries of the North Western and North Wales sea fisheries committee, (b) the South Wales sea fisheries committee, (c) Wales and (d) the boundaries of each of unitary authority within (a) and (b). [10558]

Mr. Richards: An estimated 1,623 fishermen were employed in the sea fishing industry in Wales in 1994, which is the latest available figure. Statistics are not recorded in the format requested.

Fishing Permits

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many permits for all types of fishing activities were granted each year since 1990; and how many permits are extant within (a) the North Western and North Wales sea fisheries committee, (b) the South Wales sea fisheries committee and (c) each of the unitary local authorities within the boundaries of (a) and (b). [10557]

Mr. Richards: We have no information on the number of fishing permits issued by local authority sea fisheries committees.

The number of fishing vessels which were licensed in Wales during the period 1990 to 1996 were:

1990: 70
1991: 173
1992: 172
1993: 158
1994: 589[1]
1995: 583
1996: 553

Note:

[1] A licensing regime for vessels of 10 meters and under, was introduced in 1993, and these vessels are included in the figures for 1994 onward.

Licence details are not recorded in the format requested.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the chairmen and chairwomen and members whom he appoints of each NHS trust, indicating the length of time for which each is appointed and when each appointment is due for renewal. [10908]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is detailed in "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales", which is updated quarterly. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

GPs (Child Immunisation)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from general practitioner practices in Wales on the subject of payment for child immunisation; and if he will make a statement. [10717]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend has received eight representations, but none of these was made directly by general practitioner practices. Childhood immunisation target payments were introduced to provide incentives for general practitioners to encourage and increase patient take-up of childhood vaccinations. The success of the immunisation programme has resulted in the incidence of childhood diseases being at their lowest ever levels and the Government have no plans to review the criteria GPs have to meet in order to qualify for target payments.

Welsh Language

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what guidelines his Department has issued since 1994 to (a) Cadw and (b) non-departmental public bodies in Wales on the use of the Welsh language in the day-to-day conduct of its business; and if he will make a statement; [10704]

(2) what (a) guidelines and (b) instructions his Department has issued to (i) Cadw and (ii) non-departmental public bodies in Wales on the use of the Welsh language in their official publications. [10703]

Mr. Richards: Guidelines as to the form and content of Welsh language schemes, prepared by the Welsh Language Board, were approved by my right hon. Friend and by Parliament in July 1995. Welsh language schemes are intended to specify measures relating to the use of the Welsh language in connection with the services they provide to the public in Wales. The Welsh Office has issued no guidelines or instructions additional to those statutory guidelines; it will be for each non-departmental public body to agree a language scheme with the board in respect of its services to the public in Wales.

Agricultural Holdings

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many registered agricultural holdings there were in Wales in (a) 1966, (b) 1974, (c) 1984 and (d) 1994; and if he will make a statement. [10700]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is no process of registration for agricultural holdings but the estimated number of such holdings in Wales for the years requested are as follows: (a) 1966: 48,000; (b) 1974: 32,800; (c) 1984: 36,100 and (d) 1994: 37,800.

These figures include both major and minor holdings. Over the period 1966 to 1984, there were minor definitional changes which tended to reduce the number of holdings recorded. In addition, in 1968 about 6,400 holdings were deleted from the records because of their negligible agricultural output.

Small Businesses

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives his Department is pursuing to assist small businesses in Wales. [10730]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office, together with others, is supporting small businesses through a variety of new start-up and business development initiatives, including financial assistance, training and consultancy support, grants for innovation and help with exporting. Information is available through business connect which is designed specifically to help small firms access quickly and effectively the business support network.

Public Bodies

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the 12 biggest spending Welsh Office public bodies, giving their spending in cash and real terms in each year since 1990–91; [10910]

1. The cash figures have been extracted from the annual Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".
2. The real terms figures have been derived by the application of the latest GDP deflators at market prices with a base year of 1994–95.
3. In some cases, figures are not available for the earlier years because the relevant NDPBs had not then been set up in Wales.

[1] Support for the establishment of the Countryside Council for Wales, which came into existence on 1 April 1991.

[2] Support for the establishment of the Further Education and Higher Education Funding Councils for Wales, which came into existence on 1 April 1993.

(2) how much dentistry practices in Wales undertook NHS treatment in 1992; and if he will make a statement; [10756]

(3) how many dentistry practices there are in Wales; [10760]

(4) how many dentistry practices undertaking NHS treatment there are in Wales. [10761]

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the chairmen and chairwomen and members whom he appoints of each training and enterprise council, indicating the lengths of time each person is appointed and when each appointment is due for renewal. [10911]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend does not appoint either the chairmen or the members to the boards of training and enterprise councils. TECs are private companies limited by guarantee.

Ambulance Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations over the past 18 months his Department have undertaken on the subject of the amalgamation of ambulance services in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [10731]

Mr. Richards: Public consultation on a joint application from West Glamorgan and East Dyfed ambulance services to form the West Wales Ambulance NHS trust ended on 4 December 1994 and the trust was established on 16 January 1995.

Healthy Eating

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives his Department is currently undertaking to educate people in healthy eating. [10723]

Mr. Richards: The Welsh Office does not itself undertake initiatives to educate people in healthy eating, but provides financial and other support to a large range of organisations which carry out such work, including the Health Promotion Authority for Wales, local authorities, health authorities and voluntary organisations.

Health Authority Members

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the chairmen and chairwomen and members of each health authority or commission and each family health services authority, indicating the length of time for which each person is appointed and when each appointment is due for renewal. [10907]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is detailed in "Appointments by the Secretary of State for Wales" which is updated quarterly. Copies are available in the Library of the House. All the appointments will be terminated on 31 March 1996 when the district health authorities and family health services authorities will cease to exist. I will be announcing the membership of the five new health authorities soon.

Nursery Education

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on recent developments in respect of the provision of nursery education for four-year-olds in Wales. [11057]

Mr. Richards: Subject to parliamentary approval of the relevant provisions of the Nursery Eduction and Grant-maintained Schools Bill, the nursery voucher scheme in Wales will come into effect from April 1997. I announced on 9 January our decisions on funding, payments for redeemed vouchers and the arrangements for inspecting participating establishments. Welsh Office officials have written to all local education authorities, primary and nursery schools and interested organisations detailing these decisions and clarifying some common misunderstandings about the scheme. I am placing a copy of this letter in the Library.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools in Wales opted out of local government control in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [10692]

Mr. Richards: Following the recommendations of the efficiency scrutiny of health promotion in Wales, those

Welsh Office resources for combating drug misuse provided through the central funding initiative were built into district health authorities revenue allocations. For 1993–94, the last year the CFI operated, the amounts allocated to each county in Wales were:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| Clwyd | 323,202 |
| Dyfed | 250,649 |
| Gwent | 274,295 |
| Gwynedd | 244,165 |
| Mid Glamorgan | 379,826 |
| Powys | 160,517 |
| South Glamorgan | 283,047 |
| West Glamorgan | 306,075 |

The Welsh Office provides separate resources for national activity: the amounts for 1993–94 to 1995–96 were £243,944, £360,918 and £259,737 respectively.

In addition, other central funding mechanisms such as the revenue support grant, the strategic development scheme and the grant for education support and training programme provide funds to combat drug misuse. It is not possible to identify separately the relevant amounts within those schemes.

Any display which exceeds this period requires the express consent of the local planning authority under those regulations. However, this form of advertising is prohibited in national parks, the Broads, areas of outstanding natural beauty, conservation areas or areas of special control of advertisements.

Advertisements on vehicles, including aircraft and airships, which are normally used as moving vehicles, are permitted under the regulations.

Road Salting

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will examine alternatives to the use of salt, with special reference to urea, in de-icing on roads; and if he will make a statement. [11646]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 25 January 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 29 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking what alternatives he has examined to the use of salt, with special reference to urea in de-icing on roads.

The Highways Agency has studied the value of salt as an anti-icing agent in relation to a variety of alternatives. These have included acetate, glycol and alcohol based materials as well as urea.

The studies, carried out by the Transport Research Laboratory have consistently shown that salt is a very effective anti-icing agent in virtually all conditions experienced in Britain. It also offers good value for money, even after taking account of the corrosive impact on structures.

Urea is an alternative agent, although some six or seven times more expensive than salt, which is used in some areas particularly susceptible to corrosion such as the original Severn crossing and the Midland Links Viaducts where its less corrosive properties have been considered particularly important. However, it is less effective as an anti-icing agent at times of particularly low temperatures and has environmental disadvantages in so far as it oxidises when in solution with water, giving off ammonia. This ammonia can pose a considerable threat to aquatic life especially in smaller water courses.

The Highways Agency remains alert to the possibility of using alternative de-icers, but at present salt remains the most effective agent giving good value for money.

Trunk Road Programme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received following the publication of "Managing the Trunk Road Programme" on 28 November 1995 from (a) hon. Members, (b) local authorities and (c) other organisations and individuals. [12386]

Mr. Watts: We have received many representations about trunk roads following the publication of "Managing the Trunk Road Programme." The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

British Rail Central Printing Unit

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) inquiries and (b) bids were received from companies or individuals interested in purchasing the British Rail central printing unit at York; how many employees work in the unit at present; what was the unit's turnover in 1995; when the unit is due to close; what will happen to its staff; and what consideration led to the decision not to sell the unit as a going concern. [11677]

Mr. Watts: The central printing unit employs 10 staff and currently forms part of BR's York facilities management group. Its turnover is not separately identified within the group. The future of the unit—which is a management matter for the BR board—is currently under consideration.

Interlogic Control Engineering

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what date and for what reasons the contracts of employment of the (a) managing director, (b) production director, (c) finance director, (d) personnel director and (e) commercial director of Interlogic Control Engineering were terminated by the British Railways Board; and what severance terms they were offered. [11678]

Mr. Watts: These are management matters for the British railways board. Severance terms are a matter for BR and the individuals concerned in accordance with the terms of their contracts of employment.

Air Quality Monitoring

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend and improve the effectiveness of the monitoring of air quality in towns and cities in the United Kingdom. [11040]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of the Environment currently monitors air pollutants at over 1,500 non-automatic sites and more than 50 automatic sites across the United Kingdom. The Government intend to expand the automatic monitoring network further by completing the main multi-pollutant urban network and integrating national and local systems, to form a national automatic network of at least 80 sites by the end of 1996.

TREASURY

Value Added Tax

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will withdraw the guidelines issued to officers of the Customs and Excise Department regarding the charging of value added tax on computer equipment for the specific use of registered disabled people. [11695]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. While items of computer equipment are undoubtedly useful to disabled people, they cannot be supplied tax free under VAT law unless designed solely for their use. However VAT is not chargeable on the service of adapting computer equipment so that it is easier for disabled people to use.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he now defines and assesses risk to both the public and private sectors within the private finance initiative. [4925]

Mr. Jack: Guidance on the definition and assessment of risk is contained in the recent publication "Private Opportunity, Public Benefit", a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Corporation Tax

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent the costs have exceeded projections in respect of extending the period over which trading losses could be carried back to set against corporation tax liabilities from one year to three years; and what impact this has had on Government revenues. [8311]

Mr. Jack: The "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1991–92" estimated the net cost of extending loss carry back for companies from one year to three years as £250 million in 1992–93.

However, the net cost cannot be measured precisely. Repayments of corporation tax in 1992–93 are estimated to include £350 million from the extension of loss carry back to three years, but the consequent changes to group relief surrendered and losses carried forward, which would reduce the cost, cannot be measured.

Higher Rate Tax

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the numbers brought into the higher rate tax for each year since 1989–90 when the Government did not increased tax thresholds in line with (a) inflation and (b) earnings; [8307]

(2) what is the percentage change in the number of higher rate taxpayers since 1989–90; and what have been the changes in respect of the numbers of people paying the higher rate since 1989–90. [8306]

Mr. Jack: Estimated taxpayer numbers under independent taxation for years from 1990–91 are given in the table. Under the 1989–90 income tax regime indexed to allow for changes in the retail prices index there would be 1.5 million higher rate taxpayers in 1996–97. Equivalent estimates for all intervening years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Statutory indexation of tax thresholds is expressed in terms of price rather than earnings movements.

Estimated taxpayer numbers[1]

Millions

| | Number of lower rate taxpayers | Number of basic rate taxpayers | Number of higher rate taxpayers |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1990–91 | — | 24.4 | 1.70 |
| 1991–92 | — | 24.1 | 1.62 |
| 1992–93 | 4.24 | 19.4 | 1.72 |
| 1993–94 | 5.17 | 18.1 | 1.74 |
| 1994–95[2] | 5.00 | 18.3 | 2.10 |
| 1995–96[2] | 5.40 | 18.1 | 2.20 |
| 1996–97 | 6.30 | 17.3 | 2.20 |

[1] Figures for 1989–90 are in terms of joint taxation, figures for later years include individuals under independent taxation and are therefore not directly comparable. It is estimated that there were about 20 million single people and married couples liable to tax at the basic rate only and 1.5 million liable at the higher rate.
[2] Provisional.

Taxation

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the tax threshold as a per cent. of average earnings for each year since 1966 for (a) a single person, (b) a single-wage married couple, (c) a two-wage married couple and (d) a single-wage married couple with two children aged eight and 12 years. [9316]

Mr. Jack: Available information giving a historical series of tax thresholds as a percentage of average earnings is in appendix C of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1992" for earlier years and table 2.6 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1995" for recent years.

Latest estimates for years from 1994–95, based on the 1994–95 "New Earnings Survey", are in the table. Additional information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Tax threshold as a percentage of average earnings[1] for all occupations

| | Single person | Married man without children |
|---|---|---|
| 1994–95 | 17.9 | 26.9 |

| 1996–97[2] | 18.0 | 24.7 |

[1] Full time males paid at adult rates working a full week.
[2] Provisional.

Retired People (Earnings)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what amount of earnings for retired people, above the limit of the state pension, was free of income tax, in each year since 1979. [10642]

Mr. Jack: The amount of the personal allowance, age allowances and the standard rate of basic state retirement pension received by a single person, for each year since 1979–80, is given in the table.

Standard rate of basic rate

£ per annum

| | Personal allowance Age under 65 | Age allowance Age 65–74 | Age allowance Age 75 or more | Standard rate of basic state retirement pension Under 80 | 80 or more |

[1] Lower age allowance for people aged 65–80, higher age allowance for people aged 80 or over.

Charities (Tax)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the total tax paid by all United Kingdom domiciled charities for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1990–91 and (c) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement on the taxation of charities and the implications for charities of the changed balance of taxation between direct and indirect. [11320]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 23 January 1996]: For 1994–95, it is estimated that charities paid the following tax:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| Income and capital taxes | [1]neg |
| VAT | 350 |
| National non-domestic rates | 100 |

[1] "neg" = negligible (under £3 million).

Estimates of the excise duties paid by charities are not readily available, nor are comparable figures for the earlier years.

The Government value the work of charities and encourage charitable activities through the tax system. Charities are exempt from tax on most of their income and gains.

Since 1979, the Government have done a great deal to extend and improve the tax incentives to give to charity by deed of covenant and under the gift aid and payroll giving schemes. In 1994–95, tax reliefs for charities totalled £1.5 billion, of which £900 million related to direct taxation, £200 million to indirect taxation and £400 million to rate relief.

The Government's overall tax policy is aimed at leaving people with more money to spend as they choose. That choice includes the possibility of giving more to charity.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much corporation tax in 1995 prices has been received from Scottish Nuclear and Nuclear Electric since 1990. [12471]

Mr. Jack: Details of the tax affairs of identified taxpayers are confidential.

British Energy

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates have been made of the net present value of corporate tax to be received by the Exchequer from British Energy post-privatisation. [12472]

Mr. Jack: Details of the tax affairs of identified taxpayers are confidential.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Deregulation

12. Sir David Madel: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what new initiatives he will advance in the next year to deregulate industry; and if he will make a statement. [9990]

Mr. Freeman: This year we hope to make considerable progress on the merger of the administrative procedures for PAYE and national insurance which should benefit small businesses.

16. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what analysis he has made of the effects of deregulation on the protection of the individual at work. [9994]

Mr. Freeman: Deregulation is aimed at achieving better regulation without removing necessary protection, whether for employees, consumers, the environment, or the public at large. Ministers responsible for orders under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 must demonstrate that any necessary protection under existing legislation will be maintained.

Departmental Running Costs

13. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the annual costs of the office of the Deputy

Prime Minister when that title was held by the two previous incumbents; and what is the estimated annual cost of running the office currently. [9991]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The estimated annual cost of my office is £470,000. The two previous incumbents to whom the hon. Gentleman refers held other posts at the same time, and it is not therefore possible to identify comparable costs.

Ministerial Responsibilities

14. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes have taken place in his role since his appointment; and if he will make a statement. [9992]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My role is unchanged.

Ministerial Office (Cost-benefit Analysis)

15. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to undertake a cost-benefit analysis of his office's functions for the first six months of its operation. [9993]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency

17. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when proposals for the privatisation of the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency will be published. [9995]

Mr. Willetts: Recruitment and Assessment Services will be sold as a single viable business by trade sale. Expressions of interest in RAS have been invited and an information memorandum will be made available to prospective bidders.

Departmental Objectives

18. Mr. Hanson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what objectives he has set for his Department for the forthcoming year. [9997]

Mr. Willetts: To promote the competitiveness agenda, the deregulation initiative and the effective administration of the services for which my Department is responsible.

Quangos

19. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what percentage of public expenditure was taken up by quangos in 1979; and what percentage of public expenditure they take up now. [9998]

Mr. Willetts: Expenditure by non-departmental public bodies funded by Government was 4 per cent. of general Government expenditure in 1978–79 and 6 per cent. in 1994–95. Almost two-thirds of expenditure on non-departmental public bodies is accounted for by a very small number of executive bodies, such as the Housing Corporation, Legal Aid board and Higher and Further Education councils, which are responsible for the distribution of funds and provide important services.

Public Safety

20. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made on the effects of deregulation on public safety. [10000]

Mr. Freeman: I am satisfied that deregulation does not diminish public safety. We have included safeguards in the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994, which ensures that any necessary protection under existing legislation will be maintained.

Cabinet Committees

21. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes took place in his responsibilities for chairing Cabinet Committees and presenting Government policies consequent on the appointment of the Deputy Prime Minister. [10001]

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend and I took up our current posts at the same time as the reorganisation of Cabinet Committee memberships confirmed in a written answer on Tuesday 18 July 1995.

Lockerbie

22. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what are his responsibilities in relation to the consequences of the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [10003]

The Deputy Prime Minister: None.

Government Policy

23. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what has been the principal Government policy with which he has had to work during the current week. [10004]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have continued to work on a full range of those Government policies for which I am responsible.

25. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the co-ordination of Government policy. [10006]

Mr. Willetts: Government policies are co-ordinated to pursue economic prosperity and security for all, based on an enterprise economy; creating a nation of opportunity reflecting the Government's values of choice, ownership and reward; upholding decent commonsense values in the pursuit of law and order and justice; providing the people of Britain with first class public services; and reflecting pride in our nation and its place in the world.

Crown Copyright

24. Mr. Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy after the privatisation of Her Majesty's Stationery Office, to leave the administration of Crown copyright with the residual HMSO and located in Norwich. [10005]

Mr. Freeman: I can confirm that the administration of Crown copyright will remain a function of the residual HMSO. Ten staff currently work in this area, and there are no plans at present to relocate them away from Norwich.

F16 Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with (a) the Prime Minister and (b) the Secretary of State for Defence concerning the proposed leasing of American F16 aircraft. [12126]

The Deputy Prime Minister: All discussions between Ministers are confidential.

Departmental Policy

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what priority he accords to representations from (a) members of the public and (b) hon. Members in formulating his Department's policy. [9984]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I take such representations fully into account.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Second Church Estates Commissioner

38. Mr. Winnick: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, when the Church Commissioners last discussed the parliamentary duties of the Second Church Commissioner; and if he will make a statement. [10019]

Mr. Alison: The role of the Second Church Estates Commissioner, and of the other Church commissioners, has been commented on the recent report of the Archbishops' Commission on the Organisation of the Church of England—"Working as One Body". This report is currently the subject of discussion and refinement within the Church; the next major debate about its recommendations will take place during the February group of sessions of the General Synod.

Bishops' Palaces

39. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what is the current cost of maintaining bishops' palaces; how many of them there are; what were the figures (a) 10 and (b) 20 years ago in (i) real and (ii) cash terms; and if he will make a statement. [10020]

Mr. Alison: The total expenditure, both capital and revenue, on diocesan bishops' houses in 1994—the last year for which figures are currently available—was £2,347,000. There are 45 houses, including the Archbishop of Canterbury's London base, Lambeth palace. Only 11 can properly be described as palaces. They include not only domestic accommodation but a chapel, meeting rooms and office accommodation. The figures include expenditure on furnishings and gardens and staff accommodation, and are net of any income.

In real and comparable terms the total expenditure in 1984 was £1,822,000 and in the year to March 1975 £1,665,000.

Expenditure each year varies depending on the turnover in episcopal appointments and the incidence of major repairs. The most recent survey of expenditure shows the average expenditure on diocesan bishops' houses was £39,496 per annum over a 10-year period.

The commissioners are currently reviewing the suitability of all See houses, and steps are being taken to keep maintenance costs to a minimum. It has recently been decided to replace the Portsmouth See house by one which will be cheaper to maintain

Pension Fund

40. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what estimate the Church Commissioners have made of the ability of the pension fund to meet the needs of clergy and staff and to ensure that they receive increases at least in line with inflation in the future. [10021]

Mr. Alison: Under current proposals, the Church Commissioners will meet the cost of clergy pensions earned up to 1998 and they have confirmed their continuing commitment to meet that cost, including pension increments. They have assessed the likely costs with actuarial advice and their financial projections allow for pension increments in line with the existing formula, which links them to stipend.

From 1998 onwards, subject to legislation, it is proposed that the cost of pensions will be met by contributions from dioceses and parishes into a new scheme administered by the Church of England pensions board. The board is discussing with dioceses estimated contribution rates, advised by actuaries; these allow for increases at least in line with limited price indexation. The commissioners would give short term support to dioceses as they make the transition to paying pension contributions in full.

The legislation will also enable a funded scheme for staff pensions to be established. Staff are contractually entitled to pension benefits in line with those of civil servants.

PRIME MINISTER

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what have been the running costs relating to the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) staff costs, (ii) information technology and (iii) other costs; [10979]

(2) how much has been spent on external consultants in the tendering process of the private finance initiative in each year since its introduction (a) in real terms and (b) in cash terms disaggregated by (i) legal fees, (ii) publicity costs, (iii) accountancy fees and (iv) management consultancy fees. [10978]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 January 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given on Friday 26 January, by my hon. Friend, the Financial Secretary to the Treasury, Official Report, columns 418–19.

Advertising and Publicity

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list breaches, by Department and Minister, of conventions on ministerial advertising and publicity since 1992; and if he will make a statement. [12253]

The Prime Minister: In all cases Government Departments seek to observe the conventions.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister when the Cabinet Office last circulated its guidelines to Ministers on central Government conventions on publicity and advertising and what measures it takes to ensure the guidelines are adhered to. [11955]

The Prime Minister: An updated version of the guidance on Government publicity and advertising was circulated by the Cabinet Office to Departments this month and I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House. This document makes clear that Departments are responsible for ensuring that the conventions on propriety are observed and that value for money is achieved.

No. 10 Downing Street (Chandelier)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received urging him to return a chandelier in No. 10 Downing street to the former Argyll Motor Works building in Alexandria. [12300]

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware, none.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Trafalgar Square (Northern Ireland Demonstration)

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans she has to revise the decision announced in 1972 to refuse to grant permission for any demonstration on the issue of Northern Ireland in Trafalgar square. [12815]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My ministerial colleagues and I have reviewed the 1972 ban and decided that in future any application to use Trafalgar square for demonstrations on the issue of Northern Ireland will be treated in the same way as applications in respect of other demonstrations. My Department will continue to apply the rules which restrict all demonstrations on Trafalgar square to weekends, and will continue to consult the local police, Westminster city councils and others, and to consider each application on its merits.

Register of Conditionality Exempt Works of Art

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures have been taken by her Department to improve publicity for the register of conditionally exempt works of art. [11221]

Mr. Jack: I have been asked to reply.

The register has been computerised, and is updated on a quarterly basis. Each update is announced in an Inland Revenue press release which explains the public's right to view the items included in the register, and how copies of it in computer-readable format may be purchased. The most recent press release was issued on 16 January. Inland revenue is also considering the possibility of placing this information on the Internet.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Maintenance Orders

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many maintenance orders were pursued in each year by (a) the Lord Chancellor and (b) the Secretary of State for the Home Department under schedule 2, section 6 of the Reciprocal Enforcement of Maintenance Orders (Hague Convention Countries) Order 1993. [12204]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Section 6 of the Maintenance Orders (Reciprocal Enforcement) Act 1972, as modified by paragraph 6 of schedule 2 of the Reciprocal Enforcement of Maintenance Orders (Hague Convention Countries) Order 1993, allows the Lord Chancellor to receive an order from a Hague convention country for registration in a magistrates court in England and Wales. For the period 1 May 1994 to 31 December 1994, 29 such cases were received; and during 1995, 53 such cases were received. I regret that figures before 1 May 1994 are not available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Strangeways Prison

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the final cost of rebuilding Strangeways prison. [10030]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. John Spellar, dated 29 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the final cost of rebuilding Strangeways prison.

The costs of rebuilding Manchester prison are given in the report by the Comptroller and Auditor General which was ordered by the House of Commons to be printed on 14 July 1994. The project was completed in September 1993 at a cost of £89 million.

This overall cost included £1.8 million which was spent on temporary housing arrangements for prisoners in K-wing which was required because of the high number of prisoners in police cells at that time.

After the completion of the main project, further work was carried out to bring K-wing and its perimeter up to modern standards in terms of security, control and sanitation at a cost of £5.6 million.

The overall cost of rebuilding the prison was therefore around £95 million.

Prison Contracts

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a one year break in contract clause is currently being considered for inclusion in (a) the contracts for the new prison at Fazakerly on Merseyside and (b) the contracts for the running of the five new secure training centres for children aged between 12 and 14 years. [10523]

Miss Widdecombe: A number of options relating to termination are under consideration in respect of the contract for the first two secure training centres, but as these are still under negotiation the terms are commercially confidential. Responsibility for replying in respect of the contract for the new prison at Fazakerley has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the inclusion of a one-year break in contract clause in the contract for a new prison at Fazakerley.

The contract for Fazakerley allows the Prison Service the option of terminating the contract, at will, any time from five years after the contractual opening date.

Strip Searches

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present policy in relation to the strip searching of visitors to prisons; if access to prisons is being denied to visitors who refuse to remove their clothes in front of prison officers; and if strip searches are conducted in accordance with the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and its relevant codes. [10325]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Walker to Mr. George Howarth, dated 29 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about strip searching of visitors to prisons.

The instructions for searching visitors to prisons, including strip searches are contained in the Manual on Security, copies of which are held in the library of the House. The following is a summary:

Rule 86 (1) allows the governor to authorise a search of any person seeking to enter a prison. This is a search with consent, but it is only reasonable that those who refuse to be searched should be denied access to the prison, since they may be put under pressure to smuggle in escape equipment, weapons or drugs. However, in certain circumstances it may be possible to allow a closed visit.

It is not our policy to conduct strip searches of visitors, with or without consent, unless other legislation gives us the right to conduct the search without consent. Officers of the prison have the power to conduct searches without consent, including strip-searches, using their powers of a constable under section 8 of the Prison Act 1952, as modified by the Police And Criminal Evidence Act (PACE) 1984, in the following circumstances:

1. If there is reason to believe the visitor is in possession of a class A, B or C controlled drug (section 23 Misuse of Drugs Act 1971).
2. If there is reason to believe she or he is in possession of a firearm (section 47 Firearms Act 1968).
3. Following arrest of the visitor in the circumstances set out in section 32 of PACE 1984.

It is our policy that governors will only authorise a strip-search if the police are unwilling or unable to attend. Officers of the prison may, if they have lawful grounds for doing so, arrest and caution the visitor pending arrival of the police.

[11384]

Frankland Prison

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 54, what steps have been taken to recover the cell key lost at Frankland prison. [12023]

Following the loss of the cell key, an investigation was mounted and this is still continuing. The replacement of the locks at the prison has rendered the lost key ineffective.

Women Prisoners (Hospital Treatment)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women prisoners in each year since 1990 have escaped from escort while attending hospital for antenatal care, childbirth or post-natal care; if he will list the circumstances of their escape; and from which prisons they were attending the hospital. [7539]

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 29 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many women prisoners in each year since 1990 have escaped from escort while attending hospital for antenatal care, childbirth or post-natal care, giving the circumstances of their escape and from which prisons they were attending hospital.

In this period there have been seven escapes from hospital for the stated reasons. The information is shown in the attached table.

Since 1990 there is one recorded case of a pregnant woman (32 weeks) attempting to escape from a hospital escort (Risley prison). There is another where a pregnant woman attempted to escape from a hospital escort, the pregnancy was not the reason for the hospital visit. On two occasions there were attempted escapes where the reason for the hospital visit is not known.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid Budget

26. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the size of the overseas aid budget in 1996–97. [10007]

Mr. Hanley: We always receive a number of representations from hon. Members and the general public and this year is no exception.

33. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with non-governmental organisations concerned with the use of overseas aid, regarding the consequences of the reduction of the overseas aid budget. [10014]

Mr. Hanley: My right hon. and Noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development and her officials have frequent contact with NGOs on a wide range of policy-related issues, including the size of the aid budget. We have informed the NGO's that the joint funding scheme will be increased in 1996–97 to over £36 million from £34 million this year.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary met chief executives from major NGOs on 23 January.

35. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of the total overseas aid budget for the current year is devoted to educational purposes. [10016]

Mr. Hanley: Expenditure on education from the bilateral aid programme is identifiable only up to 1994–95. In that year a total of £227 million was spent on educational activities, which was 20 per cent. of the total bilateral aid expenditure.

Nigeria

32. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent changes he has made to the aid budget to Nigeria. [10013]

Mr. Hanley: Bilateral aid spending will be about £6.4 million in 1995–96 compared with an estimated £7.9 million before the EU measures taken in December 1995. EC aid is limited to tackling poverty through non-governmental organisations.

Private Capital

34. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will commission studies into the role of private capital in fostering economic development. [10015]

Mr. Hanley: I am pleased to inform the hon. Member that the Overseas Development Administration is in the process of commissioning a major research programme on the policy options facing developing countries in attracting private capital.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the delays experienced by non-governmental organisations delivering aid in Bosnia as a result of customs and other procedures required by the Government of Bosnia-Herzegovina and the Herceg-Bosnan authorities; what is his assessment of the effect of these delays on deliveries of aid in Bosnia; and if he will ask the Bosnian authorities to minimise such restrictions. [10860]

Mr. Hanley: We know from running our own ODA aid programmes in Bosnia of the delays caused to aid organisations by complicated local customs procedures. Aid organisations registered with the Croatian and Bosnian Governments find that advance clearance from the relevant Ministries usually takes about six days. Further customs checks en-route lengthen aid journeys. We recognise the rights of the Croatian and Bosnian Governments to exercise proper customs controls but have asked them to apply them as efficiently as possible or to relax them for aid. In the new conditions following the Dayton peace agreement access is much improved but we will continue to urge the local authorities to apply customs controls on aid as lightly as possible.

Nigerian Police Training

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Nigerian police officers have received police training in the United Kingdom in each year since 1990; and if he will list (a) the names and ranks of the trainees, (b) the cost and duration of each officer's training, (c) which United Kingdom police forces provided the training and (d) which Government department provided the funding for the training. [11576]

Mr. Hanley: Twenty-one Nigerian police officers have received training in the United Kingdom since 1990, funded by the Overseas Development Administration. The further details requested have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Details of ODA funded training provided in the United Kingdom for Nigerian police officers between 1990–91 and 1994–95

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) on 19 January, Official Report, column 787.

Nepal

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the future of his Department's funding for the Lumle agricultural research centre in Nepal; and what plans he has for aid to Nepal in research into disease-resistant crops such as peas, cold tolerant rice and broad leaf mustard. [11735]

Mr. Hanley: The Government will decide later this year on the extent and nature of further aid support for hill agricultural research in Nepal, including the Lumle agricultural research centre, in the light of progress on the present foundation year project.

Research into disease-resistant crops is an important component of current British aid to agricultural research in Nepal. The Lumle agricultural research centre has already successfully produced a cold-tolerant variety of rice, and research into disease resistant tomatoes, wheat, rice, potatoes and maize is currently being undertaken.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11919]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The DTI does not use the symbol for external or internal recruitment, or for promotion. However, it is kept under review as the Department develops its programme of action on staff with disabilities.

I have asked the chief executives of the DTI's agencies to write to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from Jim Norton to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 29 January 1996:

I am replying to your written question on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency.

Question: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for his Department and each of the Agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's Positive about Disabled People symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion.

The Radiocommunications Agency does not use the Employment Services Positive about Disabled People symbol for either external recruitment or internal recruitment and promotion.

However the Agency only assumed responsibility for equality of opportunity matters from the Department of Trade and Industry in October 1994. The Agency produces an annual Action Programme. One of the actions in the 1996 Action Programme is to consider the use of the Employment Services Disability Symbol. I expect that the Agency will make a decision later in the year on whether or not to use the symbol for both external recruitment and internal recruitment and promotion.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 29 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question and about use of the Employment Service's Positive about Disabled People symbol. This Agency does not currently make use of this symbol.

Letter from R. D. Worswick to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 25 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question on behalf of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, an executive agency of DTI.

The Laboratory does not use the Employment Service's Positive about Disabled People symbol for either a) external recruitment or b) internal recruitment and promotion.

However, recruitment advertisements contain a statement that LGC is an equal opportunities employer whether directed at external or internal applicants.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 29 January 1996:

I have been asked to respond as Chief Executive of Companies House Executive Agency, to your question to the President of the Board of Trade regarding the use of the Employment Service's Positive about Disabled People symbol. I can confirm that we have been pleased to advertise our commitment in this way.

The symbol is used for both external and internal recruitment purposes and, as you can see below, is publicised on all recruitment correspondence issued by our Personnel Section.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 29 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about using the Employment Service's Positive about Disabled People symbol.

The Insolvency Service does not currently use the symbol for either external recruitment or internal recruitment and promotion. However following discussions with the Employment Service, it is in the process of applying for permission to use it on all its recruitment, promotion and training literature.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 29 January 1996:

I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about use of the Employment Service's Positive about Disabled People symbol. In recent external recruitment exercises we have used either the symbol, or text making it clear that we welcome applications from those with disabilities. In internal recruitment or promotion we rely on a statement of our Equal Opportunities Policy we have issued to all staff which makes it clear that discrimination on grounds of disability is unacceptable. We have also established a Disabled Forum which can raise with management any point of concern.

Companies Acts

Mr. Bell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many DTI inspectors are working upon investigations in accordance with powers conferred by the Companies Acts. [12208]

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are currently 15 inspectors undertaking inspections into the affairs and/or membership of nine companies under the investigative powers conferred by the Companies Acts.

Departmental Staff (Energy Matters)

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff in his Department work on press and publicity and public relations; and how many of them deal with energy-related matters. [12483]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Sixty-three staff are employed in the Department's information division either directly on, or in support of, publicity, press and other media relations work. Of these, seven spend 50 per cent. or more of their time on energy-related matters.

Nuclear Industry (Privatisation)

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his latest estimate of the date for nuclear power generation privatisation; and if he will suspend his Department's plans pending publication by the Trade and Industry Committee of its report into nuclear privatisation. [12226]

Mr. Lang: Privatisation of the nuclear power generation industry is on track for the summer of this year and will not be suspended pending the issue by the Trade and Industry Committee of its report.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 10 January, Official Report, column 227, what was the total expenditure on management, financial and other consultants employed by his Department to advise on the sale of Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear in each year since 1988–89. [12225]

Mr. Lang: There was no expenditure on the sale of Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear in the years 1988–89 to 1994–95. Pursuant to my answer of 10 January, Official Report, columns 226–27, actual expenditure for the year to 31 March 1996 will be reported to Parliament in the normal way through the appropriation account.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total amount of money raised by the non-fossil fuel obligation; and how much of those proceeds have been distributed to Nuclear Electric. [11252]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The fossil fuel levy was introduced on 1 April 1990. The information requested is:

| Year | Fossil fuel levy receipts | Payments from levy to Nuclear Electric £ million |
|---|---|---|
| 1990–91 | 1,175 | 1,135 |
| 1991–92 | 1,324 | 1,281 |
| 1992–93 | 1,348 | 1,291 |
| 1993–94 | 1,234 | 1,139 |
| 1994–95 | 1,205 | 1,081 |

Sources:
Office of Electricity Regulation (amounts raised) and Non-Fossil Purchasing Agency Ltd. (Payments).

The balance of levy receipts is used to finance payments to British Nuclear Fuels plc and to renewables generators, and to cover certain other costs such as administration costs.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount of money is estimated to be raised from the privatisation of Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear in terms of (a) unspent non-fossil fuel obligation moneys and (b) cash surpluses at the time of the sale. [11309]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The proceeds of the sale of British Energy will depend on a variety of factors, including market conditions at the time of sale. It is not possible to put a fixed estimate on proceeds in advance of sale.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount of money has been spent on redundancy payments for staff in (a) Nuclear Electric and (b) Scottish Nuclear in each of the last five years; and how much is estimated to be spent in 1996–97. [11310]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: Information on staff redundancy costs is given in the annual report and accounts of Nuclear Electric plc. Information for 1995–96 and beyond will be published in the accounts of the relevant companies for those years. Questions on Scottish Nuclear Ltd. are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to retain the non-fossil fuel obligation after privatisation of British Energy; what is its estimated level; and if he will make a statement. [11254]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: Under the non-fossil fuel obligation, NFFO, the regional electricity companies, RECs, are required to make arrangements to secure the availability of specified amounts of non-fossil—nuclear and renewables—sourced electricity generating capacity. The fossil fuel levy recovers the above-market costs to the RECs of securing this capacity. The nuclear NFFO will continue until 1998, but the element of the fossil fuel levy that is attributable to Nuclear Electric will end at the time of privatisation, subject to the recovery of outstanding moneys. The levy will continue to cover renewables and British Nuclear Fuels plc. We cannot give a figure for the reduced rate at this time, as it will depend on a number of factors that are still uncertain.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much of the non-fossil fuel obligation distributed to Nuclear Electric (a) remains as cash surplus, (b) has been used for decommissioning, (c) has been used for waste reprocessing, (d) has been invested in capital assets and (e) has been spent elsewhere. [11253]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: Details of nuclear premium received by Nuclear Electric under the NFFO arrangements and of their expenditure are contained in Nuclear Electric's annual report and accounts. The nuclear premium forms part of their overall income.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answers of 10 January, Official Report, columns 226–27, to whom the expenditure provision for restructuring and privatisation of the nuclear power generation industry will be given in 1995–96; and what is the value of the contacts with the companies advising his Department on the sale. [11311]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: Pursuant to my answers of 10 January 1996, Official Report, columns 226–27, expenditure in 1995–96 on restructuring and privatisation of the nuclear power generation industry will be in respect of the companies advising the Government during that financial year. Actual expenditure will be reported to Parliament in the normal way through the appropriation account. The value of individual contracts with companies is commercially confidential.

Competition Policy, Birmingham

Mr. Corbett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the impact of competition policy on Birmingham. [9996]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Government believe that competition is good for competitiveness by making business compete more effectively and thus benefiting both customers and producers—in Birmingham as in the rest of the UK.

EU Funding

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European Thermie programmes and its predecessor programmes over the last available five years; [11662]

(2) how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European Thermie programme under the current financial perspectives. [11663]

Mr. Page: Payment from European expenditure programmes are not allocated to members states in the legislation supporting the programmes. The Thermie programme supports projects selected following an open call for proposals. It is not possible to predict the outcome of future calls, but in the last five years UK led projects have received:

| Year | kecu | £ thousands[1] |
|---|---|---|
| 1991 | 19,507 | 15,996 |
| 1992 | 21,111 | 17,311 |
| 1993 | 26,053 | 18,903 |
| 1994 | 37,250 | 30,545 |
| 1995 | 21,541 | 17,663 |

[1] 1 ecu = £0.82.

A breakdown of these figures on a regional basis is not available.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European Altener programme under the present structural funds agreement; [11667]

(2) how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European Altener programme and its predecessor programmes over the last available five-year period. [11666]

Mr. Page: The Altener programme for the promotion of renewable energy sources in the Community is not part of the structural funds. Payment from European expenditure programmes are not allocated to member states in the legislation supporting the programmes. The Altener programme started in 1993 and UK-led projects have received:

|---|---|---|
| 1993 | 272 | 223 |
| 1994 | 1,609 | 1,071 |
| 1995 | 2,101 | 1,723 |

[1] 1 ecu = £0.82.

A breakdown of these figures on a regional basis is not available.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received from European Commission research and development programmes over the last available five years. [11668]

Mr. Taylor: Information on receipts for the European Union research and development programmes which have to be collected from the recipients is available only for 1993–94:

1993–94

| Region | £million | MECU |
|---|---|---|
| South East | 97.76 | 125.57 |
| South West | 36.06 | 46.32 |
| East Anglia | 12.76 | 16.39 |
| East Midlands | 10.79 | 13.86 |
| West Midlands | 6.01 | 7.71 |
| Yorkshire and Humberside | 6.00 | 7.70 |
| North | 4.63 | 5.95 |
| North-West | 17.57 | 22.57 |
| Wales | 7.77 | 9.98 |
| Scotland | 17.26 | 22.17 |
| Northern Ireland | 5.40 | 6.93 |
| UK Total | 222.01 | 285.17 |

These totals do not include funds received by the non-profit sector or the new universities.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much in (a) Ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European Commission research and development programmes under the current financial perspectives. [11669]

Mr. Taylor: Payments from European Community expenditure programmes are not allocated to member states in the legislation supporting the programmes.

Framework programme IV, which runs from 1994–98, is the EU's main research and development programme. It supports collaborative research aimed at promoting industrial competitiveness and the quality of life. It has a budget of 13.1 billion ecu—approximately £10.9 billion. It is administered by the European Commission, which receives applications and manages the project selection process. The budget is not pre-allocated in any way among member states. Projects are selected on the basis of scientific excellence. UK researchers have participated strongly in successive framework programmes.

Post Office

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future of the Post Office. [10002]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government's plans for the future of the Post Office were set out in a statement on 11 May 1995 by my right hon. Friend the then President of the Board of Trade.

Small Firms

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the outcome of the recent review of the small firms loan guarantee scheme; and what changes he proposes to make to the rules. [12816]

Mr. Page: I expect to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Departmental Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions his Department has held with other Government Departments following the publishing of the figures showing percentages of bills paid late in 1994–95. [12224]

Mr. Page: My hon. Friend the Economic Secretary to the Treasury is responsible for issuing guidance on monitoring methods and payment policies to Government Departments.

As Minister for Small Business, I have also stressed the importance of prompt payment at meetings with all the small firms Ministers across the Government and shall continue to do so.

In addition, this Department has substantially improved its payment performance over the past year. I recognise the need to build on this improvement and this Department will re-examine payment procedures and checking systems will be made even more comprehensive.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many inquiries business links handled in the last year for which figures are available. [11962]

Mr. Page: During the period October 1994 to September 1995, business links provided advice and information to the following numbers of companies:

October–December 1994: 26,624

January–March 1995: 33,035

April–June 1995: 41,222

July–September 1995: 51,931

Each company is counted only once each quarter. To the extent that some companies may seek information and advice more than once in each quarter the total number of inquiries dealt with will be higher than above.

British Gas

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will hold discussions with the Office of Gas Supply about the measures which should be taken to ensure that the cost of take and pay contracts entered into by British Gas is not passed on to gas consumers. [11498]

Mr. Eggar: The Government have decided not to include a provision in the standard conditions of the gas shippers licences to recover the costs of "take or pay" contracts. Regulation of prices in the tariff market is, and always has been, the responsibility of the independent Director General of Gas Supply.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many businesses (a) registered and (b) deregistered for VAT in (i) the north-west and (ii) Pendle in 1994 and 1995. [12598]

Mr. Page: The latest available figures are for 1994 and are as follows:

VAT registrations and deregistrations in 1994

| | Registrations | Deregistrations |
|---|---|---|
| North-West | 17,375 | 17,751 |
| Pendle | 261 | 246 |

The above estimates include adjustments for the effects of the changes in the VAT threshold in November 1993, and hence differ from those published elsewhere by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report are in the possession of Ministers or officials in his Department other than those to whom draft sections of the report were sent by Sir Richard Scott. [11876]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 25 January 1996]: In forwarding sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to Ministers and officials, the inquiry expressly stated that individuals could at their discretion make a copy for a legal or other adviser and another for the Department concerned. Whether they did so is a matter for the individuals concerned.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have used copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report to prepare the Government's response to Sir Richard Scott's report. [11877]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 25 January 1996]: No decision about the response to Sir Richard Scott's report will be taken until the report has been received.

In considering issues relating to the Scott inquiry, all Departments naturally take account of material properly available to them.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11387]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The value of contracts let centrally to external consultants including management consultants for 1993–94 was £24.17 million, for 1994–95 it was £6.66 million, and for 1995–96 to date it is £3.96 million. Other information on central expenditure can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information on savings is not collected centrally and estimates can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information in respect of non-departmental public bodies is not kept centrally and could not be compiled without disproportionate cost.

The above information excludes external consultancies let independently by the Department's executive agencies. I have asked agency chief executives to reply separately.

Letter from R. D. Worswick to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 24 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the use of management consultants by the Laboratory of the Government Chemist (LGC), an executive agency of the DTI.

From time-to-time we have used consultants to help review or improve internal management functions (including the provision of information technology). They are engaged against "value-for-money" criteria, and only when they can bring particular skills or knowledge not available from within LGC; particular examples are in training, the selection and implementation of accounting systems, and operational review.

Over the last six years LGC has spent the following amounts on management consultants:

| Year | £ thousand (including VAT) |
|---|---|
| 1991–92 | 25 |
| 1992–93 | 103 |
| 1993–94 | 11 |
| 1994–95 | 277 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 46 |
| 1995–96 (estimate to year end) | 120 |

I am afraid that information on earlier years can only be provided at disproportionate cost. Forecasts for 1996/97 are not available.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 29 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply, in relation to the Patent Office, to your Question about the use of external consultants.

The Patent Office made no use of external consultants in 1992/93, 1993/94 and 1994/95. In 1995/96 expenditure to the 31st December 1995 is £113,204 with the full year estimated at £130,000. In 1996/97 provision has been made for £100,000 as continuation of existing work aimed at identifying scope for savings in activities such as marketing and use of computer services. Figures relating to 1979/80, 1989/90 and 1991/92 are not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The savings accruing to the Office from this work will depend on the extent to which better value for money can be obtained while preserving the current quality of service.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 29 January 1996:

I have been asked by the President of the Board of Trade to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question concerning expenditure on external consultants.

I regret that information is not available for 1979–80, but the figures for the years since 1989 are as follows:

| | £ thousand |
|---|---|
| 1989–90 | Nil |
| 1990–91 | 2 |
| 1991–92 | 10 |
| 1992–93 | 22 |
| 1993–94 | 58 |
| 1994–95 | 39 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 30 |
| 1995–96 (full year estimate) | 35 |
| 1996–97 (estimate) | 30 |

The consultants employed have provided exclusively technical advice, mostly related to accounting changes and the development of the Agency's quality system. It is therefore impossible to estimate what savings, if any, may have accrued as a result.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 29 January 1996:

Mr John Taylor MP has asked me to reply in respect of Companies House Executive Agency to your question to the President of the Board of Trade on the expenditure of external consultants; and the estimated savings derived from the use of consultants by Companies House Executive Agency, for certain years since 1979.

The information you sought is as follows:

Expenditure on Consultants

| Year | £ thousand |
|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 172 |
| 1994–95 | 122 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 167 |
| 1995–96 (full year forecast) | 279 |

The expected expenditure for 1996–97 is not available at this stage, as Companies House is still developing its budget plans for next year.

Information on earlier years can only be provided at disproportionate costs.

There are no direct savings attributed to the above consultancy costs, since the consultants were employed by Companies House to provide technical advice on matters such as structural building repairs and IT system design and implementation.

I trust you will find this information helpful.

Letter from Michael Goddard to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 29 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Competition and Consumer Affairs, has asked me to reply to your Question about expenditure on external consultants.

2. The Agency did not assume responsibility for letting its own contracts until 1994. Expenditure on external consultants, including management consultants, in FY 94–95 amounted to £237,207, and to date in FY 95–96 to £247,377. Expenditure in earlier years is covered in Mr. Taylor's reply to your question. Planned expenditure in FY 96–97 is unlikely to exceed the level of previous years.

3. All the expenditure in FY 94–95 and FY 95–96 involved the provision of strategic advice. Savings resulting from decisions taken in response to such advice will not be quantifiable for some time. When engaging external consultants "value for money" is the Agency's prime consideration.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 29 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on external consultants and the estimated savings resulting from their employment by The Insolvency Service.

Details of the costs associated with external consultants engaged by The Service are:

| Organisation | Purpose | Cost including VAT 1993–94 £ | 1994–95 £ | 1995–96 to date £ | 1995–96 estimated total £ |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Coopers and Lybrand | Accountancy support | — | 60,000 | — | — |
| KPMG | Market test | 45,000 | — | — | — |

| Organisation | Purpose | 1993–94 £ | 1994–95 £ | Cost including VAT 1995–96 to date £ | 1995–96 estimated total £ |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Ernst and Young | Market test and accountancy support | 107,800 | 13,100 | — | — |
| Price Waterhouse | User survey | — | 124,800 | — | — |
| Stoy Hayward | Contracting out and management consultancy | 76,670 | 94,150 | — | — |
| Shreeveport Ltd. | Contracting out | — | 129,000 | 421,100 | 506,400 |
| Bevan Ashford | Contracting out | — | — | 26,465 | 36,500 |
| Bond Pearce | Contracting out | — | 10,100 | — | 10,000 |
| | Total | 229,470 | 431,150 | 447,565 | 552,900 |

Prior to 1994 contracts for consultants were let by the Department of Trade and Industry, and information in relation to 1992 and 1993 was provided in a Parliamentary Question No. 146 for Ms Diane Abbott MP dated 25 January 1994, Columns 211-217. Information on consultancies prior to 1992–93 can only now be provided at disproportionate cost.

The Service has also used outside private sector organisations for advice on, development of and delivery in relation to specialist areas such as training, design and information technology systems. Details of the organisations concerned, the payments made to them and any estimate of savings accrued could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The £60,000 payment to Coopers and Lybrand for accountancy support for the Agency was in and about the setting up of systems to enable it to produce commercial style accounts.

Ernst and Young were engaged in 1993–94 to prepare a specification for the market test of The Service's Central Accounting Unit and to assist with the evaluation of the bids at a cost of £107,800. KPMG were engaged to assist the in-house bid team in the preparation of their bid at a cost of £45,000. The annual saving in the overall cost of the activities market tested is approximately £85,000 in each of the five years of the resulting Service Level Agreement.

Ernst and Young were also engaged in 1995 on accounting reconciliation work for the Central Accounting Unit at a cost of £13,100. This did not produce direct savings but provided independent professional assurance that financial data had been properly transferred to the CAU's new computer system (BANCS).

Consultants have been engaged by The Service throughout the period of the current contracting out exercise which has yet to reach its conclusion. Any estimate of savings accrued as a result could only be determined once the decision has been taken on contracting out.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Globe Europe Network

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the benefits that have accrued from the United Kingdom financial support through the know-how fund for the Global Legislators Organisation for a Balanced Environment-Globe Europe Network; and what financial commitments have been made for further funding of the Globe Europe Network. [12002]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The know-how fund has not previously provided any direct support to the Globe Europe network. However, it has pledged a sum of up to 35,868 ecu—approximately £20,000—20 per cent. of the total cost of a project to be started in 1996.

The details are still under negotiation. However, the project aims to promote among parliamentarians in central and eastern Europe understanding of parliamentary procedures and techniques with particular emphasis on environmental policy-making. The project will consist of some preliminary research into environmental concerns in the Central and Eastern Europe region; two international seminars at which parliamentarians will be invited to discuss related issues with experts in the environmental field; the implementation of joint initiatives based upon findings and examples of successful co-operation between parliaments and NGOs; and a campaign aimed to publicise the initiatives and their results.

The benefit likely to accrue from know-how fund support for this programme is the formation of constructive policy work in the environmental field as parliamentarians are encouraged to forge practical policies.

Ceremonial Dress

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 690-91, if he will give details of the ceremonial dress expected to be worn by Her Majesty's representatives in (a) Japan, (b) the Cayman Islands and (c) Swaziland. [11571]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The ceremonial dress expected to be worn by Her Majesty's representatives in Japan is full dress uniform comprising coatee and trousers, cocked hat with feathers, sword and accessories, boots, black braces and white gloves.

The ceremonial dress expected to be worn by Her Majesty's Representative in the Cayman Islands and Swaziland is tropical uniform which comprises white drill and trousers, collar, sword and accessories, braces, white gloves, boots and embroidered cap.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 691, if he will give details of the uniform expected to be worn by Her Majesty's representatives to the Holy See; when that post was last held by a man; and what was the then cost. [11572]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The last male Her Majesty's representative to the Holy See was accredited between 1991–1995. The cost of his diplomatic uniform was £3,193 and consisted of coatee and trousers, cocked hat topped with feathers, sword and accessories, boots, braces and white gloves.

Marshal of the Diplomatic Corps

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, Official Report, column 692, what was the total cost of the Marshal of the Diplomatic Corps; how many staff are employed; and what are the principal duties of the Marshal. [11624]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The marshal occupies official accommodation for which he makes a contribution from his salary. The direct costs of his office borne by Buckingham palace and the FCO in 1994–95 were £70,995.35.

The marshal's staff consists of a secretary and the services of an office cleaner.

His principle duties are to make arrangements for heads of diplomatic missions on state and official occasions.

War Crimes, Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) Serbs, (b) Croats, and (c) Moslems have been indicted for war crimes by the United Nations War Crimes Tribunal. [11847]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: To date, 45 Serbs, seven Croats, and no Moslems have been indicted by the international war crimes tribunal for the former Yugoslavia.

Military Personnel (Training)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what has been the cost to public funds of United Kingdom military personnel providing training assistance between 1 January 1991 and 31 December 1995 in (a) Gambia, (b) Indonesia, (c) Nigeria and (d) Saudi Arabia. [12125]

(2) how many military personnel from (a) Indonesia, (b) Saudi Arabia, (c) Sierra Leone, (d) Gambia, (e) Sudan and (f) Nigeria were given training in the United Kingdom between 1 January 1991 and 31 December 1995; and what has been the cost to public funds in each case. [12124]

Mr. David Davis: The details of training given under the United Kingdom military training assistance scheme are confidential between Governments.

Kenya

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Kenya concerning their intention to introduce the Press Council and Mass Media Commission Bills, especially insofar as they affect foreign correspondents. [12118]

Mr. Hanley: We have maintained a dialogue at senior level with the Kenyan authorities on the draft legislation in question, in which we have emphasised the importance we attach to freedom of the press in Kenya.

Zanzibar

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the presidential elections held in Zanzibar in October 1995. [10618]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 24 January 1996]: Together with other participants in the international monitoring exercise we have called on the Zanzibari and Tanzanian authorities to take appropriate action following concerns about discrepancies in the compilation of votes for the presidency of Zanzibar.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11381]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not collect statistics on absenteeism rates. Though we believe non-sick-related absences to be minimal. Therefore, the information requested by the hon. Member can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Chocolate Directive

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the European Commission to publish its new draft directive on chocolate; and if he will make it his policy to oppose proposals from the Commission to (a) reduce the proportion of vegetable fat currently permitted in United Kingdom chocolate and (b) require chocolate manufactured in the United Kingdom to be described on its packaging as anything other than chocolate. [9949]

Mrs. Browning: I understand that the European Commission hopes to issue soon a formal proposal to replace the 1973 Cocoa and Chocolate Products Directive.

British manufacturers make a wide variety of high quality chocolate products, many of which include a small addition of vegetable fats other than cocoa butter, so as to meet the full range of consumer tastes and expectations both in this country and elsewhere. This has had the effect of expanding the chocolate market, securing jobs at home and increasing demand for cocoa and other products on which the economies of many developing countries are heavily dependent.

The Government will therefore vigorously oppose any proposal which seeks to reduce the diversity of chocolate formulations which may be marketed freely within the European Community or which seeks to prohibit the use of the name chocolate on products containing the traditional mixture of cocoa butter and other vegetable fats.

Monofilament Nets

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what length of (a) monofilament netting and (b) other fishing gear is estimated to have been lost or discarded in United Kingdom waters in each year since 1990; and what measure he has taken to (i) monitor and (ii) regulate the loss and discard of monofilament netting. [11573]

Mr. Baldry: No information is held centrally on the loss or discard of fishing gear. Under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 it is an offence to discard into the sea any fishing gear, including netting, for which the penalty may be a substantial fine or even imprisonment. The Ministry will not hesitate to prosecute in such cases where sufficient evidence is considered to be available.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sea mammals have been trapped in monofilament nets in (a) United Kingdom waters and (b) Scottish waters, since 1980. [11574]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry does not hold the information requested. However, since 1980 there have been no recorded cases of sea mammals becoming trapped in monofilament nets in Scottish inshore waters, where the carriage of such nets is prohibited. The Ministry has commissioned the sea mammal research unit to undertake a two-year study to evaluate the extent of cetacean by-catch in the bottom-set gill net fishery in the North sea. Some of the nets involved are likely to be monofilament.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fishing vessels currently use monofilament nets in United Kingdom waters; and in what areas they operate. [11575]

Mr. Baldry: The Ministry does not hold information on the number of fishing vessels currently using monofilament nets in United Kingdom waters. Such nets may be used in United Kingdom waters apart from Scottish inshore waters where their carriage has been prohibited since 1986.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11353]

Mr. Boswell: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, selected aggregated data on sickness absence in respect of calendar years has been available since 1985, in the form of reports from Her Majesty's Treasury and more recently the Civil Service Occupational Health and Safety Agency (OHSA). Figures for the Department based on these data, (and which necessarily include some of the agencies in the period 1990 to 1994), are as follows:

| Year | Average number of days sick absence per staff year |
|---|---|
| 1989[1] | 6.3 |
| 1990[2] | 7.5 |
| 1991 | 8.7 |
| 1992 | 8.0 |
| 1993 | 8.4 |
| 1994 | 7.4 |

[1] Figures are based on a 10 per cent. sample.
[2] Figures are based on a 20 per cent. sample.

Spanish Fishing Vessels

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his letter to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow, dated 9 January, which countries or organisations were party to the negotiations following which 22 Spanish fishing vessels gained access to the Norwegian exclusive economic zone in 1994; and if he will make a statement. [11031]

Mr. Baldry: The negotiations for a free trade area between the EC and EFTA culminated in the European economic area agreement which came into effect in 1994. Inter alia this negotiation involved an increase in fishing opportunities in Norwegian waters in recognition of a substantial reduction in tariff barriers for fish products. This gave limited access to Spain, Portugal and Ireland as well as a substantial increase in United Kingdom quotas.

Fish Farming

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many rainbow trout fattening ponds there are in Northern Ireland; if they require a culture licence; what chemicals they use; and if they may discharge chemicals without consent into a watercourse. [10665]

Mr. Ancram: I have been asked to reply.

There are 104 ponds at which small-scale production of not more than 500 rainbow trout per year is authorised. All sites where trout are artificially fed require a fish culture licence under section 11 of the Fisheries Act (NI) 1966. Chemical treatment is not a feature of fish husbandry at these sites. Chemicals may not be discharged into a watercourse without consent.

EU Funding

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European financial instrument for fishery guidance over the last available five years. [11656]

Mr. Baldry: The European financial instrument for fisheries guidance was introduced on 1 January 1994. Allocations are not made on a regional basis as awards are made according to how they meet selection criteria.

No central records of awards by standard regions is therefore kept. However, payments made in financial year 1994–95 and for the first half of 1995–96 were as follows:

| | 1994–95 | | 1995–96 (up to September) | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Mecu | £ million | Mecu | £ million |
| Scotland (Objective 1) (Highlands and Islands) | 0.97 | 0.79 | 0.86 | 0.72 |
| Northern Ireland (Objective 1) | 0.95 | 0.78 | 0.04 | 0.035 |
| Non-Objective 1 areas (England, Wales and the remainder of Scotland) | 4.3 | 3.54 | 0.47 | 0.395 |
| Total | 6.22 | 5.11 | 1.37 | 1.15 |

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European financial instrument for fishery guidance under the present structural funds agreement. [11657]

Mr. Baldry: The European financial instrument for fisheries guidance was introduced on 1 January 1994. Allocations are not made on a regional basis as awards are made according to how projects meet selection criteria. Allocations of Community funds under the United Kingdom's sectoral plan for 1994–99 are in the table.

| | Mecu | £ million |
|---|---|---|
| Scotland (Objective 1) (Highlands and Islands) | 19.8 | 16.5 |
| Northern Ireland (Objective 1) | 15.12 | 12.6 |
| Non-Objective 1 areas (England, Wales and the remainder of Scotland) | 88.7 | 73.92 |
| Total | 123.62 | 103.02 |

A further 8.35 mecu—some £7 million has been allocated to the United Kingdom from FIFG under the PESCA Community initiative. Allocations of Community funds under the UK PESCA programme for the period 1995–1999 are:

| | Mecu | £ million |
|---|---|---|
| Objective 1 areas | | |
| Scotland (Highland and Islands) | 2.53 | 2.11 |
| Northern Ireland | 0.26 | 0.21 |
| Non-Objective 1 areas | | |
| England | 3.69 | 3.08 |
| Wales | 0.07 | 0.06 |
| Scotland | 1.80 | 1.50 |
| Total | 8.35 | 6.96 |

Further PESCA funding is due to be awarded to the United Kingdom from the Commission's Community Initiative reserve. Details are awaited from the Commission.

HEALTH

Rubella Vaccination

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the rubella vaccination programme with particular reference to the vaccination of schoolgirls between the age of 10 and 14 years. [10742]

Mr. Horman: When the measles, mumps and rubella—MMR—vaccine was introduced into the routine pre-school childhood immunisation schedule in 1988, it was accepted that a continuingly high uptake of the vaccine would mean that it would be possible, in due course, to stop routinely immunising schoolgirls against rubella. It was also acknowledged when planning the measles/rubella immunisation campaign conducted in schools in November 1994, that a successful campaign would make it possible to bring forward the end of the schoolgirl rubella programme. Vaccine uptake in the measles/rubella campaign was very high at around 92 per cent. and uptake of MMR vaccine in infants is also consistently high at 92 per cent. In the light of the success of both the ongoing MMR programme and the measles/rubella campaign, the independent joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation concluded that immunisation levels against rubella among children were sufficiently high and advised that the routine immunisation of girls between 10 and 14 was no longer appropriate.

Ministers accepted the committee's recommendation and health authorities and all doctors were told in October 1995 that the routine immunisation of schoolgirls against rubella should be ended.

The policy of providing protection against rubella remains unchanged. In announcing the decision to end the routine immunisation programme, the Departments stressed that health authorities should continue with their other existing rubella screening and immunisation programmes. Health authorities should both continue to ensure that MMR vaccine is offered to any children of school leaving age who have not been immunised and also maintain their procedures to ensure that, where and when appropriate, women of childbearing age are both screened for rubella antibodies and offered immunisation. This will ensure that both girls and boys receive rubella vaccine if missed before.

Copies of the appropriate executive letter and Chief Medical Officer's update are available in the Library.

Northern and Yorkshire Outpost

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the location and address of the site for the new headquarters of the Northern and Yorkshire outpost of the NHS executive. [11112]

Mr. Malone: A new headquarters building for the national health service executive Northern and Yorkshire regional office is being constructed at the Mountjoy science park in Durham. The postal address for the new building has not been finalised.

Personal Information

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many instances of unauthorised access to identifiable personal health information have been recorded in each of the last three years; and how many of these were by access through IT equipment or NHS networks. [11474]

Mr. Horam: There is no central collection of statistics on recorded instances of unauthorised access to identifiable personal health information, whether via computer systems or paper records.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the NHS HealthNet network to meet the demands of healthcare professionals for the effective protection of identifiable patient health data; [11470]

(2) what progress his Department has made towards developing for NHS staff a code of guidance for protecting identifiable personal health information transmitted on NHS networks; and if he will make a statement; [11468]

(3) if he will place in the Library details of the security policy and technical specifications proposed for the new NHS HealthNet network. [11469]

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in developing policy on the secure management of identifiable personal health data to be transmitted on HealthNet. [11188]

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for health (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the confidentiality and integrity of patient data transmitted on the proposed HealthNet network will be maintained; [11680]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that bodies within the NHS implement security policies which protect the confidentiality of patients' personal health information transmitted on computer networks. [11681]

Mr. Horam: Over the past two years the Department of Health sought advice from security experts and from representatives of the clinical professions, following which the national health service chief executive wrote to all health authorities and trusts in December 1995 enclosing the networking security policy, codes of connection and the security guide, EL (95) 108, copies of which are available in the Library.

The papers explain the measures taken to protect information when it is passing over the networking system. They also state that these measures must be matched by secure handling of patient information locally. The Department of Health will issue further guidance in the near future, covering both the protection and use of patient information, and the secure management of computer systems.

Yorkshire RHA

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on repairs, maintenance and improvement of the former Yorkshire regional health authority headquarters at Park parade, Harrogate, since January 1986; who owns the building; when it will be vacated; and what receipts from the sale of the lease or freehold on this building will be passed to the NHS. [11114]

Mr. Malone: Spending on repairs, maintenance and improvement of the former Yorkshire regional health authority headquarters at Park parade, Harrogate for the financial years from 1986–87 onwards is shown in the table.

| Financial year | Expenditure £ |
|---|---|
| 1986–87 | 54,000 |
| 1987–88 | 30,000 |
| 1988–89 | 1,400,000 |
| 1989–90 | 1,400,000 |
| 1990–91 | 46,000 |
| 1991–92 | 371,000 |
| 1992–93 | 88,000 |
| 1993–94 | 56,000 |

The building is currently owned by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health, but on its vacation by the national health service executive regional office, ownership will pass to Dysart Developments Ltd, the developer of the new headquarters for the regional office at Durham. Receipts from the sale of the building will be £2.825 million, which will be added to allocations to health authorities in the region to invest in services for patients.

HIV-associated Dementia

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he is taking to improve awareness among general practitioners of HIV-associated dementia; [11743]

(2) if he will list all specialist services for HIV-associated dementia; [11741]

(3) what research he has commissioned into HIV-associated dementia; [11745]

(4) how many cases of HIV-associated dementia have been identified in each year since 1990; [11744]

(5) what action he is taking to improve the co-ordination of care for people with HIV-associated dementia. [11742]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health commissioned a study in 1991, covering the period 1991–1994, into the epidemiology of HIV-associated dementia in the Thames regional health authorities. This has concluded that previous studies had over-estimated the size of the problem and suggests a lower prevalence of HIV-associated dementia in people with AIDS of under 10 per cent. The report will be published shortly and copies will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Information is not available nationally on the number of cases of HIV-associated dementia or on specialist services for people with HIV dementia.

The Department has issued a comprehensive training pack for general practitioners which covers the whole spectrum of HIV disease, including HIV dementia. Guidance to health authorities on HIV/AIDS has stressed the need for shared care arrangements between specialist AIDS facilities and general practitioners. The Department has also issued guidance to both health and local authorities on the need to carry out population needs assessments in their localities to establish local priorities for service commissioning.

Disability

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11918]

Mr. Horam: The Department of Health and its agencies submitted an application for the award of the disability symbol to the Employment Service on 19 January 1996. We intend to use the disability symbol on all external and internal advertisements, including promotions.

Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what circulars or other information or directives have been sent to social service departments of local authorities regarding the implementation of the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995. [11825]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has prepared a circular giving detailed policy and practice guidance to local and health authorities on implementing the Act, which comes into force on 1 April 1996. We recently consulted interested parties on the draft guidance, and we shall shortly be issuing the final document to local and health authorities.

Tobacco Sales (Minors)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to restrict the advertising, sponsorship and promotion of tobacco and to strengthen the legislation on illegal sales to minors. [12101]

Mr. Horam: The Government are already committed to ensuring that there are effective controls on tobacco advertising, sponsorship and promotion. This is achieved by voluntary agreements between the Government and the tobacco industry. The voluntary agreements were strengthened in a number of key areas at the end of 1994. The law relating to illegal sales to minors has also been strengthened significantly by virtue of the Children and Young Persons (Protection from Tobacco) Act 1991 and regulations made under it.

Community Hospital, Orsett

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to his oral answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 528, if he will make a statement on the (a) size, (b) scale and (c) services that are planned to be made available at the community hospital at Orsett to which he referred; [10781]

(2) pursuant to his oral answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 528, when the new minor injuries unit he announced for Orsett hospital will be opened; [10782]

(3) pursuant to his oral answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 528, which operations it is planned will continue to be conducted at the day surgery at Orsett hospital. [10738]

Mr. Horam: These are matters for the South Essex health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. David Micklem, the chairman, for details.

Hospitals, Greater Manchester

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what dates between 1 December 1995 and 14 January 1996, and at what hospitals in the Greater Manchester area, accident and emergency facilities were closed to new admissions. [11176]

Mr. Horam: Greater Manchester ambulance service has a policy of not accepting any requests to divert and takes emergency patients to the nearest accident and emergency department as a matter of course.

Sun Healthcare

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received in respect of the activities in the United Kingdom of the United States company Sun Healthcare; and if he will make a statement. [12449]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Fraud

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost to the NHS of fraud and corruption for each year since 1979. [12451]

Mr. Horam: The costs of fraud and corruption in the national health service are not identified separately from other losses in returns to the Department. However, the Audit Commission publication "Ensuring Probity in the NHS" reported in December 1994 that proven fraud was small. It estimated that losses through the misuse of taxpayers' money over a three year period when NHS expenditure totalled £80 billion were £6 million—about one penny for every £100 spent in the NHS.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to monitor fraud in community care provision. [12452]

Mr. Bowis: Local authority social service departments should build suitable fraud prevention measures into their financial management procedures. Any evidence of fraud should be referred direct to the police who are the appropriate investigating authority for such matters.

Private Sector Providers

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which agency monitors health authority contracts with private sector providers; [12453]

(2) if he will list the number, type and value of contracts issued by health authorities to the private sector for nursing home beds. [12455]

Mr. Bowis: It is the responsibility of health authorities to place contracts with providers for health care services, including continuing in-patient care, and to monitor those contracts.

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those local authorities which failed to spend

85 per cent. of the special transitional grant for 1994–95 in the independent sector. [12450]

Mr. Bowis: Audited returns detailing community care spending in the independent sector by local authorities in 1994–95 were due to be submitted to the Department by 31 December 1995. Some returns are still outstanding and are being followed up through the Audit Commission.

Local Authority Contracts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which agency monitors local authority contracts with private sector providers. [12454]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities are responsible for monitoring contracts with providers.

Residential and Nursing Care

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number, type and value of contracts issued by local authorities to the private sector for nursing and care home beds. [12456]

Mr. Bowis: Information on contracts between local authorities and independent sector providers of residential and nursing care beds is not collected centrally.

Pharmacies

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many small independent pharmacies there are in the United Kingdom; how many there were in 1992; and what estimate he has made of how many supermarkets have opened pharmacies since 1992. [12120]

Mr. Malone: It is not possible to give the information in the form requested. In the financial year 1992–93 there were 6,579 independent pharmacies in England. The comparable figure for 1994–95 was 6,330. Independent pharmacies are defined as including chains of four or less and exclude pharmacies in health centres, for which a breakdown is not available. No information is available centrally on supermarkets which have opened pharmacies. Information relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

DEFENCE

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the total cost for himself and other departmental Ministers for each year since 1991–92, including the current year of (a) overseas travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers and their advisers, (b) car and chauffeuring costs of Ministers, (c) ministerial security costs and (d) domestic travel and accommodation expenses of Ministers. [6382]

Mr. Soames: Details of overseas visits by Ministers in my Department were set out in the answer of 19 July given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Knowsley North (Mr. Howarth), Official Report, columns 1369–75. The costs of visits overseas by Ministers falling to my Department since then, including the cost of officials where they can be identified, are as follows:

|---|---|
| Secretary of State for Defence: | £64,830 |
| Minister of State for the Armed Forces: | £95,228 |
| Minister of State for Defence Procurement: | £26,359 |
| Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence: | £2,735 |

The cost of domestic visits by Ministers in each financial year since 1991–92 could be identified only at disproportionate cost. Costs falling to my Department since 1 April last year have been identified, however, and are as follows:

|---|---|
| Secretary of State for Defence: | £17,670 |
| Minister of State for the Armed Forces: | £14,702 |
| Minister of State for Defence Procurement: | £8,362 |
| Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence: | £7,469 |

Note: Figures include overseas and domestic visits undertaken up to 20 December 1995.

The cost to my Department of ministerial security is not separately identifiable. Ministerial protection is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

Information on the cost of ministerial cars and chauffeurs was set out in the letter of 28 November 1995 from my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones), a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of running his departmental office, and that of his predecessor, for each year since 1990–91 including the current year, broken down into (a) telephone bills, (b) total staff costs, (c) press and communications, (d) entertainment, (e) alcoholic drinks, (f) non-alcoholic drinks, (g) stationery, (h) office refurbishment and (i) other. [6381]

Mr. Soames: Details of the cost of running my right hon. Friend's departmental office are not held in a form which would allow them to be identified separately for each financial year since 1991–92. The costs which have been identified for the last and present financial years are as follows:

| | 1994–95 £ | 1995–96[1] £ |
|---|---|---|
| Telephone | 1,757 | 1,083 |

| Stationery | 4,957 | 7,653 |
| Entertainment (including alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks) | 1,911 | 461 |

[1] To 31 October 1995.

The cost of refurbishing my right hon. Friend's own office in each of the financial years in question is as follows:

1990–91: Nil

1991–92: £380

1992–93: £881

1993–94: Nil

1994–95: Nil

1995–96: Nil[1]

Royal Yacht

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 582, if he will list for the 35 days of royal duties carried out by the royal yacht (a) the destinations, (b) the period spent at sea and (c) the members of the royal family conveyed. [11563]

Mr. Soames: I regret that whilst preparing the answer to this parliamentary Question, my officials found that my earlier answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 582, contained an error. In 1995 members of the royal family were embarked aboard Her Majesty's Yacht Britannia for 36 days, not 35 as previously stated.

In 1995, Britannia carried out royal duties on the following occasions:

Member(s) of the Royal Family Embarked

[11568]

Mr. Soames: Charges for the use of Britannia are not levied on the sponsors of commercial events when she is used to promote British exports and attract inward investment to the United Kingdom. However, all additional costs incurred, over and above normal running costs, are paid for by the Government Departments and organisations concerned.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, columns 582, what duties were carried out by the royal yacht in 1995 during the period she was at sea but not on royal duties or trade promotion. [11569]

Mr. Soames: In 1995, HMY Britannia was engaged in the following activities during the period she was in transit to or from royal duties or trade promotion:

| Date | Location | Event |
|---|---|---|
| 14 March | Walvis Bay | Her Majesty's High Commission, Namibia (lunchtime reception) |

HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) HMS Fearless and (b) HMS Intrepid (i) last put to sea and (ii) will next engage in military manoeuvres.

Mr. Soames: HMS Fearless was last at sea on 9 June 1995. She is currently in dock at Portsmouth undergoing routine maintenance and is scheduled to return to operational duties at the end of March. She is next planned to participate in military exercises at the end of April.

HMS Intrepid was last at sea on 8 November 1990. She is currently in a state of extended readiness at Portsmouth, available for operations at longer notice if required.

Small Arms Maintenance Contract

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make an announcement on the award of the small arms maintenance contract. [11872]

Mr. Soames: Small arms repair support for the Army and some units of the other armed services is provided by the Army base repair organisation ABRO has no plans to award a maintenance contract. However, some of the work does form part of a market test competition which commenced in October 1995. It is anticipated that the results of this competition will be known by early 1997.

European Security

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the European Union's contribution to wider European security referred to at paragraph 5 of the memorandum appended to the 10th report from the Defence Committee 1994–95, HC824; and if he will make a statement. [11718]

Mr. Soames: The EU makes an important contribution to wider European security by promoting economic stability and democratic practices, and through initiatives in the framework of the Common foreign and security policy, such as the joint action in support of the stability pact implemented in the course of last year.

Married Quarters (Sales)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many dwellings have been sold under the married quarters discounted sales in each year since its introduction. [11873]

Mr. Soames: The married quarter discounted sales scheme began in December 1983 with the first sales being completed in financial year 1984–85. The number of sales completed in each financial year is in the table.

| Financial Year | Number Sold |
|---|---|
| 1984–85 | not available |
| 1985–86 | 308 |

Bosnia

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his policy that the British contingent in IFOR should continue the UNPROFOR practice of assisting non-governmental organisations aid convoys in Bosnia. [12197]

Mr. Soames: IFOR's primary mission in Bosnia is to implement the military aspects of the peace agreement. Although it does not provide direct support to aid convoys, its efforts are helping to create an environment in which the civilian agencies operating under the peace agreement can accomplish their missions.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if IFOR is continuing the level of joint patrols as previously conducted by UNPROFOR with BiH—Bosnian Government Armed Forces—and HVO—Bosnian Croat Armed Forces—forces along former confrontation lines. [12198]

Mr. Soames: IFOR has been well received in theatre and, although it does not conduct joint patrols, it is continuing to work closely with all of the former warring factions as part of the peace implementation process. This includes joint operations to monitor mine clearance and to clear and maintain routes.

Low Flying

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will take steps to reduce the incidence of low flying by RAF jets over the Dwyfor and Arfon areas. [11976]

Mr. Soames: It is our policy to spread military low flying as widely as practicable across the United Kingdom so as to reduce the disturbance over any one area. Restricting the amount of low flying conducted over the areas suggested by the hon. Member would run counter to this policy and concentrate activity over surrounding communities.

Royal Irish Regiment Base (Fire)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the report of the inquest held on the deaths in the fire at the Royal Irish Regiment base in Magherafelt; and if he will make a statement. [12151]

Mr. Soames: The coroner sent his report to the chief fire officer at headquarters Northern Ireland on 22 January 1996. Many of the matters he raises match those identified in the provisional findings of the Army board of inquiry and are already being addressed. We are anxious that any lessons from this tragic incident are fully carried through. The coroner's observations and recommendations will be closely studied and the appropriate action taken.

Operational Sea Training

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details of the savings to the Defence budget from transferring operational sea training from Portland to Plymouth. [12010]

Mr. Soames: The cost of transferring operational sea training from Portland to Plymouth totalled about £9 million in capital costs. This was part of the overall programme of closing Portland naval base which is expected to realise savings of some £11 million per annum in running costs.

HMS Fearless

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement regarding the current condition of HMS Fearless. [12196]

Mr. Soames: HMS Fearless is currently in dock at Portsmouth undergoing routine maintenance. This has shown the ship to be in a material state normal for her age. She is scheduled to return to operational duties at the end of March, on completion of the current work.

Equerries

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 581, what are the principal duties of the equerries; how they are chosen for the post; what is the normal term of duty. [11567]

Mr. Soames: Equerries are chosen from candidates nominated by the Royal Navy, Army and Royal Air Force. The equerry to Her Majesty the Queen serves for three years; the others serve for two years.

The equerries provide support to their royal highnesses in arranging and planning visits and engagements both at home and abroad. In addition, they attend on their royal highnesses at official engagements, host guests at private and public functions and deal with routine correspondence.

Thomson Training and Simulation Ltd.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts his Department currently hold with Thomson Training and Simulation Ltd.; if contracts placed with this company are cost plus; and what checks his Department carries out to ensure that value for money is achieved. [12123]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The central data maintained by my Department's Procurement Executive and the Defence Research and Evaluation Agency shows there are approximately 70 contracts currently open with the company. Of these, only 10 per cent. have been placed on what is commonly known as "cost plus" terms, and only one of these has been placed during the last five years). These figures include a number of contracts originally placed with different companies, for example Link-Miles Ltd., which have subsequently been subsumed into Thomson Training and Simulation Ltd. as the result of acquisition and organisation.

Where contracts are placed resulting from competition, then market forces ensure value for money. In other cases, including "cost plus", then contractors have to provide cost certificates and satisfy Ministry contracts officers and/or the pricing and quality services directorate as to their validity before final payments may be made.

HMS Gannet

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, on what occasions Sea King helicopters from HMS "Gannet" have been grounded because of technical or other faults in each of the past three years and in this year to the current date; what caused the grounding and delay of the helicopter in the search for Sinclair Cadzow on 19 February; what action is being taken to rectify the problems; and if he will make a statement. [12119]

Mr. Soames: Provision of data specifying the occasions when Sea King helicopters from HMS Gannet have been grounded for technical or other faults in each of the past three years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The search and rescue aircraft and HMS Gannet scrambled on 19 January at the request of the rescue co-ordinating centre suffered a gearbox fault in transit to the search area which necessitated an emergency landing near Cairnryan. An RAF search and rescue aircraft from Boulmer was then tasked to assist in the search.

Third Parachute Regiment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the future of the Third Parachute Regiment. [12121]

Mr. Soames: We are currently considering the optimum deployment of manpower within our airborne forces. There are no plans to disband the Third Battalion, the Parachute Regiment.

Type 23 Frigates

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he expects to announce his decision on the award of the contract for the next batch of type 23 frigates; [12318]

(2) how many type 23 frigates he proposes to order; and to fulfil what function. [12427]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Tenders are being assessed for a batch of up to three type 23 frigates which are highly capable, modern general purpose frigates, optimised for anti-submarine warfare. An announcement will be made as soon as the decision has been taken.

Motorway

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the M2 motorway development in respect of (a) the land recently sold to Ronany Ltd. for private commercial development, (b) the funds expended on the land purchase, (c) the construction of engineering work required including, bridges, (d) the level of traffic in its traffic catchment area, (e) the extension of Londonderry, (f) its status as a Euro-route and claims for expansion within the European Union road transportation strategy and (g) the provision for the repurchase from Ronany Ltd. of the land now being disposed of to that company when the time comes for the construction of the additional traffic lanes. [10718]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is as follows:

(a) and (b) While the Department has not sold any land near the M2 motorway to Ronany Ltd. , arrangements are being made to lease a portion of the motorway hard shoulder and verge to the company to facilitate the provision of a service area;

(c) Responsibility for undertaking the necessary engineering works will rest with Ronany Ltd.—no bridges are proposed;

(d) Traffic flows on the section of motorway in question are as follows:

(i) northbound carriageway—approximately 14,000 vehicles per day, and

(ii) southbound carriageway—approximately 15,600 vehicles per day;

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his current estimate of the population of Northern Ireland (a) up to age 15 and (b) aged 16 years and over. [11200]

Sir John Wheeler: The information, taken from the 1994 mid-year estimates of population, is as follows:

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to publish the study on the proposed privatisation of rail services in Northern Ireland. [11240]

Mr. Moss: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Colchester, North (Mr. Jenkin) on 11 January 1995, Official Report, column 146. I have no plans to publish the report.

Ms Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to make a decision on the timetable for the franchising of rail services in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [11239]

Mr. Moss: Steps are being taken to introduce a private element into the management operation and capital programme of Northern Ireland Railways through a series of measures including market testing, contracting out, the sale of non-core businesses and the private finance initiative. I will keep the question of franchising under review.

Action for Community Employment (ACE)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what reductions he proposes to make in respect of ACE funding; and what considerations underlie their magnitude. [11107]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 23 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your questions about the Action for Community Employment (ACE) programme.

The situation regarding the level of reduction in next year's ACE budget and the considerations underlining their magnitude remain as I outlined in my letter to you of 16 January. As I indicated, the reduction in the ACE budget was set against a background of the encouraging performance of the Northern Ireland economy which includes the creation of almost 11,000 additional jobs in the year ending September 1995 and a reduction of 5,500 in the number of people unemployed for more than 1 year.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which sites of special scientific interest in Northern Ireland will be affected by trunk road and motorway schemes for which preferred routes have been announced. [11231]

Mr. Moss: No sites of special scientific interest will be affected.

National Insurance

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many current national insurance numbers are allocated to people normally resident in Northern Ireland. [11201]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Jim Dowd, dated 24 January 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question relating to National Insurance numbers.

I should explain that all National Insurance records for the United Kingdom are held centrally in Newcastle-Upon-Tyne. The number of National Insurance numbers allocated to Northern Ireland or any other regions of the United Kingdom is not available.

I am sorry that I cannot provide the information you require.

Wild Animals

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what inspection his Department has made of private residences within Omagh district council area where big cats, snakes and wild animals are in captivity; and if he will make a statement. [10076]

Mr. Moss: Under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972, the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland has inspected two private residences in the Omagh district council area where wild animals are kept. The inspections have confirmed that the primary needs of the animals are being well catered for and the Department is continuing to monitor the situation.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will seek to extend the provisions of the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 to Northern Ireland. [10074]

Mr. Moss: This issue is currently under review and I shall write to the hon. Member in due course.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what advice he has received from the Royal Ulster Constabulary about the captivity and security of big cats, snakes and other wild animals maintained in private residences within Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [10075]

Mr. Moss: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has recently received correspondence from the Royal Ulster Constabulary calling for the introduction of legislation equivalent to the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976. The question of the need for new legislation is under review.

SCOTLAND

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which sites of special scientific interest in Scotland will be affected by trunk road and motorway schemes for which preferred routes have been announced. [11230]

Mr. Kynoch: In his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie) on 19 December 1995, Official Report, columns 1061-62, on the programme for developing Scotland's trunk road network, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced that, subject to the usual criteria including satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures and the necessary preparatory work, it is intended to construct 17 new road schemes over the next three years. Preferred lines have been chosen for 16 of these schemes.

Two sites of special scientific interest will be affected by these schemes. These are (a) Glen Beasdale, affected by the A830 Mallaig road improvement from Polnish bridge to Loch Nan Uamh (b) Calrossie, where the A9 Logie Easter to Garrick bridge scheme is proposed to be built along a boundary line of the SSSI.

Disturbance to SSSIs is avoided if possible. When sites are affected, every effort is made to minimise the impact of constructions.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the purchasing by health boards of speech and language therapy services required for children who do not have a record of needs; [11638]

(2) what was the level of expenditure by each health board in Scotland for speech and language therapy services for (a) children with a record of needs and (b) children without a record of needs for (i) 1992, (ii) 1993 and (iii) 1994. [11639]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally. Health boards are responsible for assessing the health care needs of their local populations and for purchasing services including speech therapy services, accordingly.

Rural Child Care

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to improve rural child care in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [11581]

Mr. Kynoch: Provision and development of child care services are primarily matters for local service providers. The Government are mindful of the special problems for delivering these services in rural areas and have undertaken work to demonstrate how these problems can be addressed. The recently completed under-fives rural initiative demonstrated ways that the quality of child care services in rural areas can be enhanced by the use of special rural tutors.

The Government have also provided funding support of £45,000 over three years to the rural child care development programme run jointly by Children in Scotland and Rural Forum. This project is now in its third year with several long-term projects nearing completion including an employers guide, training information packs, a training needs analysis and an initial evaluation of out-of-school clubs. In North Uist, information is being provided to support a nursery project and in Ullapool a guidebook on children's services is being produced.

We have also funded research by Professor Mark Shucksmith of the Arkleton centre for rural development research. He is currently undertaking a scoping study on innovative approaches in rural service provision, which will include child care initiatives. The need for further research or demonstration projects will be considered on the basis of his findings.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to expand the under-fives rural initiative; and what level of finance the scheme will receive in the next three financial years. [11582]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This initiative was a development project aimed at demonstrating methods for improving the quality of day care by introducing educational elements. It comprised 12 schemes run by voluntary organisations using peripatetic tutors in a number of day care settings in different parts of rural Scotland.

Grants totalling £500,000 were made available under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 to support the project which ended in April 1995. There are at present no plans to extend it. We will, however, assess the lessons which can usefully be drawn for our new pre-school educational voucher initiative.

Water Charges

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide financial assistance to rural local authorities for the collection of rates from water consumers after April [11584]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend will make an order under section 79 of the Local Government etc. (Scotland) Act 1994 to require local authorities to demand and recover domestic unmeasured water and sewerage charges on behalf of the new water and sewerage authorities. That order will contain provision for the level of administrative costs to be refunded to local authorities. Consultation has taken place with local authorities about the terms of the order.

NHS (Private Sector Consultants)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure that private sector consultants retained by health boards and NHS trusts in Scotland in relation to private finance initiative contracts have no conflict of interest arising from a business, financial or personal relationship with private companies bidding for such contracts. [11612]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no instances of a private sector consultant advising both the NHS and private sector on the same project. NHS trusts should follow relevant procurement rules and corporate governance guidance in avoiding situations where such a conflict of interest would arise.

Child Care

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what guidance he is proposing to issue to local authorities on the day care review duty in the current legislation relating to the registration of day care and other provision for young children; [12022]

(2) what plans he has to amend existing guidance relating to registration standards and requirements relating to the registration of day care and other provision for young children; [12111]

(3) when he last issued guidelines to local authorities in Scotland regarding registration procedures governing premises for day care for young children; [12018]

(4) what plans he has to clarify the general purpose and application of guidance in the existing legislation relating to the registration of day care and other provision for young children. [12021]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: Statutory provisions dealing with the registration and inspection of those who provide child minding and day care for children under eight are set out in part X of the Children Act 1989. That part of the Act which came into force in October 1991 extends to Scotland.

To assist local authorities in the discharge of their duties and responsibilities under that part of the Act, the Scottish Office issued guidance to local authorities in June 1991.

A minor amendment to the 1989 Act was made in the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. This and further detailed amendments are planned on supervised activities and holiday play schemes will make it necessary to modify current guidance.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what priority local authorities are obliged to accord to (a) their estimate of local need and (b) the official regulations when deciding whether to close existing local day care places for young children; what estimate he has made of compliance with the guidance; and what assessment he has made of the stringency of that guidance. [12113]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: Registration of day care for young children under eight is governed by part X of the Children Act 1989. Section 71 empowers local authorities to refuse registration if they are satisfied about certain things specified in that section. Section 74 gives local authorities a power to cancel registration in certain specified circumstances. Under section 77, authorities are required to give not less than 14 days notice of their intention to refuse an application or to cancel registration. The person receiving such a notice may object to the step being taken and may appeal against it to the court. Section 75 also gives local authorities a power to apply, in cases of emergency, to the court to cancel a person's registration forthwith. The Scottish Office guidance issued in June 1991 draws attention to the statutory powers available to local authorities in this respect.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the sanctions available to social work departments to refer matters to the procurator fiscal when they believe that registration requirements are being breached. [12103]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: Failure to comply with the requirements of registration by a local authority of facilities may be an offence under the relevant statute, for example, where day care of young children is concerned, under section 78 of the Children Act 1989. If a local authority believes that an offence has been committed it may report the matter to the police or to the procurator fiscal.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the provisions of the Department of Health local authority circular on the Children Act 1989 and day care for young children registration No. LAC(93)1 have been translated into similar guidance for local authorities in Scotland. [12017]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: Circular LAC(93)1 was issued by Department of Health for local authorities in England. It does not apply in Scotland. The extant Scottish guidance entitled "Regulation and Review of Childminding, Day Care and Education Services for Children under 8—Guidance for Local Authorities" was issued here in June 1991.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of expansion of day care facilities for young people. [12019]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: The policy of the Scottish Office is to promote expansion of day care provision through public, private and voluntary agencies and individuals. The number of day care places for children under five in Scotland has increased by over 40 per cent.—from 92,000 in 1984 to 131,000 in 1994. The Scottish Office has assisted that expansion through its support under the urban programme and through grants under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. Local enterprise companies are also now funding child care projects for children under five and also for older children. Expansion of services is further assisted by the tax concessions which are available to employers providing work place child care facilities.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of day care facilities for young children which have been closed by local authorities in Scotland over the last three years because they have failed to meet the physical and staffing requirements set by local authorities. [12020]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: The data requested are not collected centrally. Local authority reviews under the Children Act 1989, which covered the period October 1991 to October 1994, indicated that very few registrations had been cancelled because of failure to meet the physical or staffing requirements set by local authorities.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if guidance currently available from his Department prescribes legally required standards for registration. [12112]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: Guidance issued by the Scottish Office to local authorities as registration authorities under various statutes advises local authorities on how the legislation should be implemented. The guidance may also suggest standards which should be adopted as a matter of good practice. If such standards or other standards are made a requirement of registration, failure to comply may be an offence.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what ways specific requirements set unilaterally by local social work departments governing the registration of individual premises for day care facilities are enforceable. [12104]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 26 January 1996]: Under part X of the Children Act 1989, which deals with registration of day care for young children, local authorities must impose such reasonable requirements as they consider appropriate when registering an applicant for registration. The requirements, set out in section 73 are concerned with the number of children who may be looked after, maintenance and safety of the premises and equipment, records and notification of changes. Authorities may also impose further requirements, provided these do not conflict with the requirements in that section. Section 78 makes it an offence where a registered person without reasonable excuse contravenes or otherwise fails to comply with any requirement imposed under section 73.

Housing Stock

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was, for each district and islands council area, the mid-1995 estimates of (a) the total housing stock, (b) the number of vacant dwellings and (c) the number of other non-effective housing stock. [10855]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is not yet available. Local authorities are being consulted about the estimates which should be finalised shortly.

Prison Visiting Committees

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the members of the visiting committee to (a) Her Majesty's prison, Barlinnie, (b) Her Majesty's prison, Greenock and (c) Her Majesty's prison, Cornton Vale. [10856]

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to modify the criteria by which persons are appointed to prison visiting committees; and if he will make a statement. [10857]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. He does not appoint members to visiting committees for adult prisons: they are appointed in terms of section 8(1) of the Prisons (Scotland) Act 1989 by local authorities prescribed by rules made under the Act.

Maintenance Orders

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many maintenance orders were pursued in each year in Scotland by him under schedule 2, section 6 of the Reciprocal Enforcement of Maintenance Orders (Hague Convention Countries) Order 1993. [12205]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of cases received each year since 5 April 1993, when the order came into force, is as shown in the table.

Glasgow Business Table Speech

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he first saw the press release of the speech he gave in Glasgow on Wednesday 17 January; and if he approved it before it was released to the press. [11950]

Mr. Forsyth: The press release was not approved by me but consisted of extracts from the speech which had been approved by me.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the names of those not employed in his Department who contributed to the drafting of his speech to the Glasgow Business Table. [11951]

Mr. Forsyth: Although I have advice and support from officials, my special adviser and, where necessary, others, my speeches are my responsibility and mine alone.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland at what hour and minute the original press release of the speech he gave to the meeting of the Glasgow Business Table on 17 January was released; when it was withdrawn; and when the second draft of the press release was released. [11952]

Mr. Forsyth: I understand that the original press release started issuing at 10.30 am and the withdrawal and release of the second press release finished transmission at 12.49 pm.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what factors underlay his decision to withdraw the original press release of his speech to a meeting of the Glasgow business Table on 17 January. [11953]

Mr. Forsyth: The decision to withdraw the original press release was made by staff of the Scottish Office information directorate as soon as they realised that they had made an error.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the compliance of his second press release on his speech to the Glasgow Business Table with the central Government conventions on publicity and advertising. [11948]

Mr. Forsyth: None. This is a matter in which I rely on official advice.

Ministerial Discussions

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when he last met ministerial colleagues to discuss Cabinet Office guidelines on publicity and advertising; [11954]

(2) who was present at the meeting on 17 January after which the director of the directorate of information released a statement apologising to the Secretary of State. [11947]

Mr. Forsyth: Successive Administrations have declined to answer questions on discussions between Ministers or between Ministers and their official advisers.

Heart Surgery

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will take action to reduce the waiting times for patients who require heart surgery. [12428]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since November 1994 a national guarantee has been in place which ensures that all adult patients who are referred for cardiac surgery receive it within 12 months. It is for the patient's clinician to determine clinical priority and of course patients requiring emergency or urgent treatment are seen much sooner than the 12-month limit. It is a matter for health boards to purchase the appropriate level of services to ensure that guarantees are met.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Classroom Assistants

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 1019, what is her estimate of the number of classroom assistants who work in a voluntary capacity, and if these were included in the figures given. [10525]

Mr. Robin Squire: Classroom assistants who work in a voluntary capacity were not included in the figures given. Information about unpaid education support staff is not collected centrally.

Waste Management and Recycling

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking to encourage sustainable waste management and recycling throughout her Department. [11179]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department operates to a green environmental and energy strategy which as Green Minister I approved in October 1995. This includes guidelines and rules on the management of waste by careful procurement, by minimisation and by separation for recycling. The Employment Service follows a similar strategy, tailored to suit its national network of offices. Objectives and, where feasible, targets are set and progress is monitored.

Undergraduate Degrees

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans her Department has to lower the time spent on studying for an undergraduate degree to 18 months. [11895]

Mr. Forth: The length of individual degree courses is a matter for individual universities. The length of undergraduate courses generally will be considered in the context of the higher education review alongside other issues concerned with the effective use of public funds.

Pupil Numbers (Costs)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the estimated cost of the projected increase in pupil numbers from April 1996 to March 1997. [11707]

Mr. Robin Squire: The latest available estimate shows a 1 per cent. increase in pupil numbers next year. How they are accommodated, and at what cost, will depend on decisions made by local education authorities and schools. The cost should be well within the 4.5 per cent. increase in provision for education made by the Government.

Student Grants

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Eduction and Employment if the calculation of a student's income for entitlement to a grant takes into account a mortgage held by the student. [11824]

Mr. Forth: Under the mandatory awards regulations, in assessing a student's income a local education authority has discretion to take account of payments made in pursuance of any obligation, such as a mortgage, incurred before the start of his course.

Disability Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for her Department and each of the agencies for which she is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11910]

Mr. Robin Squire: The position in the Department and its agencies is as follows:

| | (a) | (b) |
|---|---|---|
| DfEE | No | No |
| Employment Service | Yes | Yes |
| Teachers' Pensions Agency | No | No |

DfEE plans to introduce the symbol from April 1996. Consideration is being given to how the Teachers' Pensions Agency might be included in arrangements for use of the symbol by DfEE.

Education Spending

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each local education authority in England (i) total education spending excluding further education in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94, (ii) total expenditure on service strategy and regulation in (c) 1992–93 and (d) 1993–94, (iii) (c) as a percentage of (a), (iv) (d) as a percentage of (b) and (vi) the difference between (iii) and (iv) in ascending order of this difference. [11875]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows for each local education authority total education expenditure excluding further education colleges for (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94; total expenditure for service strategy and regulation for (c) 1992–93 and (d) 1993–94; the percentage of service strategy and regulation expenditure within total education expenditure for each year (d) 1992–93 and (e) 1993–94; and finally the difference between these variances in ascending order.

Teachers' Pay Award

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total cost (a) nationally and (b) to each local education authority of the teachers' pay award in 1995–96. [11746]

Mr. Robin Squire: The total estimated cost in England and Wales of the teachers' pay increase in 1995–96 is around £290 Million. The following table illustrates the cost of the award by updating the 1993–94 expenditure recorded by local education authorities in England and Wales for teaching staff salaries in nursery, primary, secondary and special schools by the teachers' pay awards of 2.9 per cent. in 1994–95 and 2.7 per cent. in 1995–96. The 1993–94 expenditure figures are the latest available for local education authority schools in England and Wales. The figures in the table take no account of changes in teacher numbers or other factors that affect the teachers' paybill.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the total expenditure of her Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate she has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if she will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11344]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Before the merger in July 1995, the Department operated separately as the Department for Education and the Employment Department. We will continue to follow separately-funded programmes of publicity until the end of the financial year 1995–96.

Information on the publicity spend of agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally by the former Departments. It was not the policy of the former Departments to make use of paid public relations services. Press enquiries were handled by their own specialist staff and costs are not separately identifiable.

The costs of the total expenditure on publicity and on advertising for the former Departments are as follows:

£ thousand

| | Total publicity expenditure | Advertising |
|---|---|---|
| ED | | |
| 1979–80 | 70 | not available |
| 1989–90 | 30,300 | 16,630 |
| 1991–92 | 18,300 | 12,600 |
| 1993–94 | 10,970 | 7,300 |
| 1994–95 | 11,200 | 8,000 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 6,400 | 4,500 |
| 1995–96 (estimated for whole year) | 7,595 | 6,283 |
| DFE | | |
| 1979–80 | 104 | 92 |
| 1989–90 | 1,400 | 250 |
| 1991–92 | 8,881 | 3,03 |
| 1993–94 | 9,994 | 1,442 |

£ thousand

| | Total publicity expenditure | Advertising |
|---|---|---|
| 1994–95 | 8,088 | 147 |
| 1995–96 (to date) | 1,342 | 49 |
| 1995–96 (estimated for whole year) | 5,430 | 300 |

The projected spending on publicity in the 1996–97 public expenditure survey allocation for the Department is £13,040,000. Details on how this will be divided between various forms of publicity have not yet been agreed.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) her Department, (b) her Department's agencies and (c) her Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11346]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The information is as follows:

a. Telephone costs to the Department

(i) 1979–80: Figures are not available

(ii) 1989–90: Figures are not available

(iii) 1991–92: £6,157,168

(v) 1994–95: £5,867,605

(vi) 1995–96: £4,800,000 (estimate)

(vii) 1996–97: £4,800,000 (estimate)

For 1995–96 and earlier the figures amalgamate the relevant expenditure of the former Department for Education and the former Department of Employment. The figures for 1993–94 and later years include the telephone costs for the Teacher's Pensions Agency which cannot be separately identified.

b. Telephone costs to the Employment Service

(i) 1979–80: Figures are not available

Education, South London

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (1) church-aided and (2) non-denominational secondary schools which are located within 15 miles of Southwark are (a) grant-maintained and (b) maintained by local authorities. [11937]

Mrs. Gillan: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Maintained secondary schools within 15 miles of the centre of Southwark Local Education Authority (LEA) area November 1995

| | Denominational[1] | Non-denominational |
|---|---|---|
| LEA maintained schools | 68 | 210 |
| Grant-maintained schools | 50 | 63 |

[1] Includes Church of England, Roman Catholic, Jewish, Methodist and other religious denominations.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will institute a public inquiry into the quality of secondary education provision in the London boroughs of Islington, Southwark and Lambeth. [11938]

Mr. Robin Squire: No.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will hold discussions with the Lambeth and Southwark education committee chairmen on whether their education policies are meeting the needs of local parents. [11939]

Mr. Robin Squire: I have had no request for such a meeting nor is there any current intention of Ministers to seek one.

Employment Service (Safety of Staff)

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what has been the number of attacks on Employment Service office staff in each of the last five years; what assessment she has made as to the causes of such attacks; and if she will make a statement; [11933]

(2) what account she takes of representations by staff when considering the provision of safety measures in jobcentres; [11934]

(3) what plans she has to allow additional safety measures to be provided at jobcentres at the request of staff; and what funding she will make available for this purpose. [11935]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. John McAllion, dated 29 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your questions concerning attacks on Employment Service (ES) staff.

All attacks against my people are taken very seriously and we investigate them thoroughly. Fortunately, few of these attacks result in physical injury. The incidence of attacks need to be placed in the context of the some two million contacts we have with the public every week. Seen in that light the likelihood of someone in the Employment Service being attacked is, I am pleased to say, low. That does not diminish our determination to ensure that it is as low as possible and we continue to work to that end. Every incident is studied to assess causes and see if any changes are needed to the existing countermeasures. These studies show that there are very different factors for each incident, but typical countermeasures will include upgrading the security arrangements, better training in customer handling, introducing more effective and efficient working procedures and improving the layout of the office to provide better traffic flow and more accessible escape routes for my people.

The figures of actual assaults on my people in each of the last five years are:–

1991: 152

1992: 203

1993: 258

1995: 234

A systematic risk assessment, by competent Risk Assessors, to identify and recommend measures to reduce incidents to the minimum practical level has been made of all our Jobcentres in preparation for the introduction of Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). Trade Union Health and Safety representatives were fully consulted as part of the risk assessment process. Their views were fully taken into account by risk assessors.

Safety and security measures will receive priority funding and I anticipate no difficulties in implementing the agreed recommendations of Risk Assessors.

I hope this is helpful.

Jobseekers (Project Work Scheme)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her oral statement of 16 January, Official Report, column 610, if she will place in the Library a copy of all correspondence and other data evaluated by her Department relating to the decision to pilot the project work scheme in the Hull and Medway travel-to-work areas. [12156]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 26 January 1996]: The information requested is either data about the labour market, which is publicly available, or pre-existing documents. It would not be appropriate specifically to provide this information in the form requested. However, it may be helpful if I explain the way in which the choice of pilot areas was made. Hull and Medway and Maidstone were two of a number of travel-to-work areas of the right size to mount a manageable pilot at a reasonable cost, while still producing a sample large enough for proper evaluation. They were also relatively self-contained, which minimised the potential for distortion, and they represented two different sorts of labour market. The respective rates of unemployment and very long-term unemployment in the two travel-to-work areas is shown in the following table, compared with the national averages.

| Pilot area | Unemployment rate Per cent. | VLTU[1] as percentage of total unemployed | VLTU[1] as percentage of total workforce |
|---|---|---|---|
| Medway and Maidstone | 8.2 | 13.7 | 1.1 |
| Hull | 9.9 | 18.8 | 1.9 |
| National average | 8.0 | 21.6 | 1.7 |

[1] Very long-term unemployed, i.e., over 2 years.
[2] Seasonally adjusted, and provisional.

Equal Opportunities Commission

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment he has made of the effects on the workings of the Sex Discrimination Acts and Equal Pay Act 1970 of the reduction in funding for the Equal Opportunities Commission. [12398]

Mrs. Gillan: I expect that the Equal Opportunities Commission will continue to use its resources efficiently and effectively to carry out its statutory duties.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to restore funding to the Equal Opportunities Commission. [12396]

Mrs. Gillan: We consider annually the funding requirements of the Equal Opportunities Commission, alongside other calls on public expenditure.

EU Funding

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European Leonardo programme and its predecessor schemes over the last available five-year period; [11649]

(2) how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European Leonardo programme under the current financial perspectives. [11648]

Mr. Forth: The main predecessors of the Leonardo programme were the Comett, Force and Petra programmes. The following tables relate to funding received in the United Kingdom as a whole under these programmes; regional allocations are not available. No financial details of funds received within the Leonardo programme in 1995, its first year of operation, have yet been published by the European Commission.

(2) how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European Socrates programme under the current financial perspectives. [11653]

Mr. Forth: The main predecessors of the Socrates programme were the Erasmus and Lingua programmes. The following table relates to funding allocated to the United Kingdom as a whole under these programmes; regional allocations are not available. No financial details of grants awarded under the Socrates programme in 1995, its first year of operation, have yet been published by the European Commission.

EU Funding

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much in (a) ecus and (b) pound sterling by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European social fund under the present structural funds agreement. [11661]

Mr. Forth: Information by standard region is not available except at disproportionate cost. Allocations are set out in the following table. The table shows the amounts of European social fund allocated to the United Kingdom in the years 1994–1999. There are as yet no indicative allocations for objective 2 of the European structural fund in 1997–1999. It will be for the European Commission to decide later this year the share of each eligible member state and for the Government to determine the share between the eligible areas of Great Britain.

Employment Service (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) when the bonus payments paid to Employment Service staff in Coventry began; when the staff of the Coventry Employment Service were notified of the payment of bonuses; and what the conditions of such payments were; [11837]

(2) when those Coventry Employment Service staff currently in dispute were notified of the payment of bonuses to Employment Service staff; and if they were notified of the conditions that would have to be accepted if they were to receive such payments; [11838]

(3) what discussions took place between her Department and Employment Service with regards to the payment of bonuses to Coventry Employment Service staff; [11839]

(4) what bonus payments to Coventry Employment Service staff have been issued in relation to the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance; [11841]

(5) what are the reasons, outside those in connection with the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance, for the payment of bonus to Coventry Employment Service staff; and if she will make a statement; [11842]

(6) what is the cost to date, and what the eventual cost will be, of the payment of bonuses to Employment

Service staff in (a) Coventry and (b) the United Kingdom as a whole; [11843]

(7) what relation the payment of bonus to Employment Service staff in Coventry bears to the current dispute within the Employment Service in Coventry; [11844]

(8) if bonus payments have been issued to the Employment Service staff in Coventry involved in the Coventry Employment Service dispute. [11845]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 29 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about bonus payments to Employment Service staff in Coventry.

First I must make clear that no bonus payments have been made to staff in my Coventry offices. In three of the four ES offices in Coventry, strike action has been called by the Civil and Public Services Association (CPSA), and it seems that the Association is alleging that bonuses are being paid to staff remaining at work. That is not the case.

It is open to the Employment Service to make bonus payments under the provisions of its Special Bonus Scheme which began operating in 1989. The Scheme criteria under which a bonus may be paid include recognition of "maintenance of operational effectiveness in exceptionally difficult circumstances".

Under the Scheme, bonus payments may be authorised by my Regional Directors where they believe the circumstances to warrant such a payment. There is no requirement for discussions to take place between the Employment Service and the Department for Education and Employment in relation to payments made under the ES Special Bonus Scheme.

My Regional Director for the West Midlands, Rosemary Thew, is currently considering whether to make a bonus payment to staff remaining in work at Coventry. Such a payment would reflect the particularly difficult circumstances at the offices in the City; staff remaining at work are ensuring that the offices continue to function, thus allowing benefit payments and services to be offered to unemployed people and employers in Coventry.

Any payment made would have no connection with the forthcoming introduction of the Jobseeker's Allowance. As I have indicated they would be designed to recognise the maintenance of services in the exceptionally difficult circumstances occasioned by strike action by those ES employees in Coventry who are members of the CPSA.

You asked what the cost of paying people bonuses through the Special Bonus Scheme had been to date, and what the eventual cost will be. Some of my Regional Directors in regions other than the West Midlands have made bonus payments totalling £141,000 to people who are delivering our services from some offices affected by the dispute. It is not possible to inform you of the future total cost of such payments as many of my Regional Directors have not yet decided whether they should be made or, if so, for how much.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she has requested the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service to report into the dispute involving the Employment Service. [11840]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 29 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the involvement of the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (ACAS) in the trade dispute between the Employment Service and the Civil and Public Services Association (CPSA).

In early December 1995 ACAS acted upon a request from the CPSA to offer its conciliation services to the parties involved in the dispute. I was pleased to agree to talks under the auspices of ACAS being planned for 19 December. However, at a late stage they were called off because the CPSA decided not to adhere to the agreement we had reached that it would order its striking members back to work before the talks started.

I hope that this is helpful.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many grant-maintained schools have applied for a change of character; what was the nature of the change; and what was the Secretary of State's decision. [12183]

Mrs. Gillan: Some 20 grant-maintained schools have approved admission arrangements which enable them to use interviews other than for the purpose of assessing religious suitability.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to ensure that the membership of training and enterprise council boards includes representatives from firms with (a) under 50 employees, (b) under 20 employees, and (c) under 10 employees. [11959]

Mr. Paice: I am satisfied that the current arrangements ensure that small firms are represented on training and enterprise council boards and that TECs consult widely with small businesses in the preparation of their plans.

Business Start-up Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 15 January, Official Report, column 357, how many start-ups in each of his tables benefited from (a) start-up grants, (b) survival grants and (c) both. [11945]

Mr. Paice: All starts received a start-up grant. The number of 52-week survival grants paid in 1993–94 and 1994–95 is given in the following table. All survivors, therefore, received both start-up and survival grants.

Business start-up scheme: 52 week survivors in England

| Year | 52-week survivors |
|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 25,282 |
| 1994–95 | 24,344 |

European Social Fund

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many training places were created (a) in total and (b) by standard region, with assistance from the European social fund in the United Kingdom in each year from 1990 to 1994. [11700]

Mr. Forth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds the United Kingdom has been allocated from the European social fund under objectives 3 and 4 between 1994 and 1999. [11701]

Mr. Forth: The United Kingdom was allocated 3,377 mecu under objectives 3 and 4 of the European social fund between 1994 and 1999. At an exchange rate of 1.2ecu = £1 this would be £2,815 million.

Training Schemes

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment her Department has made of the numbers and percentages of (a) firms with under (i) 100 employees, (ii) 50 employees, (iii) 20 employees and (iv) 10 employees and (b) start-ups that have participated in Government-funded training schemes in each of the last five years. [11956]

Mr. Paice: The Department does not hold the information in the specific form requested. I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

School Budgets

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish the delegated schools budget for 1995–96 for each local education authority combining the budgets for grant-maintained and for local education authority maintained primary and secondary schools. [12341]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows, for each local education authority, the amount delegated to primary, middle and secondary schools through the aggregated schools budget in 1995–96. The figures are derived from the local management of schools budget statements produced by local education authorities under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988.

The funding of grant-maintained schools is a matter for the Funding Agency for Schools, and I have asked the chairman of the funding agency to arrange for a reply to be sent to the hon. member in respect of the GM sector.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing (Elderly People)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the housing stock in England and Wales was earmarked for the elderly in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [9477]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 15 January 1996]: The available data on local authority and housing association dwellings in England for elderly people are set out. The figures relate to the stock at 31 March/1 April. Comprehensive data for the private sector are not available.

Commission for Local Administration in England

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received the report of the review of the local government ombudsman; and when he expects to publish it. [11098]

Sir Paul Beresford: Following completion of the first stage of his financial, management and policy review of the Commission for Local Administration in England, Sir Geoffrey Chipperfield presented his report to my right hon. Friend and to the chairman of the commission on 30 November 1995. The report is now being carefully considered by Ministers and by the commission and it will be published for wider consideration in due course.

Rail Services

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what total payment has been made under the standard spending assessment to provide for the additional costs of supporting rail services that have arisen from the privatisation of British Rail. [11318]

Sir Paul Beresford: A figure of £89 million has been set aside from within the provisional all other services standard spending assessments for 1996–97 to reflect the costs of supporting rail services that have arisen from restructuring due to the privatisation of British Rail. This takes account of payments made directly to passenger transport executives under British Rail and Railtrack deeds of assumption.

Single Regeneration Budget

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will increase the funds for the single regeneration budget to ensure a higher success rate in bids. [11609]

Sir Paul Beresford: As existing commitments under the programmes combined within the single regeneration budget are fulfilled, so increased resources are being made available for the bidding rounds for the SRB challenge fund. Under current plans, the challenge fund element of the SRB will increase from £125 million in 1995–96 to £600 million in 1988–99. Many unsuccessful bidders from round 1 in 1994 came back with greatly improved and successful bids for round 2, demonstrating the strength of local partnerships. Unsuccessful bidders last year will have the chance to bid again in round 3 this year.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in respect of changes in public expenditure plans for the regeneration budget before May 1997. [11608]

Sir Paul Beresford: Regeneration work, such as housing, training and economic development initiatives, are supported through main programme expenditure by various Government Departments. This is supplemented by targeted programmes which have been brought together in the single regeneration budget.

Under current plans, the single regeneration budget will provide over £1.3 billion for regeneration work in each of the three years 1995–96 to 1997–98—a total of some £4 billion. During this period there will be some £870 million available for funding new regeneration schemes successful in bidding rounds for the competitive SRB challenge fund. In 1998–99, under current plans, the challenge fund element of the SRB will increase to £600 million, by which time new schemes from four bidding rounds will be under way.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, columns 25–26, if he will list for each of the challenge fund schemes which included plans to assist business start-ups how many start-ups they estimated would be helped; and what was the average sum estimated to be made available for each start-up by each scheme. [11944]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information on the forecast number of business start-ups over the lifetime of each challenge fund scheme is given.

Information about the average sum estimated to be made available for each start-up for each scheme is not available. As explained in my replies to the hon. Member on 9 January, Official Report, column 25, and 17 January, Official Report column 603, the single regeneration budget challenge fund provides support to local partnerships for schemes which incorporate a wide range of economic, environmental and social measures, including the business start-ups set out in the table. Schemes approved to date stand to receive some £1.7 billion in challenge fund support overall. Within the resources made available to each approved scheme, it is for partnerships to determine the support provided for business start-ups. This accords with our intention of encouraging partnerships to tackle regeneration in ways that are appropriate to their local needs and priorities. It is not therefore possible to estimate the sums provided for start-ups from the records held centrally or at Government offices.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority in England the (a) total standard spending allocated and (b) amount spent in each year since 1990–91. [11595]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have placed the information in the Library of the House.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the outcome of consultation on the local government finance settlement; and if he will make a statement. [12731]

Mr. Gummer: I am today laying before the House the Local Government Finance Report (England) 1996–97, the limitation of Council Tax and Precepts (Relevant Notional Amounts) Report (England) 1996–97, the Special Grant Report (No. 16) and the National Parks Supplementary Grant Report (England) 1996–97. These reports establish the amounts of revenue support grant and non-domestic rates to be paid to local authorities in 1996–97, and the basis of their distribution; specify the amounts which are to be used as the basis of comparison for measuring increases in certain local authorities' budgets in 1996–97 for the purposes of capping, provide for a special standard spending assessment reduction grant to be paid to certain authorities for 1996–97 and specify the amount of supplementary grant to be paid to certain authorities in connection with national parks. Drafts of these reports were issued for consultation on 30 November 1995. Two hundred and fifty authorities made written representations and Ministers met 84 delegations from local councils.

I shall be sending copies of these reports to all authorities today, together with tables showing each authority's standard spending assessment and its entitlement to RSG, NDR and special grant. I have also placed copies of the reports and further information to be sent to the local authority associations in the Library and the Vote Office.

Asylum Seekers (Benefits)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to the oral statement of 11 January, Official Report, columns 331-45 (1) in what proportion he plans that local authorities should be reimbursed for the costs they face in respect of the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendment Regulations 1996; [11627]

(2) what estimates he has made of the likely total costs of the assistance he plans should be given to local authorities in respect of costs arising from the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) Miscellaneous Amendment Regulations 1996. [11628]

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, Central (Sir P. Beresford), on 23 January to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn), Official Report, column 204.

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authorities, housing authorities and other bodies on the implementation of clause 9 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill; and if he will place copies of all representations on this matter in the Library. [12109]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 26 January 1996]: No such representations have been received.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the additional costs or savings to housing authorities as a consequence of the implementation of clause 9 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [12108]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 26 January 1996]: The effect of the provisions in clause 9 of the Asylum and Immigration Bill will be to relieve local housing authorities of an obligation to provide housing assistance for persons from abroad who are not entitled to social security benefits. Information about the present cost of housing such persons is not collected centrally, but it is expected that worthwhile savings will result in the longer term.

Council House Receipts

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to the ministerial reply of 22 January, Official Report, column 81, relating to sums received by local government from sale of dwellings, if he will estimate the total unused amounts remaining with receiving local authorities. [11894]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department does not have information on how much of the receipts from the sale of local authority dwellings is still unused. The stock of usable receipts from all assets stood at £1.5 billion at 31 March 1995. About 90 per cent. of these receipts are held by authorities whose responsibilities include housing. Since 1990, local authorities have been required to set aside 75 per cent. of their capital receipts from the sale of council housing to repay debt, but it is not known how much of these amounts have not yet been used for debt repayment.

Any unused receipts can be invested and will generate interest for the authority.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11923]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department and its agencies do not at present use the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol, but there are plans to do so in the near future.

Tenanted Council House Transfers

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much expenditure was incurred by (a) the Housing Corporation and (b) the local authority in relation to each of the proposals for a transfer of tenanted council housing in Torquay to another landlord since 1988; and what were the numbers and percentages of tenants voting (i) for and (ii) against each proposal. [11714]

Mr. Curry: The available information is as follows.

In January 1989, Torbay borough council balloted tenants on its proposal for a large-scale voluntary transfer of 3,425 dwellings to two housing associations. Fifty-nine per cent. of the eligible tenants voted in the ballot, of whom 27 per cent. were in favour of transfer and 73 per cent. voted against.

In August 1995, 1,971 eligible tenants were balloted on three separate proposals by the Torbay tenants' housing association to take over property in Torquay, Paignton and Brixham under part IV of the Housing Act 1988. Details are in the table.

| Area covered by bid | Eligible tenants | Number (percentage) Votes cast | Ballot result (expressed as percentage of eligible tenants) | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | Against | For |
| Torquay | 986 | 902 (92) | 844 (86) | 58 (6) |
| Paignton[1] | 715 | 667 (93) | 588 (82) | 77 (11) |
| Brixham | 270 | 254 (94) | 239 (86) | 15 (6) |
| Total | 1,971 (100) | 1,823 (93) | 1,671 (85) | 150 (8) |

[1] Two tenants indicated an express wish to abstain.

The Housing Corporation's total grant spend on the Torbay tenants' housing association was £1,546,866. The local authority's costs amounted to £650,000.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for a transfer of tenanted council properties to another landlord under the provisions of part IV of the Housing Act 1988 have been made since 1988; how many tenancies have been involved; and what was the outcome of the tenants' ballot in each case. [11713]

Mr. Curry: Since part IV of the Housing Act 1988 came into force in 1989, there have been nine applications for a transfer of property, seven of which progressed to a ballot of tenants. The available information on these applications is contained in the table.

| Case name | Number of units | Ballot | Ballot result (per cent.) | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | For | Against | Did not vote |
| Walterton and Elgin Community Homes | [1]918 | Yes | 59 | 23 | 18 |

[1] Number of properties transferred.

[2] 18 properties to transfer when the transfer takes place.

[3] Ballot result not available, but the majority voted against transfer.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total cost to public funds to date of the tenants' advice scheme set up under part IV of the Housing Act 1988 with particular reference to (a) setting up costs incurred by his Department and the Housing Corporation, (b) publicity and promotional expenditure, (c) annual revenue expenditure incurred by the Housing Corporation in each year since 1988, (d) grants to tenants' organisations and others and (e) any other expenditure. [11715]

Mr. Curry: The Housing Corporation's total salary costs for tenants' choice activities between 1988–89 and 1994–95 amounted to £2,001,913. Since the scheme's introduction in 1989, the Housing Corporation total grant spend in support of tenants' choice cases has been £3,826,853. The further information requested is not available.

Charities (Funding)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he issues to local authorities in respect of the provision of public funds to charities, with special reference to charities for the aged. [11647]

Sir Paul Beresford [holding answer 25 January 1996]: None.

Local Government Staff (Redundancy Compensation)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to amend part IV of the Local Government (Compensation for Redundancy) Regulations 1994; and if he will make a statement; [11971]

(2) how many representations his Department has received in the last 18 months on the operation part IV of the Local Government (Compensation for Redundancy) Regulations 1994; and if he will make a statement. [11972]

Sir Paul Beresford: Part IV of the Local Government (Compensation for Redundancy) Regulations 1994 came into force on 28 December 1994 and gave local authorities in England and Wales discretionary powers to make compensatory payments by 28 June 1995 to former employees who had their pensions reduced as a consequence of a Court of Appeal judgment in Allsop v. North Tyneside metropolitan borough council. My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce further provisions. Thirty-six items of correspondence were received while part IV of the regulations was in force; in addition, 35 items were received prior to the provisions coming into force, and since 29 June 1995.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European LIFE programme under the current financial perspectives. [11651]

Mr. Clappison: There is no allocation of LIFE funds to any member state or region within the European Union. Funds were distributed to the highest quality proposals wherever they may come from, and are paid directly by the EC Commission to the successful applicant.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in (a) ecus and (b) pound sterling by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European SAVE programme and its predecessor programmes over the last available five years. [11664]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: This information is not centrally available, as levels of funding for specific projects supported under the SAVE programme are a contractual matter between the European Commission and those carrying out each project.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much in (a) ecus and (b) pound sterling by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European SAVE programme under the current financial perspectives. [11665]

Mr. Jones: Payments from European Union expenditure programmes are not allocated to member states in the legislation supporting the programmes.

Rents-to-mortgages Scheme

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the take-up of the rents-to-mortgages scheme in 1996. [11848]

Mr. Clappison: Returns so far received from local authorities for the period to 30 September 1995 report that 15 sales have already been completed, and around 50 more applications have been accepted which may translate into sales.

Mine Safety

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action has been taken in the British coal industry to ensure that the Safety Committee Regulations 1977 are in place, with particular reference to the provision of information relevant to the maintenance of safety in the mine. [11484]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Commission issued a consultative document in October 1995 on proposed regulations concerning employers' duties to consult their employees about health and safety matters in undertakings where there is no recognised trade union. These regulations would apply to coal mines but they would also extend the provisions of the Safety Representatives and Safety Committees Regulations 1977, as amended by the Management of Health and Safety Regulations 1992, to coal mines where there are recognised trade unions.

Rural Charter

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to launch the rural charter initiative promised in his White Paper "Rural England". [12337]

Mr. Clappison: The rural charter initiative, including the rural services checklist, was launched on 1 November 1995. I have arranged for a copy of the checklist to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Rural Planning Guidance

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the revised rural planning guidance note PPG7. [12338]

Sir Paul Beresford: We intend to issue a draft revision of planning policy guidance note 7, "The Countryside and the Rural Economy", later this year. This will fulfil a commitment made in the rural White Paper.

Planning (Rural Business Use)

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation he has carried out on the introduction of a new rural business use class within the planning system; and if he will make a statement. [12339]

Business Rate Relief Scheme

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his consultative document on the new business rate relief scheme proposed in the White Paper "Rural England", and by what date comments on it will be expected. [12340]

Mr. Clappison: We expect to publish a consultation paper before Easter, and to allow six weeks for comments.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Unemployment Benefit (Women)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women workers claimed unemployment benefit (a) successfully and (b) unsuccessfully while their partners remained in work in each of the last 10 years. [9937]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available. Unemployment benefit is a personal benefit. Questions relating to the claimant's partner are asked only if an adult dependency addition is being claimed.

Social Fund

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the expenditure in 1995 of providing (a) maternity payments, (b) funeral expenses and (c) cold weather payments for the last three years expressed in (1) cash terms, (2) cash terms at 1992–93 prices and (3) as a percentage of total social security expenditure, (i) in total, (ii) by region and (iii) by his Department's offices. [9485]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested by region and district office could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

2. Figures for total benefit expenditure figures for 1995–96 are not yet available; a reliable comparison, based on planned expenditure, for a part year cannot be made.

3. Figures for total benefit expenditure figures for 1994–95 are estimated outturn.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was (a) the total social fund expenditure, (b) income from re-paid grants for each year since 1988, (c) the proportion of total income required for administration and (d) the number of loans and grants paid each year. [11672]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information relating to total social fund expenditure, recoveries from pre-paid awards, and the number of loans and grants awarded for year since 1988 is contained in the Secretary of State's annual reports on the social fund, copies of which are available in the Library.

For information on administration costs since 1988, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Islington South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 29 November 1995, Official Report, columns 748-50.

Social Security

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his estimate of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the proposal to limit housing benefit for single people under 25 years to the average cost of local shared accommodation; [8506]

(2) what is his estimate of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the freeze in (a) lone parent premium and (b) one parent benefit in April 1996; [8518]

(3) what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the real increase in April 1996 in non-dependant deductions for housing costs; how many people he estimates will be affected in each of these years; and if he will make a statement setting out the reasons for the increase; [8504]

(4) what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the change in the family credit rules from July 1996 regarding awards when the youngest child has left school; [8520]

(5) what is his estimate of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the proposal to double the minimum payment of child maintenance under the Child Support Act from April 1996; [8507]

(6) what estimate he has made of the effect on revenues in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98 of the proposal to pay housing benefit in arrears rather than in advance; [8509]

(7) how the estimate given in his uprating statement on 29 November of £500 million in benefit savings in 1996–97 and over £1 billion savings in 1998 was calculated, itemising savings for each measure he is introducing. [8517]

Mr. Burt: Reductions in expenditure from measures announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. in the social security statement on 29 November, Official Report, column 1212–15 are set out in the table.

Overall figures differ from those underlying the statement following the announcement on benefits for asylum seekers on 11 January and other revisions to estimates in some areas. A number of measures are subject to the outcome of consultation and the passage of legislation. The number of cases affected by the changes to non-dependant deduction rates is, in 1996–97, 55,000 on income support, 390,000 on housing benefit and 475,000 on council tax benefit, and, in 1997–98, 55,000 on income support, 390,000 on housing benefit and 485,000 on council tax benefit.

| Total | –520 | –955 | –1,055 |

1. Numbers affected are rounded to the nearest 5,000.
2. Figures cannot be aggregated due to overlapping benefit entitlement.
3. Some of the numbers affected (about 5,000 for each benefit in each year) will be gainers from the changes to income thresholds.

Pensioners' Incomes

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioners are identified as receiving income from savings; and what is the mean and median amount received for the latest year for which figures are available. [10200]

Mr. Heald: The latest available information is for 1993, when it is estimated that 73 per cent. of pensioner units were receiving income from savings. The mean amount received in 1993 is estimated to be £28.40 per week and the median is estimated at £4.90.

Notes:

1. Source: Analysis of the 1993 family expenditure survey.
2. Amounts quoted are at July 1993 prices.
3. A pensioner unit is defined as a single person over state pension age or a couple where the husband, or head, is over state pension age.

Pensioners' Benefits

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he has taken and plans to take to improve income support and housing benefit take-up by pensioners. [10208]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Government's role is to ensure that help is there for those who need it and that people are in a position to make informed choices on whether to claim benefit. To this end, the Department is involved in a wide range of national and local initiatives to ensure that accurate and accessible information is available. These are often undertaken in conjunction with local interest and advice groups.

Further, local authorities have a statutory duty to publicise housing benefit.

Industrial Injuries

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he has taken to implement the recommendations of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council on hand arm vibration syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [10180]

Mr. Roger Evans: We are currently considering the complex practical and administrative issues raised by the recommendations made by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council in its report "Hand Arm Vibration Syndrome" (Cm 2844) and expect to announce a response shortly.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what guidance is being given to adjudication officers in the period when the guidance on myalgic encephalomyelitis is being re-drafted; [10767]

(2) what monitoring of the decisions of adjudication officers in respect of benefit claims made by people affected by myalgic encephalomyelitis is being undertaken by his Department. [10766]

Mr. Burt: Advice to adjudication officers on myalgic encephalomyelitis is contained in the disability handbook. This is currently being redrafted following discussions with the ME Association. In the meantime, adjudication officers are using existing guidance, but have been advised that they must consider all the evidence in the case to support their decision. Monitoring is undertaken on a random basis. Cases selected which involve myalgic encephalomyelitis are checked to ensure adjudication officers have taken this advice into account.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the number of claims made for (a) incapacity benefit and (b) the disability living allowance by claimants who suffer from myalgic encephalomyelitis since the inception of the scheme; [10832]

(2) how many claims for (a) incapacity benefit and (b) disability living allowance made by claimants who suffer from myalgic encephalomyelitis have been refused in each month since the inception of each scheme. [10765]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available.

Cold Weather Payments

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the criteria for determining the temperature at which cold weather payments are triggered (a) generally, (b) in the Barking constituency and (c) in the Dagenham constituency; and what plans he has to review these criteria. [11476]

Mr. Roger Evans: The criteria for determining cold weather payment trigger temperatures are the same throughout the country: when the average temperature is, or is forecast to be, 0°C (freezing point) or below over any seven consecutive day period. We consider this to be a reasonable indication of a sustained period of very cold weather not normally expected to occur in the majority of British winters. The weather stations used for Barking are Heathrow and Stanstead. Dagenham is served solely by Stanstead.

There are no plans for major changes to the scheme.

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many times the Tiree monitoring station has triggered the system of cold weather payments since it was first designated for such purposes. [10679]

Mr. Evans: Since 1 November 1991, when Tiree was first used in the cold weather payment scheme, no triggers have occurred.

Incapacity Benefit

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time between the lodging of an appeal to a tribunal and a decision being reached by a tribunal for people appealing against a decision relating to the all-work medical test for incapacity benefit. [11196]

Mr. Burt: The information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Benefits

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of expenditure in Scotland in 1995–96 and 1996–97 on (a) income support for mortgage interest payments and (b) housing benefit. [11141]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

| | Projected expenditure in Scotland £ million | |
|---|---|---|
| | 1995–96 | 1996–97 |
| Income Support mortgage interest payments | 35 | 35 |
| Housing Benefit | 890 | 980 |

1. The income support mortgage interest figures for Scotland for 1995–96 and 1996–97 have been derived by applying the same percentage of estimated expenditure for Scotland in 1994–95 to projected expenditure for Great Britain in 1995–96 and 1996–97.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Benefit Fraud

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has to improve the sharing of information and promotion of best practice by Government agencies and Departments in tackling organised benefit fraud. [9980]

Mr. Heald: Where more than one investigative body is engaged in the detection of organised fraud offences being perpetrated by the same offenders, it is our practice that those bodies work together where it is the most effective way of pursuing an investigation. In this context, information is shared whenever it is appropriate to do so.

Benefits Agency organised fraud investigators employed exclusively to tackle organised fraud are involved with Home Office initiatives such as the joint action group and the National Criminal Investigation Service which have been specifically set up to share information about serious fraud and discuss the best way of combatting this threat across different agencies. This multi-agency approach ensures that the most efficient and effective use of resources is employed, and best practices adopted.

Welfare Provision

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what comparisons of the British welfare state provision he has made with those of Singapore; and if he will make a statement. [11521]

Mr. Lilley: I regularly consider international experience of alternative state welfare systems but these are not always directly transferable to the particular circumstances of the UK. I have not studied the Singapore system in detail but I note that the Singapore Government have control over the bulk of money people are required to invest for their pensions and other welfare benefits.

The International Monetary Fund recently reported that the average annual return on the state-run Singapore scheme since 1980 has been only 2 per cent. more than inflation. This contrasts with British pension funds which have yielded almost 10 per cent. more than inflation, and now stands at almost £600 billion.

Benefit Statistics

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the take up level of (a) income support and (b) housing benefit for entitled persons in the (i) 60 to 65, (ii) 65 to 70, (iii) 70 to 75 and (iv) over 75 years of age groups; and if he will make a statement. [11522]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not readily available and, where obtainable, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Social Security (Persons From Abroad) Regulations

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the consultations that have taken place with welfare and refugee organisations since October 1995 concerning the Social Security (Persons from Abroad) draft Regulations. [11523]

Mr. Roger Evans: Representations from many welfare and refugee organisations were received by the Social Security Advisory Committee during the course of its consultation exercise. The Committee's report to the Secretary of State for Social Security was approved on 8 December 1995 and subsequently published as part of Command Paper Cm. 3062. Appendix 1 of the report contains a list of the representations received.

State Pensions

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average level of state pension, the cost per head of the total population and the proportion of total Government expenditure required for state pensions for (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Italy, (d) the Netherlands, (e) Singapore, (f) Japan, (g) Australia and (h) New Zealand. [11524]

Mr. Heald: Comparable information on state pensions is not available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Information on retirement pensions in EU member states is contained in the "MISSOC" tables, "Social Protection in the Member States of the Community", published by the European Commission, and in the Eurostat publication "Digest of statistics on social protection in Europe Volume 1: Old Age." Information on old-age pensions in Australia may be found in comparative tables of social security schemes, published by the Council of Europe. Information about state pensions in Japan and New Zealand and old-age benefits in Singapore are in "Social Security Programs Throughout the World", published by Social Security Administration, USA.

Copies of the publications referred to above are in the Library.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the cash level of the state pension for each year since 1975 and its value in 1975 prices; and if he will estimate the value since 1980 if the rate had been linked to earnings. [11525]

Mr. Heald: The available information is in the table.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the average level of pension expectation for holders of SERPS since 1978 in cash terms and at 1978 prices. [11547]

Mr. Heald: The amount of additional pension depends on the number of years a person has contributed to SERPS and their earnings in each year. The table shows entitlement to additional pension for men on average male earnings and women on average female earnings who have contributed to SERPS in each year since 1978–79 and who reached pension age in the year shown in the left-hand column.

EU Residents (Benefit Entitlement)

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make an estimate of the saving to public funds of the introduction of a five-year residency rule for benefit entitlement in the case of citizens of countries outside the European economic area seeking to live in the United Kingdom. [12206]

Mr. Roger Evans: There is insufficient information upon which to base a reasonable estimate.

Child Care

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the figures for the take-up in Wales, and the United Kingdom as a whole, of the child care disregard for families in receipt of housing benefit and family credit since its introduction; if he will provide the same figures for single parent families only; and if he will make a statement about what promotional activity has been undertaken to inform the public of the increase in the child care disregard announced in the Budget. [12402]

Mr. Roger Evans: Between 4 October 1994 and 30 September 1995, approximately 28,000 families in Great Britain benefited from the child care disregard in family credit. As at 30 September 1995, about 21,000 families in Great Britain, of whom 20,000 were lone parents, were receiving help, including about 1,000 families in Wales. Information on families receiving the help through housing benefit will not be available until later this year and take-up estimates are not available for any benefit. Figures for Northern Ireland fall within the remit of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

The further increase in the disregard announced in the Budget was publicised through a press release in November 1995. Further publicity measures are still under consideration but will include references in leaflets, the child benefit order book and in a newspaper covering work, benefit and training issues in an easy-to-read form, produced by the Department and distributed by the Benefits Agency and Employment Services.

Disabled People (Access)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what assessment he has made of the accessibility of Benefits Agency offices to disabled people; what percentage remain inaccessible to disabled people in terms of (a) physical and (b) sensory disability; and if he will make a statement; [9284]

(2) how he assesses the accessibility of offices other than those of the Benefits Agency for which he is responsible to disabled people; what percentage remains inaccessible to disabled people in terms of (a) physical and (b) sensory disability; and if he will make a statement. [9251]

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 26 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what assessment he has made of the accessibility of Benefits Agency offices to disabled people; and how he assesses the accessibility of offices other than those of the Benefits Agency (BA) for which he is responsible to disabled people; what percentage remain inaccessible to disabled people in terms of (a) physical and (b) sensory disability; and if he will make a statement.

The BA shares its public outlets with the Child Support Agency and War Pensions Agency. The Contributions Agency has public access at only 4 of its independent sites and the Independent Tribunal Service has 44 sites with public access. Caller enquiries relating to the BA, Contributions Agency, Child Support Agency and War Pensions Agency are generally all handled at offices operated by the BA.

Annexe A shows the percentage of offices that we consider are accessible to physically disabled persons.

The accessibility of buildings is assessed on a quarterly basis. The data collated includes details on whether the building is provided with level access, a ramp or lift to avoid steps or stairways, if it has a loop-aid or minicom system to assist those with hearing difficulties and if it has any special features to assist blind or partially sighted visitors. Disabled access is automatically considered for all new buildings and major refurbishments on existing buildings.

The provision of Loop Systems to aid the hard of hearing and special signs for the blind and partially sighted are a standard design consideration in major refurbishment or new buildings. Sixty seven percent of existing buildings have had loop-aid systems installed.

Offices which remain inaccessible are treated as a priority for capital funding, providing modification of the building is technically possible.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Annexe A

| Agency | Number with flat/ramped access | Number without flat/ramped access |
|---|---|---|
| Benefits agency (including Child Support, Contributions and War Pensions Agency) | 614 (84 per cent.) | 117 (16 per cent.) |
| Contributions agency | 4 (100 per cent.) | 0 |
| Independent tribunal service | 38 (86 per cent.) | 6 (14 per cent.) |

Figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

Widows' Pensions

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women in receipt of a widow's pension have had their income entitlement reassessed in the last six months because of miscalculations by his Department relating to the former husband having contracted out of his state pension arrangements. [12117]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Ann Taylor dated 26 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many women in receipt of a Widows Pension (WP) have had their income entitlement reassessed in the last six months because of miscalculations by his Department relating to the former husband having contracted out of his state pension arrangements.

All new awards of WP from October 1995 have been assessed correctly following a change to the computer system. The Benefits Agency is in the process of examining all WP cases that existed prior to October 1995. Until this exercise has been completed figures will not be available. Completion is due by the end of March 1996.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish (a) the current cost of providing social security payments to asylum seekers broken down by type of benefit, numbers of claimants and regional location and (b) any guidance or procedures issued which are currently in force on social security payments of any kind to asylum seekers. [12106]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. George Howarth, dated 26 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will publish (a) the current cost of providing social security payments to asylum seekers broken down by type of benefit, numbers of claimants and regional location and (b) any guidance or procedures issued which are currently in force on social security payments of any kind to asylum seekers.

The information is not available in the format requested. In May 1994, the most recent date for which complete information is available, expenditure on Income Support, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit for asylum seekers was an estimated £4.7 million per week in total: this comprised £2.4 million Income Support, £2.2 million Housing Benefit and £0.1 million Council Tax Benefit. There were just over 42,000 claims to Income Support from Asylum Seekers, of which 28,000 were also claiming Housing Benefit and 11,000 claiming Council Tax Benefit. Regional figures and information on other benefits is unavailable.

Guidance on asylum seekers is available in the Adjudication Officer's Guide paragraphs 28751–28900. The Handbook "Persons from abroad for Income Support staff" provides procedural guidance for BA staff. These are available in the Library.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

WALES

NHS Trusts

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish information on the management costs of NHS trusts in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [6023]

Mr. Richards [pursuant to his reply 12 December 1995]: Management cost savings targets for 1996–97 amounting to £3.25 million will be issued today to health authorities and NHS trusts in Wales. This completes the transfer of £12.5 million to direct patient services which was announced in "Caring for the Future". A copy of the letter (DGM(96)10) has been placed in the Library of the House.

There are currently 29 NHS trusts in Wales. My right hon. Friend and I have received applications from the last three directly-managed-units in Wales to become NHS trusts from April 1996. Public consultation on these three applications ended on 24 December 1995.

Taking full account of the many representations received, and of the individual merits of each case, my right hon. Friend has decided to approve the applications.

Merthyr and Cynon Valley health unit will become the North Glamorgan NHS trust on 26 February 1996. The Glan Hafren NHS trust and Bridgend and district NJS trust will both be dissolved on 31 March 1996 and immediately re-established incorporating the Rhymney Valley health unit and Hensol health unit respectively. All three new trusts will become operational on 1 April.

The orders giving effect to these decisions have been signed today. We will announce shortly the details on the chairman and non-executive directors of the new North Glamorgan NHS trust.

Today's announcement confirms that, from 1 April 1996, all acute, community health, mental health and ambulance services in Wales will be delivered by NHS trusts. This will be a further stimulus to improving efficiency in the NHS in Wales.

Hospital Patients

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average number of patients per hospital bed for each major specialty in each year since 1989–90; and what was the percentage change over the entire period. [10784]

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was Welsh gross domestic product per head as a percentage of United Kingdom gross domestic product per head for each year since 1978; and if he will include the latest available statistical revisions with the date and explanation of each revision. [12445]

Mr. Hague: The latest available estimates are shown in the following table. Figures for 1994 were published in the article "Regional Accounts 1994: part 1" in the December 1995 edition of "Economic Trends". The article includes revisions to data on gross domestic product per head for earlier years and an explanation of the reasons for the revisions. Copies of "Economic Trends" are available in the Library of the House.

Waiting Times Information Bulletin

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made for the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to place copies of the Welsh waiting times information bulletin in the Library; and on what date the autumn 1995 edition was placed in the Library. [12447]

Mr. Hague: The waiting times information bulletin is an internal NHS document intended to help GPs advise patients on the most appropriate choice of hospital or consultant for referral. Copies are not routinely placed in the Library of the House. However, copies are available, at no charge, from the Welsh Health Common Services Authority, at Crickhowell house, Capital waterside, Cardiff CF1 5XT.

Malnutrition

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the level of his departmental involvement in the inter-departmental low income project team and the nutrition task force; and what information he is proposing to publish on the extent of malnutrition and its relationship to low income and to public health issues arising from the work of the project team and the task force. [12444]

Mr. Hague: The nutrition task force and its low income project team formed part of "The Health of the Nation" programme which covers England only. My Department was represented at meetings of the main task force by an official with observer status, but was not represented on the low income project team. The Department has also received papers relating to the work of the task force, including the report of the low income project team, for information.

In Wales, the Health Promotion Authority for Wales undertakes a wide variety of programmes designed to encourage people to eat healthier diets. Specific initiatives have also targeted those on low income.

Estate Care Group

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of his decision letter pertaining to the privatisation of the EstateCare group of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority. [12446]

Mr. Hague: Bids to acquire NHS EstateCare are still being evaluated. No decision has been taken.

Exel Logistics

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he was requested to approve the proposal to award the materials management contract work of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to Exel Logistics; on what date he gave his approval; what proposals he has to assist the funding of redundancy payments to those affected; and if he will make a statement. [12448]

Mr. Hague: The authority submitted its recommendation on 8 December 1995 and it had a response on 22 January. The authority and Exel Logistics will be responsible for handling the restructuring costs including the funding of staff reductions as part of the contract. Exel Logistics has experience in delivering significant levels of improvements in customer service and operating costs which will be of benefit to the health service in Wales.

Internet

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency concerning the provision of a contract for the development of Internet access services for private business clients within and outside the Business Connect network. [12400]

Mr. Hague: None.

Euro-freight Terminal

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency concerning the decision-making process on the Euro-freight terminal; if he will list each of the consultancy firms which have been or are currently contracted to carry out studies in relation to its feasibility; and if he will make a statement. [12442]

Mr. Hague: I regularly meet the chairman of the agency to discuss a wide range of issues. My officials dealing with the freight terminal are maintaining close contact with the agency.

My Department has not employed any consultants. The agency has employed three consultants:

Formerly: Touche Ross and Coopers and Lybrand

Currently: Price Waterhouse

The general position regarding the proposed freight terminals is as stated in my answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 22 January, Official Report, column 4.

Hospital Beds

[12443]

Mr. Hague: The information is given in the following table.

(2) how many jobs were created following Welsh trade missions in each year since 1992. [11813]

Mr. Hague: Trade missions provide an opportunity for initial contacts with prospective customers in overseas markets and any orders taken on a mission are normally awarded on a trial basis. Since April 1993, when the current subsidised trade mission programme commenced, orders taken during the course of Welsh Office trade missions have amounted to: 1993–94, £4,827,400; 1994–95, £2,677,250; 1995–96 January, £2,289,500. Anticipated follow-on orders amounted to: 1993–94, £12,274,000; 1994–95, £22,879,000; 1995–96 January, £38,183,700. Such orders may ultimately lead to the creation of new jobs and/or the safeguarding of existing jobs but it is rarely possible for mission participants to be specific about this in the short term.

DEFENCE

Trident

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what would be the cost of distributing to each hon. Member a copy of the 1996 edition of his Department's annual progress report on the Trident programme. [11722]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The annual report on the progress of the Trident programme will be published shortly and, as usual, copies will be placed in the Library of the House. The precise cost of distributing the report to all hon. Members is not known, but would not exceed £1,000. However, it would not be a sensible use of resources to send individual copies to all right hon. and hon. Members as not all may wish to receive one.

Defence Industry

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the competitiveness of the United Kingdom defence industry. [12102]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Due in part to my Department's procurement policies in recent years, the United Kingdom's defence industry is highly competitive both at home and abroad. Including the UK share of collaborative work, more than 90 per cent. by value of our equipment contracts are placed with UK firms. Our provisional estimate is that UK companies won defence export orders of £5 million in 1995. This represents around 19 per cent. of the world market. Only the USA has a large market share.

Johore Bahru Jungle Warfare School

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those countries whose military forces have received training at the Johore Bahru jungle warfare school during the last three years. [12469]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Malaysian Government.

Thailand

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the British armed forces have served in Thailand during the last three years. [12468]

Mr. Soames: Other than a colonel attached to the British embassy in Bangkok as defence attaché and a colour sergeant to support him, no military personnel have served in Thailand during the last three years.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will (a) list the countries he visited during his overseas tour in early January giving, in each case, the dates he was in the country and who he met and (b) list those accompanying him on this tour. [12241]

Mr. Portillo: Between 30 December 1995 and 10 January 1996, I visited the United Arab Emirates, the Republic of the Philippines, the Republic of Korea and Japan. On 13 January, I visited Kuwait. The aim of the visits was to promote our bilateral relationships with international partners. I met a number of people in each of the countries visited including the respective Ministers of Defence, some of their ministerial colleagues and senior military and civilian officials. In the Philippines I called on the President and in the Republic of Korea I called on the Prime Minister. I was accompanied throughout by officials from my private office and the Ministry of Defence. My wife accompanied me from 30 December to 10 January at the invitation of the Governments of the Philippines, the Republic of Korea and Japan.

[11421]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

For some details of overseas travel costs for Defence agencies, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement on 29 November 1995, Official Report, columns 758–67.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (v) 1996–97. [11418]

Mr. Soames: Records of expenditure on hospitality in my Department before 1992–93 can be collated only at disproportionate cost, and estimates for the financial year 1996–97 have yet to be finalised. Total expenditure for the years 1992–93 to 1995–96 is given in the list:

(i) 1992–93: £4.952 million

(ii) 1993–94: £4.577 million

(iii) 1994–95: £4.867 million

(iv) 1995–96: £4.843 million (estimated final spend)

The figures include expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence itself, by formations and establishments of the armed forces at home and abroad, and by individual officers occupying command and international appointments for which entertainment allowances are payable. Figures for agencies and non-departmental public bodies are not held separately.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11419]

Mr. Soames: Details of defence operating costs for the years 1989–90 to 1997–98 are contained in table 4 of my Department's most recent departmental report, Cm 2801, of March 1995, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Figures for 1979–80 are not available in the form requested.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11422]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Until April 1995, all books, journals, newspapers and other commercial publications required for the official duties of the Department and the services were purchased by more than 150 purchasing authorities worldwide.

The total expenditure on commercial publications in 1993–94 was £6.134 million, of which it is estimated that £3.373 million was spent on scientific and technical journals, and £306,000 was spend on newspapers and weekly publications.

In 1994–95, the total spend was £6.626 million, with estimated spends of £3.644 million on scientific and technical journals, and £331,000 on newspapers and weekly publications. In 1995–96, £6.191 million was allocated for the purchase of commercial publications. This sum was disaggregated to the budgets of individual units in April 1995, and the spend to date is £2.257 million.

There are no central records of which material was purchased from 1993 to date, and this information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11331]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Individual budget holders in my Department have delegated powers to employ external consultants as they think fit within the limit of their resources and consistent with all requirements for propriety and value for money. The information required is currently not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11332]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 25 January 1996]: This information is not held centrally in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

[11334]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Some information about my Department's telephone costs for the period 1993–94, is contained in the 14th report of the Committee of Public Accounts, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Details for other years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Pay Services Directorate

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence agency status for the Pay Services Directorate. [12906]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Pay Services Directorate will become a defence agency of the Ministry of Defence on 1 February 1996 following the restructuring of the Defence Accounts Agency, DAA. The agency, to be known as the Pay and Personnel Agency, PPA, is located in Bath; Cheadle Hulme, Cheshire, and Worcester, with a small satellite office in Malta and will have a staff of some 960 MOD civil servants. The agency is responsible for providing pay services and personnel information support services in respect of civilian staff of the MOD and for other public sector customers. In addition, the agency will provide financial management information to budget holders and other customers.

A chief executive has been selected by open competition. He will be required to develop the current organisation's professional expertise and improve the high performance standards to fulfil the agency's aim of providing its customers with an efficient service which offers the best value for money. The chief executive will be set the following key targets: to deliver the range of agency services to the required time scales and to the set standards of accuracy, as published in the pay services customer charter; to achieve annual efficiency savings year on year of 3.5 per cent. of cash allocation through a reduction in operating costs; to obtain quality registration to BS EN ISO 9001 standard in one further sector of the agency by 31 March 1996; to meet the Treasury accounts direction and to install a computerised, full-cost, accruals accounting system by 31 March 1996; to have new business systems hardware—known as POPSI—delivered and installed and the personnel system completed to the specification required to achieve savings, by 31 December 1996; to complete an investigation into the best commercial practices for measuring customer satisfaction with agency services by 31 December 1996; to introduce the new principal civil service pension scheme administration system—known as QUASAR—to the required specification, by 31 March 1997; to obtain quality registration to BS EN ISO 9001 standard in two further sectors of the agency by 31 March 1997; and to set an accruals baseline to permit the use of accruals—based performance targets for the agency accounts, by 31 March 1997.

I am arranging for copies of the agency's framework document to be placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11420]

Mr. Soames: No estimate is made of the cost of empty and under-utilised property and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mobile Phones

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the mobile phones which have been supplied to his Department in each of the last four years have been cloned; and on what dates. [11007]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 23 January 1996]: During 1995, 24 mobile telephones supplied to the MOD were cloned as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| January | 8 |
| February | 2 |
| March | 11 |
| May | 2 |
| June | 1 |

Figures before 1995 are not available.

Gulf War Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will instigate an epidemiological study into alleged Gulf war syndrome. [12122]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 29 January 1996]: My Department has been conducting a continuing and detailed investigation into the health aspects of service in the Gulf. The medical assessment programme, under which more than 350 individual veterans have been examined, was endorsed by the Royal College of Physicians in a clinical audit last July.

The royal college recommended that we contact leading civilian specialists in specific areas of medicine relevant to conditions alleged to have been caused by Gulf service. Separate discussions have since been held with eminent specialists in toxicology, immunology, tropical diseases, epidemiology and birth defects, and a comprehensive medical statistical database has been prepared which will provide the basis for epidemiological studies.

As part of this continuing work, the Surgeon General convened a meeting last Thursday with the following leading medical and scientific experts: Professor A. Kay, Imperial college of science, technology and medicine (immunology); Professor L. Borysiewicz, university of Wales (immunology); Professor D. Warrell, John Radcliffe medical school, Oxford (tropical diseases); Professor A. McMichael, London school of hygiene and tropical medicine (epidemiology); Dr. A. Proudfoot, director, Scottish poisons information bureau (toxicology); Professor Sir C. Berry, Royal London hospital (birth defects); and Professor P. Blain, Newcastle upon Tyne medical school (environmental and occupational medicine).

Having reviewed the work undertaken to date, the experts fully approved the basis of our approach. They also agreed that there is no evidence at present to indicate the existence of a unique and previously unknown condition or illness associated with service in the Gulf, and noted that this echoed the US experience of its much larger assessment programme of 17,000 veterans.

We accept that a number of Gulf veterans are ill, and that there is public concern about the possible effects of Gulf service on the children of veterans who have been born with birth defects. As the next stage of its work, my Department will commission a series of epidemiological studies comparing the health of Gulf veterans with similarly matched control groups of service personnel who did not go to the Gulf. The aim of these studies, some of which will be conducted in-house and some by commissioning external research, will be to establish whether there is any increased prevalence of illness among Gulf veterans or of birth defects among their children.

We will also commission research into the alleged causes of Gulf-related illness, including the possibility of interaction between the vaccinations received by service personnel and the nerve agent pretirement sets—NAPS—taken for protection against the very real threat of chemical attack. We shall of course work very closely with the US, but will not duplicate its efforts.

The cost of the research will be met by my Department. The Medical Research Council has been invited to oversee and review the conduct of the programme, and the results will be published.

We will continue to offer assessment and counselling services under the medical assessment programme, and wish to encourage any serving or ex-service personnel who may be concerned about their health as a result of Gulf service to come forward to the solicitors acting for those who are ill asking them to urge their clients to participate in the programme.

TREASURY

Tax (Self-assessment)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how long, on average, Inland Revenue staff have spent training to deal with self-assessment. [8314]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue has in place a four-year training programme for staff dealing with self-assessment. The programme started in April 1994 and runs through to October 1998. So far staff have spent, on average, three and a half days in training covering the basic elements of self-assessment.

From April this year, the training programme will address the specific needs of different staff groups to equip them with the knowledge and skills required to do their jobs when this is first needed.

On average, staff will receive seven days' training during 1996–97, four days in 1997–98 and three days from April to October 1998. The training programme is designed as a staged incremental progress to ensure that staff are able to handle the work as it first arises.

On-the-job support, guidance and information to consolidate this learning will be provided by the training organisation and line managers.

Employment Statistics (London)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of (a) manual part-time workers and (b) non-manual part-time workers, broken down into men and women, work less than (i) eight hours a week and (ii) 16 hours a week in each London borough. [11861]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Estimates available from the labour force survey relating to Greater London as a whole are shown in the table. Equivalent estimates for individual London boroughs are not available.

Part-time manual and non-manual workers by the total number of hours they usually work

Greater London summer 1995, not seasonally adjusted

| Manual part-time | 15 | 11 | 57 | 42 |
| Non-manual part-time | 33 | 11 | 102 | 33 |

Lost Work Days

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the number of work days lost, in each of the work categories used by his Department, since May 1979, as a result of (a) the closure or restructuring of firms, (b) the withdrawal of local authority services, (c) the reduction in the size of Government Departments and the armed services and (d) changes in the scope of charitable employment. [11725]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information is not available in the form requested. The available information closest to that requested is for the net change in jobs for the whole economy in the United Kingdom. There was a net increase of 141,000 jobs between September 1979 and September 1995.

Information providing estimates of employment in the public sector for 1979 to 1994 is published in the January 1995 edition of Economic Trends. A copy of the publication is available in the Library.

VAT (Higher Education)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much value added tax was paid by further education colleges and sixth form colleges in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94 and (c) 1994–95; and how much he estimates will be paid by these colleges in 1995–96. [11630]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are no figures available on the amount of VAT paid by colleges.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost of mortgage interest tax relief in Scotland in each year since 1993–94; what it is estimated to be for 1996–97; and what the costs would have been in each of these years if relief had been available at 25 per cent. [11930]

Mr. Jack: The cost of mortgage interest tax relief in Scotland was estimated to be £300 million in 1993–94 and £240 million in 1994–95. In 1994–95 the rate of relief was 20 per cent. If relief had been available at 25 per cent., the cost would have been about £300 million. The estimated cost of the relief for 1993–94 is based on the regional distribution of the cost of mortgage interest relief from analyses of family expenditure surveys up to 1993. The estimate for 1994–95 is a projection based on applying the same regional distribution as in 1993–94 to the total figure for 1994–95. It is not possible to provide reliable estimates for regions for 1995–96 and 1996–97.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of the Secretary of State for Wales of 19 January 1996, Official Report, column 838, what are the reasons for the unavailability of the gross domestic product figures for the years after 1991. [11963]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Gross domestic product figures by county for 1993 would normally have been published in December 1995 in Economic Trends. However, extensive revisions to the figures for earlier years are necessary due to source data on the new standard industrial classification, SIC(92), becoming available. Since these data became available very late, it was not possible to produce county estimates at that time. The county figures will now be published by the end of March 1996.

VAT (Computerised Access Equipment)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement regarding reinterpretation of the VAT legislation in relation to VAT exemption on computerised access equipment for blind and partially sighted computer users. [12397]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Customs and Excise has not made any reinterpretation of VAT law. Specialised adaptations specifically for disabled people are relieved from VAT when supplied to a disabled person. General purpose computer equipment is, and always has been, liable to VAT.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11449]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Departmental expenditure on administration is included in the running costs published in the departmental report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's departments.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11452]

Mrs. Knight: Departmental expenditure on newspapers and magazines is included in the running costs published in the departmental report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's departments.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11370]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Expenditure on telephone costs by Her Majesty's Treasury, and agencies and non-departmental public bodies associated with HM Treasury, are included in the running costs published for the Department and each agency.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11368]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Expenditure on publicity for HM Treasury, and the agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, is included in the running costs published for the Department and each agency.

ECOFIN

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent Council meeting of the Economic and Finance Ministers of the European Union. [12926]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I represented the UK at the Economic and Finance Council of the European Union in Brussels on 22 January.

There was a public debate on the incoming Italian presidency's work programme. The Italian programme concentrates on continuing work towards economic and monetary union and fighting unemployment. I agreed with both these priorities and in particular stressed the importance of member states creating the right conditions to stimulate employment. I also encouraged the Council to respect EC budgetary restraints and to make rapid progress in the campaign against fraud and waste within the Community.

The Commission presented a proposal for extending the mandate for the European investment bank to lend to Asia and Latin America, which expired at the end of 1995, for one year. There was no discussion and the Council will return to this at a later date.

Earnings (London)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the average (a) weekly earnings, (b) total hours, (c) average hourly earnings and (d) median hourly earnings, including and excluding overtime, for (i) all part-time females and (ii) all part-time males on adult rates in each London borough, broken down to show (A) manual and (B) non-manual workers; [11860]

(2) what proportion of employees on adult rates earn less than (a) £3.20, (b) £3.50, (c) £4, (d) £4.60 and (e) £6 per hour in each London borough, including and excluding overtime for (i) all full-time males, (ii) all part-time males, (iii) all full-time females and (iv) all part-time females on adult rates, broken down to show manual and non-manual workers; [11858]

(3) if he will list the proportion of full-time employees on adult rates with weekly earnings of less than (a) £150, (b) £200 and (c) £250 per week, including and excluding overtime, in each London borough for all full-time (i) females and (ii) males on adult rates broken down to show manual and non-manual workers. [11859]

Mrs. Angela Knight: As the information is contained in a number of tables, I will place a copy in the Library of the House.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public funds of each agreement. [9740]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Due to the very low demand for mobile and car phones within HM Treasury, the office of the Paymaster General and the Royal Mint, they have been purchased as required.

The Central Statistical Office employs an enabling agreement with BT which is renewable annually. This does not involve a commitment to purchase an agreed total. Two car phones have been purchased in the current financial year at a cost of £400 per instrument.

The Valuation Office uses Inland Revenue procedures to obtain mobile and car phones. Current agreements are with DVH, FGE, BT and Vodafone. These agreements are short term and are based on best value for money, without a commitment to purchase any specific number of instruments.

Information concerning the cost to public funds of these agreements is currently unavailable.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9742]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 17 January 1996]: HM Treasury, the office of HM Paymaster General, the Central Statistical Office, the Royal Mint and the Valuation Office have not withdrawn from any such contracts.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9741]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Due to the very low demand for mobile and car phones within HM Treasury, the office of the Paymaster General and the Royal Mint there has been no need to initiate a formal tender.

The Central Statistical Office employs an enabling agreement which was concluded after an informal evaluation of the market based on functionality, service and price.

The Valuation Office uses Inland Revenue procedures.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11369]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Information relating to the years 1979–80, 1989–90 and 1991–92 is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information relating to the other years requested is as follows:

| | 1993–94 | 1994–95 | 1995–96[1] |
|---|---|---|---|
| Absences (average days per member of staff) | 5.8 | 8.5 | 7.3 |

[1] To date.

Central Chancery of the Orders of Knighthood

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 610, how many staff are currently employed in maintaining the Central Chancery of the Orders of Knighthood; and how many insignia are accounted for in the 1994–95 costs of £204,000. [11566]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The Central Chancery of the Orders of Knighthood employs 11 staff. In 1994–95, 3,877 insignia were accounted for.

Finance Bills (Drafting)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pages of the Finance Bill were drafted otherwise than by parliamentary counsel; which were the outside agencies employed to draft sections of the Bill; how many pages were drafted by each agency; and how much was paid to each such agency for the pages drafted by it. [11946]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The following sections of the Finance Bill were drafted by the private sector:

| | Pages |
|---|---|
| Clauses 6 and 11, legislating two Customs and Excise extra-statutory concessionsMrs. Margaret Leates, a draftsman in private practice | 1 |
| Clauses 21 to 25 and Schedule 2, putting into UK law the second VAT directiveNabarro Nathanson | 11½ |
| Clause 146 and schedule 27, introducing new arrangements for the deduction of tax on foreign dividends by paying and collecting agentsFreshfields | 14 |
| Clause 186 and schedule 35, legislating 11 Inland Revenue extra-statutory concessionsMembers of Pump Court Tax Chambers | 6 |
| Total | [1]32½ |

[1] Thirty-one of these pages are in schedules which are set in the Finance Bill with a smaller typeface than the clauses.

The total payment to these draftsmen for work done up to the publication of the Bill is expected to be £130,000. This includes the cost of one page of legislation which Ministers decided, for policy reasons, not to include in this year's Bill.

The amount paid to each agency is a matter of commercial confidence.

VAT (Disabled People)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the levying of VAT on computer and computer-related equipment purchased by disabled people and charities helping disabled people; if he will place a copy of the directive used by Customs and Excise head office to local offices regarding such imposition; and if he will make a statement. [12412]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 January 1996]: I have received a number of representations. Customs and Excise has not issued any general directive on the liability of computers supplied to disabled people. General purpose computer equipment is not, and never has been, relieved from VAT when supplied to disabled people. Relief is, however, available for adaptations designed to make it easier for disabled people to use the equipment. I have placed in the Library a copy of the Customs notice "VAT reliefs for people with disabilities", which is freely available in local VAT offices.

TRANSPORT

Air Traffic Control (Heathrow Airport)

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the recent changes in air traffic control procedures at Heathrow airport. [10671]

Mr. Norris: The Civil Aviation Authority is responsible for the provision of air traffic control at Heathrow airport. My noble Friend the Minister of Aviation and Shipping has asked the chairman of the CAA to write to the hon. Member.

Regional Airports

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what provisions exist in respect of local authority-owned regional airports from borrowing money for airport development. [11305]

Mr. Norris: Capital finance for local authority-owned airports in England and Wales is governed by part IV of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. This applies directly in the case of the smaller airports. In the case of the larger airports, which are structured as public airport companies, part IV has been applied by the Public Airport Companies (Capital Finance) Order 1990, as amended. It is open to local authorities to make use of their basic credit approvals or of any other forms of credit cover available to them under the 1989 Act. For public airport companies, this includes in particular their undistributed profits. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport may issue supplementary credit approvals—SCAs—for specified projects. For Scotland, borrowing consents under section 94 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973 may be considered.

Lorry Ban, London

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to repiace the London lorry ban permit scheme. [11224]

Mr. Norris: I will discuss the next steps with the local authorities and other interested parties once I have received and considered the interim report form the consultants studying the options for improving the enforcement of the ban.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11913]

Mr. Norris: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and the Transport Research Laboratory have been symbol users for some time. The Department is encouraging its other agencies to follow suit while actively working with the Employment Service towards adopting the symbol centrally as a demonstration of on-going commitment towards achieving equality of opportunity for disabled people.

Flight Permits

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department has taken against Air Ops in respect of its operating passenger-carrying flights from the United Kingdom in 1993 without permits. [12176]

Mr. Norris: Permits for these flights in the summer of 1993 were issued to Sultan Air on the understanding that Air Operations of Europe—Air Ops—was operating under a wet lease agreement with that airline. It was not until October 1994 that it emerged that the lease agreement might have been terminated before the flights took place. As announced on 10 January, the Department has now reviewed its permit procedures to clarify permit and safety responsibilities as regards applications involving the use of wet-leased aircraft.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what circumstances airports can be (a) empowered and (b) required to impound aircraft arriving without permits. [12175]

Mr. Norris: There are powers under article 107 of the Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995 enabling the detention of aircraft which are likely to be flown in breach of article 102 of the order. Powers also exist under section 48 of the Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 that enable the detention of aircraft which arrive in the UK when they are prohibited from doing so in the circumstances described in the above section of the Act.

Coastguard Service

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to replace auxiliary coastguards with watch assistants; [12193]

(2) what changes have taken place in the level of coastguard station officers over the last year; and if he will make a statement. [12192]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 30 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Coastguard Station Officers and Auxiliaries.

The Coastguard Agency intends to introduce a new permanent grade of Coastguard Watch Assistant. This new grade will replace the part time voluntary service currently provided in operations rooms by Auxiliary Coastguards and will enhance the reliability, training and expertise at this level. It is hoped that many of the present Auxiliaries will apply for the new post.

There have been no changes to the number of Coastguard Station Officer posts over the last year.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what additional development is projected as a result of the Newbury bypass. [12095]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for the local planning authorities.

Track Access Charges

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out all the powers of the rail regulator to compel a change in Railtrack's track access charges before the quinquennial review and to publish the documents in which they are contained. [12014]

Mr. Watts: The terms on which the regulator can make changes to the charges made to passenger train operating companies are set out in schedule 7 to the track access agreements. These agreements are on the public register of agreements held by the regulator.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contingency plans he has for the modernisation of the west coast main line if the proposed development of a transmission-based signalling system proves not to be viable. [12287]

Mr. Watts: A major priority of the modernisation of the west coast main line for Railtrack is to maintain and renew the network by using modern technology. During initial studies on the modernisation of the line, more conventional signalling systems were considered alongside the proposed transmission-based signalling system which Railtrack has chosen.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is his estimate of the cost of resignalling the west coast main line using the proposed transmission-based signalling system; and what are the financial savings anticipated from its introduction; [12286]

(2) how many companies are included on the shortlist for the development of the transmission-based signalling system proposed for the west coast main line; and if he will list them; [12284]

(3) by what dates he will require signalling manufacturers, awarded contracts, to develop the transmission-based signalling system proposed for the west coast main line to complete or demonstrate (a) system design, (b) proof of performance, (c) safety validated working system and (d) manufacture of production equipment. [12283]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack is currently considering bids for the contract to develop the proposed transmission-based signalling system for the west coast main line. The system is expected to reduce maintenance and operating costs and provide improved reliability on the line. The other information requested is commercially confidential to Railtrack.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has for a transmission-based signalling system to be installed at major rail junctions on the west coast main line; [12280]

(2) what assessment he has made of the performance record of the transmission-based signalling technology proposed for the west coast main line; where it is in use elsewhere; how many miles of track it controls; and if it is in use at any rail junctions with traffic densities similar to those on the west coast main line. [12285]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack intends to introduce a transmission-based signalling system to the west coast main line as part of the core modernisation programme for the line. Railtrack informs me that the transmission-based signalling technology is currently employed in differing forms in various parts of the world, but it is not identical to the system planned for the west coast main line. For this reason, Railtrack intends to let development contracts for the signalling system during the first quarter of this year.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to authorise expenditure on signalling technology for the modernisation of the west coast main line prior to its capability being proven. [12278]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack will fund the core modernisation programme of the west coast main line, which includes the proposed new signalling system for the line, from the track access charges which it receives from passenger train operators. The level of these charges over the six years from 1995 has been agreed by the regulator.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many signalling manufacturers have expressed reservations to him about the viability of the proposed introduction of a transmission-based signalling system on the west coast main line. [12279]

Mr. Watts: None.

Pollution Control

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to expand aerial surveillance of the extended sea limits in respect of pollution control; and if he will make a statement. [12463]

Mr. Norris: The use of aerial surveillance will continue to be reviewed to ensure that it remains a cost-effective method of enforcing marine pollution regulations within the waters under UK jurisdiction, including any future extension to this jurisdiction.

Trains (Telephones)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if all trains are equipped with two-way telephones. [12384]

Mr. Watts: No. Installation of the line-side transmitter equipment for the national radio network is virtually complete. The planned engineering target is 98 per cent. of the network excluding tunnels and cuttings. Most modern train cabs have also been fitted with the necessary equipment.

In the former Network SouthEast area, British Rail has decided to fit the cab secure radio system, so that further modifications will not be necessary when driver-only operation is extended. About 65 per cent. of passenger train miles in the Network SouthEast area already have cab secure radio.

Expenditure (Representations)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received following the announcement on 19 December 1995 of transport supplementary costs and credit approvals for transport expenditure by local authorities from (a) hon. Members, (b) local authorities and (c) other organisations and individuals. [12387]

Mr. Norris: I have received 49 representations, including 30 parliamentary questions, from hon. Members following the announcement on 19 December. My officials are in regular correspondence with local authorities and others about transport policies and programme—TPP—submissions and about particular schemes. We have had 22 representations from local authorities and 12 from organisations and individuals, often about specific schemes.

Bus Deregulation (Manchester)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the effects of bus deregulation in the Greater Manchester area over the last five years. [12301]

Mr. Norris: Deregulation has brought great benefits to bus travellers in Greater Manchester as it has elsewhere in the country. There are now more operators running more bus miles at lower cost, with new buses on many routes, and significantly less public subsidy than previously.

London Transport Staff

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 17 January, Official Report, column 615, what were the occupations of the staff who have left London Transport's employment since 12 November 1994; and if he will list them by category. [12759]

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for London Transport.

Car Mileages

Sir Timothy Sainsbury: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the average annual and daily mileage travelled by (a) a car commuter and (b) a car shopper. [12699]

Mr. Norris: The average annual car commuting mileage of a person who normally travels to work in a car was 3,040 miles in 1992–94, consisting of an average of 348 single-way journeys of 8.7 miles mean length. The average annual car shopping mileage of a driver in a car-owning household was 970 miles in 1992–94, consisting of an average of 186 single-way journeys of 5.2 miles mean length.

Indian Sub-continent (Travellers)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, columns 270–71, what is his assessment as to the reasons for the increase in arrivals and departures to the Indian sub-continent in the last two years. [12524]

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport does not make assessments of the sort requested.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11462]

Mr. Norris:

(a) 1993–94: £375,000

(b) 1994–95: £140,000

(c) 1995–96: £125,000

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11459]

Mr. Norris: Figures of my Department's expenditure on administration for (b) to (g) can be found in the transport report 1995, Cm 2806, which is available in the House of Commons Library. My final outturn figures for (e) and projected outturn figures for (f) will be presented in the transport report 1996, which is due to be published in the latter part of March. My Department's latest budget figure for (g) is £373 million.

Running costs figures for Departments were not calculated on the same basis prior to 1989–90, so comparable figures for (a) are not readily available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. [11458]

Mr. Norris: The table represents an estimate of expenditure on hospitality and entertainment by the Department of Transport (central transport group), its agencies, and non-departmental public bodies for the years specified. Figures for 1979–80 and forecasts for 1996–97 are not available. Figures for 1995–96 are forecast outturns based on current expenditure and may include some non-entertainment costs which cannot readily be desegregated.

| | 1989–90 | 1991–92 | 1993–94 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Central Transport Group | 114,016 | 170,015 | 234,986 |
| Agencies | 4,586 | 28,143 | 40,718 |
| Non-departmental public bodies | 5,375 | 33,542 | 37,144 |

| | 1994–95 | 1995–96 |
|---|---|---|
| Central Transport Group | 127,248 | 202,524 |
| Agencies | 91,828 | 97,370 |
| Non Departmental public bodies | 25,903 | 34,768 |

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11461]

Mr. Norris: Information in the form requested is not available.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, *(e)*1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11460]

Mr. Norris: Prior to 1990, the civil estate was managed by the Property Service Agency. Its archived records can be accessed only at disproportionate cost.

The estimated annual cost of the vacant and under-utilised space on the Department of Transport's civil estate, excluding that for which the Department of the Environment's property holdings division is responsible, is:

| Year | Vacant space £ | Under-utilised space £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1991–92 | 1,200 | 15,000 |
| 1993–94 | 1,289,000 | 45,000 |
| 1994–95 | 2,037,900 | 45,000 |
| 1995–96 | 2,657,600 | 40,000 |
| 1996–97 | 3,674,300 | 1,185,200 |

Rail Stations (Assaults)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was (a) the total number of assaults and (b) the number of assaults on women at rail stations in each year since 1990 by local authority area. [10522]

Mr. Watts: The information requested is not available in the format requested. However, the table details the number of notifiable assaults and assaults by gender at rail stations for 1994 and 1995, broken down by British Transport police areas. Similar information for previous years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official

Report, column 32, about British Rail businesses which have been sold, whether he will give in respect of each business (a) the number of people employed by the business at the time of its sale, (b) the number of employees of the business made redundant by british Rail between 1 January 1993 and the date of its sale, (c) the cost to British Rail of these redundancy payments, (d) the name and address of the businesses' new owner and (e) the sum of money paid by the new owner to acquire the business; and what has been the total sum received to date from the sale of British Rail assets and rail franchises since the Railways Act 1993 received Royal Assent, listing all assets and franchises sold which did not appear in the answer. [11736]

Mr. Watts: In relation to the three franchises which have been awarded, the details requested in parts (a) to (c) of the question are matters for the British Railways Board. The details requested in part (d) are: the Great Western Trains franchise was awarded to Great Western Holdings Ltd., Milford house, Milford street, Swindon, SN1 1DW; the LTS Rail franchise was awarded to Enterprise Rail of Central house, Clifftown road, Southend-on-Sea, SS1 1AB; and the South West Trains franchise was awarded to Stagecoach Holdings plc of Charlotte house, 20 Charlotte street, Perth, PH1 5LL.

In relation to the sales of BR businesses, the details requested in parts (a) to (d) are matters for the British Railways Board.

In relation to the sales of the three rolling stock leasing companies, the details requested in parts (b) and (c) are for the British Railways Board. The details requested in parts (a) and (d) are:

Angel Train Leasing Ltd. Fifty-five staff were employed at the time of sale. The address of the registered office is Mitre house, 160 Aldersgate street, London, EC1A 4DD;

Eversholt Leasing Ltd. Sale due to be completed shortly: Fifty-eight staff currently employed. The address is 9th floor, 1 Eversholt street, London NW1 1DN;

Porterbrook Leasing Ltd. Forty-seven staff were employed at the time of sale. The address is Burdett house, Beckett street, Derby, DE1 1JP.

In relation to the figures requested in part (e) and the final part of the question: the first three franchises were awarded as contracts to run services in return for the payment of grant and will not generate receipts for the Government; gross proceeds from the sales to date of other BR businesses amount to some £266 million. There have been no further sales of such businesses since 9 January. As explained in the Government's response of 14 December 1995 to the Transport Committee's fourth report, on railway finances, it would be contrary to the commercial interests of British Rail and the Government to publish details of individual sales at this stage, as that may prejudice similar sales still in progress. Details of individual sales completed by BR will be made public in due course.

The sale of the three rolling stock leasing companies have generated, or will generate on completion, receipts as follows: Angel Train Leasing Ltd., sale completed 17 January 1996—£696 million; Eversholt Leasing Ltd., sale due to be completed shortly—£580 million, including £80 million deferred and contingent; and Porterbrook Leasing, Ltd., sale completed 8 January 1996—£572 million.

The proceeds of the sales to date amount to some £2,114 million.

Transport and the Environment

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish his response to "Transport and the Environment", the 18th report of the royal commission on environmental pollution; and if he will make a statement. [12401]

Mr. Norris: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 7 November, Official Report, column 755.

Electrification Scheme (West Yorkshire)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take action to ensure leasing arrangements are put into place to enable new rolling stock to be acquired and operated under the west Yorkshire electrification scheme; and if he will make a statement. [12258]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 29 January]: The acquisition of new rolling stock is a matter for the train operator, in conjunction with the West Yorkshire passenger train executives, to discuss with rolling stock leasing companies.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has called for reports into recent incidents concerning the failure of rolling stock being operated under the west Yorkshire electrification scheme; what subsequent action he has taken; and if he will make a statement. [12257]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 29 January]: An incident on 17 November, when there was an electrical explosion on a class 308 electric multiple unit, has been reported to the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate, and an investigation by railway research staff is being monitored by HSE inspectors. All the trains in service have been examined and the inspectorate is satisfied that the necessary measures are in place to allow them to be used safely.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Pakistan

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Pakistan concerning child labour. [12299]

Mr. Hanley: We regularly express our concerns to the Government of Pakistan about child labour. We welcome recent steps that they have taken to improve the situation on bonded and child labour, such as widening access to schooling and the setting up of vigilance committees. However, we recognise that much remains to be done to resolve the problem.

Endangered Species (Hong Kong)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he made to the Chinese authorities on his recent visit regarding the future protection of endangered species in Hong Kong. [12335]

Mr. Hanley: The Chinese agreed in December 1991 that the United Nations convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora—CITES—would continue to apply to Hong Kong after the transfer of sovereignty on 1 July 1997. Hong Kong's strict customs controls and legislation on endangered species will also continue to apply. Therefore, no such representations were made, since these would not have added to the strong safeguards that already exist.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspaper and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11442]

Mr. Hanley: Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing expenditure in the UK on newspapers and magazines was as follows:

1993–94: £95,631

1994–95: £101,909

1995–96: £77,395 (to the end December)

Additionally, posts overseas spent the following on books, periodicals and newspapers. Figures for 1995–96 will be available only at the end of the financial year.

1993–94: £1,072,972

1994–95: £1,104,409

Figures for newspapers and magazines alone, purchased overseas, could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Overseas Development Administration does not maintain separate records of expenditure on newspapers and magazines alone. Expenditure on all publications, including books, newspapers and journals, by the ODA including the Natural Resources Institute, was as follows:

1993–94: £244,857

1995–96: £196,776 (to date)

The FCO buys a very wide selection of publications in the UK and from around the world. A list could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11439]

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to appendix A of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office departmental report for 1995—Cm 2802—and previous years, copies of which can be found in the Library of the House. Our 1996 departmental report will be published in March. Information on expenditure in 1979–80 can be obtained from the FCO diplomatic and aid wings appropriation accounts 1979–80, which is also available in the Library of the House. When comparing expenditure over different periods, it should be noted that there have been a number of structural changes in the FCO since 1979–80 which are explained in the departmental reports and appropriation accounts.

Departmental Property

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11440]

Mr. Hanley: Since 1989–90 the only cost to the FCO diplomatic wing for empty or under-utilised properties in the UK was incurred in 1995–96. Both freehold properties concerned are being sold. Rents—payable to property holdings—amounted to £98,173 with a further £114,444 contribution in lieu of rates. There were offsetting savings of £34,000 from lettings on both sites. Information in respect of 1979–80 is not available.

In respect of the overseas estate, the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. It is departmental policy to dispose of vacant or under-utilised elements of the overseas estate as quickly and as cost-effectively as possible.

The ODA does not have any empty or under-utilised property.

Of the FCO's agencies and non-departmental public bodies, only the Natural Resources Institute has empty or under-utilised property and it will write to the hon. Member with full details. The information requested in respect of the British Council could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Anthony Beattie to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 29 January 1996:

I have been asked by Mr. Hanley to reply for the Natural Resources Institute to your question to the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs about the cost of empty and under-utilised accommodation.

The Institute, which was formed by the amalgamation of a number of scientific units of the Overseas Development Administration, became a Next Steps agency on 1 April 1990.

When the Institute moved to Chatham in the period 1988–1990, a site at Culham in Oxfordshire became surplus to requirements. Disposal of the site, which was originally acquired by the Crown for wartime use as an airfield, has been complicated by both legal and planning issues. These have been resolved and the site is now in the process of sale.

Pending disposal, the Institute pays rent at an assessed rate to Property Holdings (Department of the Environment). The cost to the Institute, (but not to the Exchequer) has been some £366,000 per annum, this figure being reduced in 1995–96 to £277,000 following a reassessment. The running costs of the site (primarily maintenance and security) come to some £35,000 a year. We expect to dispose of the property by the end of this financial year, although planning restrictions will limit the realisable value.

As regards the Chatham site itself, a view has been taken of future accommodation requirements in the light of the first triennial review of NRI as an agency (completed 1993) and a subsequent review of business prospects up to the end of the century. These studies have also formed the basis of the current offer of the Institute for sale.

The Institute's declining requirement for accommodation has enabled us to let accommodation to the University of Greenwich, thus securing an income of some £900,000 in 1994–95 and an estimated £1.3 million in 1995–96.

Our objective in the context of restructuring and sale of the Institute is further to reduce our accommodation to some 6,400 square metres (compared with a total site area in excess of 17,000 square metres), thereby releasing space for letting to other users.

I trust the above provides the information you require.

Official Trade Missions

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he makes of political circumstances, and what weight he attaches to human rights abuses, when deciding whether official trade missions should take place. [12289]

Mr. Hanley: Decisions to send official trade missions are taken in the light of a number of factors, including the political and economic situation of the country concerned, the commercial opportunities for British companies and their interest in the market. Trade missions are briefed by British diplomatic posts on all relevant aspects of the country's political situation including its human rights record.

Diplomatic Service (Science-related Posts)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the (a) costs and (b) the number of science-related posts in the diplomatic service for each year since 1979. [12325]

Mr. Hanley: The costs, including salaries, allowances, travel costs and accommodation, and numbers for science-related posts in the diplomatic service are as follows:

| | Numbers | £ cost |
|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 24.4 | 2,240,586 |
| 1994–95 | 24.4 | 2,313,237 |

Details for previous years are not readily available and could not be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the planned (a) expenditure on and (b) cost of science-related posts in the diplomatic service over the next three years. [12326]

Mr. Hanley: The forecast total cost and expenditure for science-related posts in the diplomatic service over the next three financial years are as follows:

1995–96: £2,174,000
1996–97: £2,139,906
1997–98: £2,193,404

European Union Staff

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes will take place in European Union staff numbers as a result of enlargement; what changes were originally forecast; what is the average length of service of those receiving redundancy; how the cost of redundancy is related to length of service; and what is the average length of service of those receiving redundancy per head in respect of (a) permanent staff, (b) temporary staff, (c) professional staff and (d) clerical and other staff. [10347]

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 22 January 1996]: On 1 January 1995, the EU enlarged to 15 member states with the accession of Austria, Finland and Sweden. Many of the new posts created as a result have not yet been filled. The final changes as a result of enlargement are therefore not yet known.

The forecast staff numbers are agreed by the Council in the budget. The table lists the successive budgets which have increased staff numbers, at least in part as a result of enlargement.

Table 1: Staff numbers in EU institutions as amended by successive budgets

| | 1994 | 1995 | 1995 | 1995 | 1996 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Total staff | Budget increase | Supplementary budget increase | Total staff | Budget increase |
| Court of Justice | 837 | 0 | 113 | 950 | 0 |
| Court of Auditors | 427 | 31 | 45 | 503 | 0 |
| Economic and Social Committee and Committee of the Regions | 599 | 62 | 55 | 716 | 0 |
| Council | 2,304 | 75 | 86 | 2,465 | 42 |
| Commission | 14,918 | 650 | 268 | 15,836 | 193 |

1. Only a part of the 1995 budget increase in staff numbers were in response to enlargement.
2. The 1995 supplementary budget staff increases were almost all due to enlargement.
3. The increase in Commission staff for 1996 is divided mainly between enlargement (95 staff) and fraud prevention. The Council increase is mostly for enlargement.

Source:
Report of the Budget Committee to COREPER, on the 1996 budgetary procedure, 7 July 1995. Ref 8770/95.

With the latest enlargement, the European Parliament grew by 59 new MEPs. From 1995 to 1997, it will be taking on 335 extra staff, 157 for translation and interpreting.

Following enlargement only, the European Parliament has a redundancy programme. The programme was agreed by the Budget Council on 17 November 1995 and runs for five years. It is therefore too early to say what the average length of service is for those staff being made redundant. However, the programme is open only to "fonctionnaires"—permanent staff—with more than 10 years' service, and "agents temporaire"—on fixed-term contracts—with more than 15 years' service. The minimum age for fonctionnaires to be eligible for the scheme is 55. For agents temporaire, it is 50.

The cost of redundancy is not related to the length of service. Redundant staff receive 70 per cent. of their basic pay until the age of 65, or until they are entitled to receive a full pension, whichever is earlier.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Access to Work

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 14 December, Official Report, column 738, what guidelines her Department has issued to placing, assessment and counselling team managers and regional PACT managers on the funding of access to work. [12216]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 30 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about guidelines to Placing, Assessment and Counselling Team (PACT) and regional PACT managers on the funding of Access to Work.

Funding for Access to Work is devolved to regions. PACT managers and regional PACT managers have general guidance on the management of budgets and, from the outset of Access to Work, they have had specific guidance on the management of Access to Work resources.

Since the Secretary of State's announcement on 14 December 1995 we have issued further guidance to ensure that resources are being targeted in line with the announcement.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the funds allocated to (a) access to work schemes and (b) the supported employment schemes are cash limited in (i) the present financial year and (ii) 1996–97 financial year. [11975]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Dafydd Wigley, dated 30 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Education and Employment has asked me to reply to your question about whether the funds allocated to the Access to Work and Supported Employment programmes are cash limited.

I can confirm funds allocated to Access to Work and to Supported Employment programmes are part of a cash limited Vote in both the present and the 1996–97 financial years.

However, as a Next Steps Agency the Employment Service has specific financial flexibilities, which enable me to switch provision in-year between programmes, within the overall Vote. Exercising these flexibilities are subject to HM Treasury confirmation.

I hope this is helpful.

Equal Pay Act 1970 (Claims)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many new claims were initiated under the 1983 equal value amendment to the Equal Pay Act 1970 in each year since 1983; how many were successful; and what was the average length of each case; [10520]

(2) how many new claims have been initiated under Equal Pay Act 1970 in each year since 1970; how many were successful; and what was the average length of each case. [10521]

Mrs. Gillan: The precise information requested is not available.

The Equal Pay Act 1970 came into effect on 29 December 1975. Statistics showing the number of equal pay cases disposed of in each year since 1976, and the number of successful cases in each of those years, are shown in the following table.

| Year | Equal pay cases disposed of[1] | Number successful[2] |
|---|---|---|
| 1976 | 1,742 | 213 |
| 1977 | 751 | 91 |
| 1978 | 343 | 24 |
| 1979 | 263 | 13 |

| 1991 | 227 | 5 |
| 1992 | 240 | 21 |
| 1993 | 780 | 19 |
| Total | 8,215 | 563 |

[1] Many equal pay cases typically consist of a single complaint to which is linked a number of identical claims made by colleagues of the complainant who are employed by the same employer. When a tribunal disposes of a complainant's case, all other cases linked to it are disposed of in the same way and are recorded as such in tribunal statistics.

[2] This column records the actual number of successful complaints decided by tribunals. The figures do not include linked complaints which were not actually heard by tribunals.

Mr. Squire: Information is not held in the form that has been requested.

However, the Department for Education and Employment currently has 14 empty properties costing around £2.1 million per annum. Only marginal changes are expected in 1996–97. Figures for earlier years could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

For the Department's agencies, the Employment Service currently has 143 empty properties currently costing around £7 million per annum. Most of these have arisen from integrating benefit offices and jobcentres. Figures for earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In the five years to March 1995, 840 properties were disposed of.

Information on the Department's non-departmental public bodies could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

For properties occupied by the Department but which currently form part of the common user estate, reference should be made to the answer provided by the Secretary of State for the Environment.

The Public Trust Office became an Agency on 1 July 1994 and the figures prior to that date will be included in our departmental Headquarters response. The estimated expenditure from 1 July 1994 are as follows:

1 July 1994–95: £530

1995–96: £685

1996–97: £705

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

Parliamentary question—expenditure on hospitality and entertainment in HM Land Registry.

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment, I can provide the following information for the years quoted:

(a) 1979–80: £747

(b) 1989–90: £6,299

(c) 1991–92: £13,993

(d) 1993–94: 7,083

(e) 1994–95: £12,888

(f) 1995–96: £8,622 (at 31 December 1995)

(g) 1996–97: Estimated expenditure figures for 1996–97 are not yet available. The annual non-staff budget setting process is currently taking place and the Land Registry Budget Committee has yet to decide the final budget allocation.

Letter from Dr. Elizabeth Hallam Smith to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, who is away from the Office on official business, I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about expenditure on hospitality and entertainment in the agencies for which he is responsible.

Expenditure since 1993–94 has been:

1993–94: £8,298

1994–95: £6,752

1995–96: £7,120

1996–97: £8,220 (budget)

Figures for earlier years could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11499]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor's Department does not keep comprehensive financial records for empty or under-used properties on the departmental estate and the information required could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, or is not available. The chief executives for each of the Department's agencies will be responding separately.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to the above Question about the cost to the Court Service of empty or under used property.

The Court Service does not keep comprehensive financial records for empty or under used properties on the Departmental Estate and the information required could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 19 January 1996, regarding the estimated cost of empty and under utilised buildings for the years 1979–80, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1993–94, 1995–96 and 1996–97.

The Public Trust Office does not have any empty or under-utilised buildings.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on estimates of the costs of empty and under-utilised properties.

I understand that the Property Holding Division of the Department of the Environment will provide central figures for Common User Estate vacant space from 1990/91 to date. Figures prior to then are held by the Property Services Agency who, I am informed, could only access this information at disproportionate cost.

As to Land Registry accommodation that is not Common User Estate, I can provide the following estimates of costs of empty property for the years quoted:

(a) 1979–80: Nil

(b) 1989–90: Nil

(c) 1991–92: £15,200

(d) 1993–94: £244,360

(e) 1994–95: £240,099

(f) 1995–96: £379,728

(g) 1996–97: £397,931

The 1996–97 estimate represents the maximum potential costs over the full twelve month period. The properties are being actively marketed and the actual annual costs are likely to be lower.

Surplus accommodation has arisen in the Land Registry following reductions in its staff of some 3400 from the 1989–90 peak.

The Land Registry does not maintain any central records of the costs of under-utilised properties and this information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about the cost of empty and under-utilised properties in the agencies for which he is responsible.

The properties of the Public Record Office form part of the Common User Estate. Since 1979, none has been empty or under-utilised.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11502]

Mr. Evans: Details of my Department's running costs and administrative spending for the year 1979–80 are contained in table 3.9 of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1985–86 to 1987–88", volume II (Cm 9428-II); figures for the years 1989–90 to 1997–98 are contained in table 4 of my Department's annual report published in March 1995 (Cm 2809). Copies of these documents are available in the Members' Library.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply in respect of the Court Service to your Question about estimated annual expenditure on administration.

The estimated annual figures for expenditure on administration for the Court Service from 3 April 1995, the date on which the Court Service was established, are:

1995–1996: £32,307,000

1996–1997: £31,600,000.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 19 January 1996, regarding the estimated expenditure on administration for the years 1979–80, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97.

The Public Trust Office became and Agency on 1 July 1994 and the administration costs prior to that date can be found in the Lord Chancellor's Department's Departmental Report. The Annual Report for 1994–95 provides details of expenditure for that year, a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library, however the figure for that year and the estimate for 1995–96 and 1996–97 are given below.

1994–95: £18.5 million

1995–96: £19.76 million (estimate)

1996–97: £19.48 million (estimate)

It is worth noting that the Public Trust Office is required to cover its cost by fee income.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11503]

Mr. Evans: Except for the Legal Aid Board—established on 1 April 1989—which incurred £4,215 of such expenditure in 1994–95, expenditure on overseas travel and accommodation is not monitored separately in my Department and non-departmental public bodies and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. We estimate that the maximum spent in any one year is no more than £35,000. Since this is an operational matter, I have asked the chief executives of the Court Service and Public Trust Office to reply direct for the years since they became agencies.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply in respect of the Court Service to your Question about estimated annual overseas travel and accommodation expenditure.

The Court Service does not have a budget for overseas travel, accommodation and expenses. Consequently, the estimated expenditure for the financial year 1995–96 is nil and no allocation has been provided for the financial year 1996–97.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 19 January 1996, regarding the estimated expenditure for overseas travel for the years 1979–80, 1989–90, 1991–92, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97.

The Public Trust Office became an Agency on 1 July 1994, prior to which no separate figures are available for the cost of overseas travel, however, the estimated costs for 1994 onwards are as follows:

1994–95: No overseas travel

1995–96: £4,900

1996–97: £8,850

Letter from Dr. Elizabeth Hallam Smith to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive, who is away from the Office on official business, I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about expenditure on overseas travel, overseas accommodation and associated expenses in the executive agencies for which he is responsible.

The Public Record Office does not keep separate figures for overseas travel, accommodation and associated expenses. It has found from its experience in calculating 1994–95 expenditure (which was £7,708) in response to an earlier Parliamentary Question (12 July 1995, Official Report, Column 600), that such figures could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question on expenditure on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses. I can provide the following information for the years quoted:

(a) 1979–80: Figures are not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost:

(b) 1989–90: Figures are not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost:

(c) 1991–92: Figures are not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost:

(d) 1993–94: £3780

(e) 1994–95: £8084

(f) 1995–96: £2550 (at 31.12.95)

(g) 1996–97: Estimated expenditure figures for 1996–97 are not yet available. The annual non-staff budget setting process is currently taking place and the Land Registry Budget Committee has yet to decide the final budget allocation.

Legal Aid

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what consideration the Lord Chancellor has given to removing responsibility for the grant of criminal legal aid from the magistrates courts. [13087]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This question highlights a difficult problem to which the Lord Chancellor has accorded high priority for a considerable time.

The Legal Aid Act 1988 vests in the magistrates courts the function of deciding on the grant or refusal of legal aid in criminal cases. In the performance of their functions the courts act independently of any Government Department.

In December 1993 my predecessor explained to the House that the Comptroller and Auditor General had repeatedly qualified his opinion on the Department's appropriation account because of material uncertainty as to whether the regulations governing the grant of criminal legal aid were being applied with sufficient rigour. He affirmed to the House that in no circumstances could any irregularity in dispensing public money be acceptable, and he recounted the measures that had been taken to rectify matters.

Among them was an examination of the feasibility of transferring the function to the Legal Aid Board. My predecessor explained to the House his reasons for declining to take that step at that time, and he undertook to give further consideration to that and alternative measures if other continuing action failed to achieve an acceptable result.

The Comptroller and Auditor General has again qualified his opinion of the 1994–95 appropriation account. During the last two years a number of statutory and administrative changes have been made, with the help and co-operation of the Legal Aid Board and the Justices' Clerks Society. The results have been closely audited both by my Department and by the National Audit Office. I am pleased to report that significant improvements in the levels of compliance with the regulations have recently become apparent. The improvement is marked enough to give reason to think that satisfactorily high levels of compliance could be achieved under the present arrangements, although further marked improvements are needed to achieve that result.

The Lord Chancellor has now proposed more fundamental reforms of the legal aid scheme as a whole, as described last year in the Green Paper "Legal Aid—Targeting Need". In these circumstances I do not propose any earlier change in the arrangements for the grant of criminal legal aid in the magistrates courts, so long as the improvement in compliance with the regulations is maintained. I will announce our intentions regarding the wider reforms when our consideration of the public responses to the Green Paper has been completed.

ENVIRONMENT

Internal Combustion Engines (Emissions)

16. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the level of the noxious emissions from internal combustion engines in 1995 in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [10383]

Mr. Clappison: Actual emissions for 1995 are not yet available but a forecast for 1995 based on national road traffic forecasts and the emissions performance of both old and new vehicles has been made. On this basis, we predict that total emissions from road vehicles will fall this year and again next year.

Village Shops

17. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to preserve village shops in rural areas. [10384]

Mr. Gummer: The Government's plans for preserving village shops and post offices in rural England are set out in the recently published White Paper "Rural England—A Nation Committed to a Living Countryside".

Housing Management (Compulsory Competitive Tendering)

18. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about his plans to extend compulsory competitive tendering to housing management. [10385]

Mr. Curry: The implementation timetable for housing management CCT provides the work to be phased in. The timetable provides for contracts to be awarded between 1 April 1995 and 1 April 1998, depending upon the size of the authority and its state of preparedness for CCT. Authorities reorganised as a result of the review of local government are allowed an additional 18 months.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

19. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households have been assisted through the Government's home energy efficiency scheme during the last year; and what estimates he has been given by neighbourhood energy action for 1996–97 following the budget cut of £31 million. [10387]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The estimated number of grants for 1995–96 is 600,000. NEA, formerly known as Neighbourhood Energy Action, has suggested that 400,000 grants will be paid next year, but it has not stated its assumptions. We have announced changes in the grant level which will reduce the average grant per installation, while fully protecting low-income households. The provision for next year therefore provides scope for considerably more than 400,000 grants.

22. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households have benefited from home energy efficiency scheme payments over the past two financial years; and what payment he estimates will be made in the current financial year. [10390]

Mr. Jones: A total of 270,148 grants were paid under the home energy efficiency scheme in 1993–94, and 449,902 in 1994–95. In the present financial year, I estimate that £98 million will be paid out in grants to around 600,000 households.

District Auditor Service

20. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from local authorities regarding the role of the district auditor service. [10388]

Mr. Curry: I have had no such representations, although local authorities do raise audit matters with the Government from time to time.

Council Tax

21. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will increase the number of council tax bands. [10389]

Mr. Curry: I have no plans to do so.

City of Birmingham Housing Department

24. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date he approved the award of housing management contracts to the city of Birmingham housing department. [10391]

Mr. Clappison: The Secretary of State gave his consent to the city of Birmingham carrying out eight housing maintenance contracts on—18 October 1994 four contracts and on 20 November 1995 four contracts—as provided in a direction given to the council under section 19B of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980.

Regeneration Policies

26. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on current regeneration policies. [10394]

Mr. Curry: Our regeneration policies will focus on the single regeneration budget and this will continue to be distributed on a competitive basis.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

27. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what savings have been delivered by compulsory competitive tendering in the year 1994–95. [10395]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is not available on a yearly basis. On the basis of research by Birmingham university, it is estimated that average annual savings of 6.5 per cent. have been achieved on services so far subject to CCT.

Area Cost Adjustment

28. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for a public consultation on the findings of the review into the area cost adjustment. [10396]

Mr. Curry: We have asked the review team to produce a report by June this year with recommendations for determining the area cost adjustment of the standard spending assessment in a way which is conceptually sound, commands the widest possible acceptance among local authorities in all parts of the country and is practical to apply.

The report, which we are proposing should be available publicly, will be produced only after the review team has considered the representations and comments made to it by local government and other interested bodies and taking account of the results of the research that the review team require.

We shall consult, in the normal way, on any changes proposed to SSAs for future years which we consider should be made in the light of the review's report.

Homelessness

29. Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning his proposals to alter the housing priority for homeless families. [10397]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration to the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Raynsford) on 20 November 1995, Official Report, column 40.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he will publish his Department's evaluation of the homelessness code of guidance commissioned from Birmingham university in 1993; [12144]

(2) what evaluation he has made of the homelessness code of practice commissioned from Birmingham university; and what account he took of the condition of the report in drawing up his proposed homelessness legislation. [12145]

Mr. Clappison: The research, "Evaluation of the 1991 Homelessness Code of Guidance to Local Authorities", will be published shortly. Much of the research relates to matters which will not be affected by the reform of the homelessness legislation, but full account will be taken of the research in preparing a revised code of guidance.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of the provisions of the Housing Bill upon the numbers of homeless families accepted for temporary housing by local authorities. [12140]

Mr. Clappison: We expect to see a decline in the number of households accepted as statutorily homeless, both because the legislation will not provide a fast track into a permanent social tenancy and as a result of some applicants finding suitable alternative accommodation.

New Housing (Insulation Standards)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will commission further research into insulation standards in newly built housing in the United Kingdom. [10393]

Mr. Clappison: The Government already commission a programme of research into insulation standards in newly built housing, and will continue to do so.

Road Vehicles (Pollution)

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to deal with the long-term effect of pollution caused by road vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [10392]

Mr. Clappison: On 1 February, section 80 of the Environment Act will be commenced, requiring us to prepare and publish a national air quality strategy containing policies with respect to the assessment or management of the quality of the air. The strategy will include a chapter concerning transport policies.

Water Metering

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy that there will be no compulsory provision of metering as a basis for domestic water charges. [10382]

Mr. Clappison: It is for water companies to decide the most appropriate basis for charging in their areas. We wish to encourage companies and customers to consider switching to meters; we are not forcing them to do so.

Water Pipes (Repairs)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review his policy of making householders liable for the repair of water pipes outwith their property. [10379]

Mr. Gummer: The liability of householders for water pipes remain exactly as it was when the industry was nationalised.

Environment Centres

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many towns and cities in the United Kingdom (a) have established and (b) are in the process of establishing environment centres open to the public in line with agenda 21 as agreed at the Rio summit. [11236]

Mr. Clappison: My Department does not hold this information centrally.

Former Mineworkings, County Durham

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive and publish the results of the Coal Authority three-month trial to establish water flow patterns in former mineworkings in County Durham; and if he will make a statement. [11605]

Mr. Clappison: The results of the amended pumping regime are being monitored and assessed by the Coal Authority and the National Rivers Authority. If there are further changes in the pumping regime, I would expect that the Coal Authority will wish to make this known.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 83, on bids under the objective 1 process, if he will list the values of the bids approved for (a) the Wirral and (b) the Liverpool side of the river. [11893]

Sir Paul Beresford: Projects approved which are based in or being delivered directly in Wirral total £27,868,638, projects operating across more than one borough, including Wirral, or across Merseyside as a whole total £24,599,120, and projects in the rest of Merseyside total £85,518,781.

Renewal Areas (Research)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of research undertaken in his Department in the renewal areas; what changes have occurred in respect of work priorities in these areas as a consequence of the research; and when he expects to publish the research report. [12077]

Mr. Clappison: The research has now been completed and we are expecting the contractor to deliver a final version of the report at the end of this month. A decision will then be taken about its publication and the form of any further guidance that the Department might produce.

The 10 local authorities selected as case studies have been informed of the contractor's findings. It is up to each individual authority to decide whether its work priorities towards its renewal areas should change as a consequence of the research.

Hedgerows

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new initiatives he plans to stimulate the planting of hedgerows. [12181]

Mr. Clappison: Grants for planting new hedgerows are already available as part of both the environmentally sensitive areas scheme and countryside stewardship, which generally operates outside the ESAs. In the light of stewardship's successful pilot phase, and in advance of its transfer to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 1 April 1996, my right hon. Friend the Minister announced in November that an extra £5 million will be available for new management agreements under countryside stewardship for each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. This is in addition to the existing £11.625 million already available under the scheme.

Domestic Gas Appliances

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward measures to assist low-income households to service and repair gas appliances which are at risk of carbon monoxide discharges. [12441]

Sir Paul Beresford: No resources are available to assist householders to service and repair gas appliances. For those in rented accommodation, responsibility for the maintenance of gas appliances lies with landlords. Hence low-income households in this sector will not be liable for the maintenance of gas appliances in their homes.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the number of households with incomes of under £150 per week which have faulty gas appliances. [12440]

Sir Paul Beresford: No assessment has been made of the number of low-income households with faulty gas appliances. However, the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1994 impose a responsibility on landlords to ensure that gas appliances in rented accommodations are maintained in good order and serviced annually. These regulations were introduced in order to achieve a reduction in the number of carbon monoxide poisonings in rented properties, where many of these incidents have occurred in the past.

Regional Government, East Anglia

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about regional government in East Anglia. [10516]

Mr. Curry: None.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11430]

Sir Paul Beresford: Prior to 1990 the civil estate was managed by the Property Services Agency. Its archived records could be accessed only at disproportionate cost.

On 1 April 1990 Property Holdings assumed responsibility for the whole of the Government common user (office) estate in which Government Departments and their agencies are housed. Separate identification of the costs of unoccupied property has been made since 1 April 1993. A considerable amount of surplus space has been disposed of since then. The costs of holding CUE space vacant, together with the costs of disposing of vacant space, have been or are expected to be:

1993–94: £86.5 million (actual)

1994–95: £90.9 million (actual)

1995–96: £161.6 million (estimated)

From 1 April 1996 individual Departments will be accountable for all the offices in which they have occupations, including any vacant space therein. All wholly vacant buildings on the common user estate will be transferred to a new body, Property Advisers to the Civil Estate, for ultimate disposal. The continuing costs of vacant space to be transferred to PACE, together with costs associated with disposal of vacant space, are estimated to be £133 million for 1996–97.

Since 1990 the marked decline in civil service staff numbers, combined with rationalisation, relocation out of London and the more effective use of office space, has enabled Departments to declare an ever increasing volume of space surplus to requirements. Sluggish market conditions have not enabled disposals to keep pace with these surrenders. In the longer term, reduction in the size of the Government's office estate will provide the taxpayer with even greater value for money.

So far as the Department of the Environment itself is concerned, estimates of the cost of vacant space are:

1993–94: £0.6 million (estimated)

1994–95: £0.9 million (estimated)

1995–96: £0.5 million (estimated)

1996–97: £1.4 million (estimated)

These figures cover the Department and its agencies, including the residual Property Services Agency, as well as the Department's share of costs of unified Government offices. Information on costs within the 35 non-Crown NDPBs sponsored by DOE could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; [11428]

(2) what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11431]

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11432]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department's expenditure on newspapers, magazines and other periodicals since 1994 is as follows:

1994–95: £276,700

1995–96: £250,700 (to date)

The figure for 1993–94 was £385,700 which includes expenditure on behalf of the DOE and DOT under joint supply arrangements.

Titles include daily and regional newspapers, weekly magazines and trade and technical journals. To list each would involve disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11429]

Sir Paul Beresford: Figures for departmental administration for year (a) are found in sections 3.7 and 3.8 of the "Government's Expenditure Plans 1985–86 to 1987–88", Cm 9428-II, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. No separate figures for departmental running costs are available.

The figures for departmental running costs for years (b) to (f) are set out in my department's 1995 annual report, Cm 2807, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. Revised figures for 1996–97 taking account of the transfer of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution to the Environment Agency will be published in the 1996 departmental report to be published in March.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many hectares within sites of special scientific interest have been (a) seriously damaged and (b) destroyed in respect of their conservation value during the last 10 years. [11486]

Mr. Clappison: Statistical information on damage to SSSIs in Great Britain is set out in the annual reports of the former Nature Conservancy Council. Since 1 April 1991 similar details for England, Scotland and Wales have been contained in the annual reports of the country agencies and, for Great Britain, in that of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee. Copies of these reports are in the Library.

Nature Conservation

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by what percentage the funding of nature conservation is planned to change between 1995–96 and 1996–97. [11702]

Mr. Clappison: English Nature's grant in aid settlement for 1995–96 was £40.419 million. In 1996–97 it will be £39.166 million, representing a reduction of 3.1 per cent.

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional measures will be provided to achieve the awaited biodiversity action plan. [11703]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom was one of the first countries to produce a national biodiversity plan when "Biodiversity: The UK Action Plan" was published in January 1994.

A biodiversity steering group, chaired by my Department, with members drawn from all sectors, was set up to advise the Government on individual costed action plans for selected species and habitats, a forward programme for improving biological recording and monitoring in the UK, and a programme for improving public awareness and involvement in conserving biodiversity.

The group published its findings on 13 December 1995. "Biodiversity: The UK Steering Group Report" contains a number of proposals including costed action plans for 116 species and 14 key habitats. It also recommends that costed action plans for a further 286 species and 24 key habitats be produced within three years.

The Government expect to publish their response to the report in the spring of 1996.

Water Quality Improvement

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on plans for water quality improvement within the framework 4 and framework 5 plans of the EC. [11737]

Mr. Clappison: Research on water quality issues is included in the fourth European Community framework programme of research, technological development and demonstration, 1994 to 1998. Proposals for the fifth framework programme, beginning in 1998–99, are expected to be submitted to the Council and the European Parliament, by the Commission, next year. My Department's view on plans for "Framework Five" will be strongly influenced by how successful the current programme is at meeting its objectives.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was total Government spending in (a) Pendle, (b) Bath and (c) Bournemouth. [12618]

Sir Paul Beresford: Central Government support comprises support for capital spending as well as revenue spending. The latest available figures for 1995–96 are as follows. Differences between districts' overall level of revenue support depend on a large number of factors including the size of the tax base from which council tax can be raised, as well as the Government's assessment of relative expenditure needs.

£ thousand

| | Pendle | Bath | Bournemouth |
|---|---|---|---|
| Revenue support grant | 3,462 | 3,687 | 8,562 |
| Redistributed non-domestic rates | 2,872 | 2,780 | 5,347 |
| Specific and special grants inside AEF, excluding SSA reduction grant | 181 | 253 | 683 |
| SSA reduction grant | 540 | 0 | 646 |
| Specific and special grants outside AEF | 10,242 | 10,939 | 34,113 |
| Total revenue support | 17,297 | 17,659 | 49,351 |
| Credit approvals | 1,183 | 484 | 1,956 |
| Capital grants | 1,277 | 1,517 | 480 |
| Total central Government support | 19,757 | 19,660 | 51,787 |

Source:
Revenue support items: Budget Estimates from RA96 return.
Credit approvals and capital grants: most recent capital payments return. The figures for credit approvals relate to basic and supplementary credit approvals issued less receipts of specified capital grant.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority in (a) Lancashire and (b) the rest of England the capital receipts held by them resulting from the sale of land, property and other assets. [12617]

Sir Paul Beresford: A list of the amounts of accumulated usable receipts from all assets at 31 March 1995 for each English local authority was placed in the Library of the House in response to the question of 22 January 1996 from the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith), Official Report, column 85. The figures for authorities in Lancashire are:

Amounts held at 31 March 1995 (£ million)

| | Usable receipts |
|---|---|
| Lancashire county council | 0.751 |
| Blackburn | 0 |
| Blackpool | 7.480 |
| Burnley | 2.066 |
| Chorley | 1.047 |
| Fylde | 0.451 |
| Hyndburn | 0.315 |
| Lancaster | 0 |
| Pendle | 1.385 |
| Preston | 1.839 |
| Ribble Valley | 0.796 |
| Rossendale | 0.056 |
| South Ribble | 5.738 |
| West Lancashire | 1.131 |
| Wyre | 0.159 |

Local authorities are required to set aside 75 per cent. of their capital receipts from the sale of council housing and 50 per cent. of most other receipts, to repay debt. These amounts form part of the provision for credit liabilities, which also includes amounts set aside from revenue. Separate figures for set-aside capital receipts are not available.

Challenge Funding

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to publish further details of the Government's proposals for the extension of challenge funding to local authority capital spending. [12981]

Mr. Gummer: The challenge funding concept has proved itself as one of the best approaches for funding elements of local authority spending. This is a chance to see how it might work when applied to the major areas of councils' capital expenditure.

Following my announcement on 30 November 1995, Official Report, column 1338, that the Government wish to build on the success of the challenge concept, I am today issuing to local authorities and other interested parties a consultation paper seeking views on one option for applying this approach to the funding of mainstream local authority capital expenditure.

Our proposals would give the more enthusiastic local authorities the opportunity to bid for a share of a capital challenge fund of up to £250 million and to supplement this with private sector cash. Local authorities will be able to decide their own priorities, so, for example, those who want to improve run down inner-city areas or enhance the rural environment will get more cash if they put their backs into developing imaginative projects and partnerships. All have the chance to do this. The best projects will be targeted with the most resources, bringing with it all the benefits of value for money, and the chance to get local people and businesses involved in projects that ultimately use their money.

Our consultation paper sets out ideas for a challenge fund to support capital spending across all services. In particular, it invites comment on the option of proceeding with a pilot scheme to test a mechanism for distribution a proportion of total credit approvals for capital expenditure in the 1997–98 financial year. This pilot would build on the competitive approach already taken to funding elements of local authority capital expenditure, and would offer local authorities greater freedom to decide on their own spending priorities across the board.

We will consider carefully all comments made in response to the consultation paper before deciding how best to proceed. A pilot scheme, if undertaken, would inform decisions on how to build on the competitive element which is already part of the capital financial system to enhance local accountability and value for money.

Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library of the House.

Drought Orders

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions of European law provide that an application for a drought order, where withdrawal of water from areas of sites of special scientific interest is being considered, is accompanied by an environmental impact assessment. [10853]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 23 January 1996]: Environmental impact assessment is required in accordance with directive 85/337/EEC for projects involving drilling for water supplies where groundwater abstraction is likely to have a significant effect on the environment. No drought orders made during the past 12 months have involved the construction of new boreholes. Environmental impact assessment is not required under the directive for surface water abstraction.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to prevent the incineration of toxic waste at sea; and if he will make a statement. [12383]

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

The incineration of toxic waste at sea has been prohibited since the start of 1991.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Military Equipment Embargoes

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his reply to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell), of 27 November 1995, on military equipment embargoes,

Official Report, columns 426-27, if he will set out which parts and groups of the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 apply in each case where an embargo has been imposed. [11051]

Mr. Oppenheim: The UK interprets the embargoes on Argentina, Burma, Iraq, Liberia, Libya, Nigeria, Rwanda, Somalia, Sudan, UNITA (Angola), former Yugoslavia and Zaire as including all goods in group 1 of part III of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994.

In the case of Iran, the embargo also takes in goods or technology on the nuclear materials list in category 0 in annexe I to Council decision 94/942/CFSP on the control of exports of dual-use goods, the export of which is controlled by Council regulation (EC) 3381/94. There are two exceptions: the ban does not include equipment considered essential for the safety of civil aircraft and air traffic control systems, or radioactive material for medical equipment use, but the exceptions do not apply where there is knowledge or reason to suspect that the goods would go to a military end-user or be used for military purposes.

In the case of China, the scope of the EU ban has been left for national interpretation. We consider the following to be caught by the embargo: weapons and their specially designed components/ammunition, weapons platforms and any equipment which is likely to be used for internal repression. These categories fall under group 1 of part III of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994.

The voluntary embargoes on Armenia and Azerbaijan are in respect of arms and we interpret them as covering headings ML1, PL5002, PL5018, PL5021, ML2, ML3, ML4, PL5030, PL5006, ML5, ML6(a) and (b), ML7, ML8, ML9, ML10(a)–(f), ML16 (in respect of goods covered by headings ML1, ML2, ML3, ML4 and ML6(a) and (b), ML9, ML10(a)–(f), ML23 and ML26), PL520, ML23, ML24(a) and (b)2, and ML26 of group 1 of part III of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994. However, any applications for other military equipment for these countries would receive close scrutiny.

Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986

Mr. Bell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many cases remain pending within his Department under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986; and if he will make a statement. [12207]

Mr. Oppenheim: As at 31 December 1995, there were 1,610 cases before the courts under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 which had been commenced by the Department but which had not been concluded.

Burnley and Pendle Transport

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Office of Fair Trading has solicited the views of members of the travelling public in Burnley and Pendle concerning the proposed purchase by Stagecoach of Pendle council's 50 per cent. stake in Burnley and Pendle Transport. [12209]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No. In the event that such a merger were announced, the Director General of Fair Trading would take account of all relevant factors, including the views of third parties.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Director General of Fair Trading consulted him before providing confidential guidance to the parties involved in the proposed sale of Pendle borough council's stake in Burnley and Pendle Transport. [12210]

Mr. Taylor: It is not the practice of the Government or the Director General of Fair Trading to disclose whether confidential guidance has been sought or given in specific cases. In general, before giving confidential guidance, the director general will consult my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade.

Privatised Utilities

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people served on the boards of (a) British Gas, (b) British Telecom, (c) the Central Electricity Generating Board, (d) East Midlands electricity board, (e) Eastern electricity board, (f) London electricity board, (g) Manweb, (h) Midlands electricity board, (i) Northern electricity board, (j) Norweb, (k) South Wales electricity board, (l) South Western electricity board, (m) Southern electricity board and (n) Yorkshire electricity board in the final year before each was privatised. [12215]

Mr. Page: The information requested, in relation to the organisations for which my Department has sponsorship responsibility, is as follows:

| Organisation | Number of people employed | Number of people on board | Total remuneration paid to those on board £ million | Year ended |

Nuclear Levy

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been raised by the nuclear levy on consumers' bills since 1990 to the present day in 1995 prices. [12477]

Mr. Page: The total amount raised by the fossil fuel levy for financing nuclear and renewables generators from 1990–91 to 1994–95—the latest figure available—is £6.686 billion in 1994–95 prices.

Nuclear Industry (Insurance)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the requirements for insurance to cover the risk of accidents including radioactive materials following privatisation of the nuclear industry; what assessment he has made of whether appropriate cover is available from commercial insurance sources; what contingency plans have been drawn up for the Government to continue to cover such risks in the absence of commercial insurance; and what charge would be made to the privatised industry for such state insurance. [12240]

Mr. Page: Under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965, a UK nuclear generator is required to have insurance for third party nuclear liability of £140 million for any one incident. For claims over £140 million, compensation may be paid out up to a total of around £280 million, from public funds. Parliament may also vote further funds. These arrangements apply whether the operator is in the public or private sector in accordance with the UK's obligations under the Paris and Brussels conventions on civil nuclear liability. When these limits were set in 1994, they took into account the capacity of commercially available insurance.

British Energy

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the net present value of estimated future profit of British Energy; and what discount rate this assumes. [12479]

Mr. Eggar: The net present value of estimated future profit of British Energy depends on the discount rate used. If such information is to be made available to investors, it will be included in the prospectus.

Departmental Staff (Energy Matters)

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff (a) specialise in energy and (b) spend time on energy-related issues. [12481]

Mr. Eggar: Within my Department, there are at present 484 staff in the energy command, which deals with energy-related issues. There are also staff elsewhere in the Department who spend time on energy matters where these impact on their main areas of responsibility, but it is not possible to quantify the number of staff falling into this category.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Davidson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many companies made successful applications to the national insurance fund as a result of failing to meet statutory obligations to provide redundancy payments for employees under the terms of current employment legislation for each year since 1979; and if he will provide the figures for each year with regard to the total cost of the approved applications from the national insurance fund expressing the costs (a) on a consistent basis and (b) at constant 1979 prices. [12612]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information is not available in the form requested. The total cost to the national insurance fund of statutory redundancy payments made to employees under section 106 of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 is set out in the table. The figures include payments to former employees of insolvent businesses.

| Year | £ million | £ million at constant 1979 prices[1] |

Post Office (Privatisation)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultation he has had with the Post Office on a timetable for privatisation. [12605]

Mr. Oppenheim: None.

AEA Technology

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made in separating AEA Technology from the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. [13066]

Mr. Page: The Secretary of State intends to give a direction to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority under section 1(1) of the Atomic Energy Authority Act 1995 to make a scheme providing for the transfer, on 31 March 1996, of the property, rights and liabilities of what constitutes AEA Technology to a single successor company, AEA Technology plc, owned by the Secretary of State.

From that date, the commercial activities of the authority will be carried on by the new company. The authority itself will focus in future on the safe and cost-effective maintenance and decommissioning of its nuclear liabilities. It will also continue to run the UK's nuclear fusion programme.

Inward Investment

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the findings from the research into the wider effects of inward investment will be made available. [13067]

Mr. Eggar: The commissioning Departments for this research have received the consultants' report on the "Assessment of the Wider Effects of Inward Investment in Manufacturing in the UK". I have placed copies of the report in the Libraries of the House. Copies are available from my Department, regional development division, room 3.E.45, 1 Victoria street, London SW1H 0ET.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Prescott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each of the English regions the expenditure on regional selective assistance offers accepted by companies in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93, (c) 1993–94 and (d) 1994–95, the proportion of regional selective assistance expenditure on foreign-owned firms and regional selective assistance expenditure per employee in manufacturing. [12703]

Mr. Eggar: Offers of regional selective assistance accepted in the period 1991–92 to 1994–95 were as follows:

European Framework Programme for Research and Technological Activities

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give details of the individual awards given to United Kingdom based companies under the European framework programme for research and technological activities in each of the years from the establishment of the programme. [12324]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Information on the funding provided to individual UK companies under the European Union's framework programme for research and technological development is held only by the European Commission and is not made available to member states.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11436]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Disaggregated information on the basis requested is not available for the Department and the non-departmental public bodies and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I have asked agency chief executives to reply directly to the hon. Member as they have their own budgetary responsibility for travel and subsistence costs.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on overseas travel, accommodation and other associated expenses incurred by The Insolvency Service.

Costs associated with overseas travel by The Service are:

Financial Year—Costs including VAT

1994/95: £9,000

1995/96: £12,500 (to date)

1995/96: £13,500 (estimated full year)

1996/97: £12,000 (estimated)

Prior to 1994/95 overseas travel was paid centrally by the Department of Trade and Industry. A breakdown of expenditure for the financial years preceding 1994/95 could only now be provided at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about expenditure on overseas travel, accommodation and associated costs. I regret that disaggregated information on the basis you requested is not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Michael Goddard to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Competition and Consumer Affairs has asked me to reply to your Question about overseas travel and subsistence costs. The information for the Radiocommunications Agency, which is only available in an aggregated form, for the periods quoted is as follows:

1991–92: £399,185

1993–94: £454,503

1994–95: £538,202

1995–96: £633,263 (estimated outturn)

1996–97: £615,864 (estimated)

The Radiocommunications Agency was set up with effect from 2 April 1990. Expenditure on overseas travel and subsistence before that date was the responsibility of the DTI and is not available.

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply, in relation to the Patent Office, to your Question about overseas travel.

The total expenditure on overseas travel, including accommodation and associated expenditure is:

1993/94: £172,921

1994/95: £184,754

1995/96: £245,000 (forecast)

1996/97: £260,000 (forecast)

Further disaggregation of the above and expenditure for 1979/80, 1980/90 and 1991/92 are not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Letter from R. D. Worswick to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 24 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about overseas travel by Laboratory of the Government Chemist (LGC), an executive agency of DTI.

The following table sets out the information that is readily available.

Amount excluding VAT

1991/92: £77,000

1992/93: £50,000

1993/94: £72,000

1994/95: £99,000

1995/96: £78,000 (estimated to year end).

Information on 1979/80 and 1989/90 could only be provided at disproportionate cost. A forecast for 1996/97 is not available.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

John M Taylor MP has asked me to reply in respect of Companies House Executive Agency to your question to the President of the Board of Trade on expenditure relating to overseas business travel by our staff for certain years since 1979.

The information you seek is as follows:

Expenditure on Overseas Travel

1989–90: £15,000

1991–92: £26,000

1993–94: £21,000

1994–95: £12,000

1995–96: £20,000 (to date)

1995–96: £24,000 (full year estimate).

The expected expenditure for 1996–97 is not available at this stage as Companies House is still developing its budget plans for next year. Information on earlier years can only be provided at disproportionate costs.

I hope this information is helpful.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11437]

Mr. Taylor: Excluding its agencies, my Department's expenditure on newspapers and mass circulation journals for the years requested was as follows:

1993–94: £291,270

1994–95: £255,512

1995–96: £204,875 (to end December 1995)

This includes expenditure on national daily and Sunday newspapers, regional newspapers, and mass circulation magazines and journals. A full list of titles cannot be supplied except at disproportionate cost. The titles taken change to meet the changing requirements of the Department.

I have asked each of the agency chief executives to write to the hon. Member about their expenditure on newspapers and magazines.

Letter from David Durham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

You recently asked the President of the Board of Trade for information about his department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines.

Attached is a summary of Companies House's expenditure for the years you requested to date, together with a list of the publications purchased in 1995–96 to date.

I hope this is helpful.

Newspapers and Magazines Expenditure

1993–1994: £11,201

1994–1995: £5,488

1995–1996: £2,235 (to date)

Letter from R. D. Worswick to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 24 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about expenditure on newspapers and magazines by the Laboratory of the Government Chemist (LGC), an executive agency of DTI.

We do not keep sufficiently detailed records of the newspapers and magazines purchased to provide a comprehensive reply to your question. The information sought could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

However, expenditure on the provision of services by the library (including scientific journals, newspapers and magazines; books; and on-line searches) was as follows:

Excluding VAT

1993–94: £89,000

1994–95: £108,000

1995–96: £36,000

Letter from P. R. S. Hartnack to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply, in relation to the Patent Office, to your Question about the purchase of newspapers and magazines.

The total expenditure is shown below and a list of publications purchased for the present year is attached.

1993–94: £50,903

1994–95: £59,442

1995–96: £42,674 (Year to 31 December 1995)

The range of publications purchased reflects the need for patent examiners, in particular, to have state of the art knowledge of developments in their work area.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about newspaper and magazine expenditure by The Insolvency Service.

It is not possible from the existing financial database to specifically identify the cost of newspapers and magazines charged to a General Publications heading, a major part of which relates to legal and accountancy reference books and updates and technical journals covering law, accounting, finance, management and training. Expenditure on all publications in 1994/95 totalled £42,000 and in 1995/96, to date, £46,400. Newspapers purchased across The Service's 34 locations are generally limited to the national daily broadsheets.

Letter from Michael Goddard to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your Question about expenditure on newspapers and magazines.

The information for the Radiocommunications Agency for the periods quoted is as follows:

1993–94: £41,852.15

1994–95: £28,982.76

1995–96: £26,322.06 (to date).

These figures include periodicals in non-paper format; ie microfiche, disc and CD-ROM.

A list of current subscriptions, which runs to 19 pages and contains nearly 300 titles, is available if required.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 30 January 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question expenditure on newspapers and magazines. Until recently the cost of magazines was not separately identified with the result that we do not have a figure for the cost of magazines in 1993/94. The Agency's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in 199495 was approximately £1,500 and I expect this year's figure to be similar.

The only newspaper purchased is The Times, and the following list of publications represents the latest position in a continuing review of expenditure on publications.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. [11433]

Mr. Taylor: Disaggregated information in the form requested in respect of the non-departmental public bodies, and for the financial year 1979–80 in respect of the Department and its agencies, could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures for 1996–97 are still subject to the outcome of the Department's management information system for Ministers process. The other information requested is as follows:

| Area of Department | 1989–90 £ | 1991–92 £ | 1993–94 £ | 1994–95 £ | 1995–96 Budget £ |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|

[1] Established as net controlled agencies after 1989–90.
[2] Information not readily available for period before attainment of trading fund status in October 1991.
[3] Information not available for this period and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.
Work previously carried out by the Accounts Services Agency, National Physical Laboratory was contracted-out on 1 April and 1 October respectively. The National Engineering Laboratory was privatised on 31 October 1995.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11434]

Mr. Taylor: Total running cost expenditure, net of VAT, for both the gross and net controlled areas of the Department is set out in the following table:

| 1989–90 outturn[2] | 371 |

[2] Trade and Industry Annual Report 1995.
[3] Appropriation Accounts 1994–95, Volume 4: Class IV.

The fall in expenditure over the years 1993–94 to 1996–97 reflects in part the contractorisation and privatisation of work previously carried out by the Department's agencies. The figures do not reflect the machinery of government changes announced on 5 July 1995. More up-to-date information will be published in March in the Department's 1996 annual report.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11435]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is providing figures for vacant space on the common user estate. These figures cover most of my Department's properties. This reply supplements the central response by supplying information covering properties classed as departmental estate for which my Department, including its agencies and non-departmental public bodies, currently has direct responsibility.

The cost of vacant property on the departmental estate for which my Department was responsible in 1995–96 is expected to be £215,000. Figures for empty property prior to 1995–96 are available only at disproportionate cost.

Responsibility for the remainder of the civil estate occupied by my Department will transfer to my Department from the Department of the Environment on 1 April 1996. The transfer is expected to increase the cost of vacant property for which my Department is responsible by £1,200,000 for 1996–97.

The annual cost of under-utilised property in my Department can be estimated only at disproportionate cost.

Export Credit Guarantees

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what level of export credit guarantees extended to companies in or the Government of Nigeria has been claimed by United Kingdom companies; and what is the estimated cost to the taxpayer. [9822]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 January 1996]: As at 31 December, 1995 the Export Credits Guarantee Department had paid claims on Nigeria of £1,840 million which were yet to be recovered, the ECGD's records are not held in a way that enables it to arrive at a cumulative total of all claims which it has ever paid on Nigeria.

Such claims paid by the ECGD on its trading operations do not represent a direct charge against public expenditure, although to the extent payments by the ECGD in any one year exceed receipts there is a corresponding increase in the PSBR.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has (a) read, collated or received and (b) authorised civil servants or any other persons to read, collate or receive copies of draft sections of Sir Richard Scott's report circulated by Sir Richard Scott to Ministers, civil servants and other persons. [10224]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 18 January 1996]: The handling of extracts of Sir Richard's draft report, subject to guidance received from the inquiry, is for those to whom they are sent. The Government do not disclose details of correspondence between the inquiry and individual witnesses.

Jordan and Saudi Arabia (Export Credits)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will estimate the amount paid under Export Credits Guarantee Department guarantees since 1980 in relation to trade with (a) Jordan and (b) Saudi Arabia; if he will give the amount paid to banks under buyer credit and line of credit facilities, the amount paid directly to exporters under short-term or supplier credit facilities and the amount subsequently recovered; and if he will estimate the proportion of each figure paid in respect of (i) the export of military and related equipment and (ii) the export of military and related equipment where the end user has been assessed to have been Iraq. [11251]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 January 1996]: As at the end of December 1995, the total amount of claims paid and recoveries made since 1980 under ECGD guarantees in relation to trade with Jordan and Saudi Arabia was as follows:

£ million

| | Claims Paid | | Recoveries | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Buyers credit and lines of credit | Short term and supplier credit | Buyer credit and lines of credit | Short term and supplier credit |
| Jordan | 273 | 14 | 38 | 14 |
| Saudi Arabia | 0 | 63 | 0 | 26 |

The ECGD estimates that approximately 85 per cent. of the claims paid on Jordan in respect of project and capital goods were in respect of military and related equipment. The ECGD does not maintain its records in a way which enables it to categorise its short-term business by industry sector.

The ECGD has no record of cases where the end user was in Iraq.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total principal value of payments by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to the Midland bank since 1980 in respect of trade with Saudi Arabia by (a) Astra Holdings and its subsidiaries, (b) British Aerospace and its subsidiaries, (c) Royal Ordnance and its subsidiaries, (d) Vickers and its subsidiaries, (e) Racal and its subsidiaries, (f) Plessey and its subsidiaries and (g) Thorn EMI and its subsidiaries. [11308]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The ECGD has no record of payments to Midland bank since 1980 in respect of capital goods and project business with Saudi Arabia by any of the named companies. In the case of its now privatised short-term business the ECGD maintains no record of the supplier in cases where it has paid claims to banks.

Balance of Trade

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the percentage change in each year since 1990 in (a) the volume of manufactured exports and (b) the volume of manufactured imports; and in each year, what proportion of imports consisted of (i) capital and intermediate goods and (ii) consumer goods. [11900]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The information is given in the two tables:

Volume of UK trade in manufactures (percentage changes[1] on previous year)

| | Exports | Imports |
|---|---|---|

Stamp Prices

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations his Department had with the Treasury prior to the 1995 Budget announcement regarding the impact on small and medium enterprises of a rise in the price of stamps. [11957]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 29 January 1996]: My Department had discussions with the Treasury on a range of issues in determining the financial targets which were set for the Post Office in the 1995 Budget. These did not specifically include the impact on SMEs of an increase in letter tariffs, as it is for the Post Office to assess the detailed impact of such changes on its customers which will depend primarily on the nature of their business. Letter tariff rates were last increased on 1 November 1993 and the Post Office has undertaken to maintain these rates until at least 31 March 1996, the longest period of stability since the late 1960s.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the members of each business links board. [11961]

Mr. Page [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The information requested is not available. It could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what requirements are placed on business links to publish their membership; [11958]

(2) what requirement there is on business links to ensure that members of their boards include those working in firms with (a) under 50 employees, (b) 20 employees, and (c) 10 employees; [11960]

(3) in what form the membership of the boards of business links is published. [11949]

Mr. Page [holding answers 29 January 1996]: Business link proposals to be considered by the business link national assessment panel have details of board membership, giving names and company details, where known. Business links inform training and enterprise councils in their area of business link board membership. Although there are no formal requirements to publish their membership, most business links are required to register board membership with Companies House as private limited companies by guarantee.

Guidance on board membership is given in the October 1994 supplement to the business link prospectus. This states that the business link board should have a majority of members from private sector businesses.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the indicative allocations in (a) ecu and (b) pounds (i) for the United Kingdom in total and (ii) by standard region, from (a) the European regional development fund and (b) the European social fund under objective 2 for the period 1997 to 1999. [11699]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 29 January 1996]: Indicative allocations of objective 2 grant from the European structural funds in 1997–99 will not be set until later in 1996. The European Commission will calculate a total for each eligible member state; the Government will allocate shares to each of the eligible areas of the United Kingdom and Gibraltar. Indicative figures for grants from each fund are also due to be settled before the end of 1996.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what estimate he has made of the number of jobs to be safeguarded by the European regional development fund's supported activities in the United Kingdom between 1994 and 1999; [11697]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of jobs to be created by European regional development fund supported activities in the United Kingdom between 1994 and 1999. [11698]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answers 29 January 1996]: No such estimates have been made, but the 52 current single programming documents and community initiative programme documents, which provide for grants over varying periods of years from this and the other European structural funds, include targets for jobs to be created and safeguarded, as well as many other quantified objectives.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European regional development fund over the last available five years. [11658]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The full information requested could be made available only at disproportionate cost. Allocations of ERDF grant money from 1989 to 1995 for the principle eligible areas are set out in ecu in the table. The table does not include the structural funds community initiatives, which are not generally allocated regionally, or some other minor schemes of ERDF grant. Receipts arise over varying periods subsequent to the allocations, and at varying exchange rates.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom has received under the trans-European network programmes to date; [11670]

(2) how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the trans-European network programmes under the current financial perspective. [11671]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answers 29 January 1996]: The size of the trans-European networks—TENs—budget is determined annually through the EU budget process. Amounts are not pre-allocated to member states, nor are receipts divided by region.

From the 1995 budget, the first year for which TENs grants became available, the United Kingdom expects to receive some 30 mecu, or £25 million, for UK TENs projects, plus an as yet unquantifiable amount from some joint projects in which it has an interest.

It is too early to estimate 1996 receipts.

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European regional development fund under the present structural funds agreement. [11659]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 29 January 1996]: There is no single agreement. Currently, 26 single programming documents and 26 community initiative programme documents provide for grants, over varying periods of years, from this and the other European structural funds. The Community initiative programmes are not generally allocated regionally. The figures for grants from the European regional development fund in the single programming documents—SPDs—for eligible UK areas are set out in the table.

Lloyds and Unichem Merger

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what study his Department is undertaking to ascertain the effect on small pharmacies of the Lloyds and Unichem merger. [12161]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 29 January 1996]: In the first instance, it is for the Director General of Fair Trading to advise my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on qualifying mergers. In giving his advice, the director general will take account of all relevant factors.

Pharmacy Industry

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's policy in respect of vertical integration in the pharmacy industry. [12162]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 29 January 1996]: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no general policy in respect of vertical integration in the pharmacy industry. Each case on which he is required to make a decision, whether or not involving vertical integration, must be considered on its own merits.

Industrial and Provident Societies

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will amend the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts to increase the limit on shareholding to £50,000 to facilitate higher levels of capital formation. [9948]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

The shareholding limit for industrial and provident societies was doubled to £20,000 in 1994. Since then, there has been little demand from the movement for a further increase and the Government have no current plans to review the existing level.

WALES

Local Government Finance

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce his decision on the 1996–97 local government revenue settlement; and if he will make a statement. [13086]

Mr. Hague: I have given careful consideration to the representations that I have received on my provisional settlement proposals for local authorities and police authorities in Wales, which I announced on 28 November and 30 November. I chaired a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on 18 December, at which settlement matters were discussed.

Having taken account of all the representations, I believe that my proposals provide the new unitary authorities with the appropriate level of funding in 1996–97, their first year of operation. Like the rest of the public sector, the new authorities will need to assess their budget priorities carefully. However, inflation remains low and the Government have made it clear that pay increases should be met from efficiency savings and other economies.

I also believe that, subject to a small adjustment in the figures due mainly to the postponement of the transfer of responsibility for warrant enforcement work from police authorities to magistrates courts, my provisional settlement proposals provide an appropriate level of funding for police authorities in Wales.

I have therefore decided to set total standard spending at £2,867.6 million and aggregate external finance at £2,517.9 million for 1996–97. The settlement provides for an increase in standard spending of £85.6 million, 3.1 per cent. on the comparable amount of 1995–96. Total standard spending includes £149.6 million for community care and £331.7 million to fund police services. Police funding comprises £165.5 million in cash-limited police grant provided by the Home Secretary and £166.2 million in standard spending assessments.

Aggregate external finance will comprise £1,792 million in revenue support grant, £459 million in distributable non-domestic rates, £237.8 million in specific grants, and £29.1 million to damp council tax increases arising from the disaggregation of county and district councils' 1995–96 standard spending assessments and budgets to unitary authorities.

My settlement proposals take account of a number of minor changes to specific grants within total standing spending and aggregate external finance. My decisions are subject to the approval of the House of Commons.

I have considered the representations that I have received about the potential average council tax increases which could arise if authorities budget to the maximum indicated by the provisional capping criteria which I announced on 13 December. I have decided that, in addition to the £29 million I am making available for damping within aggregate external finance, I will make available an extra £15.9 million for damping. This will be targeted so as to ensure that no council tax increase, excluding community council precepts, can exceed 25 per cent. This is a maximum figure, and I expect the great majority of increases to be well below this figure. I have assumed that authorities will make reasonable collection rate assumptions for 1996–97 and that capping principles will be adhered to. Details of the amounts proposed for individual unitary authorities under the two elements of the damping scheme are as follows:

£000 (rounded)

| | Disaggregation | Targeted | Total |
|---|---|---|---|
| Anglesey | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Caernarfonshire and Merionethshire | 1,450 | 541 | 1,991 |
| Aberconwy and Colwyn | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Denbighshire | 3,139 | 0 | 3,139 |
| Flintshire | 393 | 248 | 641 |
| Wrexham | 16 | 1 | 16 |
| Powys | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Cardiganshire | 3,684 | 0 | 3,684 |
| Pembrokeshrie | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Carmarthenshire | 0 | 119 | 119 |
| Swansea | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Neath and Port Talbot | 3,293 | 452 | 3,745 |
| Bridgend | 0 | 1,877 | 1,877 |
| Vale of Glamorgan | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Rhondda, Cynon, Taff | 6,432 | 3,916 | 10,348 |
| Merthyr Tydfil | 687 | 394 | 1,081 |
| Caerphilly | 1,509 | 2,453 | 3,962 |
| Blaenau Gwent | 3,631 | 1,005 | 4,635 |
| Torfaen | 0 | 1,163 | 1,163 |
| Monmouthshire | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Newport | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Cardiff | 4,895 | 3,621 | 8,517 |
| Total | 29,128 | 15,789 | 44,917 |

Actual council tax levels will depend on the budgetary decisions of individual local authorities.

I envisage this additional assistance as a "one off", giving authorities time to adjust service expenditure and bring it more in line with their standard spending assessments. In looking at next year's settlement, I shall have regard to the efforts of unitary authorities in this respect.

I propose to lay the local government finance report (Wales) 1996–97 before the House, for its approval, later this week. At the same time, I shall be laying for the house's approval the limitation of council tax and Precepts (notional amounts) report (Wales) 1996–97.

I am placing final settlement details for individual unitary authorities and police authorities in the Library of the House.

Paediatric Emergency Services

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which units in Wales offer paediatric emergency services; and, of these, which currently do not have their full establishment of nursing staff. [11977]

Mr. Hague: This information is not collected centrally. The majority of NHS trusts/health units with casualty units are able to offer paediatric emergency services. Further information should be obtained directly from the relevant chief executives.

Dentists

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much of the additional finance for NHS dentists in Wales has been spent; what assessment he has made of the response to the initiative; and if he will make a statement. [11965]

Mr. Hague: Recent reports from family health services authorities indicate that 26 general dental practitioners have so far been offered grants either to establish new, or to expand existing, dental practices. In addition, 12 NHS trusts have plans to recruit additional dentists.

More than £1 million has already been reserved but, in most instances, it will take a few months for the new dentists to become operational and the grant payable. To date, £50,000 has been issued to support the community dental service appointments.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11404]

Mr. Hague: The recorded running cost figures for my Department are as follows:

£ million

|---|---|
| 1979–80 | 17.8 |
| 1989–90 | 45.7 |
| 1991–92 | 58.1 |
| 1993–94 | 76.5 |
| 1994–95 | 77.4 |
| 1995–96 budget | 75.9 |

These figures are not strictly comparable over time; for example, running costs in 1979–80 did not include superannuation charges, the training and enterprise council management fee and various overhead costs including accommodation, which have added at least £22 million to the 1995–96 figure. The Welsh Office has assumed additional functions over this period, for example, further responsibilities for industry, higher education and training. Information for 1996–97 will be published in March in the Welsh Office departmental report.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11406]

Mr. Hague: Records are not held separately for expenditure on overseas travel by the Welsh Office or its agency, and are not held centrally for NDPBs.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. [11403]

Mr. Hague: The figures are as follows:

| | (a) Welsh Office £ | (b) Agency (Cadw) £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1991–92 | 35,982 | 481 |
| 1993–94 | 26,818 | 2,248 |
| 1994–95 | 28,784 | 1,734 |
| 1995–96 | [1]13,713 | [1]346 |
| 1995–96 | [2]28,000 | [2]1,500 |
| 1996–97 | [3]— | [3]— |

[1] Spend to 31 December 1995.
[2] Budget for year.
[3] Not yet determined.

Records for earlier years are not available and expenditure by NDPBs is not held centrally.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11407]

Mr. Hague: My Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines is as follows:

1993–94: £82,760

1994–95: £74,820

1995–96: £50,295 (April to December)

Details of the publications purchased have been placed in the Library of the House.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11405]

Mr. Hague: Welsh Office accommodation is part of the common user estate held in the name of the Secretary of State for the Environment and managed by Property Holdings, a directorate of DOE. Surplus accommodation and space on the common user estate are the responsibility of Property Holdings. Information for the common user estate will be provided by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment in his reply.

Information is not held centrally for agencies and NDPBs which are not housed on the common user estate.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest calculation of the numbers of Welsh jobs that have been moved out of Wales in each of the past five years indicating those which have been relocated (a) elsewhere in the United Kingdom, (b) elsewhere in the EU and (c) elsewhere in the world. [12167]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No estimates of this kind have been made by the Welsh Office.

Pemrhiwceiber School

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will be making additional funds available to build a new school at Pemrhiwceiber in the Cynon valley. [12738]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. friend is making available more than £508 million for local authority capital spending in 1996–97.

It is for individual local authorities to determine how the resources that are made available are allocated between services, including education, in the light of their statutory responsibilities and their perception of local needs and priorities.

Health Service (Consultants)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with trusts and health authorities in relation to the performance of consultants who are listed in the waiting times information bulletin of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority published in November 1995 as having total combined out-patient and in-patient waiting times in excess of 104 weeks. [12532]

Mr. Hague: The purpose of the waiting times information bulletin is to help GPs offer informed advice to those patients who need to be referred to hospital. Patients are, of course, entitled to be referred to the consultant of their choice, even where charter targets may not be met, provided that they are aware of this and are offered alternative referrals.

My Department continues to work closely with health authorities and hospitals in Wales to reduce hospital waiting times, and my officials are currently visiting hospitals where progress has been below expectation. The waiting times information bulletin serves as useful background information to this dialogue with the NHS and for the hospital visits in particular.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to issue new guidelines on the private earnings of medical consultants employed by NHS trusts; and what plans he has to make their NHS earnings directly proportionate to the number of sessions worked for the NHS. [12570]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to issue new guidelines on the private earnings of medical consultants.

NHS earnings of consultants employed on national terms and conditions of service are already directly proportionate to their NHS work.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all (a) loans, (b) grants and (c) other payments in excess of £100,000 made in each of the last five years by the Welsh Office to (a) the Tesco company and (b) other companies; and if he will make a statement. [12719]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Office made an offer of regional selective assistance of £2 million in 1989 to the Tesco company in respect of a project to locate its administration centre in Cardiff. In 1992, an offer of £3.8 million was made to encourage the company to locate a distribution centre in Magor. Details of the amounts paid against these offers are commercially confidential.

The Welsh Office has made no other loans or payments to the company.

Details of regional selective assistance payments to other companies are also covered by commercial confidentiality. Total payments of RSA made in respect of projects in Wales in the last five years are shown in the table.

£ million

| | RSA payments £ million (Gross) |
|---|---|
| 1990–91 | 31.0 |
| 1991–92 | 55.1 |
| 1992–93 | 61.7 |
| 1993–94 | 50.8 |
| 1994–95 | 56.9 |

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the expenditure on regional selective assistance offers accepted by companies in (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93, (c) 1993–94 and (d) 1994–95, the proportion of regional selective assistance expenditure on foreign-owned firms and regional selective assistance expenditure per employee in manufacturing. [12702]

Mr. Hague: The information is given in the following table.

| | 1991–92 | 1992–93 | 1993–94 | 1994–95 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Value of RSA offers accepted | £76.9 million | £72.5 million | 94.6 million | 38.2 million |
| Percentage to foreign-owned firms | 55.7 | 42.2 | 58.2 | 33.0 |
| Grant per job in manufacturing projects | £5,764 | £5,784 | £7,361 | £6,031 |

Welsh Health Common Services Authority (Correspondence)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he willl place in the Library a copy of the corrective letter issued by the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to its September 1995 waiting times information bulletin with respect to the information on the orthopaedic waits for the University hospital of Wales; if he will specify what the inaccuracies were in that corrective letter, as referred to in the apology issued in the November information bulletin; and if he will make a statement. [12572]

Mr. Hague: A copy of the letter of 4 October 1995, distributed with the September 1995 edition of the NHS Wales waiting times information bulletin, will be placed in the Library of the House.

The table of hospital waiting times at University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS trust, which accompanied the letter, quoted a zero waiting time or that no data were available for first out-patient appointments in respect of the consultants listed for trauma and orthopaedic specialities. This mistake was corrected in the November 1995 edition of the bulletin.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11424]

Sir John Wheeler: Information for 1979–80 could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Details of my Department's expenditure on administration for the years 1989–90 to 1996–97 are contained in table 11.1 of my Department's annual report, Cm 2816, copies of which are available in the Library.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental Ministerial public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11425]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. Shiji Lapite

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General what action he proposes to take following the jury verdict of unlawful killing of Mr. Shiji Lapite; and if he will make a statement. [12763]

The Attorney-General: Following the verdict of the inquest jury, the Crown Prosecution Service has requested transcripts of the evidence given at the inquest together with copies of any documents which may have been produced to the jury. Once this material has been carefully considered, together with the pre-inquest evidence, and any further inquiries which may prove necessary have been completed, the Crown Prosecution Service will decide whether criminal proceedings should be instituted.

PRIME MINISTER

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his oral answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 17, if Her Majesty's Government will discuss with the Libyan Government guarantees that the two Libyans accused of crimes in relation to the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie would be made available for trial in The Hague if Britain set up a trial in Holland; and if he will examine the related issues of the absence of an extradition treaty with Libya. [11738]

The Prime Minister: No. The Government's position on a trial in a third country is clear.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Cardiff Bay Opera House

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will require the Millennium Commission to release the contents of all reports concerning the proposed Cardiff Bay opera house to the Cardiff Bay Opera Trust. [8694]

Mr. Sproat: Directions issued to the Millennium Commission under section 26 require it, where it considers it necessary, to take expert advice into account when making funding decisions. It is for the Millennium Commission to decide what information to publish.

Disabled People (Sport)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on her Department's policy in relation to the development of sports for disabled people. [9215]

Mr. Sproat: The Government fully support sport for people with disabilities. The Sports Council gives annual grants to the main disability sports organisations and has recently announced an additional grant of £200,000 to the British Paralympic Association to assist with training and participation in the Atlanta Paralympic games. The Government's sportsmatch scheme specifies sport for people with disabilities as one of its priority areas disability sport projects are also eligible for national lottery funding. The Sports Council is also working closely with the disability sports organisations and the governing bodies of sport on the implementation of the recommendations of the ministerial review report on sport for people with disabilities "Building on Ability".

British Library

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures her Department has made to monitor the efficiency and spending on the British Library building project. [10906]

Mrs. Virginnia Bottomley: Following its creation in 1992, the Department of National Heritage assumed responsibility for this project. I attach great importance to its successful delivery. A steering committee, chaired at a senior level, meets monthly to review progress and to take strategic decisions. The Department's project team, headed by a very experienced project director, is based at the site, and works closely with the consultants, contractors and project managers who are under contract to us. Progress is monitored against budget and a detailed programme of work, covering many thousands of activities. Spending is constantly under review, through detailed reports which show expenditure and expected outturn against each parcel of work.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list for her Department and each of the agencies for which she is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11908]

Mr. Sproat: This Department undertakes very little external recruitment. The positive about disabled people symbol is not currently used for either external recruitment or internal recruitment and promotion. However, my officials are currently considering its use for external recruitment. The Department has responsibility for two agencies: the Historic Royal Palaces agency and the Royal Parks agency. The agencies have their own arrangements for recruitment and promotion. At present, neither agency uses the symbol.

National Lottery

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her estimate of the number of people who purchase national lottery tickets regularly; and what is the average sum spent each week by those purchasing such tickets. [7441]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 16 January 1996:]: This is an operational matter. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery to write to the hon. Member and to place copies of the reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) her Department, (b) her Department's agencies and (c) her Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1991–92, (ii) 1993–94, (iii) 1994–95, (iv) 1995–96 and (v) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11342]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 25 January 1996]: While all the information requested is not available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost, the available information is as follows:

| | 1993–94 actual £ | 1994–95 actual £ | 1995–96 estimate £ | 1996–97 estimate £ |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Department of National Heritage | 168,000 | 203,598 | 257,000 | n/a |

| Royal Parks Agency | 163,031 | 190,871 | 196,000 | 160,000 |

My Department makes use of CCTA's metropolitan telephone service, which provides us with fully managed telephone and directory services. Internal telephone directories are available to staff in my Department and both agencies.

The Government telephone network connects over 1,000 Government offices nationwide. As a user of the GTN, a GTN dialling codes booklet is also available to all members of staff in this Department.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the expenditure of her Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1991–92, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate she has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if she will estimate the savings accruing to her Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11339]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 25 January 1996]: My Department uses consultants for a wide variety of tasks, only a small proportion of which are aimed at achieving cost savings. No central record is held on overall savings and it would not be possible to isolate those consultancies and quantify the cost savings without incurring disproportionate cost. The available information is given in the following table:

| | 1993–94 actual £ | 1994–95 actual £ | 1995–96 spend to date £ | 1995–96 estimate £ | 1996–97 estimate £ |

| Royal Parks Agency | 748,195 | 848,033 | 486,427 | 810,000 | 750,000 |

Information on non-departmental public bodies is not available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the total expenditure of her Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1991–92, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate she has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if she will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11340]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 25 January 1996]: While all the information requested is not available, the available figures are as follows:

| | 1993–94 (actual) £ | 1994–95 (actual) £ | 1995–96 (spend to date) £ | 1995–96 (estimate) £ | 1996–97 (estimate) £ |

Information on DNH non-departmental public bodies is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Windsor Castle

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer of 17 January, Official Report, columns 625-26, if she will list the name of each of the 13 military knights in residence at Windsor castle, their rank at the end of military service and the principal ceremonial duties they undertake. [11565]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 29 January 1996]: There are normally 13 military knights at Windsor, although at present only 12 of the appointments are held. They are as follows:

1. Major General P. A. Downward—Governor
2. Brigadier A. L. Atkinson
3. Brigadier J. F. Lindner
4. Major W. L. Thompson
5. Major L. W. Dickerson

Mr. Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage, pursuant to her answer of 18 January 1996, Official Report, columns 625–26, from what sources the balance of £25.2 million for that restoration of Windsor castle will be found. [11564]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The balance will be met from the net surplus from visitor admissions to the state rooms at Buckingham palace and the precincts at Windsor castle.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

EC Dairy Regime

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in pounds sterling and ecu, the EC expenditure on the dairy regime in the latest year for which figures are available in each member state showing the average support per cow in each state and the European average. [10673]

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is set out in the table:

Emtryl (Game Birds)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to enforce European Commission regulation EC 1798 banning the use of Emtryl in treating game birds; what penalties he plans to apply to offences against the regulation when it comes into force; and what warnings have been issued to (a) landowners, (b) breeders, (c) owners of shooting rights and (d) others involved against using Emtryl. [11625]

Mrs. Browning: Banning therapeutic products containing dimetridazole, the active ingredient of Emtryl, would have serious health and welfare consequences for turkeys, game birds and pigs. The UK believes that such products can be used safely and, pending discussions with the European Commission, no action has been taken to withdraw the marketing authorisations for them. The use of DMZ for disease prevention, in accordance with EEC directive 70/524, is not affected by these regulations.

The Animals, Meat and Meat Products (Examination for Residues and Maximum Residue Limits) Regulations 1991, as amended—the residues regulations—make it an offence to administer substances in annexe IV of the Council regulation to an animal, or to sell for human consumption any meat or meat product containing such a substance, provided the relevant amending Commission regulation is contained in schedule 1 to the residues regulations. The penalties for non-observance of these regulations are set out in regulation 21, which provides for a fine.

The application of the Commission regulation has been the subject of several discussions with game birds, poultry, farming and distribution interests.

Veterinary Staff

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the range of hourly rates; and what is the overall average hourly rate charged to abattoirs for the services of official veterinary surgeons. [11892]

Mrs. Browning: The range of official veterinary surgeon hourly rates provided by the Meat Hygiene Service is from £17.50 to £140 before the application of capping for the 1995–96 financial year, which keeps the normal time rate to a maximum of £35 per hour. Overtime rates are not capped.

The overall average hourly rate charged to abattoirs for OVS services is £32.42.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many local veterinary inspectors there are currently; and how they are (a) selected and (b) paid. [11692]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 January 1996]: At 1 January 1995 there were 5,722 local veterinary inspectors. Data for 1 January 1996 have not yet been collated.

Before an LVI is appointed, he/she must be a member of an established veterinary practice. For an initial appointment they must have spent at least three months in the practice. They will be subject to interview and procedural training carried out by MAFF. The initial LVI appointment is provisional for a period of six months during which time a field assessment may be carried out by the divisional veterinary manager or one of his or her veterinary officers. If duties have been carried out satisfactorily, full appointment will be granted at the end of the six months period, otherwise further training must be undertaken.

Where LVIs carry out services directly for the Minister, they are paid in accordance with the scale of fees agreed between the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the British Veterinary Association. Where an LVI carries out work directly for his/her client, the fee is a private matter between the client and the LVI.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the certification procedures operated by the local veterinary inspectors. [11693]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 January 1996]: A working party was set up by senior managers of the state veterinary service in September 1993. This working party was chaired by Mr. Hugh Morris, a divisional veterinary officer.

The terms of reference were to examine existing export procedures in both animal health offices and the field; to make recommendations to policy divisions and senior managers to ensure that high standards of veterinary health certification would be maintained and that there were mechanisms in place to monitor those standards.

The report of the working party, which has become known as the Morris report, was written for internal management purposes and was not intended for publication. It confirmed that the necessary information and instructions were already available. However, some deficiencies were identified both in the administrative procedures in some animal health offices and in the standards of identification and examination of animals by local veterinary inspectors. The report made more than 80 recommendations to correct these deficiencies, including the re-writing of existing instructions to make them more user friendly.

All necessary action has been taken on the major recommendations of the report to ensure that high standards of veterinary export certification are maintained.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11920]

Mr. Boswell: Neither the Ministry, nor its agencies nor the Intervention Board executive agency currently uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for external recruitment or for internal recruitment and promotion. The Ministry is consulting the Employment Service about the steps necessary for approved use of the symbol.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what action his Department has taken to supervise collection centres for intra-Community trade in livestock; [11978]

(2) what responsibilities his Department has for the supervision of dealers' premises in respect of intra-Community trade in livestock. [11979]

Mrs. Browning: Local veterinary inspectors or veterinary officers are present to inspect animals during assembly at collection centres and dealers' premises of consignments for export to other member states. In relation to imports from other member states, dealers' premises are subject to random non-discriminatory checks as provided for under EC rules.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many breeding cattle were imported into the United Kingdom during the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [9856]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Official overseas trade statistics recorded 3,842 pure-bred breeding cattle as having been imported into the United Kingdom during the period October 1994 to September 1995. Imports of non-pure-bred breeding cattle are not separately available.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are (a) the guidelines, (b) the enforcement procedures and (c) the monitoring arrangements in respect of the certification of live animals for export by local veterinary inspectors. [11690]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Written instructions are issued by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in the form of animal health circulars and in sets of instructions. They are sent to all veterinary practices which have local veterinary inspectors approved for the certification of live animals for export. Notes for guidance of LVIs on completion of an individual certificate may also be issued with the certificate. In addition, it is incumbent upon every local veterinary inspector to follow the ethical guidance concerning veterinary certification given in the guide to professional conduct issued by the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons.

Where there is evidence of statutory or procedural deficiencies, appropriate action is taken, including prosecution by local authorities.

Where an LVI infringes or fails to comply with his/her conditions of appointment, performs duties unsatisfactorily or is guilty of conduct which indicates that suspension or termination of the appointment may be necessary, an investigation will be mounted and the appropriate action taken.

Where a veterinary surgeon has issued misleading, inaccurate or untrue certificates, the matter may be considered by the disciplinary committee of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons. In several cases, the disciplinary committee has held that the issue of inaccurate certificates has amounted to disgraceful professional conduct. The veterinarian's name has been removed from the Register of Veterinary Surgeons and the veterinarian has been unable to practise.

To monitor the arrangements for veterinary certification, audit visits are carried out by members of the veterinary field service to LVI practices to check that, among other things, the practice has a current set of instructions and that individual LVIs are aware of current procedures. LVIs are required to return copies of completed export certificates to animal health offices. These are checked to see that they have been completed correctly. Apparent errors in certification and non-receipt of copy certificates are followed up with the LVI concerned. Unannounced audit visits are carried out by members of the veterinary field service to check on LVIs carrying out export certification. In addition, certification and consignments of live animals may be checked at the port of export by Ministry staff. Any deficiencies found in certification or procedures are followed up.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he plans to take to ensure that local veterinary inspectors carry out their duties in accordance with his instructions in animal health circular 94/31 on "Procedures for checking the identification of cattle to be exported to EC Member States", and if he will make a statement. [12164]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 January 1996]: Procedures are already in hand to monitor the duties carried out by LVIs in respect of export certification. I refer to my earlier reply today.

Animals (Definition)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will press for a redefinition of animals in the treaty of Rome from agricultural products to sentient beings; and if he will make a statement. [12163]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The Government attach high priority to animal welfare. We secured the declaration, attached to the Maastricht treaty, which calls for full account to be taken of animal welfare in agricultural and other policies. We are considering possible options for building on this declaration as part of our detailed preparations for the intergovernmental conference later this year.

EU Funding

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much in (a) ecus and (b) pounds by standard region and in total the United Kingdom received under the European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund over the last available five years in respect of (i) the structural funds and (ii) the price guarantees. [11654]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 29 January 1996]: A table containing details of UK receipts under the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund is set out. A breakdown by standard region is not available. The guidance section is one of the structural funds. The guarantee section finances market support.

Total UK receipts under the EAGGF guidance and guarantee sections

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Information Technology

Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 131, if he will list all cases where spare computer capacity has been sold to other Departments since 1987, giving the value of each contract. [12075]

Mr. Willetts: Information on the sale of spare computer capacity between Departments is not held centrally.

Chauffeurs

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many chauffeurs are employed by Her Majesty's Government; and what percentage of them are disabled. [12227]

Mr. Willetts: This is an operational matter on which I have asked the chief executive of the Security Facilities Executive—SAFE—to write to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from John King to Mr. Gordon McMaster, dated 29 January 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Deputy Prime Minister seeking information on the number of chauffeurs employed by the Government and what percentage are disabled.

My Agency is responsible for the Government Car Service which employs the majority of the governments' chauffeurs. There are currently 148 GCS drivers/chauffeurs, none of which are at present registered disabled.

The nature of the GCS drivers duties, which includes security and safety considerations, call for people who can meet the exacting physical requirements for the job.

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for 1995–96. [11373]

Mr. Willetts: The table gives the available absenteeism figures for the central Cabinet Office, including No. 10 and the executive agencies for which I am responsible. Figures for previous years and 1995–96 are not available.

| | 1993–94 | 1994–95 |
|---|---|---|
| Central Department | 8.48 | 8.45 |
| COI | 7.76 | 9.67 |
| CS college | 7.00 | 6.40 |
| HMSO | 9.86 | 7.03 |
| OHSA | 8.82 | 14.52 |
| RAS | 8.58 | 12.99 |
| Chessington | 9.00 | 10.37 |
| SAFE | 4.34 | 11.05 |
| TBA | 9.97 | 8.70 |
| Total | 8.35 | 8.61 |

Absence rates represent total days absent divided by total number of staff.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [11505]

Mr. Willetts: Details of running costs and administrative spending by the Cabinet Office, including the Prime Minister's Office, and the Office of Public Service for the years 1989–90 through to 1997–98 are contained in tables 7.5 and 7.6 of my Department's annual report, Cm 2820, copies of which are available in the Members' Library. This years' report, due to be published at the end of March, will reflect the Cabinet Office's new responsibilities, following the machinery of government and other changes.

Public Information Films (Cold Weather)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many public information films on the effects of cold weather on plumbing have been shown in the cinema or on television since 1966, indicating who produced the films and when they were shown on television and cinema screens. [12704]

Mr. Willetts: Many energy efficiency campaigns have been run since 1966. All have contained information on the effects of cold weather on pipes. Details of these campaigns cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the deregulation task force's priority areas for 1996; and what action has arisen as a result of priority area status. [12262]

Mr. Freeman: The priority areas for work in 1995–96 identified by the deregulation task force in its first annual report are: the labour market; planning; building regulations; financial services; the health sector; and longer-term issues, such as risk pricing and reviewing legislation. The task force is also following up areas covered in its 1994–95 report, such as taxation and national insurance, and health and safety.

The task force has been holding meetings with Ministers and officials from the relevant Government Departments. It expects to make recommendations on these areas in its next annual report.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Residence and Asylum Status (Revocation)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the incidences since 1979 when Her Majesty's Government have (a) refused an asylum application and (b) revoked an existing residency or asylum permission granted to a foreign national as a result of the overriding interests of British diplomatic or trade relationships with the country of origin of the individuals concerned. [8646]

Miss Widdecombe: No asylum application has been refused and no grant of refugee status has been revoked on foreign relations or economic grounds.

Crime (Old People)

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what number and proportion of recorded crimes were committed against people aged over the state retirement age in (a) 1975, (b) 1985 and (c) 1995; and if he will provide a breakdown by type of recorded crimes. [10202]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the victims of recorded crime is not routinely collected by the Home Office. However, extracts from an ad hoc survey giving information on the age and gender of victims of recorded offences of violence against the person for 1990 to 1992 were published in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1994", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, after 5 February, in respect of asylum seekers (i) appealing against a negative decision and (ii) applying for asylum in-country, lack of funds will be considered an acceptable reason for failing to attend an interview; and if his Department plans (a) to start interviewing asylum applicants at their homes and (b) to fund their travel-to-interview costs. [11831]

Miss Widdecombe: After 5 February, as at present, applicants will be expected to attend interviews. The immigration rules make it clear that failure, without reasonable explanation, to comply with a request to attend for interview may lead to the refusal of the application. Any reasons put forward by an applicant for failing to attend an interview will continue to be considered against his or her individual circumstances.

The Home Office has no plans to interview asylum applicants at their homes or to pay their travel costs.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the practice of withholding permission to work to asylum applicants for six months after 5 February. [11803]

Miss Widdecombe: The employment concession for asylum seekers is kept under regular review.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the administrative costs that might arise after 5 February in the serving of papers on asylum applicants not receiving benefits who are (a) homeless and (b) living in temporary nightshelters. [11804]

Miss Widdecombe: In cases where the Home Office has been supplied with details of a representative but does not know the whereabouts of the applicant, the decision will be served on the representative. The Immigration Appeals (Notices) Regulations 1984 provide that the requirement to serve a notice is satisfied if the notice is served on a person appointed to act on behalf of the applicant.

However, the Immigration Appeals (Notices) Regulations 1984 also make it clear that there is no requirement to give written notice of a decision if the officer or authority responsible for giving it has no knowledge of the whereabouts or place of abode of the person concerned. The onus will continue to be on the asylum applicant to maintain contact with the Home Office.

Metropolitan Police (Arrests)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) arrested and (b) charged by the Metropolitan police in the latest available period; and if he will break down the figures by age group. [11856]

Mr. Maclean: The available information has been provided by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and is contained in the table.

Arrests and charges in the Metropolitan police district—12 months to June 1995

| Age group | Number of arrests | Number of charges |

| 21–30 | 46,768 | 33,299 |
| 31–40 | 21,650 | 16,016 |
| 41–50 | 7,307 | 5,180 |
| 51 and over | 3,541 | 2,277 |
| Unrecorded age | 15,601 | 4,845 |
| Total | 140,825 | 81,793 |

Police (Complaints)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, columns 484–85, what explanation has been made to him regarding the increase in complaints against the North Wales police for 1994 compared with 1993. [11874]

Mr. Maclean: This is a matter for the chief constable of North Wales, but I understand that the figures for 1995 are expected to show a fall in the number of complaints recorded.

Police (London)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in each of the London divisions in each year since 1988–89; and how many of these officers were allocated to foot patrols. [11855]

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of officers attached to individual divisions is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information on the total number of officers attached to divisions over the past eight years and the overall percentage of this time which was spent on street duties are set out in the table:

| | 1988 | 1989 | 1990 | 1991 | 1992 | 1993 | 1994 | 1995 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Overall Man days (average per day) | 13,684 | 14,000 | 13,431 | 12,915 | 12,704 | 12,768 | 13,121 | 13,384 |
| Percentage of time spent on street duties | 31.1 | 31.8 | 31.9 | 31.8 | 32.3 | 34.6 | 34.9 | 35.0 |

Crime (Young People)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to combat crime among young people. [11857]

Mr. Maclean: Provisions in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 strengthened the powers of the courts to deal with the most serious and persistent juvenile offenders. The single regeneration budget supports many crime prevention activities with a youth focus. My Department also provides core funding for Crime Concern, which works closely with the business sector on a wide range of youth crime prevention programmes. The aim of the new ministerial group on juveniles, which held its first meeting on 18 January, is to strengthen measures to intervene effectively with those children who are most likely to offend.

Mr. J. M. Roberts

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he is proposing to give a substantive response to the submission made on behalf of Mr. J. M. Roberts, J43565, following his letter of 11 July 1995, Ref. PO 11651/95. [12092]

Mr. Kirkhope: Since receiving the letter of my hon. Friend the Member for North Dorset (Mr. Baker), my officials, in consultation with Mr. Roberts' solicitors, have acted to secure further material which may be relevant to Mr. Roberts's conviction. As a result, we expect to be in a position to take a decision about the case soon.

Crime Prevention

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount spent by each police force area on crime prevention for each year since 1990. [10517]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available.

Private Security Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce legislation for the regulation and licensing of the private security industry. [11849]

Mr. Maclean: We are currently considering the case for statutory regulation of the private security industry.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. [11443]

Mr. Howard: Expenditure by my Department on administration, as set out at annexe 3 to the Home Office annual report 1995, Cm 2808, is as follows:

| | | £ million |
|---|---|---|
| 1989–90 | Outturn | 1,085 |

(c) 1991–92: this information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(d) 1993–94: this information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(e) 1994–95: £1,758,692.

(f) 1995–96: expenditure to date £2,055,439. An estimate of the total for the year can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

(g) 1996–97: an estimate for the year can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11447]

Mr. Howard: The information requested is as follows:

1993–94: £232,800

1994–95: £226,154

1995–96: £110,338 (to date).

These figures relate to newspapers and magazines purchased centrally through the Home Office information and library services for the Home Department, including the Prison Service headquarters and the immigration and nationality department. No central record is held of materials purchased from divisional funds, or in respect of purchases by non-departmental public bodies for which my Department is responsible.

My Department purchases or obtains free of charge a wide range of newspapers and periodical publications. A list of their titles has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11386]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The annual telephone costs to my Department are as follows:

£ thousands

| Year | Department (excluding agencies and non-departmental public bodies) | Agencies | Non-departmental public bodies |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 4,706 | 8,400 | 392 |
| 1994–95 | 4,577 | 8,995 | 381 |
| 1995–96 (provisional) | 5,019 | [1]647 | 406 |
| 1996–97 (provisional) | 4,816 | [1]1,055 | 455 |

[1] Details of the provisional expenditure by the Prison Service executive agency in 1995–96 and 1996–97 are not yet available.

Details of expenditure prior to 1993–94 are not available.

Staff of my Department in central London offices make use of CCTA's metropolitan telephone service—MTS—which provides fully managed telephone and directory services. The MTS requires the Department to maintain a current directory of staff, location and telephone extensions to enable the MTS operators to provide a directory inquiry service to internal and external callers. All offices on the MTS are connected to the Government telephone network—GTN—as are many other offices of my Department outside the central London area. The GTN dialling codes booklet is available to all staff in these offices. It enables them to identify the operator in any other Government building for inquiry services.

The Home Office staff telephone directory is available to all staff in my Department and its agencies, and to staff in certain Home Office sponsored non-departmental public bodies. Other non-departmental public bodies produce their own internal telephone directories.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11445]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies assume accountability for all the offices in which they have occupations, including any vacant space therein, from 1 April 1996 only. Up to that date, responsibility for the whole of the Government common user office estate—CUE—in which Government Departments were housed, rests with Property Holdings, and, prior to 1 April 1990, rested with the Property Services Agency. That part of the question covering previous years is, therefore, a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

For 1996–97, the Home Office received a transfer of £1.4 million from Property Holdings to cover the costs of vacant space in offices occupied by the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies.

For future years, efficiency plans being prepared within the Department are expected to lead to a reduced requirement for office accommodation, and the resultant rationalisation of the estate will enable the Home Office to deliver greater value for money across the range of services it provides.

Holding Centre (Glasgow Airport)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has held with the British Airports Authority concerning the building of a holding centre at Glasgow airport; what estimate he has made of the cost of construction; and if he will make a statement. [11675]

Mr. Kirkhope: There have been no discussions with the British Airports Authority about building a holding centre at Glasgow airport.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the appointment of a chairman for the Criminal Cases Review Commission. [12323]

Mr. Kirkhope: An announcement will be made once the process of selection and appointment currently under way is completed.

British Nationality (Hong Kong)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made as to likely changes in the ratio of dependants to principal beneficiaries under the British nationality (Hong Kong) selection scheme. [12526]

Mr. Kirkhope: With almost 97 per cent. of the principal registrations under the scheme now completed, we do not expect there to be any change in this ratio. Some spouses and dependants who were not included in the original application may apply for registration before the end-1996 deadline, but these are not likely to affect the figure significantly.

Restraint Techniques

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the commissioner of police for London on (a) the conduct of individual police officers and (b) the practices in respect of the unlawful killing of Mr. Shiji Lapite; what action he proposes to take to compensate Mr. Lapite's family; what measures he proposes to alter the practices which led to Mr. Lapite's death; and if he will make a statement. [12764]

Mr. Maclean: I understand that, following the verdict of the coroner's inquest, the case has been referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions who will again consider the criminal aspects of the case. It would not be appropriate for me to comment further on the details of the case at this stage.

The Association of Chief Police Officers is currently considering its guidelines on the use of restraint techniques. I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that no claim for compensation has yet been received from Mr. Lapite's family.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ban the use of neck choke holds by

(a) the police and (b) prison officers; and if he will make a statement. [12722]

Mr. Maclean: No. The law provides that any person may use reasonable force in upholding the law. What particular means of restraint is reasonable is a matter for the courts in the circumstances of the particular case.

Police Grant

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he plans to allocate police grant in 1996–97. [13101]

Mr. Howard: I yesterday laid before the House the police grant report (England and Wales) 1996–97. This should be read in conjunction with, for England, the Local government finance report, the special grant report (No. 16) and, for Wales, with the information laid before the House this afternoon by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

The police grant report includes the allocation of funding for the 5,000 extra officers announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

[2] Figure for the Metropolitan Police does not include funding allocated to the Receiver under the Other Services Block SSA for school crossing patrols, Magistrates' Courts and the Probation Service.

[3] Figure for the City does not include Capital Financing and Other Services Block SSAs which are allocated to the Common Council of the City of London as a whole in respect of all its functions.

[4] Figures for South Wales and Gwent police authorities have been adjusted to show what they would have received in 1995-96 had the transfer of the Rhymney Valley from South Wales to Gwent, due to take effect on 1 April 1996, been effective for 1995-96. These adjustments enable valid comparisons to be made between these forces' allocations for 1995-96 and 1996-97.

Police Cautions (Burglary)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the practice and policy of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis in respect of cautioning persons who have been apprehended following a reported or suspected burglary; and if he will make a statement; [11261]

(2) how many people have been cautioned in the Metropolitan police area over the past two years following their being apprehended following a reported or suspected burglary. [11262]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 29 January 1996]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that Metropolitan police practice and policy on the cautioning of offenders follows guidance provided in the Home Office circular number 18 of 1994 "The Cautioning of Offenders".

During 1994, 959 people were cautioned in the Metropolitan police district for burglary offences. Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will given an estimate on the number of physical attacks on rough sleepers in 1995; and if he will make a statement; [9974]

(2) if his Department keeps official statistics on the number of physical attacks on rough sleepers; and if he will make a statement. [9975]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 29 January 1996]: This information is not collected centrally and there are no plans to do so.

HEALTH

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors and nurses worked in the NHS in each year from 1992 to 1995; and how many currently work in the NHS. [9504]

Mr. Malone: For figures relating to doctors, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health gave the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish) on 18 December 1995, Official Report, columns 947-50. For the figures relating to the nurses, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 8 November 1995, Official Report, column 973.

Tobacco Advertising

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the Government health warnings on tobacco advertisements on the consumption of tobacco by teenagers. [10762]

Mr. Horam: We are not aware of any research which looks specifically at the effect of health warnings on consumption of tobacco by teenagers. In practice, many factors influence the teenagers' consumption of tobacco—notably, price and parental influence. It is very difficult to isolate the specific effect of health warnings on consumption from the influence of other factors.

District Nurses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patient contacts there were with district nurses in each year since 1989–90. [10928]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is published in "Patient Care in the Community, District Nursing, Summary for Information for 1994–95, England", copies of which are available in the Library.

NHS Finance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the overall NHS outturn against revenue and capital cash limits in 1994–95. [10934]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table.

National Health Service Cash Limited Spending (Voted) 1994–95

£ million

| | Final cash limit | Outturn |
|---|---|---|
| Revenue[1] | 22,386 | 22,289 |

HealthNet

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the proposed applications for data to be transmitted on HealthNet; and how patient consent will be obtained for these purposes. [11189]

Mr. Horam: The following applications will not process patient identifiable information, so that the question of patient consent does not arise:

purchase of and payment for supplies;

knowledge bases;

bulletin boards;

statistical databases;

clinical education and training applications.

Patient information is involved in the following applications:

Test investigation requests and results;

GP referrals;

discharge information;

shared patient record information;

patient administration information;

commissioning and contracting information services;

prescription information.

In August 1994, the Department issued draft guidance on confidentiality of patient information. The guidance has been re-drafted to address many comments received, including those from the British Medical Association and the Data Protection Registrar. The guidance, which will be published shortly, will clarify who may have access to patient information and will require the national health service to inform patients about the purposes for which patient information is used. The guidance will apply to all patient information, whether conveyed on paper or via computer systems and networks. Copies of the guidance will be placed in the Library.

Personal Information

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the categories of those who will have authorised access to patients' identifiable personal health information through the HealthNet network; what will be the process for obtaining patients' consent for such information to be available to these categories; and how patients will be informed that access has been made. [11679]

Mr. Horam: The categories of those who have authorised access to patients' identifiable personal health information, and the process for obtaining patients' consent and for informing patients are the same, whether or not the information is to be passed over a network.

In August 1994, the Department issued draft guidance on confidentiality of patient information. The guidance has been re-drafted to address many comments received, including those from the British Medical Association and the Data Protection Registrar. The guidance, which will be published shortly, will clarify who may have access to patient information and will require the national health service to inform patients about the purposes for which patient information is used. The guidance will apply to all patient information, whether conveyed on paper or via computer systems and network. Copies of the guidance will be placed in the Library.

Psychiatric Hospitals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will write to the chairs of all health authorities with a psychiatric hospital due to close by the year 2000 to ask for evidence to satisfy him that there are adequate replacement services. [12292]

Mr. Bowis: The national health service executive have already made it clear that no psychiatric hospital should close until appropriate replacement services are in place.

General Practitioner Practices

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of general practitioner practices were below minimum standards by family health services authority for each year since 1990. [10519]

Mr. Malone: Available data are contained in health service indicators, copies of which are available in the Library.

Insulin Injections

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to provide free injection pens for insulin injections were a clinical need for such injections has been approved. [10687]

Mr. Malone: The clinical needs of people requiring insulin injections may be met through the existing provision of disposable syringes and needles on general practitioner prescription. Disposable injection pens are also available on GP prescription and insulin injection systems may be provided free through the hospital service.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11538]

Mr. Horam: The buildings occupied by the Department of Health and its agencies formed part of the Government civil estate and then, from 1990, the Government common user estate. Vacant space has been the responsibility of Property Services Agency for the civil estate, then Property Holdings for the common user estate. From 1 April 1996, Departments take over responsibility for the vacant space in their buildings on the common user estate.

The estimated annual cost to the Department of Health, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties is £200,000 in 1991–92, £200,000 in 1993–94 and £910,000 in 1996–97. The increase in 1996–97 reflects the transfer of responsibility for vacant space from property holdings to the Department.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11537]

Mr. Horam: Details of the Department's administration costs from 1989–90 to 1993–94 are provided in the Department's annual report for 1995–96 to 1997–98, Cm 2812, copies of which are available in the Library. Figures for the Department of Health for 1979–80, prior to the split of the DHSS, are not available.

Departmental expenditure for 1994–95 was £242 million, and the estimated outturn for 1995–96 is £235 million. The planned expenditure for 1996–97 is £281 million, but this is on a new basis which is not comparable with previous figures.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11539]

Mr. Horam: Estimates of the expenditure of the Department of Health, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenditure for 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 are shown in the table.

1993–94: £1,823,000

1994–95: £1,698,000

1995–96: £1,436,000 (estimate)

1996–97: £264,000 (non-departmental public bodies only)

Figures for the central Department and its agencies and complete data for the non-departmental public bodies are not available for 1979–80, 1989–90 and 1991–92. The Department formed part of the Department of Health and Social Security until July 1988 and for 1989–90 and 1991–92 the Department's accounting records did not separately identify overseas travel costs from United Kingdom travel expenditure. Estimates for 1996–97 for the central Department and its agencies are not yet available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. [11536]

Mr. Horam: For the amount spent on hospitality expenditure by the Department and its agencies for 1994–95, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Health gave the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) and the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 1 May 1995, Official Report, column 23. For details of expenditure for the years 1990–91 to 1993–94, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State for Health gave the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 1 November 1994, Official Report, columns 1073-74.

For the amount spent on hospitality during 1995–96, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Newham, North-West on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 935. Estimates of expenditure in 1996–97 are not yet available.

Information on hospitality expenditure for non-departmental public bodies is not available for 1979–80. Figures for the other years requested are shown.

NDPBs

1989–90: £10,918

1991–92: £16,416

1993–94: £21,208

1994–95: £21,152

1995–96: £14,378

1996–97: £15,000

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11540]

Mr. Horam: The expenditure in the Department was as follows:

1993–94: £45,740

1994–95: £44,130

1995–96: £31,087 (up-to end December 1995)

Hospices

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for the separate dedicated registration of (a) adult and (b) children's hospices. [12391]

Mr. Horam: None at present.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what factors underlay his decision to end the separate central funding of children's hospices from 1994–95; and what consultations his Department undertook with (a) children's hospices and (b) local health authorities prior to that decision; [12393]

(2) what discussions he has had with local health authorities in respect of the target of 50:50 funding for children's hospices from health authority purchasers; [12390]

(3) if it is his policy that children's hospices should be eligible for matching funding from the NHS. [12394]

Mr. Bowis: There was never separate central funding for children's hospices. The target of 50:50 funding was a national target and did not apply to individual hospices. It was never applied to children's hospices. From 1994–95, funding for specialist palliative care has been built into health authorities' general allocations. This was announced in the NHS executive letter EL(93)14 issued in February 1993, copies of which are available in the Library. Services for children with life-threatening illnesses are now eligible for funding and health authority commissioners can negotiate with children's hospices for the services that they wish to purchase in the same way as they do for adult hospices.

Mr. Cunnigham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were cared for in each of the last three years in children's hospices in the United Kingdom. [12392]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospice beds there were in each of the last five years. [12716]

Mr. Horam: The available information is shown in the table.

Number of hospice beds from 1991 to 1995 (England)

| Year | Number of beds |
|---|---|
| 1991 | 2,171 |
| 1992 | 2,321 |

Deregulation (Still Birth Death Registration) Order 1996

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what cost-benefit analysis has been made of the saving to (a) business and (b) public funds accruing from the Deregulation (Still Birth and Death Registration) Order 1996. [12259]

Mr. Horam: I am advised by the Registrar General that he does not anticipate that there will be a large take-up of the proposed facility for the making of declarations of death and still birth before any registrar in England and Wales. There is likely to be no impact on business. Local authorities may incur some small additional expenditure in postage and telephone costs.

Methadone (Child-proof Bottles)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department issues in respect of regulating the dispensing of methadone into child-proof bottles. [12290]

Mr. Malone: None. However, the council of the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain has, since 1991, recommended that all dispensed preparations of methadone mixture should be supplied in containers with child-resistant closures. From 1 January 1995, it has been a professional requirement that all liquid medicines dispensed by pharmacists are dispensed in child-resistant containers.

Sheffield Children's Hospital

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 549, on what date he invited the Sheffield children's hospital to co-ordinate the monitoring of the occupancy of intensive care paediatric beds; on what date the hospital agreed to co-ordinate the monitoring; and if the decision was taken by the trust. [12319]

Mr. Bowis: We asked the chief executive of Sheffield children's hospital national health service trust to help us arrange this exercise on 20 December 1995 and he agreed immediately. I am most grateful for the trust's co-operation.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 January, Official Report, column 549, on what date the Sheffield children's hospital commenced the monitoring of the occupancy of intensive care paediatric beds; what resources are to be put into the monitoring exercise; and at what intervals each hospital asked for an information update. [12321]

Mr. Bowis: On 23 January. An administrator has been appointed to collect and analyse daily returns from the paediatric intensive care units.

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis Ministers judged the adequacy of intensive care paediatric beds before their monitoring by Sheffield Children's hospital. [12322]

Mr. Bowis: It is for health authorities to assess the health needs of their resident populations and contract for the services necessary to meet their needs. The arrangements we have made for Sheffield children's hospital to undertake a national survey of occupancy and demand for paediatric intensive care beds will assist them with this task.

Children (Life-threatening Illnesses)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on services to children with life-threatening illnesses and their families; and if he will publish the results of those studies. [12389]

Mr. Bowis: In February 1992, we announced that £1 million would be provided each year for five years to pilot new services in England for children with life-threatening conditions and their families. A number of projects have been commissioned, spread evenly across England, which have included both statutory and voluntary initiatives. These projects cover hospital-based services, community home nursing services, voluntary respite and sitting services, counselling and psychological support.

This initiative still has a year to run, but in June 1994 an interim report was prepared jointly by the Association for Children with Life-threatening or Terminal Conditions and their Families—ACT—and the Department of Health. Copies of this report can be obtained from ACT.

NHS Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, columns 161–62, on NHS staff, if he will provide a regional breakdown of the figures. [12775]

Mr. Malone: Provisional expenditure, by region is shown in the table.

3. Managerial staff consists of general and senior managers for health authorities and executive board members and senior managers for NHS trusts.
4. The figures are based upon gross costs including employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions.

Casualty Departments

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of casualty departments by region. [12632]

Mr. Horam: The latest available figures are shown in the table. Information is collected on the basis of trusts and directly managed units with accident and emergency services. Some trusts include more than one hospital each with its own accident and emergency department.

Mental Health Beds (Wandsworth)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health beds there were in Wandsworth health authority area in each of the last five years. [12636]

Mr. Horam: Information on ward beds for patients with mental illness is published annually in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Cancer-related Deaths

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will estimate the number of patients who died in hospital in each of the last five years as a result of cancer. [12717]

Mr. Horam: The number of deaths from cancer in hospitals and communal establishments for the care of the sick are published, for 1990–92, in "Mortality statistics—general", OPCS series DH1 Nos. 24, 26 and 27 (table 7), copies of which are available in the Library. Figures for 1993 onwards are not yet available.

Tuberculosis

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the notification rate of tuberculosis by health authorities in each of the last five years. [12620]

Mr. Horam: The figures are shown in the table

NHS Eyesight Tests

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS eyesight tests were conducted in each year since 1978. [12622]

Mr. Malone: The numbers of national health service sight tests paid for by family health services authorities in England in each year since 1978 are as follows:

1978–79: 7.894 millions
1979–80: 8.331 millions
1980–81: 8.332 millions
1981–82: 8.469 millions
1982–83: 8.678 millions
1983–84: 9.266 millions
1984–85: 9.882 millions
1985–86: 10.246 millions
1986–87: 10.615 millions

1992–93: 5.528 millions
1993–94: 5.935 millions
1994–95: 6.383 millions

In April 1989, NHS sight tests were restricted to certain groups of the population. The figures for 1989–90 include some sight tests paid for in 1989–90 but conducted in 1988–89 under the previous scheme and are not, therefore, directly comparable with those for 1990–91 onwards.

Hospital Admissions

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many non-elective general and acute admissions there were by region and quarter for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96. [12624]

Fast Track NHS Executive.

Notes:
1. All estimates are derived from the NHS Executive's quarterly fast track management system. Figures for 1993–94 and 1994–95 have been adjusted to take account of definitional changes to allow direct comparison with 1995–96 figures.
2. The estimates are on a "purchaser basis" and relate to activity purchased using NHS funds by health authorities and GP fundholders in England. This includes activity purchased from private hospitals and NHS hospitals outside England, but excludes private patients and patients from outside England treated in English hospitals.
3. The figures are on a different basis to the long standing series published annually in "Ordinary and day case Admissions for England". The annual series is on a "provider basis", and counts all patients treated in NHS hospitals in England, including private patients and patients from outside England.

Nurse Prescribing

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on nurse prescribing. [12628]

Mr. Malone: Preliminary findings show that the existing nurse prescribing pilot scheme is improving patient health care. Plans are being developed to test the scheme on a wider basis.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the effect nurse prescribing has on quality of care for patients. [12629]

Mr. Malone: My Department has commissioned Professor K. Luker, department of nursing, at the university of Liverpool, to carry out a detailed evaluation into the nurse prescribing pilot project, currently under way at eight sites.

General Practitioner Beds

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of GP beds in each of the last five years. [12630]

Mr. Horam: The available information on hospital beds, including information on general practitioner maternity beds, is classified by ward category, recognising the flexible use of bed facilities, and is published annually in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospital Beds

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) beds and (b) acute beds there were at St. George's, Tooting, and Guy's and St. Thomas's trusts in each of the last five years. [12634]

Mr. Horam: The national health service trusts were established on 1 April 1993. Details by trust are therefore available from 1993–94 and can be found in the publication "Bed availability for England 1993–94 and 1994–95", copies of which are available in the Library.

"Employer's Guide to Stress"

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 28 November, Official Report, column 602, how many copies of the document "Employer's Guide to Stress" were printed; and if he will list all other costs incurred in connection with the document. [12773]

Mr. Bowis: Some 5,000 copies of this document were printed. No costs other than those set out in my reply to the hon. Member on 28 November, Official Report, column 602, have been incurred by the Department of Health.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if his Department employed consultants to advise on the form used to apply for rebates on prescription charges for 60 to 65-year-old men following the decision of the European Court; [12533]

(2) how many men between the ages of 60 and 65 years have claimed rebates on prescription charges following the decision of the European Court to treat men between these ages equally; and if he will make a statement. [12534]

Mr. Malone: No consultants were involved in advising the Department on the design of the refund claim form.

About 195,000 registrations in total have been received by the prescription claims processing unit. The unit expects to have issued all remaining claim forms by the end of this week. To date, 114,350 completed claim forms have been received.

Drug Misuse Database

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 16 January, Official Report, column 557, on the ownership of the drug misuse database, if he intends to make the data codes and structure of the database available to all those organisations that supply software to local drug agencies; and if he will make a statement. [12613]

Mr. Bowis: Yes, provided any other copyright owners agree to the information being used for this purpose.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the PFI initiatives that have been approved so far in London indicating the capital cost and revenue cost for each scheme for the NHS in each of the next five years. [12631]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 15 January, Official Report, column 343, and to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on 6 December, Official Report, column 224.

National Health Service (Capital Projects)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the capital projects in the NHS with works costs of over £1 million (a) in the primary sector, hospital sector and (b) in total in each financial year since 1990–91; if he will indicate the cost of each project; and if he will make a statement. [12633]

Mr. Horam: The national health service has invested over £1.594 billion in big building projects over the period 1990–91 to date. The majority of these projects will be in the hospital sector. The information does not distinguish between capital projects in the primary or hospital sectors. For information from 1990–91 to 1993–94, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary for Health gave the right hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett) on 23 February 1995, Official Report, column 329. Information on the spending for each project with a works cost of over £1 million for the financial year 1994–95 will also be placed in the Library.

Acute Hospital Beds

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of acute hospital beds in each of the last five years. [12718]

Mr. Horam: The information is published annually in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library.

Emergency Admissions

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has carried out on the changes in levels of emergency admissions to hospitals in the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [12619]

Mr. Horam: National data are backed by a number of local studies which confirm that the rise is genuine. We are supporting five local projects to identify any lessons which can be learnt and examples of good practice.

National Health Service (Complaints)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of complaints about the NHS in each of the last five years. [12623]

Mr. Horam: The most recent available figures are shown in the tables.

| Year | Number of complaints |
|---|---|
| Hospital and community health services | |
| 1990–91 | 37,350 |
| 1991–92 | 51,511 |
| 1992–93 | 58,889 |
| 1993–94 | 87,184 |
| 1994–95 | 100,033 |
| Family health services | |
| 1990 | 2,025 |
| 1991 | 2,205 |
| 1992 | 1,974 |
| 1993 | 2,520 |
| 1994 | 2,490 |

These figures should be seen in the context of total NHS activity.

The number of complaints for hospital and community health services represents only 0.4 per cent. of the number of in-patient episodes and first out-patient attendances.

The increase in number of complaints over the last five years reflects rising public expectations in general as well as the specific impact of the patients charter in making patients more aware that their complaints will be taken seriously.

Official Hospitality

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the budget for official hospitality by his Department for 1995–96. [12625]

Mr. Horam: For the projected amount of expenditure on hospitality during 1995–96, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 18 December 1995, Official Report, column 935.

Casualty Units (Vacancies)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of vacancies in medical posts in casualty units around the country. [12627]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Ward Closures (London)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what notification has been received by his Department in respect of ward closures at St. George's, Tooting, and Guy's and St. Thomas' NHS trust. [12635]

Mr. Horam: Neither of these trusts has recently notified the Department of ward closures.

SCOTLAND

Locate in Scotland (Inward Investment)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans next to meet representatives in the Galloway and Nithsdale area to discuss how Locate in Scotland can best attract industry and inward investment to that area; if he will liaise with the President of the Board of Trade on such matters; and if he will make a statement. [9287]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present for such a meeting. I have, however, recently agreed to meet representatives of Dumfries and Galloway regional council to discuss the economy of Upper Nithsdale and the Machars and this meeting is currently being arranged.

My right hon. Friend liaises closely with the President of the Board of Trade on a wide range of issues affecting industry throughout Scotland.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Scotland if he will make a statement on the funding provided to local authorities for the purchase of speech and language therapy for children with a record of needs. [11637]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Where they make provision for a recorded child, education authorities have a statutory duty to ensure adequate provision of speech and language therapy where this has been identified as one of the child's special educational needs. The sum of £3 million is included in the annual local government financial settlement to enable education authorities to discharge this duty by contracting with health boards and other providers of speech and language therapy services.

Monofilament Nets

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received, and from whom on the Inshore Fishing (Prohibition of Carriage of Monofilament Gill Nets) (Scotland) Order 1986 as part of the consultation process. [11577]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Of the 95 organisations and interests consulted about the proposed amendment, responses were received from:

Atlantic Salmon Trust
Association of Scottish District Salmon Fishery Boards
West of Scotland Fish Producers' Organisation
Clyde Fishermen's Association
Scottish Fishermen's Federation
Anglo Scottish Fish Producers' Organisation Ltd.
South Wales, Sea Fisheries Committee
Highland Regional Council
Mallaig and North West Fishermen's Association
Highlands and Islands Enterprise
Federation of Highland and Islands Fishermen
Northern Ireland Fishermen's Federation
Hooktone Ltd.
National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations
Macduff Shipyards
United Fish Selling Ltd.
Salmon Net Fishing Association of Scotland
Scottish Natural Heritage
Joint Nature Conservation Committee
English Nature
Royal Society for the Protection of Birds
River Tweed Commissioners
Association of Chief Police Officers (Scotland)
Marine Conservation Society
The Fishmongers Company.

In summary, the sea fishing organisations favoured the proposed change. The majority of the salmon fishing interests could accept a derogation for large mesh nets. Conservation interests were concerned that the change might lead to an increase in the incidental capture of marine mammals, and asked for this to be monitored.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the effect of the ban on the carriage and use of monofilament gill nets in Scottish waters prior to the consultation process. [11578]

Mr. Robertson: Research undertaken by the marine laboratory, Aberdeen shows no evidence that large mesh monofilament nets will result in a larger by-catch than similar sized nets made of other synthetic materials.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the results of the consultation exercise before making changes too the legislation on the Inshore Fishing (Prohibition of Carriage of Monofilament Nets) (Scotland) Order 1986. [11579]

Mr. Robertson: Copies of the responses to the consultation exercise are available from the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department on request.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the future monitoring of the use of monofilament gill nets. [11580]

Mr. Robertson: The arrangements already in place for monitoring by-catches of cetaceans in fishing nets will be extended to any large mesh monofilament gill nets.

EU Funding

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the schemes approved for European funding in Scotland by (a) name, (b) region and (c) level of expenditure under (i) PESCA and (ii) Leader II. [11588]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Implementation of the UK PESCA programme and the Leader II programmes in Scotland is carried out at a local level as provided for in the approved programmes.

For PESCA, the two Scottish sub-programmes are delivered by local partnerships responsible for implementing business plans approved by the Scottish Office. For Leader II, separate programmes are managed by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise through business plans prepared and implemented by local action groups. Individual projects are selected for support by these local groups, within the terms of the approved business plans.

The tables detail the groups and the approved budgets for each plan.

[11968]

Mr. Raymond S. ## Mr. Stefan Adolf Kock

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in which years since 1990 Mr. Stefan Adolf Kock has appeared on the register of potential public appointees. [12732]

Mr. Kynoch: Mr. Kock does not appear on the current Scottish Office public appointments list and as far as I am aware has never applied for an appointment on a body sponsored by my Department.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11410]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Most of the office space occupied by the Scottish Office is part of the Government's common user estate—CUE—and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will provide the details of vacant space on the CUE which are available centrally. Information regarding other property occupied by the Scottish Office, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally and details could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11411]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on overseas travel and accommodation costs in the Scottish Office and its individual agencies is not held separately. It cannot be disaggregated from total expenditure on travel and accommodation without disproportionate costs in staff time.

Information on non-departmental bodies is not kept centrally.

Children (Scotland) Act 1995

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of state for Scotland if he will make a statement on the necessary implications for the new unitary authorities of the implementation of the Children (Scotland) Act. [11618]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Many of the provisions in the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 require significant preparation and training if they are to be successfully implemented. For this reason, the views of a number of organisations, including the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities, were taken into account in setting a date of April 1997 for the implementation of those provisions involving local authorities.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how the loss of income to local authorities as a result of parents choosing non-local authority provision for the nursery voucher scheme will be calculated; and at what stage in the year a local authority will know how its funding has been affected. [11619]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: When an authority learns how many vouchers parents have presented at its schools, it wil be able to calculate the resulting income.

Voluntary Organisations

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the allocations of funding for the current year and each of the past five years to voluntary organisations eligible for assistance under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. [11673]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table. Allocations of funding provided by the Scottish Office to voluntary organisations under section 10(1) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act for the current year and each of the past five years are:

1990–91: £4.483 million
1991–92: £4.830 million
1992–93: £5.213 million
1993–94: £5.373 million
1994–95: £6.745 million
1995–96: £7.202 million (budget figure)

Voluntary organisations are eligible for assistance from local authorities under section 10(3) of the Act. Information on this funding is not held centrally.

Prisoners (Escapes)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) male prisoners and (b) female prisoners have escaped from custody while (i) travelling to and from hospital and (ii) undergoing hospital treatment in each of the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [11674]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Dr. Norman A. Godman, dated 30 January 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your Question about the number of male and female prisoners who have escaped from custody whilst (i) travelling to and from hospital and (ii) undergoing hospital treatment in each of the past 10 years.

To provide the information you requested would only be achieved at disproportionate cost but you may find it helpful to have the number of escapes of category B prisoners from hospital escort since 1991. The information is as follows:

| Year | Male | Female |
|---|---|---|
| 1991 | 4 | — |
| 1992 | 8 | — |
| 1993 | 8 | 1 |
| 1994 | 6 | — |
| 1995 | 6 | — |

Advocates Depute

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the results of his review of the role and remuneration of advocates depute. [12128]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The review is being carried out by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate. A working group, appointed by his predecessor and chaired by the Solicitor-General for Scotland, has completed taking evidence and hopes to report to my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate by the middle of March.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current salary of an advocate depute; and what has been the average length of service of advocates depute in the last 10 years for which information is available. [12135]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The current salary of an advocate depute is £43,147. The average length of service of advocate deputes in the last 10 years has been three years.

Departmental Vacancies

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what in the current establishment of (a) the Crown Office and (b) the procurator fiscal service; and how many vacancies there are in each. [12129]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The current establishment of the Crown Office is 140.1 and there are three vacancies—two administrative and one typing grade.

The current establishment of the procurator fiscal service is 920.3 and there are four vacancies—legal grades.

A legal recruitment board is scheduled to take place next month to fill the current vacancies and any which arise during this year.

Alcoholic Liquor Sales (Prosecutions)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many licence holders were prosecuted for selling alcoholic liquor to persons who were under age in the last 10 years for which information is available; and in how many cases convictions were obtained. [12130]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of persons proceeded against where the main offence was under section 68(1) of the Licensing (Scotland) Act is in the table.

| Year | Number proceeded against | Charge proved |
|---|---|---|
| 1985 | 175 | 90 |

| 1990 | 134 | 68 |
| 1991 | 151 | 63 |
| 1992 | 80 | 39 |
| 1993 | 77 | 35 |
| 1994 | 81 | 29 |

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many licence holders were prosecuted by the procurator fiscal at Linlithgow for selling alcoholic liquor to persons who were under age in the last 10 years for which information is available; and in how many cases convictions were obtained. [12131]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of persons proceeded against in Linlithgow sheriff court and West Lothian district court where the main offence was under section 68(1) of the Licensing (Scotland) Act is as follows:

| Year | Number proceeded against | Charge proved |
|---|---|---|
| 1985 | 2 | 0 |

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Lord Advocate last issued directions to procurators fiscal with regard to the policy to be adopted in relation to prosecutions for the sale of alcoholic liquor to persons who are under age. [12132]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has not issued directions to procurators fiscal with regard to the prosecution of persons who are alleged to have contravened the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976. General guidelines on the prosecution of all summary offences, and on the use of alternatives to prosecution, were issued to procurators fiscal on 1 December 1995.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy with regard to the prosecution of (a) licence holders who sell alcoholic liquor to persons who are under age and (b) persons who are under age who purchase alcoholic liquor. [12133]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The prosecution of persons charged with a contravention of section 68 of the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976—prohibition on sale of alcoholic liquor to a person under 18—is a matter for my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate. Procurators fiscal will take court proceedings in cases where there is sufficient evidence and where, having regard to all the circumstances, a prosecution would be in the public interest.

Labour Statistics

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new jobs were created in Scotland in each year since 1979 to the last date for which figures are available; and if he will list how many in each year were (a) part time and (b) full time. [12709]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is not available.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of jobs which have been moved out of Scotland in each of the past 16 years; and if he will indicate how many went to (a) the rest of the United Kingdom, (b) the rest of the EU and (c) the rest of the world. [12710]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested is not available.

Pre-school Education Initiative

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made with arrangements for the evaluation of the pre-school education initiative as proposed in the invitation to local authorities to submit pilot schemes issued by his Department last month. [13127]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish Office is today inviting several research institutions to respond to a specification for an implementation evaluation of the pilot. The remit for this evaluation is wide. It demands that the evaluators look at the experience of parents and providers; examine the way vouchers are used and their effects; and look at the patterns of provision that emerge and at the growth in places that is achieved. We are serious about learning from the pilot; and we are demonstrating that in what we do.

Film Production

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to increase film production in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [13139]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend attaches great importance to the development of the film industry in Scotland. Scottish Office funding for film has risen from £1 million in 1993–94 to almost £1.5 million in the current financial year. This includes an additional £180,000 for the Scottish Film Council to enable it to commission a CD-ROM, for delivery in April this year, which will give film makers throughout the world access to information about Scotland.

My noble Friend the Minister with responsibility for the arts in Scotland has held a number of discussions with leading figures in the UK and overseas film industry to seek their views on what more can be done to stimulate film production in Scotland. In addition, two studies have been commissioned from Hydra Associates. One is examining measures that might be taken to stimulate the film and television industry in Scotland and the other focuses on the need to improve the present arrangements for funding major film productions. Both studies are due to be completed next month.

Mental Health (Hospital Transfers)

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the security arrangements at Dykebar hospital, Paisley, with particular reference to an incident involving a patient who had been transferred from Carstairs state hospital. [9370]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The security arrangements for restricted patients at Dykebar hospital are kept under review by Renfrewshire Healthcare NHS trust. The level of security and supervision imposed on individual patients will reflect the circumstances of each case and, in particular, considerations of public safety.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements are in place for assessing the security risk of patients who have been transferred from Carstairs state hospital to community-based mental health hospitals and who have subsequently escaped or left such hospitals; and if he will make a statement. [9373]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1996]: Public safety is the prime consideration when a restricted patient escapes or absconds from a mental health hospital. Any subsequent action to alert the general public and to effect recapture will reflect that priority. The procedures followed when any such incident occurs are set out in the Scottish Office memorandum on procedure, copies of which have been placed in the Library. The circumstances of any escape or absconding are carefully reviewed. Where appropriate, the patient is returned immediately to the state hospital.

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the procedure for transferring an individual committed to Carstairs state hospital to mainstream community hospitals dealing with mental health; what is the range of security measures which can be made available; what restrictions are placed upon the free movement of such patients outwith the curtilage and precincts of the hospital; how (a) the risks to the community and (b) the needs of the individual are assessed and by which bodies; and if he will make a statement; [9372]

(2) if patients transferred from the Carstairs state hospital who are transferred to community-based hospitals dealing with mental health are, or can be, made subject to security restrictions; what options are available for dealing with such individuals; who determines what arrangements should be put in place; and if he will make a statement; [9369]

(3) what arrangements are in place to ensure the safety of the community in the vicinity of local mental health hospitals, with particular reference to patients transferred from Carstairs state hospital; what assessment is made of the need for security when such a patient is transferred; what reassessment is made when such a patient absents him or herself from the hospital; and if he will make a statement. [9368]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The transfer of a patient, who is subject to the special restrictions in section 62 of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984, from the state hospital, Carstairs, to a local mental health hospital requires my consent, which will be given only when I am satisfied, on the basis of reports from the responsible medical officer, my Department's psychiatric adviser and other relevant information, that the patient no longer requires treatment in the special security of the state hospital and that the arrangements proposed for treatment and supervision in the local hospital are appropriate. Such transfers constitute an important step in the rehabilitation of the patient and are designed to begin a gradual but supervised process towards eventual integration into the community. Treatment plans in each case are geared to individual circumstances and reflect both the health and safety requirements of the patient and public protection considerations.

Movement outwith the hospital is permitted only following careful assessment by the clinical team, in collaboration, where appropriate, with other professional interests, and with the approval of my Department. Initially, the patient will be escorted by hospital staff.

The progress of a restricted patient in a local hospital is carefully monitored and regular reports are submitted to the Scottish Office. In addition, my Department's psychiatric adviser visits each patient annually and will do so more frequently, if required. Should a patient not respond satisfactorily or abscond from the hospital, the treatment plan is completely re-assessed. Where necessary, the patient can be returned immediately to the state hospital.

The procedures to be followed, in cases where transfer or leave of absence of restricted patients fail to be considered, are set out in a Scottish Office memorandum on procedure, a copy of which I have placed in the Library.

Highway Maintenance Contracts

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many contracts for the maintenance of highways in Scotland have been put out to public tender; what proportion of the contracts now let on this basis have been won (i) by private contractors and (ii) by local authority consortia; and if he will make a statement. [11846]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 January 1996]: There have been eight contracts for the maintenance of trunk roads in Scotland that have been put out to public tender by the Scottish Office; three of the contracts have been awarded to local authority consortia; and the remaining five contracts are currently being assessed.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Motability

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Schroeders merchant bank report on Motability Finance Ltd. [5092]

Mr. Burt: The Schroeders merchant bank report was commissioned by the governors of Motability and is confidential to them.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department expects to agree the National Audit Office report on Motability and its associated financial arms. [5138]

Mr. Burt: The NAO study on Motability has been received in draft and we are currently discussing with the National Audit Office a timetable for clearance.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if Motability controls the moneys in the Motability 10th anniversary fund. [5142]

Mr. Burt: No. The Motability Tenth Anniversary Trust is an independent charity and a registered company. Its moneys are controlled by trustees who are appointed by Motability, the Secretary of State for Social Security and by the bankers who fund the Motability scheme.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the Child Support Agency cases deferred in December 1994 were taken on in (a) November 1995 and (b) December 1995; and what he estimates to be the month-by-month take-up until the end of the current financial year. [10182]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 29 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the take on of Child Support Agency cases deferred in December 1994.

The special take on of such cases in November and December 1995 was as follows:

November 1995—292

December 1995—178

As you are aware at the time of deferral some 340,000 cases were affected. The Secretary of State set the Agency a milestone target to commence the take on of these cases by the end of 1995. We formally started taking on the remaining cases in November last year, but in practice had already dealt with many of them because the parent with care had either specifically asked us to do so, or had made a repeat claim to a prescribed benefit, and had therefore been treated as a new claim.

I expect the rate of special take on of deferred cases to remain steady for the remainder of the financial year.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many incoming telephone calls were made to (a) the Child Support Agency centres and (b) the national inquiry line month by month since September 1994. [11195]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 29 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about telephone calls made to the Child Support Agency.

The numbers of incoming calls made to Child Support Agency Centre Client Help Lines and the National Enquiry Line for the period requested are set out in the attached table.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes were made on what dates to the arrangements for answering incoming calls at the Child Support Agency between September 1994 and September 1995; and when they were made. [11181]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 29 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about changes made in the arrangements for answering incoming calls received in the Child Support Agency.

To improve customer services, management decided to centralise the National Enquiry Line and to create a section within each Child Support Agency Centre (CSAC) that would deal solely with incoming calls.

The National Enquiry Line based in Liverpool became fully operational on 21 June 1994 and the Central Call Handling sections with Automatic Call Distribution equipment within each CSAC were fully operational on the following dates:-

Belfast: 8 August 1994
Birkenhead: 8 August 1994
Dudley: 11 July 1994

Falkirk: 5 September 1994
Hastings: 1 August 1994
Plymouth: 22 August 1994

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 894, how the total figures for reduced benefit directives imposed by each Child Support Agency centre were arrived at. [11194]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 29 January 1996:

I am reply to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how the totals for reduced benefit directions (RBD) imposed by each Child Support Agency Centre were arrived at in Official report, column 894 of 18th December 1995.

I do apologise that having looked again at the totals detailed for the RBD section of the tables provided in the above report, I can see that they were wrong. The sum shown at the bottom of these particular columns is not the the total of the individual figures in them.

I have enclosed an updated version of the full tables supplied by way of answer to your Parliamentary Question set out in Official Report, column 894. You will note that the relevant columns do now show their correct totals. I am very sorry I did not spot this error in my previous reply.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what consultations his Department has had with (a) the Australian and (b) New Zealand Governments on the operation of the Child Support Agency; [11801]

(2) what plans he has to commission research into the workings of the child support agencies of (a) Australia, (b) New Zealand and (c) North America. [11805]

Mr. Mitchell: There have been a number of visits by officials from this Department to Australia and New Zealand to examine their schemes. There have also been discussions with officials from those countries at international conferences on child support and when officials from Australia and New Zealand have visited this country.

Building on these contacts, officials regularly exchange information about their schemes, including the results of studies into the workings of the schemes in the different countries.

Employees (Data-matching Exercise)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employees (a) were discovered to be involved in breaches of confidence and illegal benefit claims and (b) have subsequently faced (i) dismissal and (ii) disciplinary action in the data-matching exercise on employees in his Department in November 1995; and what evaluation his Department will undertake of the exercise. [10834]

Mr. Burt: No such data-matching exercise has taken place. The Department has in place effective security measures to reduce the risk of internal fraud, and to identify and deal with it if it occurs.

Housing Benefit Fraud

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate his Department has made of the level of housing benefit fraud which is organised internally within local authorities; and what guidance, instructions and financial incentives his Department provided to local authorities to minimise organised housing benefit fraud. [10831]

Mr. Roger Evans: Local authorities, as employers and the bodies responsible for housing benefit administration, must take action against benefit fraud by their own employees. The information requested about such fraud is not collected centrally.

Medical Tests

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department are taking to monitor the precision with which the all-work tests for incapacity benefit are conducted. [11187]

Mr. Burt: We continue to monitor closely all stages of the all-work test to ensure that it is operating as intended.

Medical examinations conducted as part of the all-work test for incapacity benefit are undertaken by fully qualified medical practitioners, recruited and trained by the Benefits Agency to an approved standard. The standard is maintained through continuous quality monitoring supported by sampling exercises, annual review of individual performance and careful monitoring of any complaints and appropriate remedial action where necessary.

The standard of adjudication decisions on incapacity benefit is monitored routinely by the chief adjudication officer and his staff, and a special sampling exercise has been conducted to examine a higher proportion of cases following introduction of the benefit.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals against the all-work medical test for incapacity benefit have resulted in a tribunal decision; and in how many cases the original decision was upheld. [11186]

Mr. Burt: Up to 30 November 1995, 993 appeals against the all-work test for incapacity benefit resulted in a tribunal decision. The original decision was upheld in 525 cases.

Divorce

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to give couples considering (a) divorce and (b) judicial separation information about their state earnings-related pension scheme rights. [11633]

Mr. Heald: Currently, anyone who thinks that he or she may have SERPS entitlement rights can apply to the Benefit Agency's retirement pension forecasting and advice unit—RPFA—for a forecast of his or her retirement pension position. This will include details of his or her potential SERPS entitlement.

In order to facilitate the operation of the measures in section 166 and section 167 of the Pensions Act 1995, the Department is currently considering the feasibility of the RPFA providing a valuation of SERPS entitlement for the purposes of divorce and judicial separation.

Disability Living Allowance

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have applied for disability living allowance due to the loss of a finger or thumb or the loss of the use of a finger or thumb; and how many have been awarded disability living allowance with this condition. [11724]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information requested is not available.

Housing Insurance

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what powers local authorities that operate contents insurance schemes for the tenants of their housing stock have to make deductions from housing benefit to cover the premiums of claimants who (a) participate and (b) are eligible to participate in such schemes; what guidelines he issues to local authorities on such matters; and if he will make a statement. [12221]

Mr. Roger Evans: Local authorities are required to adjust the rent eligible for housing benefit to reflect the cost of any ineligible services, such as contents insurance, included in the rent. This Department's guidance makes it clear that this duty applies even where the charge is not specified or separately identified. There is no need to adjust housing benefit where people who are eligible to participate in such schemes choose not to do so.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11530]

Mr. Burt: The available information on expenditure is in the table. In addition, local offices of the Department's agencies may subscribe to local or specialist publications, details of which are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure on weekly/daily journals and newspapers recorded centrally by the Department and its agencies is as follows:

Maxwell Pension Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guarantees the Maxwell pension scheme has given to him that there will be no pension holidays before the repayment of the state scheme premiums owed to the Exchequer. [12527]

Mr. Heald: All Maxwell pension schemes which owe state scheme premiums have commenced winding up and have no active members. The question of pension holidays for these schemes does not therefore arise.

Departmental Property

[12457]

Child Care Disregard

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants who have benefited from the child care disregard have child care costs of (a) between £40 and £60 per week and (b) over £60 per week. [12528]

Mr. Roger Evans: As at 30 September 1995, approximately 5,000 families receiving family credit had child care charges of between £40 and £60 a week, and a further 2,000 had child care charges of over £60 per week.

Mr. Evans: As at 30 September 1995, approximately 21,000 families were benefiting from help with child care charges in family credit. Information on families receiving help through housing benefit and council tax benefit will not be available until later this year.

Housing Benefit Fraud Review

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the statistical basis on which Cardiff was placed in a list of declining industrial towns and cities in the recent housing benefit fraud review. [12571]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The classification of local authorities used in the report of the housing benefit review was defined in terms of a comprehensive set of 37 social and economic variables drawn from the 1991 census to make the places in each of six types similar to each other while making each type clearly distinct from the others. Unfortunately, the description of the group including Cardiff was so abbreviated as to be inappropriate and misleading. The report has been amended to describe that group as "Ex-mining and industrial towns and other cities" and an apology has been sent to Cardiff and the other places affected.

Executive Agencies (Overseas Travel)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each of his executive agencies for the last financial year in respect of overseas travel by staff of the agency (a) the cost, (b) the countries visited and (c) the posts held by the staff involved. [2357]

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 7 December 1995, c. 378]: The information that I gave regarding the cost of overseas travel within the Department's executive agencies was incorrect. The correct information is as follows:

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 31 January 1996

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Inquest (North Wales)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what operation and when it was carried out on patient C, the subject of an inquest in north Wales; who was the coroner at the inquest; what factors underlay the decisions (a) not to name the patient and (b) not to publish the date of the inquest; and what evidence was given by public officials during the proceedings on the case. [11927]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Peter Bottomley, dated 31 January 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to the above Question about the recent legal proceedings concerning Patient C. In doing so I have consulted with the Home Office and Welsh Office on the issues that are within their jurisdiction.

Patient C entered hospital on 26 February 1991 for elective extraction of wisdom teeth. I understand that the death was reported to the coroner for East Clwyd, Mr. Jones, and that a date for the inquest has yet to be fixed. Patient C was the subject of an application to the Family Division of the High Court for a declaration that life-sustaining treatment and medical support be discontinued. In that application, Mr. Justice Johnson made an order under section 11 of the Contempt of Court Act 1981 that Patient C and other connected individuals should not be named. Two further applications came before Sir Stephen Brown, the President of the Family Division. So far as the evidence given by public officials is concerned, I have arranged for copies of the three judgments in this matter to be made available in the library of the House.

Maxwell Fraud Trial

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the estimated cost to the legal aid fund of the Maxwell fraud trial. [11717]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: It would not be appropriate for me to speculate at this stage about the final cost of this case.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

CCTA

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are his plans for the CCTA, the Government centre for information systems. [13228]

Mr. Freeman: The CCTA, currently an operational division of the Office of Public Service will, from 1 April 1996, operate as a next steps executive agency within OPS, and will remain based in Norwich. This will ensure that Government Departments continue to have available to them a range of expert specialist services in information technology and telecommunications which are independent and are valued by Departments.

As an agency, CCTA will operate on a full cost recovery basis. It will therefore need to develop a stronger customer focus and undergo major restructuring and efficiency measures. It will work in close co-operation with the new central information technology unit which is being established in the OPS to provide a strategic approach to the use of information technology in government.

F16 Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what representations he has had from the United Kingdom defence industry concerning the proposed leasing of American F16 aircraft. [12127]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations from the UK defence industry concerning the Ministry of Defence's evaluation of a proposal to upgrade the Tornado F3's weapons systems.

Those representations have been passed on to the Ministry of Defence in the normal way.

Photocopiers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many new photocopiers his Department has (a) purchased and (b) leased since July 1995; and at what cost. [4291]

Mr. Willets [pursuant to his reply, 6 December 1995, Official Report, c 256]: I regret that the figure given as the rental cost per annum of the 14 leased photocopiers to replace existing machines is incorrect. The correct information is as follows.

Since 1 July 1995, the Cabinet Office and its agencies have purchased one additional photocopier at a cost of £895 and leased 18 photocopiers, 11 of which replaced existing machines, at a rental cost of £50,799 per annum.

In the same period, HMSO and the Central Office of Information purchased four photocopiers, two of which replaced existing machines, at a cost of £17,817 and leased 14 to replace existing machines at a rental cost of £23,366 per annum.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 121, what factors led his Department to accept photocopiers on variable contracts of three, four and five years over and above the leasing costs; and what is the minimum contractual cost of using and maintaining (a) the 18 photocopiers on three-year contracts, (b) the three photocopiers on four-year contracts and (c) the four photocopiers on five-year contracts. [8920]

Mr. Willetts [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1996, Official Report, c 335]: I regret that the figure given as the minimum total cost of leasing the 18 photocopiers on three-year contracts is incorrect. The correct information is as follows.

The minimum total cost of leasing (a) the 18 photocopiers on three-year contracts is £36,905 per annum, (b) the three photocopiers on four-year contracts is £15,969 per annum and (c) the four photocopiers on five-year contracts is £3,315 per annum.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 335, on costs of photocopiers, what was the estimated number of copies projected in respect of each contract and at what cost per copy. [10277]

Mr. Willetts [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1996, Official Report, c.42]: I regret that the figure of 0.3p given as the cost per copy for the machine with the projected usage of 5 million copies is incorrect. The correct figure is 0.4p. The entire table with the corrected figure is as follows:

Estimated number of copies projected in respect of each contract and cost per copy for the 25 photocopiers

| Copies projected for contract period | Cost per copy (p) |

Absenteeism

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for 1995–96. [11373]

Mr. Willetts: The table below gives the available absenteeism figures for the central Cabinet Office including No. 10 and the executive agencies for which I am responsible. Figures for previous years and 1995–96 are not available.

| | 1993–94 | 1994–95 |
|---|---|---|
| Central Department | 8.48 | 8.45 |
| COI | 7.76 | 9.67 |

| TBA | 9.97 | 8.70 |
| Total | 8.35 | 8.61 |

Absence rates represent total days absent divided by total number of staff.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [11505]

Mr. Willetts: Details of running costs and administrative spending by the Cabinet Office, including the Prime Minister's Office, and the Office of Public Service for the years 1989–90 through to 1997–98 are contained in tables 7.5 and 7.6 of my Department's annual report, Cm 2820, copies of which are available in the Members' Library. This year's report, due to be published at the end of March, will reflect the Cabinet Office's new responsibilities, following the machinery of government and other changes.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines for 1995–96 to date; and if he will list the publications purchased. [11508]

Mr. Willetts: This information, and similar information for earlier years, can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TREASURY

Unemployment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of person days lost through unemployment since May 1979. [12316]

Mrs. Angela Knight: There is no means of assessing such a figure because no central records are kept of the numbers of hours unemployed people worked prior to becoming unemployed, nor of the number of hours they now wish to work.

North Sea Oil and Gas

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much income the Government have received from North sea (a) oil and (b) gas exploitation for each year since 1979. [12480]

Mr. Jack: Tax revenues from oil and gas production were given in answer to the hon. Member for Warley, West (Mr. Spellar) on 12 December 1995, Official Report, columns 1053–54. Separate figures for revenues from oil and gas are not available because the main taxes concerned, corporation tax and petroleum revenue tax, are charged on aggregate company and field profits respectively. Royalties are also levied on each field's aggregate production. Many companies have interests in both oil and gas extraction and, in many fields, both products are extracted.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible, if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11992]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol is one of the action points in the Department's action plan on disability introduced last year.

Of the Treasury's four agencies, one—the Royal Mint—currently uses the symbol for external recruitment. The Central Statistical Office, Paymaster and the Valuation Office agency are considering whether to become symbol users.

Bills (Late Payment)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has had with other Government Departments following the publication of the figures showing percentages of bills paid late in 1994–95. [12223]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The Treasury has an ongoing dialogue with other Government Departments and commercial organisations on a range of procurement-related topics, including bill payment. Lessons learnt during these discussions can result in the adoption of more efficient methods of working for all concerned.

The Treasury is a signatory to the Confederation of British Industry code of payment.

Retail Prices Index

Sir Timothy Sainsbury: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will instruct the retail prices index advisory committee to assess whether the retail prices index takes sufficient account of (a) quality change new versions of products, (b) totally new products and (c) a formula bias arising from overweighting of items entering the index at temporarily low prices; [12692]

(2) if he will instruct the retail prices index advisory committee to assess whether (a) the retail prices index takes proper account of the number of discount stores and (b) there is an outlet bias; [12693]

(3) if he will instruct the retail prices index advisory committee to assess whether the index takes sufficient account of the incidence of special offers. [12698]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have no plans at present to convene the retail prices index advisory committee. However, a recent report by Nicholas Oulton of the National Institute of Economic and Social Research, commissioned by the Treasury, looked at many of these issues in detail. This report, "Treasury Working Paper 68: Reliability and Accuracy in UK Price Indices", which was published in March 1995, is available in the House of Commons Library.

Disabled People (VAT)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what factors have led to the imposition of VAT on disabled individuals purchasing computer equipment; [12691]

(2) if he will (a) place in the Library and (b) publish the Customs and Excise directive concerning the levying of VAT on purchases of computer equipment for disabled people; [12689]

(3) which bodies representing the rights of the disabled were consulted in relation to the re-interpretation of the VAT legislation on the purchasing of computer equipment. [12690]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There have been no changes in the application of VAT to computer equipment for disabled people. Such equipment, when designed solely for disabled people's use, is zero rated. General purpose equipment is, and always has been, liable at the standard rate. There has been no need to consult because there has been no re-interpretation of the law.

No directives on the liability of computer equipment have been issued by Customs and Excise. A copy of customs notice 701/7/94, "VAT reliefs for people with disabilities", has already been placed in the Library of the House.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average annual rate of growth of Britain's gross domestic product (a) since the first quarter of 1990 and (b) since the first quarter of 1979. [12596]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The average annual rate of growth of Britain's real GDP—gross domestic product at constant factor cost—between the first quarter of 1990 and the fourth quarter of 1995 was 1.1 per cent. Between the first quarter of 1979 and the fourth quarter of 1995, the average annual rate of growth was 2 per cent.

Employment Statistics (Lancashire)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of (a) manual and (b) non-manual (i) male and (ii) female part-time workers work less than (1) eight hours, (2) 16 hours and (3) 24 hours in each borough in Lancashire. [12839]

Mrs. Angela Knight: It is not possible to provide data for county boroughs.

Information showing hours worked by part-time men and women in Lancashire is given in the table.

New Earnings survey 1995

| Total | 12.0 | 33.3 | 70.4 | 11.4 | 31.2 | 66.7 |

Debt

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the amount of debt per household for every £100 of disposable income at the last date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [12024]

Mr. Angela Knight: There are no official estimates of the financial assets and liabilities of the household sector. Estimates for the personal sector—which includes households, individuals, private trusts, unincorporated businesses and non profit-making bodies serving persons—are published by the Central Statistical Office in table 12.2 of the "UK National Accounts", known as the "Blue Book", which is available in the Library of the House. At the end of 1994, the personal sector had financial liabilities worth £524 billion, financial assets worth £1,656 billion, and non-financial assets worth £1,419 billion, implying total net wealth of £2,551 billion. Personal disposable income in 1994 was £473 billion. So, for every £100 of disposable income, the personal sector held £111 of financial liabilities and had total net wealth of £539 at the end of 1994.

DEFENCE

Land Mines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what mechanisms exist to ensure public notification occurs in respect of changes in the moratorium on the export of land mines. [12761]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Any change to the UK's moratorium on the export of anti-personnel mines would be notified to Parliament, as was the change announced on 15 March 1995 by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Official Report, columns 860-63.

Annualised Average Temperatures

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the annualised average temperature for mainland Britain for each of the years 1990 to 1995; and what recent estimates he has made of the historic average mean temperature since records began. [11238]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Meteorological Office. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Alan W. Williams, dated 31 January 1996:

I am replying to your Question to the Secretary of State for Defence about temperatures in mainland Britain as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office.

The annualised average temperatures for mainland Britain (i.e. United Kingdom excluding Northern Ireland) 1990–1995 are:

1990: 10.0°C
1991: 9.2°C
1992: 9.3°C
1993: 8.9°C
1994: 9.5°C
1995: 9.8°C

The last 4 decades 1956–1965, 1966–1975, 1976–1985, 1986–1995 show values of 8.9, 9.0, 8.9. 9.3 respectively.

The natural climate variability of the UK area is such that this apparent warming has little statistical significance. As a perspective a diagram illustrating annual values over the period back to 1659 is attached. The diagram does not refer to the whole UK as reliable data for Scotland is not available before 1851.

The attached reports give a full background should you wish to be more aware of the position and issues.

I hope you find the information helpful.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on military deployment to the former Yugoslavia. [13420]

Mr. Portillo: The deployment of British armed forces to the NATO-led peace implementation force, IFOR, in Bosnia is now complete.

By carefully matching the manpower required to the tasks which have emerged, we have been able to deploy a smaller number of troops than the estimate of over 13,000 reported in my statement to the House of 12 December 1995, Official Report, column 835. The actual figure is some 11,500. The United Kingdom's contribution remains, by a substantial margin, second only to that of the United States.

I shall keep the force level under review as planning develops for the reduction of IFOR numbers and the completion of its task. NATO is also reviewing the maritime and air forces required to support operations in the Adriatic theatre. Force levels can in any case be expected to fluctuate.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the order for the next batch of type 23 frigates. [12858]

Mr. Arbuthnot: An announcement will be made as soon as the decision has been taken.

Chemical Weapons Stocks

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the total amounts of chemical weapons and precursor stocks, by location, held by his Department. [12861]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No. The UK has not had an offensive chemical weapons capability since the 1950s. Items dating from the 1950s and before are discovered from time to time and taken to the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment for safe destruction. Small quantities of scheduled chemicals are held for purposes permitted by the chemical weapons convention; on security grounds, information about their quantity and location is safeguarded.

Mr. David Hart

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Mr. David Hart has a role in his Department's postings and personnel selections. [12862]

Mr. Portillo: No.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoners (Hospital Visits)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners who attended hospital for confinement in each of the past 10 years (1) have (a) succeeded in escaping and (b) attempted to escape, (i) one hour before, (ii) two hours before, (iii) three hours before, (iv) four hours before and (v) five hours before their delivery and (2) have (a) succeeded in escaping and (b) attempted to escape (i) one hour after, (ii) two hours after, (iii) three hours after, (iv) four hours after and (v) five hours after their delivery. [8547]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prisoners who have escaped or attempted to escape having attended hospital for confinement in the past 10 years.

Since 1988, when a data-base of escapes was first set up, the Prison Service has recorded no incidents of any woman escaping during the last stages of labour or during childbirth. One woman prisoner is recorded as having escaped more than five hours after the birth of her child. The child was abandoned at the hospital. There are no recorded incidents of attempted escape during or after confinement.

Women Prisoners (Hospital Treatment)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what discussions his Department has had with the Whittington Hospital NHS trust in respect of its concerns over the practice of handcuffing and chaining women prisoners; [9493]

(2) when his Department learnt that the Whittington Hospital NHS trust had expressed concern at the practice of handcuffing and chaining pregnant women prisoners. [9494]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 15 January 1996]: This matter was first raised with the Prison Service on 31 August 1995, when the chief executive of the Whittington hospital wrote to the governor of Holloway prison. There has been further correspondence since then.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish all correspondence between the Whittington hospital and HMP Holloway concerning the handcuffing of women prisoners during visits to the hospital; and if he will make a statement. [11642]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The temporary Director General of the Prison Service has reviewed the policy on the application of physical restraints to prisoners attending hospital, particularly pregnant prisoners and my right hon. and learned Friend announced this policy to the House on 18 January, Official Report, columns 893-94.

Copies of correspondence between the Whittington hospital and Holloway prison about this subject will be placed in the Library.

Alton Manning (Death)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the death of Alton Manning on 8 December in Blakenhurst prison. [12094]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Chris Mullin, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the death of Mr. Alton Manning on 8 December 1995 in Blakenhurst prison.

All deaths in custody are investigated by the Coroner whose inquest is a full and public inquiry. The Coroner is currently conducting the investigation into Mr. Manning's death and a date for the inquest is yet to be fixed. I am unable at this stage to comment on the detailed circumstances of the case.

Voluntary School Helpers

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice has been issued to police forces by the Home Office recommending that the carrying out of police checks on voluntary school helpers be discontinued; and if he will make a statement. [12302]

Mr. Maclean: No such advice has been issued. The relevant guidance on the criteria which justify carrying out a criminal record check on people working in schools, whether as paid employees or as volunteers, is currently set out in Home Office circular 47/93. This states that, in order for a person to be subject to a police check, the post for which he or she is applying "should entail a substantial level of access to children which may also be unsupervised, and will be regular or sustained."

These criteria were first agreed with the Association of Chief Police Officers in 1986 and have not changed.

Private Prisons

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give in respect of each private prison (a) the contractor, (b) the date the contract commenced, (c) the length of the contract, (d) the original contract price and (e) the projected cost of the contract including start-up costs and all other costs incurred by the Prison Service. [12768]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the contracts at each of the contractually managed prisons.

Women's Prisons

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the estimated outstanding repair and maintenance bill of each women's prison for each year since 1985; and what was the actual spending on maintenance and repair at each prison in each of those years. [11493]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the estimated outstanding repair and maintenance bill for each women's prison for each year since 1985 and the actual spending at each prison in each of those years.

Records are not kept centrally of outstanding repair and maintenance bills for individual establishments.

The attached table shows the actual annual spending on repairs and maintenance in the twelve establishments holding female prisoners in each of the financial years since 1991–92, including the predicted spend for this year. The figures include both work which has been funded centrally and that funded locally with delegated authority. Figures for actual expenditure on maintenance for the years 1985–86 to 1990–91 are not readily available.

For the three establishments which currently house both male and female prisoners, it has not been possible to separate the costs for repair and maintenance of the female wings from the male wings.

Much maintenance work is covered during modernisation and redevelopment. In 1994–95 such schemes helped take the investment in improvements alone to the prison estate to £178 million. Of this around £14 million was devoted to the female estate.

We are in the process of re-surveying every establishment to produce a forward maintenance register which will be kept up to date and will help us predict future finance needed for maintenance.

1. Eastwood Park is scheduled to re-open during 1996 as a female establishment following a 2 year modernisation programme.
2. Brockhill and Winchester have newly opened wings for female prisoners. These were modernised and will not yet have attracted significant spending on repair and maintenance.
3. Pucklechurch is scheduled for closure during 1996 following the re-opening of Eastwood Park.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women were admitted to prison in each year since 1979; and what was (a) the total budget for women's prisons in each of those years and (b) the actual amount spent per prisoner. [11496]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Walker to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the number of women admitted to prison in each year since 1979, the total budget for women's prisons in each of those years and the actual amount spent per prisoner.

Information on female receptions into Prison Service establishments in 1979–1993 is published in successive volumes of "Prison statistics, England and Wales" (tables 1.14 of the 1989 edition (Cm 1221) for years 1979–1989 and table 1.11 of the 1993 edition (Cm 2893) for the remaining years). Information for 1994 and 1995 is given in table 1.

The only information readily available on the cost of women's prisons over the period requested is for total net operating costs and average annual net operating cost per inmate. The figures are set out in table 2. These figures cover only establishments exclusively for female inmates; costs for female are not available separately for establishments holding both males and females.

Table 1: Female receptions[1] into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales by type of custody, 1994 and 1995

| | Year | |

| Immediate custody | 2,952 | 3,467 |
| Fine defaulters | 1,454 | 1,352 |
| Non-criminals | 290 | 195 |

[1] Total receptions cannot be calculated by adding together receptions in each category because there is double counting. A person received in more than one type of custody is counted each time.

[1] The figures for 1979–80 to 1982–83 are not strictly comparable with subsequent years due to changes in accounting policies.
[2] The figures for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are on a different basis to the preceding years which include some notional costs.

Domestic Violence

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount spent by police force area on awareness campaigns on domestic violence for each year since 1990. [11495]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not collated centrally. Spending on domestic violence issues is an operational matter for chief officers of police.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of reported incidents of domestic violence by police force area for each year since 1990; and how many resulted in (a) prosecution and (b) conviction. [11497]

Mr. Maclean: Information is not available on the number of domestic violence incidents resulting in prosecution or conviction. Available statistics on the number of domestic violence incidents by police force area relate to the calendar year 1993 and the financial year 1994–95 and were provided in a reply I gave to the hon. Member for York (Mr. Bayley) on 7 November 1995, columns 823–24. Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary is in the process of collecting more reliable data.

Prisons (Running Costs)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a copy of the recent report by LEK consultants, comparing the costs of running private prisons with public sector prisons. [12765]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the report by the LEK Partnership comparing the costs of running private prisons with public sector prisons.

The study was carried out in 1994 and results presented to the Prison Service at the end of 1994. I cannot publish the study itself because it contains commercially confidential information. However, the attached table summarises the main findings.

The LEK Partnership's study used data from 1993–94 and is summarised in the table below

| Private prison | Public comparator group | Cost[1] per CNA lower by (per cent.) |
|---|---|---|
| Blakenhurst | BullingdonHolme HouseElmley | 14 |
| Doncaster[2] | BullingdonHolme HouseElmley | 14 |
| Buckley Hall[2] | EverthorpeHaveriggRanby | 26 |

[1] Cost is after adjustments to exclude non comparable costs from both the private sector bid prices and public sector costs.

[2] Results for Doncaster and Buckley Hall should be treated with caution because neither prison was open during the period the comparisons covered.

[3] The analysis excluded Wolds because in 1993–94 there was no comparable public sector remand prison.

Police Custody (Deaths)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many deaths in police custody in each year an inquest verdict has been brought in of (a) natural causes, (b) misadventure or accident, (c) drug addiction or alcoholism, (d) suicide, (e) unlawful killing and (f) open verdict; and in how many cases no inquest was held. [11931]

Mr. Maclean: The available information is published in the annual Home Office statistical bulletin entitled "Police Complaints and Discipline, England and Wales" and, for the Metropolitan police district, in the annual report of the Commissioner of Police. Copies of both publications are available in the Library.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have died in police custody (a) in total and (b) by police force area in each year since 1990. [11487]

Mr. Maclean: This information is published in the annual Home Office statistical bulletin entitled "Police Complaints and Discipline, England and Wales" and, for the Metropolitan police district, in the annual report of the Commissioner of Police. Copies of both publications are available in the Library.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the ethnic origin of each prisoner who has died in police custody since 1990. [11488]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not at present collected centrally but the present procedures are being amended as from April 1996. It will thereafter be published annually in the Home Office statistical bulletin entitled "Police Complaints and Discipline, England and Wales" and, for the Metropolitan police district, in the annual report of the Commissioner of Police.

Control and Restraint Procedures

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police forces in the use of control and restraint procedures. [11489]

Mr. Maclean: Home Office circular—number 62/1992—deals with the use of handcuffs by police officers. The Association of Chief Police Officers issues guidance on self-defence and restraint.

Holloway Prison

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department will take to improve conditions at Holloway prison; and what extra resources will be made available for this. [11514]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Holloway prison.

A new governor has recently been appointed at Holloway prison and tasked with improving conditions there. As part of the improvement process, a new health care manager has been appointed, who is carrying out a full review of health care services at Holloway. Sixteen additional prison officers have also been drafted into Holloway from other prisons on a temporary basis.

An additional £300,000 was provided to Holloway last October to recruit and train 25 additional new staff who will take up post in January and February this year, which will enable a fuller regime to operate in the prison.

An external contractor, with expertise in pest control, is now working in Holloway and has made progress in eradicating rats and other vermin.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the maximum number of inmates permitted at Her Majesty's prison Holloway and (b) the highest prison population for each year since 1990. [12266]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Holloway prison.

The maximum numbers of prisoners (the operational capacity) and the highest prison population for each year since 1990 is given in the attached table.

| Year | Operational capacity | Highest population |
|---|---|---|
| 1990 | 517 | 493 |
| 1991 | 517 | 494 |
| 1992 | 517 | 495 |
| 1993 | 532 | 476 |
| 1994 | 532 | 507 |
| 1995 | 532 | 527 |

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what allocation of funds for education at Her Majesty's prison Holloway he expects to make in 1996–97. [12268]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 31 January 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the allocation of funds for education at Holloway prison in 1996–97.

No decision has yet been made by the governor about how much of the 1996–97 budget should be allocation to education.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received covering the provision of education in Her Majesty's prison Holloway; and if he will make a statement. [12271]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have received representations from the board of visitors at Holloway on this matter. Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons also raised his concerns with me and with the temporary Director General of the Prison Service following his unannounced visit to Holloway in December 1995.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all programmes which his Department funds that are aimed at deterring under 16-year-olds from committing crimes; and if he will make a statement. [12723]

Mr. Maclean: The bulk of the Home Office funding in this area was transferred to the single regeneration budget at the Department of the Environment in April 1994. This budget supports many crime prevention activities with a youth focus. The Home Office programme development unit funded a small group of experimental projects on reducing criminality in 1992; final reports are expected shortly.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on licensing arms exports to the states of the former Yugoslavia. [11993]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor [holding answer 26 January 1996]: UN Security Council resolution 1021 established a timetable for phased lifting of the arms embargo on former Yugoslavia. Light weapons can be imported 90 days after signature of the peace agreement for Bosnia and Herzegovina—that is, from 13 March—and the embargo will be lifted completely 180 days after signature and after submission of a report from the UN Secretary General on the arms control negotiations called for in the peace agreement—that is from 11 June. The Government have decided that, taking into account the overall situation in the states of the former Yugoslavia and the paramount importance of ensuring the safety of British and other troops deployed in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Croatia, applications for arms export licences will be dealt with on the following basis:

(a) for Slovenia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, applications for licences to export military equipment listed in group 1 of part III of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 and dual-use goods will be considered on a case by case basis;

(b) for Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia our policy is not to allow the export of military equipment listed in group 1 of part III of schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order of 1994 during the period of the NATO-led implementation force's deployment. Against the background, applications for export licences will continue to be considered on a case by case basis, as will applications for export of dual-use goods.

The Government will encourage our EU and other partners to take a similar approach, and keep this policy under review, particularly in the light of progress in implementing the peace agreement for Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Laser Weapons Protocol

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the advantage of extending the scope of the laser weapons protocol to include civil war conflicts; what measures he proposes to improve the transparency and verification arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [12757]

Mr. David Davis: In common with other western countries, we support the extension of the scope of the 1981 UN weaponry convention protocols on both laser blinding weapons and land mines so that they apply also during non-international armed conflict. We also support the inclusion of effective transparency, compliance and verification arrangements. We shall pursue these questions at the concluding session of the weaponry convention review conference in Geneva from 22 April to 3 May.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss with his Indian counterparts their policy towards the laser weapon protocol, with particular reference to its extension to cover civil war conflict; and if he will make a statement. [12758]

Mr. Davis: We intend to hold discussions with a number of countries before the final session of the 1981 UN weaponry convention review conference in Geneva from 22 April to 3 May with a view to securing the extension of the scope of the convention's protocols on land mines and laser building weapons to non-international armed conflict.

Police Officers (Training)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will name the Guatemalan police officers who have been trained in Britain since 1985, specifying each officer's rank and the date of commencement and of completion of the training; [12517]

(2) if he will name the Guatemalan police officers who have undergone study tours to the United Kingdom since 1985, in each case specifying the officer's rank and the date of commencement and of completion of the training. [12518]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 27 November 1995, Official Report, column 429. We have no record of any Guatemalan police officers being trained or attending study tours in the United Kingdom since 1985. However, we have offered a place for one police officer to attend the overseas command course at Bramshill in 1996.

Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals have been put by the United Kingdom to the negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty. [12860]

Mr. David Davis: We continue to negotiate actively for the earliest possible conclusion of an effective comprehensive test ban treaty. We have made it clear that in our view such a treaty should prohibit all nuclear weapon test explosions involving any release of nuclear energy.

Burundi

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Burundi; and what steps he has taken with the international community to prevent a further escalation of ethnic violence in Burundi and to support the legitimate Government. [12233]

Mr. Hanley: We are seriously concerned about the deterioration of the political and security situation in Burundi. We continue to support efforts by the United Nations, the Organisation of African Unity and leaders in the region to promote political dialogue, reduce violence and ensure humanitarian assistance reaches those in need.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bankruptcy Orders

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bankruptcy orders were made in each region in the last 10 years. [9267]

[2] Total Individual Insolvencies in England and Wales comprise Bankruptcy orders, Individual voluntary arrangements and Deeds of arrangement.

[3] Insolvent individuals in Scotland are subject to sequestration under the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985. The Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1993 amending the 1985 Act came into force on 1 April 1993 and will have affected the number of sequestrations in the Scottish Courts.

[4] NI Bankruptcies comprise Bankruptcy adjudication orders, Arrangement protection orders and Orders for the administration of estates of deceased insolvents.

[5] NI Total comprises Bankruptcies[4] and Individual voluntary arrangements.

[6] Data for 1995 will be published (for England and Wales, and Scotland) on 2 February 1996.

[7] Provisional.

Sources:

DTI and Northern Ireland Insolvency Service.

The Insolvency Act 1986 introduced a number of changes which streamlined overall procedures. For individuals, the terms under which one can seek bankruptcy were made more lenient and many discharges were made automatic after three years. The total number of insolvencies must be considered in the context of about 3.6 million UK businesses in total and a start-up rate of about 400,000 new businesses per year. Since 1986, the number of UK enterprises has increased by over 12 per cent. and the number of self-employed by 21 per cent., concentrated mainly in the earlier years.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he intends to publish the Scott inquiry report; and if he will make a statement. [11643]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 24 January 1996]: I expect the report to be published within the next few weeks.

Jordan (Export Credits)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total principal value of payments made by the Export Credits Guarantee Department to the Midland bank since 1980 in respect of trade with Jordan by (a) Astra Holdings and its subsidiaries, (b) British Aerospace and its subsidiaries, (c) Royal Ordnance and its subsidiaries, (d) Vickers and its subsidiaries, (e) Racal and its subsidiaries, (f) Plessey and its subsidiaries and (g) Thorn EMI and it subsidiaries. [11307]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 24 January 1996]: The ECGD has no record of payments to Midland bank since 1980 in respect of capital goods and project business with Jordan by any of the named companies. The ECGD has, however, paid £11.2 million claims to Midland bank in respect of business by Airbus Industrie, to which British Aerospace is a supplier. In the case of its now-privatised short-term business the ECGD maintains no record of the supplier in cases where it has paid claims to banks.

Trade Missions (Burma and Nigeria)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the trade missions to (a) Burma and (b) Nigeria over the last five years which have been sponsored by his Department and organised in conjunction with his Department; how many are planned; and if he will list the companies involved. [12238]

Mr. Oppenheim: (a) There have been no Department of Trade and Industry-supported trade missions to Burma in the last five years. The Department is supporting two missions in 1996:

(1) an Asia Pacific Advisory Group trade mission, 26 February–1 March 1996,

The Department of Trade and Industry has undertaken to support two missions in 1996:

(1) a London Chamber of Commerce mission to Nigeria and Ghana, 25 February–15 March, and

(2) a Kent Chamber of Commerce mission to Nigeria and Ghana, 17–30 November.

Nuclear Powers

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total value to the British nuclear generation industry in 1995 prices of the price support mechanism for the sale of electricity generated from nuclear power in each year from 1980 to 1990. [12475]

Mr. Eggar: Before 1990, the Central Electricity Generating Board and the South of Scotland Electricity Board were responsible for most nuclear generation in the UK. The accounts of those companies did not separately identify detailed financial information on nuclear generation.

Nuclear Levy

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money in 1995 prices it is expected will be raised from the nuclear levy from the present day until the removal of the levy. [12478]

Mr. Eggar: The element of the fossil fuel levy that is attributable to Nuclear Electric will end at the time of privatisation, subject to the recovery of outstanding moneys due. It is not possible at this time to estimate the amount of money that will be raised in respect of this element from the present day, as this will depend on a number of factors that are still uncertain.

British Coal Pensions

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes have occurred in the respect of British Coal pensions funding arrangements between the publication of his Department's paper on proposals for British Coal pensions after privatisation and his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 553. [12736]

Mr. Page: Following the publication in September 1993 of the Government's proposals for British Coal pensions after privatisation, a number of changes took place to the arrangements governing the mineworkers pension scheme and the British Coal staff superannuation scheme. The modified arrangements took effect from 31 October 1994 and were described in some detail by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Industry and Energy, in his answer of 27 April 1994, Official Report, column 168. My answer of 24 October 1995 concerned the unrelated issue of British Coal's industrial death and retirement scheme.

Characterr Ceramics, Falmouth

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what inquiries his Department undertook into the background of the directors of Character Ceramics, Falmouth, before making them a grant. [10111]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 January 1996]: No inquiries were made. The Department considers making checks where the circumstances suggest that it would be appropriate to do so.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11925]

The Attorney-General: All the Law Officers' Departments seek to ensure that there is no unfair discrimination on the basis of disability. Although those Departments do not at present use the positive about disabled people symbol, the Crown Prosecution Service proposes to apply shortly for use of the symbol in relation to both (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. The Government property lawyers have undertaken preparatory work with a view to applying for use of the symbol in the near future, and the Treasury Solicitor's Department is also considering its use.

"Despatches" Programme

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Attorney-General if the inquiries by the Ministry of Defence police and Strathclyde police into allegations made in the "Despatches" programme are complete. [12729]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service has received a report from the Ministry of Defence police and is awaiting the outcome of further investigations being carried out by Strathclyde police. The conduct and progress of those investigations are matters for my noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate.

PRIME MINISTER

Absenteeism

Mr Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of absenteeism rates in days per annum for staff in his Department for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96. [11365]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 January 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, on Tuesday 30 January.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11457]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 January 1996]: For this purpose, my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 30 January by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is his estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11454]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 January 1990]: For this purpose, my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 30 January, by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service. Figures for 1979–80 are not available on a comparable basis.

Nuclear Testing (India)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what action he is taking in respect of the Indian Government's plans to resume nuclear testing; and if he will make a statement. [12873]

The Prime Minister: The Indian Minister for External Affairs confirmed in Delhi on 19 December that India was not planning to conduct a nuclear test. We have welcomed this assurance.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Joint Funding Scheme

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes are proposed for the criteria for joint funding scheme project selection; and if he will make a statement. [12256]

Mr. Hanley: Any changes to the criteria for the selection of projects under the joint funding scheme will be considered in the context of a forthcoming general review by the ODA of our relationships with non-governmental organisations. At this point, we do not envisage any substantial change, particularly to the primary objective of the scheme, which is to bring lasting benefits to the poorest people in developing countries. NGOs will be fully consulted in our review of these arrangements.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agricultural Incomes

Sir John Cope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on agricultural and farm incomes. [13226]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Total income from farming is estimated to have risen by 22 per cent. in real terms in 1995 compared with 1994. This increase is partly due to agrimonetary developments and to unusual weather conditions which, on balance, had a favourable effect on agricultural incomes. However, the Government's success in creating the right conditions for growth also played an important part. Detailed estimates of the income, output and productivity of United Kingdom agriculture in 1995 were published this morning and have been placed in the Library of the House.

Fish Farming

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fish farms throughout Northern Ireland have been granted exemption permits; what are the conditions of exemptions; and on what dates they were signed. [10669]

Mr. Ancram: I have been asked to reply.

A total of six fish farms in Northern Ireland have been granted permits exempting them from the obligations imposed by section 59 of the Fisheries Act (Northern Ireland) 1966, as amended. Conditions vary on each exemption issued and are site specific, but the underlying principle is that exemptions are issued subject to conditions which result in no diminution of the level of protection afforded to fish stocks. The dates of issue of the permits were 12 September 1994, 3 April 1995, 2 May 1995, 16 May 1995—two—and 1 August 1995.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many fish farms in Northern Ireland were identified by the Fisheries Conservatory Board as not complying with the provisions contained in the Fisheries Act in each of the past two years. [10670]

Mr. Ancram: I have been asked to reply.

The information is as follows:

1994: 8

1995: 2

Abattoirs

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many abattoirs continue to operate either as (a) fully EC approved and (b) under temporary derogation; and by how much the overall total differs from December 1995. [10420]

Mrs. Browning: The information for red meat abattoirs in England is set out in the table:

| Licence status | Number of premises 1 December 1995 | Number of premises 19 January 1996 |
|---|---|---|
| EC approved | 101 | 113 |
| National market only | | |
| Permanently derogated low throughput (no more than 20 livestock units per week) | 119 | 140 |
| Temporary derogated full throughput (more than 20 livestock units per week) | 122 | 107 |
| Temporary derogated low throughput (no more than 20 livestock units per week) | 60 | 41 |
| Total | 402 | 401 |

Departmental Chauffeur-driven Cars

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what the cost of chauffeur-driven cars used by his Department was in each of the past five years. [5854]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Expenditure by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of chauffeur-driven cars for the financial years 1990–91 to 1994–95 is set out in the list.

1990–91: £234,430.21

1991–92: £289,972.83

1992–93: £294,921.47

1993–94: £264,662.21

1994–95: £223,697.49

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Ministry and his Ministry's agencies and non-ministerial public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11415]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Before 1 April 1990, the civil estate was managed by the Property Services Agency.

The annual costs incurred by the Ministry and its agencies in respect of empty properties are as follows:

1991–92: £320,000

1992–93: £944,000

1993–94: £1,803,000

1994–95: £4,471,000

1995–96: £4,258,000

1996–97: £2,744,000

Information on the costs of the Ministry's under-utilised properties and on the costs of empty and under-utilised properties held by non-departmental public bodies could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

A significant proportion of each of the above figures relates to opportunity cost rents which are not a charge on the Exchequer.

The Ministry follows Treasury policy and makes every effort to dispose of vacant properties within three years of their becoming redundant.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of his Ministry's expenditure on newspapers and magazines in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96, to date; and if he will list the publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available. [11417]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's estimated expenditure over the past three years on newspapers and magazines, defined as scientific, technical and other highly specialised and general periodicals, is as follows:

1993–94: £624,000

1994–95: £623,000

1995–96: £481,000

The Ministry subscribes centrally to over 3,500 titles, and other records are maintained at a number of different locations. To provide a central list of publications purchased for the latest year for which information is available could be done only at disproportionate cost.

EU Funding

Mr. Hain: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much in (a) ecu and (b) pounds by standard region and in total is allocated to the United Kingdom from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund under the present structural funds agreement. [11655]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 29 January 1996]: The UK's allocation by objective and region in (a) ecu and (b) pounds sterling from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund under the present structural funds agreement—1994 to 1999—is shown in the table:

| Region | Ecus | Pounds sterling |
|---|---|---|
| Objective 1 | | |
| Merseyside | 3 | 3 |
| Highlands and Islands | 56 | 47 |
| Northern Ireland | 187 | 158 |
| Total UK | 246 | 205 |
| Objective 5a | | |
| UK | 361 | 301 |
| Objective 5b | | |
| South-West | 41 | 34 |
| The Marches | 7 | 6 |
| Midlands Uplands | 2 | 2 |
| Northern Uplands | 23 | 19 |
| Lincolnshire | 9 | 8 |
| East Anglia | 11 | 9 |
| Rural Wales | 36 | 30 |
| Borders of Scotland | 4 | 3 |
| Dumfries and Galloway | 6 | 5 |
| Central Scotland/Tayside | 3 | 3 |
| Grampian | 5 | 4 |
| Total UK | 147 | 123 |

1. All figures are at 1994 prices, are given in millions and have been rounded to the nearest million.
2. The exchange rate used is £1 = 1.20 ecu.

Cattle

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the size of the herd of each breed of cattle in the United Kingdom, for each year since 1985. [12178]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Ministry does not hold the information requested.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what requirements are made of vehicles seeking exemption licences to carry animals in more than one tier on roll-on, roll-off ferries; [11980]

(2) how many vehicles have been approved for the transport of animals on the open decks of ferries in the last 12 months. [11982]

Mrs. Browning: The issue of exemption licences for vehicles carried on roll-on, roll-off ferries ceased as from 1 January 1993. There are no provisions requiring approval of vehicles carried on the open deck of ferries.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the orders and regulations governing the suitability of (a) vessels and (b) vehicles for the transport of livestock. [11981]

Mrs. Browning: The following orders, made or deemed to have been made, under the Animal Health Act 1981, contain provisions governing the suitability of (a) vessels and (b) vehicles:

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the adequacy of his Department's budgetary provision for the financial year 1996–97 to allow for his officials to be able to monitor at Dover docks each vehicle exporting livestock which intends to embark on specialist livestock ferries sailing from Dover; and if he will make a statement. [12165]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 January 1996]: Monitoring the conditions under which livestock are exported will continue to be a priority task for the Department.

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on internal procedures which have been put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations in his Department; and how, when and by whom these procedures will be activated; [12260]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to the new internal procedures for (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [12263]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The Ministry's firm policy is not to gold plate EC directives when implementing them in the UK by the addition of unnecessary burdens. Detailed and comprehensive procedures have been devised to help our close scrutiny of proposals to implement new EU directives to ensure these ends. We do not feel it appropriate to publish this internal departmental guidance. There is also close consultation with other Departments on the further development of means to satisfy ourselves that no gold plating is taking place.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1134, in what circumstances overwhelming policy reasons have amplified minimum regulatory standards when translating European directives into United Kingdom law; and if he will make a statement. [12261]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The cost of analysing all past statutory instruments, in order to identify those which may have amplified minimum regulatory standards, would be disproportionate.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the benefits of granting compensation for purchasers of milk quotas in the event of the discontinuance of the scheme. [12488]

Mr. Baldry: Current EC legislation provides for milk quotas until 31 March 2000. The future of the milk quota system will be reviewed in Brussels before then and the Government will be assessing the options for reforming the present arrangements in the context of that review.

Equidae (Registration)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many equidae within the meaning of directive 90/426/EEC have been registered in Britain by organisations which have been formally recognised under the terms of that directive to register equidae. [12638]

Mrs. Browning: I regret that registration records are not held by this Department. Information may be available from the 37 societies that have so far been recognised, as referred to in my reply, Official Report, columns 627–28, on 17 January 1996.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Selective Education

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what data her Department has assessed in respect of the percentage of adults who favour a return to fully selective education. [12737]

Mrs. Gillan: A recent survey commissioned by the Association of Teachers and Lecturers found that 54 per cent. of parents were in favour of a return to a fully selective education system.

Further Education Funding Council

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amount of funding allocated by the Further Education Council is spent on subsidising employer training broken down by further education institution. [12756]

Mr. Paice: The information is not collected centrally.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many applications have been received by the Further Education Funding Council from private training institutions applying to register as further education colleges; and if she will list them. [12754]

Mr. Paice: There is no provision for the registration of private training institutions as further education colleges. The Further and Higher Education Act 1992 makes provision for my right hon. Friend to establish further education corporations to conduct existing educational institutions. She would normally expect to do so only in response to a proposal made by the Further Education Funding Council for England. To date, the council has not received any requests to make such proposals to my right hon. Friend.

The Act also includes provision for institutions which are inside the further education sector to sponsor for funding from the council applications from institutions which are outside the sector. In 1994–95 the FEFC received 41 applications for such funding from external institutions. Of these 18 were private providers and 11 of these received funding. In 1995–96, nine applications were received, five from private providers, and one of these received funding. At this stage, the indications for 1996–97 are: seven received, five from private providers; funding has yet to be allocated. I will ask the chief executive of the council to write with a list of the institutions concerned.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the schools in England which have balloted parents on the question of grant-maintained status since 1 July 1995 voted in favour of staying with their local education authority. [12595]

Mrs. Gillan: Twenty-four primary and secondary schools in England have voted not to seek grant-maintained status between 1 July 1995 and 26 January 1996.

Ofsted Inspections (Costs)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimate she has made of the cost of a full Ofsted inspection in a London borough; [12866]

(2) what is the estimated total cost of the Ofsted inspection and report in respect of Waltham Forest. [12857]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

School Inspections (Bradford)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list (a) the names of schools in the Manningham area of Bradford which are to be inspected by the Office for Standards in Education, (b) the dates during which inspections are to be made, (c) the dates on which inspection contracts were approved and (d) the date by when Ofsted will report the outcome of the inspections; and if she will make a statement. [12881]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Teachers

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each local education authority the number of full-time equivalent teachers employed in (a) January 1991 and (b) January 1995 excluding sixth form colleges. [12882]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the full-time equivalent number of teachers employed in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector in England for January for 1991 and 1995.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Stock (London)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the current housing stock in each London borough in the (a) private rented, (b) council owned and (c) housing association categories. [10888]

Mr. Clappison: The number of local authority and housing association dwellings in each London borough on 1 April 1995 reported by local authorities on their 1995 housing investment programme—HIP1—returns, were as follows.

(1) Includes any dwelling owned by the authority outside its own area.

Corresponding figures for private rented stock are not available; data are collected from local authorities on total private sector stock, but this is not split between owner-occupied and rented dwellings.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each local authority in England for each year from 1991 to 1996–97 in cash and real terms the amount of (i) revenue support grant and (ii) capital expenditure. [11597]

Sir Paul Beresford: A list of revenue support grant and capital expenditure for each local authority in England has been placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce the outcome of consultation on the local government finance settlement, and if he will make a statement. [12731]

Sir Paul Beresford [pursuant to his reply, 29 January 1996, c. 576]: I regret that certain sub-totals were incorrect on the first page of the table, "1996–97 Standard Spending Assessments, Business Rates, Revenue Support Grant and Special Grant Entitlements", copies of which were placed in the Library and the Vote Office on 29 January. The line "Total England" in the table, and the figures for individual local authorities, are unchanged.

A revised table has now been placed in the Library. Copies are available in the Vote Office.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the proposed or actual total external support in 1992–93, 1993–94, 1994–95, 1995–96 and 1996–97 for each of the districts in Somerset and Devon, with an explanation of any significant changes of function affecting grant. [11828]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is given in the following table.

Under the system in operation in 1992–93, total external support for principal authorities in both tiers of local government was paid to district councils: counties precepted on districts for their share. From 1993–94, each principal authority has been paid its share of TES direct.

Total external support (revenue support grant + income from non-domestic rates + damping grants)

Great Crested Newt

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many licences have been applied for in respect of the great crested newt since 1981; how many of these have been approved; how many of these have been refused; what conditions have been attached to them; and what monitoring has been undertaken to assess their level of success or failure. [11866]

Mr. Clappison: English Nature is the licensing authority for a wide range of activities relating to great crested newts and my Department is the appropriate authority for safe licensing of this species.

The information to answer the question is not readily available. However, in addition to licences issued for other purposes, a recent review of the five-year period 1990–1995 has shown that 141 licences were issued to permit the translocation of great crested newts. Subsequent monitoring of projects has shown that in 92 per cent. of cases adults were found in subsequent years and in 61 per cent. of cases breeding was confirmed.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria will be used to judge whether the receptor sites, within the Orton brick pits site of special scientific interest, are mature enough to support translocated newts; and if he will ensure that newts will not be translocated to the receptor sites before these criteria are fulfilled. [11865]

Mr. Clappison: A view of the suitability of the habitat for receiving translocated newts will be made by appropriate specialists. English Nature will not grant licences to translocate great crested newts until they are satisfied that the receptor sites appear suitable to receive the likely number of animals that will be captured during the translocation from any area of the Orton brick pit site.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultation procedures will take place before a licence is issued for the translocation of great crested newts from any part of the Orton brick pits site of special scientific interest. [11863]

Mr. Clappison: The normal procedure for evaluating licence applications is that they are considered by English Nature, and a decision is made following consultation with their specialist and local team staff. This procedure will be followed before licences are issued for the translocation of great crested newts from any part of the Orton brick pits area.

To allow open discussion of methods, English Nature has convened a liaison group with non-governmental organisations. That group will meet for the first time on 16 February.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what conditions are attached to any applications for a licence to translocate great crested newts from any part of the Orton brick pits site of special scientific interest. [11864]

Mr. Clappison: The conditions that would apply to any applications for a licence to translocate newts from any part of this site are as follows: that the existing site must have been given planning consent and the notification of the site as an SSSI was taken into account; that the receptor site is suitable for the number of animals that is intended to move; that the translocation is of conservation benefit to the animals concerned; and that anyone carrying out the translocation is sufficiently qualified and able to do the work. Subsequent to any translocation of animals, the receptor site must be monitored to determine the level of occupation of the newts at the site.

Mr. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what applications for licences English Nature has received, and what licences they have issued for the translocation of great crested newts from any part of the Orton brick pits site of special scientific interest, Peterborough, since the statement of intent was signed between English Nature and Peterborough Southern Township Ltd. [11862]

Mr. Clappison: The Government's statutory scientific advisers, English Nature, advise that no applications have been received and no licences issued since the statement of intent was signed on 15 July 1995.

Cemfuel Burning (Health Effects)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what communication he has had with Lancashire county council concerning the health effects experienced by staff of the National Physical Laboratory when monitoring air quality at Moorland school and Waddington and West Bradford primary school in connection with the burning of cemfuel by Castle Cement. [12211]

Mr. Clappison: Lancashire county council has been sent a copy of the full report from the National Physical Laboratory. I have received no comments.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many National Physical Laboratory staff experienced (a) unpleasant odours, (b) respiratory effects and (c) eye or throat irritation during the air monitoring exercise at Castle Cement's Ribblesdale works between 7 August and 1 September 1995. [12213]

Mr. Clappison: Odour was detected by NPL staff on 10 occasions even though the measured sulphur dioxide levels were far below the generally accepted odour threshold. Respiratory effects and eye or throat irritation were each recorded on three occasions. On two of the occasions, respiratory effects were reported by one individual who is an asthma sufferer.

The threshold guide value for sulphur dioxide, published by the expert panel on air quality standards, at which the health of some people could be affected, was never breached during the four weeks of monitoring.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when authorisation was given for the burning of cemfuel by Castle Cement at Clitheroe; what account was taken of potential problems arising from plume grounding in granting authorisation, and what technical solutions have been identified. [12013]

Mr. Clappison: Castle Cement, Clitheroe had started burning cemfuel in 1992 under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. In 1993, cement manufacture came under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Clitheroe authorisation was continued. Plume grounding had not been identified as a problem at that time.

A variation to Castle Cement's authorisation, issued on 23 January 1996 requires Castle Cement to have agreed, with Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution proposals for resolution of the plume grounding problem by 30 April 1996.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what caused the odour detected by staff of the National Physical Laboratory during the air quality monitoring at Castle Cement's Ribblesdale works at Clitheroe during the period 7 August to 1 September 1995. [12214]

Mr. Clappison: The detection of odour by the staff from the National Physical Laboratory was correlated with concentrations of sulphur dioxide above 50ppb. However, this is significantly below the generally recognised odour detection threshold. It was not possible to identify any one compound responsible for the odour.

Housing Bill

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what additional resources he will make available to local authorities in order to implement the proposals on (a) homelessness, (b) housing allocations and (c) advice contained in the Housing Bill; [12141]

(2) what additional resources he will make available to enable local authorities to provide housing advice services where they are not currently available to fulfil the duties set out in the Housing Bill. [12142]

Mr. Clappison: The provisions redefining the duty owed by local authorities to persons accepted as homeless and the accompanying reform of the allocation of social housing should not have a significant effect on central or local government expenditure. The effect will depend in part on the nature of the allocation schemes which local authorities establish in the light of principles to be prescribed by the Secretary of State in regulations. Expenditure on advisory services, where these do not already exist in a satisfactory form, should be fully offset.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of additional demands for assistance under the provisions of the Children Act 1989 which may arise from homeless families refused assistance under the proposed homelessness legislation contained in the Housing Bill. [12146]

Mr. Clappison: There is no reason why there should be any such demand; the relevant provisions in the Housing Bill make no changes to the groups which have a priority need for accommodation.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what assessment he has made of the change in the rate of use of properties in the private rented sector by local authorities under the provisions of the Housing Bill; [12147]

(2) what assessment he has made of the future availability to homeless households of properties in the private rented sector. [12148]

Mr. Clappison: We expect the private rented sector to continue to develop and to make an important contribution to meeting the housing needs of a wide range of households.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned into the likely housing benefit costs (i) to central Government funds and (ii) to local authorities of the provisions of the Housing Bill. [12143]

Mr. Clappison: We have given careful consideration to the financial effects, including those relating to the cost of housing benefit, of the provisions in parts VI and VII of the Housing Bill. The Government consider that the provisions should not have a significant effect on central or local government expenditure. This will depend in part on the nature of the allocation schemes which local authorities establish in the light of principles to be prescribed by the Secretary of State in regulations. We will monitor local authorities' implementation of the provisions.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether alternative accommodation in the private sector will be deemed suitable if rent exceeds the local reference rent under the provisions contained in the Housing Bill. [12149]

Mr. Clappison: Suitable alternative accommodation for the purposes of part VII of the Housing Bill would need to be affordable within the resources available to the applicant, including housing benefit where applicable.

Environmentally Hazardous Projects

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implications for the rights of United Kingdom citizens to challenge potentially environmentally hazardous projects, endorsed by the European Commission, of the two decisions of the European court of first instance, case T-585/93 on 9 August 1995 and case T-219/95 on 22 December 1995. [11985]

Mr. Clappison: Citizens of the European Union, including UK citizens, who seek to institute proceedings against a Commission decision must show that the decision is of direct and individual concern to them, as required by article 173 of the treaty establishing the European Community and article 146 of the Euratom treaty.

In both of the cases referred to, T-219/95 and T-585/93, the European court of first instance found that the applicants did not meet the above requirements. In the case of T-585/93, that ruling is now the subject of an appeal in the European Court of Justice.

Water Authorities

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many people served on the boards of the (a) Anglian water authority, (b) Welsh water authority, (c) Northumbrian water authority, (d) North West water authority, (e) Severn Trent water authority, (f) Southern water authority, (g) South West water authority, (h) Thames water authority, (i) Wessex water authority, and (j) Yorkshire water authority, in the final year before each was privatised; [12186]

(2) how much was paid to people serving on boards of (a) Anglian water authority, (b) Welsh water authority, (c) Northumbrian water authority, (d) North West water authority, (e) Severn Trent water authority, (f) Southern water authority, (g) South West water authority, (h) Thames water authority, (i) Wessex water authority, and (j) Yorkshire water authority, in the final year before each was privatised. [12188]

Mr. Clappison: Information about the number and remuneration of water authority board members in the year prior to privatisation is given in "Public Bodies 1989", issued by the Cabinet Office (Office of Public Service and Science). A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were employed by (a) Anglian water authority, (b) Welsh water authority, (c) Northumbrian water authority, (d) North West water authority, (e) Severn Trent water authority, (f) Southern water authority, (g) South West water authority, (h) Thames water authority, (i) Wessex water authority, and (j) Yorkshire water authority, in the final year before each was privatised. [12190]

Mr. Clappison: Manpower information for the water industry in the final year before privatisation is given in "Waterfacts 1989", published by the Water Services Association. A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

Burnley and Pendle Transport

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 8, what are the implications of the refusal to grant a dispensation to vote for councillor Jill Gilhespy for her chairing the council meeting which will consider a report on the sale of Pendle's stake in Burnley and Pendle Transport. [12229]

Sir Paul Beresford: The decision to decline Councillor Gill Gilhespy's application for a dispensation to vote need have no implications for her chairing the meeting which will consider a report on the sale of Pendle's stake in Burnley and Pendle Transport, except that the chairman's casting vote will not be available to her.

Wildlife Habitats

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what protection for ponds as wildlife habitats is offered by existing planning legislation. [12311]

Sir Paul Beresford: Section 38 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 requires local planning authorities to include in their development plans policies in respect of the natural beauty and amenity of the land. Regulation 37 of the Conservation (Natural Habitats and etc.) Regulations 1994 provides for such policies to include policies encouraging the management of landscape features which are of major importance for wild flora and fauna, such as ponds.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) grants and (b) other financial assistance his Department makes available for the construction, conservation and management of ponds as wildlife habitats. [12288]

Mr. Clappison: My Department supports grant assistance for the creation or management of ponds under the countryside stewardship scheme, and SSI management agreements. In the light of stewardship's successful pilot phase, and in advance of its transfer to the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 1 April 1996, my right hon. Friend the Minister announced in November that an extra £5 million will be available for new management agreements under countryside stewardship for each of the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. This is in addition to the existing £11.625 million already available under the scheme.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food also provides support for work on ponds under the environmentally sensitive areas scheme, and the Government fund conservation advice provided by ADAS and the farming and wildlife advisory group, including advice on ponds.

Domestic Gas Appliances

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the number of households that are at risk of carbon monoxide poisoning from gas appliances. [12439]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. Every household containing a gas appliance may be potentially at risk from carbon monoxide poisoning. The best means of prevention is to ensure that gas appliances are correctly installed and regularly maintained by gas installers who are registered with the Council for Registered Gas Installers.

Repossessions

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many repossessions there have been in each region since 1992. [12569]

Mr. Clappison: Data are not held centrally on the number of repossessions in each region.

British Gas (Contaminated Land)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the amount of land officially designated as contaminated land which is owned by British Gas plc; and if he will list all such land. [12616]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 30 January 1996]: At present, there is no statutory system in force for designating contaminated land. When section 57 of the Environment Act 1995 is implemented, it will provide a statutory definition of contaminated land and procedures for its identification.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of money has been notified to his Department as having been spent by British Gas plc in the decontamination of land within its ownership in each financial year since privatisation. [12614]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 30 January 1996]: British Gas plc has not notified the Department how much it has spent in the decontamination of land within its ownership since privatisation.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total spending contribution towards the decontamination of land within British Gas plc's ownership by (a) local authorities, (b) the Department of the Environment, (c) English Partnerships (d) the European Union and (e) other public bodies in each financial year since privatisation. [12615]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 30 January 1995]: When the Department of the Environment contributes to the costs of decontamination of land, this is normally only one element of a wider package of support for individual reclamation or redevelopment projects. Central records do not exist of the amounts of the various different cost elements.

English Partnerships has not spent any money on decontamination of land within British Gas plc's ownership since its privatisation.

The Department does not systematically collect information on spending on decontamination of land by local authorities, the European Union or other public bodies.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he will take to ensure that the current number and value of grants paid to householders receiving funding for the home energy efficiency scheme will be maintained. [10800]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We expect the number and value of home energy efficiency scheme grants paid to low-income households to be at least maintained. We intend that better-off elderly householders will have to contribute to the cost after 1 April 1996, and we expect many will take advantage of the substantial discount that the scheme will offer them on the cost of installing basic insulation. Their contributions will supplement the £73 million allocated to the scheme for 1996–97, and we anticipate that considerably more than 400,000 grants will be paid next year. Local authorities will, following implementation of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995, have a key responsibility to identify appropriate ways of improving the energy efficiency of homes in their areas.

Homelessness

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the average number of homeless people in England and Wales for each of the years (a) 1980, (b) 1985, (c) 1990, (d) 1992, (e) 1993, (f) 1994 and (g) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [12458]

Mr. Clappison: The numbers of households for which local authorities in England accepted responsibility to secure accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1985 in the years requested were as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1980[1] | 60,400 |
| 1985 | 91,010 |
| 1990 | 140,350 |
| 1992 | 142,890 |
| 1993 | 132,380 |
| 1994 | 122,660 |
| 1995 (January-September only) | 92,650 |

Note:

[1] This figure is not strictly comparable with those for the later years because of changes to reporting arrangements made in 1980 (for non-metropolitan districts) and 1982 (for London boroughs and metropolitan districts).

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to implement paragraph 46 of the report of the Government's panel on sustainable development, published on 25 January. [12684]

Mr. Clappison: We intend to publish a considered response to the recommendations made in the panel's second report, including that in paragraph 46, at the end of March 1996.

Building Research Establishment

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes have been made to the membership of the advisory group overseeing the study into options for privatisation of the Building Research Establishment. [13224]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Mr. Roger Courtney, chief executive of the Building Research Establishment invited the Department in mid-January to consider his position as a member of the advisory group which would shortly be asked for their guidance once consultants had completed their study of privatisation options. He indicated that he would wish to be able to participate in future management arrangements for BRE; this could include being involved in any proposal for a management and employee buy-out if Ministers, in the light of the consultants' report, decided that this was an option to be pursued. In those circumstances, he and the Department judged that he should not be privy to those parts of the consultants' report which contained commercial assessments as this could place him in an advantageous position compared with any other potential purchasers. Mr. Neil Milbank, deputy chief executive of BRE, who will retire during 1996 and will therefore not be involved in the future management of the establishment, has taken Mr. Courtney's place on the advisory group.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11916]

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland civil service and Norther Ireland Office do not use the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol. The NICS's arrangements in respect of the recruitment and management of disabled staff are set out in the code of practice on the employment of people with disabilities in the Northern Ireland civil service. The principles and guidance applying to the recruitment and management of the home civil service staff group in the Northern Ireland Office are set out in the programme for action to achieve equality of opportunity in "The Civil Service and Disabled People" published by the Office of Public Service and Science, now the Office of Public Service.

Honours Recommendations

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy in respect of consultation with the Eire Government in respect of recommendations for honours; and if he will make a statement. [11684]

Sir John Wheeler: There is no consultation with the Irish Government regarding the recommendation of individuals for honours.

Unemployment

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the overall percentage and proportionate rates of unemployment of Catholics, Protestants and others, the numbers involved and those figures broken down by gender with sources; [11685]

(2) what is the overall percentage and proportionate rates of unemployment of Catholics, Protestants and others, the numbers involved and those figures broken by male and female, with sources; and if he will give his Department's views as to the reasons for the differentials. [11689]

Sir John Wheeler: The information in the table is based on those for whom a religion was recorded in the 1991 census of population.

| | Male | | Female | | Both Sexes | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Protestant and others | Roman catholic | Protestant and other | Roman Catholic | Protestant and others | Roman Catholic |
| Economically Active | 212,574 | 143,234 | 148,998 | 95,490 | 361,572 | 238,724 |
| Unemployed | 26,895 | 40,647 | 11,943 | 13,863 | 38,838 | 54,410 |
| Unemployment Rate | 12.7 | 28.4 | 8.0 | 14.5 | 10.7 | 22.8 |

A very small proportion of the "Protestant and others" category—approximately 0.5 per cent.—were members of non-Christian religions.

The difference in unemployment rates between Catholics and Protestants is due to the interaction over time of a complex range of factors which has been the subject of academic debate since the 1970s. This is one of the issues to be addressed in the employment equality review currently being undertaken by the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights.

Coinage

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 9 January 1995, Official Report, column 107, if he subjected his decision to agree to the Royal Mint's proposal for a Celtic torc and a Celtic cross to be the symbols representing

Northern Ireland on the new £1 coin to his Department's policy appraisal and fair treatment guidelines. [11686]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: No.

Donna Maguire

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange for the costs of Donna Maguire's criminal activities to be deducted from her award for ankle injuries. [11687]

Mr. Moss: An appeal against the award is under consideration. It would be inappropriate to comment further on the case in these circumstances.

Housing (Residency Requirements)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many years residency are required before a United Kingdom citizen not born in Northern Ireland becomes eligible under the standard rules to be housed by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive; and if he will detail some comparable rules in England and Scotland. [11688]

Mr. Moss: As I confirmed to the hon. Gentleman in my letter of 14 November 1995, the housing selection scheme operated by the Housing Executive and approved by the Department of the Environment provides that, before they can be considered for public housing, applicants—other than those with an entitlement to be housed on a priority basis—must:

(a) have been born in Northern Ireland; or

(b) have been resident in Northern Ireland for the past seven years; or

(c) have accepted an offer of employment or be currently employed in Northern Ireland; or

(d) would have been resident in Northern Ireland for the past seven years but for employment in the Crown elsewhere.

In England and Wales, local authorities are responsible for allocating housing within the framework laid down in sections 22 and 23 of the Housing Act 1985. A survey carried out by the Department of the Environment in London shows that around 90 per cent. of local authorities in England operate a residency condition. Details of the length of time that each authority requires an applicant to reside in their area is not held centrally.

Sections 9 to 21 of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 set out the framework for allocating and managing housing in Scotland. Scottish authorities are required not to take account of an applicant's length of residence. Details of the individual schemes and the authorities' observance of this requirement are not held centrally.

Development Grants

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what economic development grants Northern Ireland has received in each of the last five years from (a) the EU and (b) other sources; and what is the total value of these. [9625]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The following table shows what has been drawn down in each of the last five years in respect of economic development grants from the European Union.

| Year | £000 |
|---|---|
| 1991 | 58,135 |
| 1992 | 96,035 |
| 1993 | 120,116 |
| 1994 | 30,213 |
| 1995 | 14,003 |
| Total | 318,502 |

With regard to funding from other sources, the international fund for Ireland provides financial contributions which support economic development in Northern Ireland. Information about the financial support provided by this independent international organisation is contained in its published annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

Telecommunications Masts

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning applications he has received from Millennium Communications, Stockport, for the erection of telecommunications relay station masts in Northern Ireland; what are the exact locations of each of these masts; and what steps he intends to take to apply planning controls to such structures. [12150]

Mr. Moss: No planning applications have been received. The erection of telecommunications relay station masts by licenced public telecommunications code system operators is, subject to certain criteria, permitted development by virtue of article 3 of the Planning (General Development) Order (Northern Ireland) 1993.

Fisheries

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what studies have been undertaken by the Department of Agriculture to establish catch figures for fisheries on the Rivers Maine and Kells water system. [12083]

Mr. Ancram: None. There is no statutory requirement for anglers to make catch returns.

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the need for counters to be employed on the River Maine system to enable the fishery division to compile accurate figures on the health of the migratory stocks. [12084]

Mr. Ancram: None. The provision of fish counters on watercourses is a matter for fishery owners. Funds are currently available to assist such projects.

Balmoral-Malone Traffic Scheme

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the cost benefit analysis check sensitivity test for induced traffic effects on the Balmoral-Malone roads traffic scheme; what estimate he has made of the time savings in pounds sterling for each of the 30 years' assumed life of the scheme from the COBA output; if he will indicate the total (a) vehicle kilometres and (b) number of predicated accidents by category for (i) the do nothing and (ii) do something options for (1) the opening year and (2) the design year (year 15); and if he will list the value accident savings in pounds sterling for each of the 30 year life discounted as for time savings. [11932]

Mr. Moss: The cost benefit analysis check sensitive test for induced traffic effects on the Malone road/Balmoral avenue traffic scheme shows that no induced traffic is expected as a result of this scheme.

The time savings, in sterling, for each of the 30 years' assumed life of the scheme based on low traffic growth and high traffic growth are as follows:

Savings £'000

| 30. | 111 | 429 |
| Total | 5,202 | 12,408 |

The total vehicle kilometres and number of predicted accidents based on low and high traffic growth are as follows:

| | Low Traffic Growth | | High Traffic Growth | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Year | Do nothing | Do something | Do nothing | Do something |

Council Grants

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the rates of general grant, showing the breakdown between the derating and resources elements, for each district council in Northern Ireland for each year since 1994–95. [12535]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is set out in the table. The figures for 1994–95 include final adjustments for the two previous years and the 1995–96 figures include final adjustments which will be paid before the end of this financial year, subject to certification of district council accounts by the local government auditor.

SCOTLAND

Crime

15. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is pursuing to reduce crime. [10802]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I are determined to fight crime and have provided for the deployment of 500 additional operational police officers, backed up by improved technology, and a £4 million challenge competition to help fund more closed-circuit television schemes.

28. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to combat crime. [10815]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office is pursuing a number of measures to reduce crime, including the provision of funds for the deployment of 500 additional operational police officers, backed up by improved technology and a £4 million challenge competition to help fund more CCTV schemes.

Beef Industry

16. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what priority he attaches to the beef industry in Scotland. [10803]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My noble Friend the Minister with responsibility and I attach great priority to a sector which represents approximately 30 per cent. of Scottish agricultural output, and has an international reputation for the highest quality.

Scottish Enterprise

17. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of Scottish Enterprise to discuss his budget. [10804]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend last met the chairman of Scottish Enterprise on 15 November 1995 to discuss a wide range of issues, including the Scottish Enterprise budget.

Central European Time

18. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about central European time in respect of the construction and agriculture industries in Scotland. [10805.]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Of the letters received in the Scottish Office recently about the proposed change to central European time, two expressed opposition to the measure solely on account of its impact on the agricultural and construction industries; many of the rest alluded, among other things, to the adverse effects on these industries.

Local Government Finance

19. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his financial allocations to the new councils for 1996–97. [10806]

Mr. Kynoch: Capital allocations to all authorities will be announced in February or March.

36. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government finance. [10824]

Mr. Kynoch: On 26 January.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet representatives of the new unitary councils to discuss the financial settlement for 1996–97. [10792]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I did so last Friday 26 January 1996.

Councils (Housing Expenditure)

20. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department approved the balance of spending by councils on capital housing projects and the repayment of debt in previous years. [10807]

Mr. Kynoch: No; within the resources made available to them, local authorities decided the balance between spending and level of debt repayment.

Lockerbie

21. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the consequences of the lapse of time since the Lockerbie crime for the prosecution of, and case against, two Libyans accused of the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [10808]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend remains concerned that, more than seven years after the commission of the crime and four years after the Libyan Government were called on to surrender the two accused, they have yet to comply with our demands, which have been endorsed by the United Nations Security Council.

Residential Care Homes

22. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the report of the Scottish Office working group on residential care home registration procedures; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [10809]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The range of issues considered by the working group was more complex than originally anticipated, and I now expect to receive the report before the end of March. I will make arrangements for a copy to be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Scottish Economic Council

23. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish Economic Council to discuss public funding. [10810]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend hopes to arrange the first meeting of the new Scottish Economic Council very soon and looks forward to receiving the council's views on a wide range of matters affecting the Scottish economy, including priorities for public expenditure.

Independence (Public Finances)

24. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the effect on public finances of Scottish independence. [10811]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am fully aware of the concerns most Scots have over the prospect of Scottish independence and how it would endanger the funding advantage that Scotland derives from the Union.

Local Authorities (Severe Weather)

25. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much additional financial help he has given to local authorities to deal with the problems caused by the recent severe weather. [10812]

Mr. Kynoch: We have made it clear that we are prepared to consider sympathetically claims both for Bellwin scheme assistance and for additional capital consents. My officials are already working with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to gather detailed information on revenue costs. We have received, very recently, a number of initial requests for capital consent, but further information will be required before we can consider these. As soon as detailed claims are received, they will be considered as a matter of urgency.

School Buildings

26. Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the standard of school buildings; and if he will make a statement. [10813]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: It is the responsibility of individual education authorities to maintain relevant information about their buildings.

Industrial Development

27. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the prospects for (a) industrial investment and (b) employment levels in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [10814]

Mr. Kynoch: The prospects for industrial investment and employment in Scotland remain excellent. Recent business survey evidence in Scotland confirms this. The Government's economic policies are providing the necessary conditions for investment and job creation—low interest rates, low taxation and low inflation within a climate of sound public finances.

Tree Diseases

29. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what Government grants are available for research into tree diseases; and what was the total expenditure on such grants in 1994–95. [10816]

Mr. Kynoch: Several Government Departments undertake or commission research into tree diseases, notably the Forestry Commission, and we also fund some projects by universities and other bodies. However, we do not offer grants specifically for forestry research. Our expenditure on research into tree diseases in 1994–95 amounted to £1.3 million.

Scottish Parliament

30. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the costs of a Scottish Parliament. [10817]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been made aware on numerous occasions of the deep-rooted apprehension felt by Scots about the costs that a Scottish Parliament would place upon them.

Angling

31. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet representatives of the hotel and tourist industry to discuss projects to improve angling in Scotland. [10818]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I recognise fully the importance of angling to the Scottish hotel and tourist industry but have no plans at present to meet the industry to discuss angling.

Housing (Edinburgh)

32. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the Edinburgh Tenants Federation to discuss housing needs in Edinburgh. [10819]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My right hon. Friend and I have no plans for such a meeting. Meeting housing needs in Edinburgh is a matter for Edinburgh district council in the first instance. However, the federation has been offered a meeting with officials of my Department, if it wishes.

Fire Services (Strathclyde)

33. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chief firemaster of Strathclyde regional council to discuss operational matters; and if he will make a statement. [10820]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend last met the firemaster of Strathclyde fire brigade, in his capacity as chairman of the Scottish district of the Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association, on 25 September 1995. A number of operational and other matters were discussed.

Private Finance Initiative

34. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what policies he is pursuing to expand PFI activities in Scotland. [10822]

Mr. Kynoch: Private sector alternatives must be fully considered for all capital spending for which the Scottish Office is responsible before public finance is made available. I have recently strengthened the private finance unit in the Scottish Office in order to help local authorities, in particular, take full advantage of the PFI.

Rutherglen Maternity Hospital

35. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recommendation he has had from Greater Glasgow health board about the future of Rutherglen maternity hospital. [10823]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Greater Glasgow health board has recommended that Rutherglen maternity hospital should close once replacement maternity services are available from a purpose-built maternity unit at Glasgow royal infirmary.

The recommendation is being considered along with others in the acute and maternity services strategy, submitted by Greater Glasgow health board to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, on 20 December 1995.

Lothian Electric Machines, Haddington

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many redundancies have been notified by Lothian Electric Machines of Haddington for the eight months to the end of March 1996; what discussions he has had with IBM about the decision to transfer the manufacture of computer keyboards from Scotland to the far east; and if he will make a statement. [10838]

Mr. Kynoch: During the period in question, Lothian Electric Machines of Haddington notified the Department of Employment of 273 redundancies. Decisions by IBM about the sourcing of its purchases are of course a matter for the company, but the hon. Gentleman should be aware that Scottish Enterprise works closely with indigenous companies and major original equipment manufacturers—OEMs—across a range of industrial sectors to improve the competitiveness of local suppliers and, as a result, increase overall the proportion of purchases made by these OEMs from Scottish companies. These sourcing and business development activities have proved highly successful. Scottish Enterprise's manufacturing services group is available to discuss with Lemac what assistance can be made available.

Unemployment (East Lothian)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current level of unemployment in east Lothian; what will be the impact of redundancies notified by Lemac of Haddington; and if he will consult the East Lothian council and Lothian and Edinburgh Enterprise Ltd. about action to create jobs in east Lothian. [10837]

Mr. Kynoch: In December 1995, there were 844 people—5.8 per cent. of the work force—in the Haddington travel-to-work area who were registered as unemployed or claiming benefit. If the redundancies notified by Lemac take place, there will be a further 73 indirect and induced job losses in the Haddington travel-to-work area. Lothian and Edinburgh Enterprise Ltd. has arranged an early meeting with the company to discuss the retraining of staff who are made redundant, and to discuss the scope for assisting towards product development by the company. I understand that those affected by these redundancies will be eligible for immediate entry for training for work support.

Public Authority Dwellings (Sales)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each district and island council, for each of the years between 1979–80 and 1994–95 the number of sales of public authority dwellings which were not owned by new towns, Scottish Homes or fell within district and islands councils' housing revenue account; and if he will indicate for each year and each district or island area to which public organisation the dwellings belonged. [10854]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 29 January 1996]: Since the available information—which covers dwellings owned by district, islands and regional authorities, but not Government Departments—is rather lengthy, I have arranged for it to be sent to the hon. Member. A copy is also being placed in the Library.

Interdicts

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many interdicts are currently in force to prevent a parent in Scotland from approaching his or her children. [12395]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not collected centrally.

North Lanarkshire Council

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to receive the report of the inquiry into the appointment procedures of North Lanarkshire council. [13419]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I received Mr. MacLeod's report on 25 January. I am grateful to him for a comprehensive report which has been completed within a very short period. I am placing copies in the House Library today.

Mr. MacLeod's report concludes that the North Lanarkshire council has not failed to comply with the requirements of section 7 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 to appoint staff solely on merit and no further action is required by me.

TRANSPORT

Marchioness Inquest

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement of his Department's conclusions in respect of the recommendations of the Marchioness inquest jury. [13418]

Mr. Norris: My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping has arranged for a paper setting out the Department's views on the recommendations of the Marchioness inquest jury to be placed in the Library of the House.

The Department agrees with the majority of the jury's 12 recommendations. In many cases, existing rules and guidelines already meet the jury's proposals. In those cases where recommendations are aimed at other agencies, the Department is pursuing the recommendations with the agencies in question.

The jury endorsed the earlier recommendations of the marine accident investigation branch report into the Marchioness sinking, together with the recommendations of the report of the inquiry into river safety by Mr. John Hayes. All of the recommendations in the MAIB's report have since been implemented. Action has also been taken on the recommendations of the Hayes report and an updated statement of the position is included in the paper published today.

Central Railways plc

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 36, if he will provide a schedule of the applications by Central Railways plc for partial, conditional or absolute waiver from compliance with certain application requirements under the Transport and Works Act 1992 that he is considering. [12537]

Mr. Watts: Central Railway plc has withdrawn the waiver applications previously before my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. I understand that it intends to re-apply for waivers in a modified form. It would not be appropriate in the circumstances to reveal details of the withdrawn waiver applications but copies of any subsequent such applications will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 36, when he reached the conclusion that the applications by Central Railways plc were of national importance under the Transport and Works Act 1992. [12536]

Mr. Watts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has reached no such conclusion. My answer, like the hon. Member's question, dealt with what would happen in the event of such a conclusion being reached. From what we know of the proposal, this conclusion seems very likely, but it cannot be reached unless and until a formal application is made under the Transport and Works Act 1992.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 36, if he will make a statement on the consultations with local planning authorities and other bodies which Central Railways plc is required to make under the Transport and Works Act 1992 rules; and what monitoring he has carried out as to whether the consultations have been carried out to the satisfaction of the local authorities concerned. [12538]

Mr. Watts: Rule 3 of the Transport and Works (Applications and Objections Procedure) Rules 1992 (SI 1992 No. 2902) sets out the pre-application consultation and notification requirements. The applicant must provide with the TWA application copies of all statements of views obtained from local planning authorities under rule 3(1) and evidence by affidavit of compliance with the notification requirements under rule 3(2) and 3(3).

Driving Instructors

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the policy of the Driving Standards Agency concerning driving instructors with criminal convictions. [12414]

Mr. Norris: Under part V of the Road Traffic Act 1988, the registrar of approved driving instructors, who is responsible for the administration of the ADI register, has to be satisfied that an instructor is a "fit and proper person". Any instructor who is aggrieved by the registrar's decision to remove his name from the register can appeal to the Secretary of State, which appeal is heard by an independent appeal board. That strikes a reasonable balance between the rights of the individual and the protection of the learning public.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the proposed deregulation of the Driving Standards Agency and its future monitoring of driving instructors. [12415]

Mr. Norris: There are no plans to deregulate the Driving Standards Agency and it will continue to be responsible for the statutory register of approved driving instructors and for the conduct of driving tests.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to ensure that persons convicted of offences of indecency are not permitted to work as driving instructors; and if he will make a statement. [12413]

Mr. Norris: Under part V of the Road Traffic Act 1988, the registrar of approved driving instructors, who is responsible for the administration of the ADI register, has to be satisfied that an instructor is a "fit and proper person". If, for example, following the criminal conviction of an instructor, the registrar is no longer satisfied on this score, he can remove that person's name from the register.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to restrict persons convicted of indecency from setting up driving schools to teach driving practice or theory; and if he will make a statement. [12416]

Mr. Norris: In the environment in which ordinary driving instruction takes place, it is sensible that the instructor should be subject to vetting as to previous convictions, and so on. However, there is no obvious need for a special conduct regime for classroom tuition services since the isolated and relatively vulnerable circumstances of one-to-one in a car do not arise.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the total cost to public funds of the high speed rail link between London and the channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement. [12170]

Mr. Watts: The amount of public sector support which the Government will make available for this project will depend on the outcome of the competition currently under way to select a private sector promoter. We anticipate that the contribution will be substantial. We hope to announce the winner of the competition shortly.

Driving Licence Fraud

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are being taken to combat driving licence fraud; and if he will make a statement. [12169]

Mr. Norris: Photographs are to be added to driving licences. This will help eliminate misuse of licences and impersonation at driving tests.

Railway Line Repairs (Dawlish)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what estimate he has made of the cost of repairs required to the railway line at Dawlish. [12524]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 30 January 1996]: None. However, Railtrack informs me that £500,000 per year is spent on maintenance of the Dawlish sea wall, with a further £200,000 this year for repairs necessitated by the poor weather conditions in January.

Public Service Vehicle Licences

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many public service vehicle operators' licences have been (a) applied for, (b) issued, (c) objected to by (i) the police, (ii) the public and (iii) others, (d) issued and (e) withdrawn by the authorities in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on the trends in each category in the last five years. [12869]

Mr. Norris: The information on applications, issues of licences, and withdrawals for 1994–95, the latest figures which are available, is contained in annexes 1 and 2 of the annual reports of the traffic commissioners 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995, copies of which are available in the Library. In that year, there were five objections to licence applications, of which two came from the police, none from the public, and three from others.

Over the last five years, the number of applications and the number of licences issued have shown a slow but steady growth, punctuated, in both categories, by a sharp reduction in 1994–95. The number of objections received has remained roughly constant.

As for the number of withdrawals, 1990–91 showed a high, and the subsequent four years have produced lower, broadly similar figures.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for transport what computer links exist between his Department, the police, the traffic commissioners and others to cross check public service vehicle operators' applications in order to detect unsuitable applicants, with particular reference to those with a criminal record of offences against children; and if he will make a statement. [12874]

Mr. Norris: There are no computer links between the traffic area offices and the police. All applications for public service vehicle operators' licences are published in advance of the grant of a licence and circulated to the police, who have a statutory right of objection to a licence being granted on the grounds that the requirement of good repute has not been satisfied.

The applicant must declare on his application form any relevant convictions that he or any of his employees has had in the last five years. Any person who knowingly makes a false statement for the purpose of obtaining a licence is liable to a fine and the revocation or suspension of the licence.

Rail Tickets (Inter-availability)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of state for Transport what instructions he has given to the Director of Passenger Rail Franchising regarding the inter-availability of tickets between destinations where more than one route is available and services on these routes are provided by different train operating companies. [12844]

Mr. Watts: Paragraphs 29 of the objectives, instructions and guidance to the franchising director instruct the franchising director that:

"Where a railway passenger journey could be made using services operated by different franchisees you are to require the franchisees to offer tickets which are inter-available between their services where you believe the benefits of doing so will outweigh the likely benefits of price competition and service diversity".

The franchising director will require inter-available tickets between the different operators on most routes, thereby essentially safeguarding the existing inter-availability of tickets for British Rail services on permitted routes. He will lift the requirement only if this would be in the interests of price competition and service diversity. While inter-availability is required, operators will be permitted to offer additional, non-inter-available tickets which trade flexibility for a cheaper price.

Heavy Goods Vehicle Drivers

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the regulation of HGV drivers employed by HGV driver agencies; if he will consult on proposals to regulate HGV driver agencies; and if he will make a statement. [12437]

Mr. Norris: I have received one letter on this issue. Employment agencies for HGV drivers are already regulated. They are subject to the standards of conduct in the Employment Agencies Act 1973 and the Conduct of Employment Agencies and Employment Businesses Regulations 1976, which are enforced by the employment agency standards office of the Department of Trade and Industry.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the transmission-based signalling system proposed for the west coast main line will be compatible with the proposed European train control system. [12282]

Mr. Watts: The final form of the European train control system will depend on the outcome of the current development work. However, the transmission-based signalling system proposed for the west coast main line is expected to be compatible with ETCS principles.

Mr. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when it is expected that a proven European train control system will be ready for production; and when the transmission-based signalling system proposed for the west coast main line will be ready for installation. [12281]

Mr. Watts: The availability of a proven European train control system will depend on the outcome of research trials currently being undertaken within the EC's fourth framework programme for research and development. The trials are not due to be completed until around the year 2000. Railtrack will let the development contract for the transmission-based signalling system for the west coast main line during the first quarter of this year. Railtrack expects that a reliable signalling system can be developed within the time necessary for the modernisation works.

Marine Pollution (Penalties)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance is given to magistrates on the appropriate level of fines under the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Pollution) Regulations 1983. [12154]

Mr. Norris: None.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many convictions there have been made under the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Pollution) Regulations 1983 in each of the years for which figures are available; and what was the average fine each year. [12153]

Mr. Norris: Precise information on individual fines imposed is not held centrally. Estimates are, however, available from the advisory committee on pollution of the sea.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to bring into force proposals authorised in the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Pollution) (Law of the Sea Convention) Order 1995. [12191]

Mr. Norris: Subject to approval of the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Pollution) (Law of the Sea Convention) Order 1995 by the Privy Council, we would hope to bring into force regulations extending jurisdiction over oil pollution before the end of March. Regulations on pollution by garbage and noxious liquid substances should follow shortly afterwards.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the maximum fine for illegal dumping at sea; and how many times it has been levied since 1983. [12152]

Mr. Norris: There is no maximum fine for convictions secured in the crown court. For convictions in magistrates courts, the maxima are £50,000 for illegal discharges of oil, and £5,000 for other discharge offences. Precise information on individual fines imposed is not available. My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping announced on 24 January the Government's intention to seek a five-fold increase in these maxima to £250,000 and £25,000 respectively.

Marine Safety Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safeguards exist to ensure staff on short-term contracts with the Marine Safety Agency do not have a conflict of interests with their other employment. [12195]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R.M. Bradley to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to respond to your Question about staff on short term contracts.

The people employed by the Marine Safety Agency on casual or short fixed term contracts do not have other employment so there is no conflict of interests.

Road Taxes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on different road taxes for road use in different conditions. [12012]

Mr. Norris: Road tax decisions are primarily matters for the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

British Bus

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received concerning payments by the chief executive of British Bus to Ray McEnhill, National Express; and if he will make a statement. [12138]

Mr. Norris: I have seen press reports, and have no comment to make.

Trunk Roads, London

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what allocation has been made for maintenance of the trunk road network within the Greater London area for the financial years (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98; [11244]

(2) what is the current maintenance backlog on the trunk road network in Greater London. [11225]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Glenda Jackson, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the allocation of maintenance funds for trunk roads within the Greater London area and the current backlog of maintenance on the network.

This financial year (95/96) my Agency is forecasting to spend £51.4m (approx) on the maintenance of London's trunk road network. We are currently working on the allocation of next year's funds, in the light of last November's PES settlement. I will advise you on next year's funding when those allocations have been made. It is too early to forecast how much will be spent in the year 97/98.

There is an on-going programme of maintenance for London's trunk road network. Work is brought forward in order of priority against an on-going programme of condition assessment and as such there is no significant backlog of highway maintenance.

A102M

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the original estimated cost of the current works at Cotton street/Brunswick road/A102M improvements; what is the current estimated cost of the works; what factors underlie the current overrun by the contractors; if the contractors will be subject to penalty clauses; and if these will be implemented; [12231]

(2) what advantages in traffic flows the Highways Agency estimates will occur on completion of the contract for the works at Cotton street/Brunswick road/A102M improvements; what assessment has been made of the advantages for local residents from the scheme; if the contract for works at Cotton street/Brunswick road/A102M improvement is being completed to its original specification; what is its estimated finish date; and what on site works have been carried out that relate to a third river crossing at Blackwall. [12232]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Mildred Gordon, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the Cotton Street/Brunswick Road/A102M improvement scheme.

The tender sum for the contract was £5.1m, the current estimated cost of the works exceeds that but for commercial reasons I cannot yet say what that figure will be.

The original completion date was 12 November 1995, with the likely completion date now being June 1996. There are a number of reasons for this delay including uncharted underground services, works carried out by the statutory undertakers running late, unforeseen ground conditions and piling obstructions.

We have carefully considered and agreed to a 12 week extension of time on the contract. The decision on whether to implement penalty clauses on the contractor will depend on the actual completion date and on whether or not any further extensions of time are agreed.

On completion of the contract, traffic will re-route from Abbott Road because there will be the provision of a right hand turn into St. Leonard's Road. There will be increased capacity on the road north of the junction and Docklands via Cotton Street.

Local people will benefit from a reduction in levels of congestion. A13 westbound traffic wishing to travel north on the A102 will now be able to do so thus relieving Abbott Road, a residential road with a poor record of traffic accidents. There will be a new traffic signals system at the junction between the A13, A102 and Cotton Street with integrated pedestrian crossing facilities and widened central refuge islands. At various locations there will be a segregation of the footway from traffic with environmental screens, pedestrian barriers and landscaping and at crossings, we will provide specialised pavings to assist visually impaired people. Environmental screens will be provided between the A102 and adjacent residential properties and between the A102 and Culloden Primary School. The A13 subway will be reopened and existing subways will be refurbished. Safety is of course a prime concern and the scheme will reduce road traffic accidents over the next 30 years by nearly 200.

The improvement scheme is being completed to its original specification.

This scheme is a stand alone improvement and no works have been carried out that relate to a third river crossing.

HEALTH

GP Budgets

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the accumulated gross savings of general practitioner fundholders in each region as at 31 March 1995. [10935]

Mr. Malone: This information is not yet available.

Pain Research Institute, Liverpool

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations he has received about the proposed closure of the Pain Research Institute associated with Walton hospital, Liverpool; [12314]

(2) what assessment he has made of the value of the work carried out by the Pain Research Institute in Liverpool, with particular reference to the links between the institute and the pain clinic at Walton hospital; [12313]

(3) what action he (a) has taken and (b) proposes to take in order to assist in re-siting the Pain Research Institute to the Fazakerley hospital site in conjunction with the re-siting of Walton hospital there. [12315]

Mr. Horam: Ministers have received five letters on this subject. The Department recognises the importance of the Pain Research Institute and its close ties with the Walton Neurosciences trust. Representatives of the National Health Service executive, Walton Neurosciences trust and Aintree Hospitals NHS trust met on 26 January to discuss the institute's accommodation requirements and options for financing the relocation.

MRSA Bacteria

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines his Department has issued to general practitioners and NHS hospitals regarding the methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus bacterium. [12399]

Mr. Horam: Methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus is a problem largely confined to hospitals. Guidance on the control of MRSA in hospitals was circulated to the national health service in September 1994 under cover of EL(94)74, entitled "Improving the Effectiveness of the NHS". New advice on the surveillance of MRSA was included in guidance on

"Hospital Infection Control", published in March 1995 under cover of HSG(95)10. Copies of both documents are available in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to undertake further research into MRSA bacteria. [12336]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 22 January 1996, Official Report, columns 15–16.

Powered Wheelchairs

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the criteria for qualifying for a publicly funded indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair in the United Kingdom; [12079]

(2) what funding arrangements exist for indoor/outdoor powered wheelchair provision in the United Kingdom. [12078]

Mr. Bowis: It is for the national health service locally to decide which type of wheelchair is appropriate depending on local and personal circumstances. Responsibility for wheelchair provision in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, respectively.

Noise Levels (Hearing Damage)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into permanent hearing impairment caused by excessive noise levels faced by young people in places of public entertainment; and what plans his Department has to fund research into the level of hearing impairment amongst young people and the causes of such impairment. [12069]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has not commissioned any specific research into the effects of excessive noise levels in places of public entertainment, and has at present no plans to fund research into the level and causes of hearing impairment in young people.

The health and safety of people attending places of public entertainment are subject to the general requirements of the Health and Safety at Work Etc Act 1974. This includes the risk of damage to people's hearing.

Patients (Consent to Treatment)

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines medical professionals work to in securing the informed consent of patients to undergo surgery or similar treatment, with particular reference to information provided on success rates for the relevant treatment; and if the guidelines indicate whether the success rate figures they give should be (a) national, (b) local to the hospital or unit or (c) individual to the surgeon or professional and (d) any combination of these. [12499]

Mr. Horam: Medical professionals use guidance issued by the medical royal colleges as the basis for obtaining a patient's consent to treatment. The General Medical Council has also issued guidance to all doctors on the basis for obtaining a patient's consent to treatment in its publication, "Duties of a doctor". This emphasises the need to respect the right of patients to be fully involved in decisions about their care.

Such guidance contains no information about success rates for treatment.

General Osteopathic Council

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is yet in a position to announce the membership of the first General Osteopathic Council. [13369]

Operations (Women)

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of women by health authority waiting for (a) a hysterectomy operation, (b) a mastectomy operation and (c) a hip replacement operation; and how many have been waiting longer than (i) three months, (ii) six months, (iii) nine months and (iv) 12 months. [11491]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) infants and (b) people in total were recorded as suffering from cystic fibrosis in each standard region in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [12777]

Mr. Horam: Information about the prevalence of cystic fibrosis is not available centrally. Available information about national health service treatment, differentiating between those aged under one year and others, is shown in the table.

WALES

Health Authorities (Resources)

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what decisions he has reached about the allocation of resources to the new health authorities in Wales for 1996–97. [13343]

Mr. Hague: I announced on 13 December that I had decided to provide an additional £84 million for the NHS in Wales for 1996–97. This brings total NHS spending to £2,274 million. Within this sum, I propose to allocate £1,587 million to hospital, community and the cash-limited element of the family health services. Subject to approval of the relevant supply estimate, this amount will be distributed as follows:

The new health authorities will receive £1,491.6 million for revenue purposes. This is an increase of £55 million or 3.85 per cent. over 1995–96 plans, and 1.1 per cent. in real terms. In addition, authorities and trusts will be expected to generate efficiency savings of at least 3 per cent. This amounts to £40 million including a further £3.25 million savings in managements costs. These savings, together with the £55 million cash increase, will be available to meet inflationary and other pressures and enable further investment to be made in patient care.

Health authorities and NHS trusts will also receive £95.8 million for capital investment. They are also expected to receive additional receipts from sales of surplus land. These additional resources will be available for reinvestment in capital development. In additional to public sector capital spending, I expect the NHS in Wales to benefit significantly next year from private sector capital investment under the private finance initiative.

I want the NHS in Wales to see PFI as the main source of funding for capital investment. It offers a unique opportunity to bring forward capital projects which are additional to existing public expenditure plans.

Details of the planned allocations to the new health authorities, which come into being on 1 April 1996 and the provisional external financing limits for NHS trusts is contained in a statement which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Valuation Office, Bangor

To date, representations have been received from members of staff of the valuation office in Bangor and a constituency Member of Parliament.

Consultation has recently commenced with members of staff and their trades unions and will also be conducted with national representatives of the valuation profession and other bodies with an interest in the future of the valuation office review.

Consultation is expected to be completed by summer 1996 and the outcome announced in due course.

However aggregated information is available on the claims made by TECs for first and second stage job outcome payments and this has been provided in the following table. To take account of the time lag in claiming second stage payments, information has been provided on the first stage payments to the end of the second quarter, 10 September 1995, and the second stage job outcome payments to the end of the third quarter, 31 December 1995. ### Llay Park Infants School

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of state for Wales if he will make extra moneys available to Clwyd local education authority to enable Llay Park infants school to be rebuilt. [12426]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend is making available more than £508 million for local authority capital spending in 1996–97. It is for individual local authorities to determine how the resources that are made available are allocated between services, including education, in the light of their statutory responsibilities and their perception of local needs and priorities.

Traditional Geographical Counties

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about maintaining the identity of the 13 traditional counties of Wales; and what response he has made. [12464]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have received three representations, all from Mr. Peter Boyce of the Association of British Counties about promoting "the use of the 13 traditional counties as the main geographical areas in common parlance in Wales".

I have written to Mr. Boyce, expressing our view that the new structure of 22 unitary authorities is that which best meets the needs of local government in Wales, but that it is for other institutions and organisations to consider what structure meets their needs.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what considerations he has given to reinstituting the 13 geographical counties as the standard geographical framework for Wales; and if he will make a statement. [12419]

Mr. Hague: None. I am not aware that there is such a thing as a standard geographical framework. The structure of 22 unitary authorities was decided upon by Parliament with regard to what is best for local government in Wales. It is for other institutions and organisations to consider whether that structure meets their needs and those of their users, customers or associates.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future role of the 13 traditional geographical counties in Wales. [12417]

Mr. Hague: The Government acknowledge the continuing strength of the affection which many people in Wales have for the traditional 13 counties, which is expressed, for example, in the organisation of many sporting, social, voluntary and cultural societies on the basis of the traditional counties' boundaries. I see no reason why such arrangements should not continue.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) infants and (b) adults were recorded as suffering from cystic fibrosis in each health authority, and for Wales as a whole for each of the last available three years; and if he will make a statement. [12776]

Mr. Richards: At present, information on the prevalence of cystic fibrosis in Wales is not held centrally. Information on the levels of cystic fibrosis reported by respondents to the Welsh health survey is being processed. Results from the survey are scheduled for publication in March 1996.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the written representations that he has received in favour of the proposed nursery voucher scheme. [12859]

Mr. Hague: Since my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State's reply to the hon. Member for Ceredigion and Pembroke, North (Mr. Dafis) on 15 January 1996, Official Report, columns 379-80, we have received correspondence in support of the scheme from a parent expressing concern that the views of working mothers are being represented. The voucher scheme aims to provide choice of provision to such parents.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Hand Arm Vibration Syndrome

Mr. Dicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the recommendations of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council regarding hand arm vibration syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [12912]

Mr. Roger Evans: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has given careful consideration to the recommendations in the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council's report "Hand Arm Vibration Syndrome (Vascular and Neurological Components Involving the Fingers and Thumb)", Cm 2844. The Government are not persuaded that the additional benefits to individuals would be sufficient to warrant the high administrative costs of implementing the council's recommendations. I am especially concerned about the costs associated with developing a usable, repeatable and acceptable test for diagnosing the condition and assessing a person's disability. I am confident that the council will continue its thorough work in monitoring the scientific advances and literature on this condition, as well as developments in diagnostic and assessment techniques. I will give careful consideration to any further advice it may provide.

Burdens on Business

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to reduce burdens on business. [13225]

Mr. Heald: We plan to make two changes which, although in themselves small, will nevertheless contribute to our aim of reducing burdens on business.

First, we have today published a consultation document, "Reducing Burdens on Business: Proposed Changes for Directors' National Insurance Contributions". Subject to the responses, we will consider the best way of making the necessary legislative change, including an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. Today's document therefore constitutes formal consultation under section 3(1) of the Act. Responses to the document must be received no later than Friday 29 March 1996 when the consultation period will end.

The document has been sent to 38 organisations in Great Britain—and a further 12 in Northern Ireland—seeking their views about proposals to modify the present rules under which directors and their employers pay national insurance contributions. The annual amount they are liable to pay will not change.

Secondly, we propose to bring the regulations governing national insurance contributions into greater alignment with the PAYE tax system. As one of a number of similar changes from April 1996 we propose to adopt the Inland Revenue definition of a company in the regulation dealing with the treatment of payments made to certain professional advisor and nominee directors.

Copies of the consultation document have been placed in the Library.

Social Security Committee Report

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish his reply to the Social Security Committee's fifth report of Session 1995–96 "The Work of the Department of Social Security and its Agencies", HC 382. [13227]

Mr. Lilley: A Government response to the Social Security Committee's report "The Work of the Department of Social Security and its Agencies" has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Income Support

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women aged 60 years and over receiving preserved rights to income support in (a) elderly people, (b) very dependent elderly, (c) mental illness, (d) mental handicap, (e) drug and alcohol dependence, (f) physical disability over pension age and (g) any other condition category had weekly charges above the income support limit by (i) 1p to £13.10, (ii) £13.11 to £15, (iii) £15.01 to £25, (iv) £25.01 to £35, (v) £35.01 to £45, (vi) £45.01 to £55, (vii) £55.01 to £65, (viii) £65.01 to £75, (ix) £75.01 to £85, (x) £85.01 to £95, (xi) £95.01 to £105 and (xii) over £105.01 for (1) Greater London and (2) by English region, excluding Greater London, (3) England and (4) Great Britain. [7729]

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the benefit savings due to parents with care ceasing to claim income support were calculated prior to 1993–94. [12073]

Mr. Evans: By multiplying the number of income support cases where the reason for cessation was attributable to liable relative action by the amount of benefit in payment and an average anticipated duration for benefit claims.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for income support there were in the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale district in each year since 1992. [10873]

Mr. Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Annex A details the information requested.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Annex A: Income Support customers with mortgage interest in Scotland

| | Number of cases with mortgage interest | Total estimated annual expenditure £ million |

| 1993–94 | 23,000 | 32 |
| 1994–95 | 25,000 | 34 |

Notes:

1. Cases are rounded to the nearest thousand and expenditure to the nearest million.
2. Estimated annual expenditure is derived by multiplying the number of cases with the average weekly amount then multiplying by 52.

Company Pension Funds

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the role of the Pensions Act 1995 in preventing employers appropriating or transferring the surpluses from company pension funds. [12606]

Mr. Heald: At present, trustees can approve payments from surplus to employers if they are permitted by scheme rules. The Pensions Act 1995 will no longer allow the trustees of occupational pension schemes to make a payment to the employer from a surplus unless new statutory requirements are met. In future, the following conditions will have to be met, irrespective of the terms of the scheme rules:

(a) the proposals to eliminate the surplus have been approved by the Inland Revenue;

(b) the trustees are satisfied that it is in the interests of the members for the payment to be made;

(c) the scheme must not be winding up;

(d) all pensions must be increased annually in line with inflation up to 5 per cent. for both past and future service;

(e) the employer has agreed that a payment should be made to him;

(f) members must be notified in accordance with prescribed requirements of the intention to make a payment from surplus to the employer.

The Act also provides that if a payment is made to an employer in breach of the statutory requirements, the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority may apply to the High Court—the Court of Session in Scotland—for an order to restore the funds to the scheme.

We have announced our intention to bring these requirements into force from April 1997.

Compensation Recovery Unit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the amount of state benefits regained by the compensation recovery unit in (a) Strathclyde and (b) Scotland in each of the past three years. [11541]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 108, about the compensation recovery unit, if he will list the parties which were consulted in late 1995. [12484]

Mr. Evans: The information has been placed in the Library.

Women's Incomes

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate his Department has made of the average income of women over the age of 25 years who are (a) widowed, (b) single and (c) in a partnership for each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement. [12264]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Such information as is available is in the table. These figures show average household income after adjustment for household size and composition. These figures are used rather than individual income as the latter does not reflect all the income available to women in households; some income components can also not readily be attributed to individuals.

Average household equivalised incomes of women over the age of 25 who are widowed, single and in partnerships

Equivalent monetary values in £s per week

| | Before housing costs | | | After housing costs | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Year | Widows | Singles | Women in couples | Widows | Singles | Women in couples |
| 1981 | — | 168 | 207 | — | 152 | 180 |
| 1987 | — | 205 | 251 | — | 186 | 218 |
| 1988–89 | — | 207 | 273 | — | 189 | 240 |
| 1990–91 | — | 207 | 293 | — | 189 | 258 |

| 1992–93 | 194 | 218 | 296 | 180 | 196 | 262 |

1. The information in the table is derived from the Households Below Average Incomes' datasets.
2. Information for widows is not available before 1991. Figures for single women includes women who are single and never married, divorced, separated and widows. In 1981, 1987 and 1988–89 information for women in couples covers married women only; women who were co-habiting are counted as single women. Information for couples for later years includes married women and women who are co-habiting.
3. Estimates are of mean weekly household equivalised disposable income. For further information about equivalisation see appendix 4 of Households Below Average Income 1979–1992–93—a copy of which is in the Library. Figures are given to the nearest whole £ and are in March 1995 prices.
4. All estimates are subject to sampling error.
5. Figures for 1988–89, 1990–91, 1991–92 and 1992–93 are for two calendar years data combined.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing Need

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the (a) organisations, (b) individuals and (c) charities that responded to the "Access to Local Government and Housing Association Tenancies" consultation paper published in January 1994 were in favour of the proposals (i) that someone should not be found to be in need of assistance where there is alternative accommodation available, (ii) that the duty of a local authority towards someone needing assistance should be to secure accommodation for a limited period and
(iii) that the private rental sector be used to accommodate more homeless households. [12139]

Mr. Clappison: Nearly 80 per cent. of the 10,000 responses to the consultation paper were from members of the public. A further 10 per cent. were from local charities, churches and other voluntary groups. The next two largest groups of respondents were local housing authorities, 3 per cent., and housing associations, 2 per cent.

Only one in five responses commented on any specific proposal in the consultation paper. The majority of respondents expressed opinions about the supposed effects of the proposals as a whole on households accepted as homeless under the new duty. Fewer than 5 per cent. commented on the proposal that households should be ineligible for assistance if there is alternative accommodation available. Our analysis of the responses did not yield quantitative data for (ii) and (iii).

Tenants (Drug Dealing)

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about powers available to local authorities to remove tenants convicted of drug dealing. [12564]

Mr. Clappison: Local authorities have powers under section 84 of the Housing Act 1985, and ground 2 of schedule 2 to that Act, to evict tenants who have been convicted of using their homes for illegal purposes, such as drug dealing.

Negative Equity

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households in each region are currently in negative equity. [12568]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of negative equity are sensitive to underlying assumptions made, such as changes in house prices. Using the Department's house price index, adjusted for the mix of different dwelling types, it is estimated that the total number of households in negative equity in each English region in the third quarter of 1995 was as follows:

| Region | Number of households |
|---|---|
| South east | 383,000 |
| Greater London | 180,000 |
| South west | 112,000 |
| East Anglia | 50,000 |
| East Midlands | 40,000 |
| West Midlands | 89,000 |
| Yorkshire and Humberside | 47,000 |
| North west | 52,000 |
| North | 24,000 |

These estimates provide only a very broad indication of the number of households in negative equity. The suitability of the assumptions used in compiling estimates of negative equity is currently under review.

Domestic Heating

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the percentage of extra fuel which is required to heat identical houses in (a) Rochdale and (b) the north-west of England using the Building Research Establishment domestic energy model and taking Bristol as the base case. [13103]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The percentage of extra fuel required to heat a typical house with gas central heating is estimated to be as follows for each of the specified locations:

(a) Rochdale +9 per cent. and

(b) the North West of England:
between +9 per cent. and +15 per cent. depending on precise location.

These figures have been calculated using the Building Research Establishment domestic energy model and taking Bristol as the base case.

Council House Rents

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to cap rebate reimbursement to local authorities which set council housing rents above the guideline figure determined by his Department. [13147]

Mr. Clappison: The limit on rent rebate subsidy formed part of the 1996–97 housing revenue account subsidy determination which was issued on 22 December 1995. Authorities which keep their rent increases within the guideline increase will be unaffected, as will authorities which keep their rents below the guideline rent for 1996–97.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change the 1995–96 cash limit for Ordnance Survey. [13399]

Sir Paul Beresford: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary spring supplementary estimate for Ordnance Survey, class VII, vote 7, the cash limit will be increased by a token £1,000 from £16,984,000 to £16,985,000, and the net running costs limit will be decreased by £918,000 from £13,465,000 to £12,547,000, reflecting an excess of increased running costs related receipts over increased gross running costs expenditure on the vote.

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to change his Department's cash and running cost limits for 1995–96. [13544]

Mr. Gummer: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the following cash limit changes will be made.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 1—housing and construction, England—covering sections B, C, D and G of that vote, will be decreased by £1,237,000 from £112,415,000 to £111,178,000. This change partially offsets the increased demand for tax relief grant which is administered by the Housing Corporation and is not cash limited.

The DOE/HC—Housing Corporation—cash limit will be increased by £51,000 from £1,149,038,000 to £1,149,089,000 through the take-up of entitlement to end year flexibility for capital spending on the approved development programme as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, column 776.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 2, RCW—regeneration and countryside and wildlife—will be increased by £581,000 from £1,520,799,000 to £1,521,380,000. The changes reflect the transfer of £833,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry to support the coalfield strategic fund for an extension to Dearne Valley college; a transfer to the Home Office of £75,000 to support three safer cities projects in Wales and a reduction of £177,000 to allow supplementary credit approvals to be issued in respect of English Partnerships from the RCW non-voted cash limit.

The non-voted cash limit for regeneration and countryside and wildlife will be increased by £758,000 from £1,503,516,000 to £1,504,274,000. The changes reflect the transfer of £833,000 from the Department of Trade and Industry to support the coalfield strategic fund for an extension to Dearne Valley college and a transfer of £75,000 to the Home Office to support three safer cities projects in Wales.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 3—environmental protection and water—covering sections A, B, C, D, F and G will be increased by £1,444,000. This change will cover increased grant in aid to the British Waterways Board and will be funded by take-up of part of the entitlement to capital end of year flexibility as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, column 776. There will be an increase of £1,640,000 in the external financing limit for the British Waterways Board, made up of £1,444,000 arising from the end of year flexibility entitlement shown above and a virement between sub-heads within the vote of £196,000.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 4—local government and planning, England—covering sections A to F of that vote, will be reduced by £300,000 from £30,087,110,000 to £30,086,810,000. This change is to allow savings due to lower than planned activity on section D—planning and minerals research—to be transferred to class VII, vote 1—housing and construction, England and Energy Efficiency Office—to partially offset the increased demand for tax relief grant.

The DOE/LGR—local government reorganisation—cash limit will be reduced by £11,140,000 from £76,696,000 to £65,556,000. This change reflects lower than anticipated applications from local authorities for supplementary credit approvals to offset the abatement and recovery of housing revenue account subsidy in respect of Greater London Council deemed debt.

The cash limit for class VII, vote 5—Administration—will be increased by £7,718,000 from £226,100,000 to £233,818,000. This change reflects the transfer of provision from Property Holdings to DOE of £5,481,000 for the relocation of the Department's headquarters, the take-up of £2,000,000 of end year flexibility entitlement for capital expenditure, as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, column 776, to cover the costs of faster than expected progress on the relocation project and various other small changes of responsibility between the Department and other parts of Government.

Overall, the Department's gross running cost limit will be reduced by £2,339,000 from £228,854,000 to £226,515,000. This reflects the capitalisation of the costs of early retirements and transfers of responsibility to other parts of Government.

Property Holdings' gross running cost limit will be increased by £212,000 from £19,863,000 to £20,075,000. The increase represents a transfer from DOE.

The Office of Water Services gross running cost limit will be increased by £170,000 from £8,539,000 to £8,709,000. This will not result in an increase in the cash limit.

All the increases will be offset either by savings, transfers from other Government Departments or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

TRANSPORT

Coventry Air Crash

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action (a) has been or (b) will be taken against Air Algerie in respect of its not applying for permits. [12173]

Mr. Norris: Under the Air Navigation (No. 2) Order 1995, a permit can be issued to the operator of the aircraft or the charterer of the aircraft or to the Government of the country in which the aircraft is registered. In this particular case, responsibility for obtaining permits for the cargo charter flights operated from Coventry in December 1994 rested with the UK charterer, Phoenix Aviation. Applications were received from this company but insufficient documentation was supplied to enable a permit to be issued.

In light of the fact that flights operated without the necessary permits, the Department in conjunction with the Civil Aviation Authority conducted an investigation into the circumstances of the flights to determine whether there should be any prosecution action. However, Phoenix Aviation were placed in liquidation before any charges could be laid.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how he proposes to modify the flight permit scheme to ensure compliance in accordance with recommendations of the air accident investigation branch's accident report on the Air Algerie Boeing 737 accident at Coventry in December 1994. [12174]

Mr. Norris: My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping announced on 10 January that the Department had amended its procedures for the approval of wet leased aircraft—aircraft leased with crew—in accordance with the recommendation made by the air accident investigation branch. These amended procedures will require the provision of a statement from the applicant airline as to which airline's operations and flight manuals will be applicable to the proposed flight. This change will clarify responsibilities as regards future applications involving the use of wet leased aircraft.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he will be taking as a result of the recent report into the Coventry air crash in December 1994. [12956]

Mr. Norris: My noble Friend the Minister for Aviation and Shipping announced on 10 January that the Department had reviewed its permit procedures as recommended by air accident investigation branch and taken action to amend the procedures for the approval of the operation of wet leased aircraft—aircraft leased with crew—by foreign aircraft. These amended procedures require the provision of a statement from the applicant airline as to which airline operations and flight manuals will be applicable for the proposed flight. This change will clarify permit responsibilities as regards future applications involving the use of wet leased aircraft.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the present total estimated cost for the construction of the Newbury bypass; [12733]

(2) when he expects the Highways Agency to publish details of the cost-benefit analysis carried out in respect of the Newbury bypass; [12747]

(3) what actions the Highways Agency has taken to ensure that security personnel employed by contractors clearing the route of the Newbury bypass have adequate training. [12746]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 1 February 1995:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the Newbury Bypass.

Reliance Security Services, the security firm employed on the Newbury Bypass scheme, are employed directly by the site clearance contractor. It is a requirement of the Highways Agency that all sub-contracted security companies are members of the British Security Industry Association and that they conform to British Standard 7499 covering static guards and mobile patrols.

The cost benefit analysis for the scheme was presented to the Public Inquiries held in 1988. That analysis showed the scheme to be very good value for money, that is still the case. The total estimated cost of the scheme is £101 million, excluding VAT.

Public Service Vehicle Drivers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many public service vehicle drivers' licences have been (a) applied for, (b) issued, (c) objected to by (i) the police, (ii) the public and (iii) others, (d) issued and (e) withdrawn by the authorities in the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement on trends. [12870]

Mr. Norris: In the year from 1 April 1994 to 31 March 1995 the total number of vocational drivers licences issued was 167,650 of which we estimate 33,530 were public service vehicle drivers' licences. This figure includes provisional licences, renewals and replacements as well as new licences. During the same period, 59 licence applications were refused, 24 licences were suspended and 108 licences were revoked by traffic commissioners on grounds of the applicant's conduct record. There is no right of objection to the issue of driver licences but all relevant representations are considered by the traffic commissioners.

There is no consistent trend over the last four years.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further measures he proposes to take to prevent assaults on children by public service vehicle drivers. [12875]

Mr. Norris: The traffic commissioners for each area take all reasonably practicable steps to ensure that drivers whose conduct suggests they are unsuitable cannot be bus drivers. The primary responsibility for the safety of children in their charge rests with the schools and local education authorities.

Bus Company Mergers

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding Pendle borough council's decision to sell its 50 per cent. stake in Burnley and Pendle Transport. [12836]

Mr. Norris: Burnley borough council wrote to the Department last October. The hon. Members for Burnley and for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) spoke during the Adjournment debate on this subject on 13 December, and a number of questions has been answered from those hon. Members. Otherwise I have received no representations on this matter.

Passengers (Buses and Coaches)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the present policy regarding standing passengers on (a) buses and (b) coaches; what assessment he has made of the benefits of renewing this policy; and if he will make a statement. [12838]

Mr. Norris: The carriage of standing passengers in both buses and coaches is strictly controlled by the Public Service Vehicles (Carrying Capacity) Regulations 1984. Both seating and standing capacities must be marked clearly on the vehicle. Vehicles intended to carry more than eight standing passengers must meet minimum requirements for both standing space and headroom. Sufficient hand grips must be fitted for each standing passenger.

We are currently consulting on a draft code of practice on the operation of one-man operated buses, which includes the measures for standing passengers. I shall be considering the safety of standing passengers, along with the other provisions of the code, in the light of that consultation.

Rail Maintenance Contracts

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment is made by Railtrack of the financial soundness of a contractor before a maintenance contract is let. [12850]

Mr. Watts: I understand that, before Railtrack lets a maintenance contract, all prospective bidders who have expressed an interest are required to go through a pre-qualification process, including an assessment of their financial stability and robustness as well as their competence to do the work and their track record.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to change his Department's cash limits and running cost limits; and what proposals there are to change the cash limit of the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising and the Office of the Rail Regulator for 1995–96. [13611]

Sir George Young: (i) The cash limit for class VI, vote 2—administration and transport services—is reduced by £2,388,000 from £177,405,000 to £175,017,000. The reduction is made up of transfers to class VI, vote 3, £1,700,000, vote 7, £601,000, and the Department of the Environment, class VII, vote 5), £87,000.

(ii) The cash limit for class VI, vote 3—transport industries—is increased by £1,700,000 from £8,000,000 to £9,700,000. The increase is wholly made up of transfers from class VI, vote 2.

(iii) The cash limit for class VI, vote 4—Vehicle and Driver Licensing Agency—is reduced by £3,000,000 from £176,549,000 to £173,549,000. The reduction is wholly derived from transfers to class VI, vote 7.

(iv) The cash limit for class VI, vote 5—roads and local transport—is reduced by £2,150,000 from £514,765,000 to £512,615,000. The reduction is wholly made up of transfers to class VI, vote 3.

(v) The cash limit for class VI, vote 6—other transport agencies—is increased by £275,000 from £81,816,000 to £82,091,000. The whole of the increase comprises a transfer of funds from the Ministry of Defence, class 1, vote 1, to the Coastguard agency for stationing a search and rescue helicopter at Portland.

(vi) The cash limit for class VI, vote 7—passenger rail services—is increased by £98,878,000 from £1,620,604,000 to £1,719,482,000. £75,000,000 is funded from non-voted provision for the railways. The remainder comprises £20,277,000 as a claim on the reserve and a transfer of funds from class VI, votes 2 and 4—£3,601,000. The additional provision is required for consultancies and restructuring proposals.

(vii) The Department of Transport local authority capital cash limit has been increased by £3,796,000 from £353,906,000 to £357,702,000. This completes take up of capital end year flexibility entitlement as announced by the Chief Secretary on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82.

(viii) The Department of Transport running costs limit has been reduced by £1,579,000 from £413,464,000 to £411,885,000 and the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising running costs limit has been increased by £1,492,000 from £4,672,000 to £6,164,000. The changes in the Department of Transport running costs limit reflect salary payments for staff transferring to the Central Transport Group, £87,000 from the Department of Environment and restructuring and relocation costs, £1,492,000 for the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising.

The overall increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Central Rail Users Consultative Committee

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the appointment of the new chairman of the Central rail users consultative committee. [13610]

Mr. Watts: I have today announced the appointment of Mr. David Bertram as the new chairman of the committee.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his oral answer of 15 January, Official Report, columns 391–92, and the letter from Dr. Jim Swire, spokesman of UK Family-Flight 103, dated 22 January, what considerations led him to conclude that a fatal accident inquiry was a suitable substitute for a public inquiry into the destruction of PA103. [13001]

Mr. Norris: The fatal accident inquiry was a detailed examination of the circumstances of the deaths. It was held entirely in public.

Central Railway plc

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in respect of how many of the applications rules under the Transport and Works Act 1992 Central Railway plc has applied for waivers or conditional waivers; and what estimate he has made of the effect on the quality and quantity of information provided in support of the Central Railway application under the Act if the waiver were granted. [12573]

Mr. Watts: Central Railway plc has withdrawn all its waivers' applications. I understand that it intends to submit fresh applications in a modified form. As stated in my reply to the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Mr. Chidgey) on 31 January, copies of any future waiver requests in respect of the Central Railway project will be placed in the Library of the House. In deciding whether to grant any waivers, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will have regard to the effect on the quality and quantity of information which would be provided in support of Central Railway's application.

DEFENCE

Bosnia

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the pontoon bridge established by the implementation force—IFOR—across the River Sava from Croatia into north-eastern Bosnia is available for use by non-governmental organisation aid traffic. [12199]

Mr. Soames: We understand that the bridges established across the Sava river into the US divisional area of IFOR are available for use by NGO convoys, although priority is given to IFOR traffic.

Officer Training Recruits

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of recruits accepted for direct entry to officer training come from (a) public and (b) private sector education. [12182]

Mr. Soames: The percentage of recruits accepted for direct officer training in each of the three services which came from the public and private education sectors in 1994–95, the latest period for which figures are available, is shown in the table.

| Service | Private sector Per cent. | Public sector Per cent. |
|---|---|---|
| Royal Navy | 29 | 71 |
| Army | 50 | 47 |
| Royal Air Force | 26 | 74 |

In addition, 3 per cent. of the total direct entrant officer recruits to the Army came from overseas.

Belize

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military aid the United Kingdom gives to Belize; and what treaty arrangements it has with the Government of Belize. [12254]

Mr. Soames: Belize is an independent country within the Commonwealth. Since 1 January 1994, Belize has had responsibility for its own defence. We have, however, assured the Government of Belize of our readiness to take part in consultations leading to an appropriate response should the security of Belize be threatened in the future.

We have made it clear that we shall continue our programme of assistance for the development of the Belize defence force to sustain and improve the force's capability through the provision of loan service personnel, equipment, training and advice. In addition, Belize continues to receive substantial amounts of British aid.

Lethal Weapons (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the value of lethal weapons that have been lost, stolen or unaccounted for in Northern Ireland in each of the past five years; and what were the main weapons involved. [12577]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The number of weapons lost or stolen in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years is as follows:

1991: Nil
1992: Nil
1993: 2 x SA 80
1 x pistol
1994: 4 x pistols
1995: Nil

The aggregate value is estimated at approximately £3,300.

Over the period, some seven additional weapons were lost or stolen and subsequently recovered. No weapons were otherwise unaccounted for.

Gulf War Medal with Bar

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed services personnel were awarded the Gulf war medal with bar. [13014]

Mr. Soames: Based on the latest figures available at 31 December 1995, 58,546 Gulf war medals have been issued to armed forces personnel. Of these, 66 service personnel were awarded the medal with clasp "2 Aug 1990" for their service with the Kuwait liaison team in Kuwait on 2 August 1990. A further 46,120 service personnel were awarded the medal with clasp "16 Jan–28 Feb 1991" for service in the Kuwait theatre of operations.

Cash and Operating Cost Limits

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on changes to the class I cash limits and operating costs limit for 1995–96. [13549]

Mr. Soames: Subject to parliamentary approval of the spring supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made:

Class I cash limits

£000

| Vote | Current cash limit | Change | Revised cash limit |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | 10,796,956 | +199,050 | 10,996,006 |
| 2 | 4,957,988 | –200,000 | 4,757,988 |
| 3 | 5,965,325 | +6,310 | 5,971,635 |

These changes increase the block defence cash limit by £5,360,000 from £21,720,269,000 to £21,725,629,000. It reflects the net effect of transfers between the Ministry of Defence and other Government Departments.

The Ministry of Defence operating costs limit will also be increased by £5,360,000 from £16,767,218,000 to £16,772,578,000 to reflect the net effect of transfers between the Ministry of Defence and other Government Departments.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now commission an independent inquiry into the incidence of birth deformities among children of Gulf war veterans; and if he will make a statement. [13007]

Mr. Soames: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 30 January 1996, Official Report, columns 607–8.

Royal Flight

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many flights by No. 32 the Royal Squadron have been charged to the privy purse in the current financial year to date; what sum has been so charged; on what basis the charge is calculated; what is the charge per (a) hour and (b) mile; and what was the cost of the flight from Norwich to Zurich on 2 January. [13008]

Mr. Soames: In the current financial year to date, members of the royal family have undertaken eight private flights in aircraft of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron, for which the MOD has charged the relevant households £9,544.67

The basis of the charge is the marginal cost of operating the aircraft for the particular flight—fuel consumption, for example. The rates for each of the aircraft types are as follows:

1 April 1995–30 September 1995

BAe 146: £1,870 per hour

HS 125: £630 per hour

Wessex: £1,325 per hour

1 October 1995 onwards

BAe: £1,780 per hour

HS 125: £665 per hour

Wessex: £1,460 per hour

As the costs of flying are a function of time rather than distance, charges are calculated on a cost per hour basis, not cost per mile. We do not maintain records of, or utilise, cost per mile figures as they would not represent a useful basis for cost calculation or comparison purposes.

My Department will levy a charge of £1,584 for the flight from RAF Mildenhall to Zurich on 2 January: of this sum, £1,232 will be a charge to the royal household, and £352 a charge to the Metropolitan police for the two personal protection officers accompanying the party. My recent answer to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 23 January 1996, Official Report, column 136, did not make the distinction between these two elements of the cost to be reimbursed to my Department.

Language Training

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many serving military personnel have received advanced language training within the responsibility of his Department in each of the last 10 years; and if he will indicate the figures for each language taught. [12817]

Mr. Soames: The information requested for the last 10 years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The figures provided are for the financial years 1993–94, 1994–95 and the programmed figures for 1995–96. They relate to advanced—previously linguist—and interpreter level courses delivered by the Defence school of languages at Beaconsfield, Salmond house training centre in Germany as well as individual external language training.

Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current salary of the chief executive of the Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation at Gosport; and what it will be from 1 April. [12525]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The current salary of chief executive is that of a Royal Navy captain in the range £47,000 to £57,700.

The Naval Aircraft Repair Organisation defence agency's triennial review has now been completed and has confirmed that the NARO should continue as a defence agency for a further term of three years with effect from 1 April 1996. The evaluation study into the performance of the agency during its first three years—a copy of the executive summary of which has been placed in the Library of the House—reported that the agency was competently meeting its objectives and satisfying its customers but would benefit from the introduction of best management practices from the private sector. A new chief executive will, accordingly, be recruited through open competition to take up appointment in April 1996, or as soon thereafter as possible. He/she will be required to introduce a challenging programme of efficiencies within NARO and to explore the scope for greater private sector involvement in helicopter repair. The details of this new post, including remuneration, have yet to be finalised.

A revised framework document is in preparation and will be completed once the new chief executive is in post and the necessary delegation have been approved. A copy will be placed in the Library of the House at that time.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Belize

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the value of British aid to Belize over the last five years. [12097]

Mr. Hanley: Aid to Belize over the last five years for which records are available, has been

1990–91: £6.016 million

1991–92; £3.674 million

1992–93: £4.498 million

1993–94: £5.966 million

1994–95: £16.618 million

The increase in aid provided in 1994–95 is due primarily to the disbursement of a CDC loan of £10.4 million to the Belize Electric Co. Ltd. for a hydro-electric power facility on the Macal river.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list current aid and preferential trade arrangements with Belize. [12093]

Mr. Hanley: Belize receives concessional aid from Britain and the European Union under the Lomé convention. Other donors include Taiwan and Kuwait. Belize is also a borrowing member of the World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank and Caribbean Development Bank. Preferential trade arrangements include the European Community's generalised system of preferences and, under the terms of the Lomé convention, tariff-free access to Community markets for industrial products, and preferential access for a wide range of agricultural goods.

Joint Funding Scheme

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in respect of the recommendation in the Overseas Development Administration's fundamental expenditure review on agencies receiving £750,000 or more per year from the joint funding scheme; what considerations led the Overseas Development Administration to select the threshold figure; and what considerations were given to lower thresholds. [12242]

Mr. Hanley: The figure of £750,000 was selected after considering a range of options. No particular significance attaches to the figure: it simply produced a limited number of non-governmental organisations who had been major recipients of joint funding scheme funds over a sustained period and with whom we intend to begin exploring the possibilities of moving to block grant arrangements.

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if money disbursed via the joint funding scheme will, following the Overseas Development Administration's fundamental expenditure review, be limited to countries within the Overseas Development Administration's new focus. [12255]

Mr. Hanley: We do not anticipate any significant change in the geographical cover of the joint funding scheme as a result of the fundamental expenditure review.

Police Officers (Training)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will name the Nigerian police officers who have undergone study tours in the United Kingdom since 1985, in each case indicating the officer's rank and the date of (a) commencement and (b) completion of the training. [12566]

Mr. Hanley: There have been seven study tours, that is sponsored visits as opposed to classroom training, all in 1992. There are no records prior to 1990. The details are as follows:

| Name | Rank | Duration of visit |
|---|---|---|

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will name the Nigerian police officers who have been trained in Britain since 1985, giving each officer's rank and date of (a) commencement and (b) completion of the training. [12565]

Mr. Hanley: Twenty-one Nigerian police officers have received ODA funded training in the United Kingdom since 1990. There are no records prior to this date. The further details requested have been placed in the Libraries of the house.

External Finance Limit (Commonwealth Development Corporation)

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what external finance limit has been set for the current financial year for the Commonwealth Development Corporation. [13718]

Mr. Hanley: The external finance limit for the CDC for 1995–96 is being increased by £10,000,000, from £19,000,000 to £29,000,000. The limit takes account of an increase to the provision for CDC in class II, vote 5 provision for which is made in the spring supplementary estimate. This increase is being met by transfer of resources within the vote and does not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Sir David Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made in the 1995–96 cash and running cost limits for expenditure by the Overseas Development Administration. [13719]

Mr. Hanley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit on the external assistance vote, class II, vote 5, will be increased by £10,390,000 from £1,764,277,000 to £1,774,667,000 and the ODA running cost limit will be increased by £400,000 from £73,993,000 to £74,393,000. The increase is in respect of: a balance of underspending against European Community budgetary aid for central and eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union in 1993 and overspending for developing countries in 1994; an increase of £400,000 for ODA running costs in respect of a partial take up of end of year flexibility entitlements announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82; an increase of £78,000 for expected costs for the Crown Agents privatisation programme; and an inward PES transfer of £300,000 from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office diplomatic wing in respect of the know-how fund. The increase will be offset by a transfer and a claim on the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Deep-sea Fish

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of action needed to implement the recommendations of Dr. Martin Angel of Southampton's report on "Deep-Sea Fish and their Habits". [11740]

Mr. Hanley: In 1990, the ODA commissioned a series of papers, by Dr. Martin Angel and other specialists in aquatic biodiversity, to inform the preparation of an ODA biodiversity strategy. In 1995, ODA commissioned these authors to update their papers. The report was presented to countries at the second conference of the parties to the biodiversity convention last year to help stimulate debate. The findings of Dr. Angel's report will inform ODA's future programme but as the report goes wider than ODA's responsibilities, the ODA will be consulting other Government Departments on its follow-up.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Civil Servants (Directorships)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those civil servants in his Department who hold non-executive directorships in private companies, indicating in each case the civil service post held and the name of the company. [10923]

Mr. Hanley: Any staff holding non-executive or other directorships are required to make a declaration if they come into contact in an official capacity with a business concern in which they have an interest, or if the business concern has concluded or may conclude a contract with a Government Department.

Any such declarations are carefully considered and the papers kept on the individual's personnel file. We are unable to provide a list without incurring disproportionate cost.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given in another place on 22 January by the Minister for Overseas Development, Official Report, House of Lords, column 51.

Antigua and Barbuda

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the authorities of (a) Antigua and (b) Barbuda to prohibit the right of public access to beaches on these islands. [12876]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: None.

Departmental Entertainment Costs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the cost to his Department in each of the last five financial years and this year to date of the entertainment of foreign dignitaries. [12880]

Mr. Hanley: Expenditure on official entertainment by the FCO—diplomatic and aid wings—for the years requested was as follows:

1990–91: £5,178,849
1991–92: £5,700,606
1992–93: £6,946,298
1993–94: £7,488,121
1994–95: £7,680,934
1995–96: £8,213,136 (projected)

This expenditure has been incurred both in the UK and at 222 posts worldwide in the pursuit of the foreign policy and trade promotion objectives of Her Majesty's Government. Information about expenditure on particular categories of guest is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EU General Affairs Council

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EU General Affairs Council held on 29 to 30 January. [13110]

Mr. David Davis: The A points listed in document 4564/96—which will be deposited in the Library of the House as soon as it is available—were adopted, except for items 2 and 26 which were withdrawn by the presidency.

The Council took note of the European Parliament resolutions in Docs. 12131/95 and 12945/95, PE-RE 83 and 89. Copies of these documents will be deposited in the Library of the House as soon as they are available.

The Council discussed former Yugoslavia. It heard reports from Carl Bildt and the EU's administrator in Mostar, Mr. Koschnick. The Council decided to postpone the question of recognition of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. It asked the commission to produce a paper on policy towards the region by March.

The Commission outlined their ideas for a possible new agreement with Albania. They will produce draft negotiating directives no later than the Foreign Affairs Council on 25 and 26 March.

The Presidency and the Commission gave a brief situation report on the follow up to the Barcelona conference on Mediterranean. The Council also discussed the MEDA regulation on assistance to the Mediterranean. This was remitted to the Committee of Permanent Representatives for further work.

The head of the EU election unit monitoring the Palestinian elections, Carl Lidbom, briefed the Council, which adopted conclusions on EU/Palestinian relations.

The Council discussed the Asia-Europe meeting on 1 and 2 March in Bangkok.

The presidency noted the latest applications for membership of the EU received in December and January from Lithuania, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia and agreed to invite the Commission to begin work on the options.

The Council adopted conclusions on the appointment of an EU special envoy to the great lakes region of Africa.

The Council agreed a declaration condemning the 27 January coup d'état in Niger. Ministers also discussed the situation in East Timor and Cyprus.

On 30 January, there were Association Councils with Bulgaria and the Czech Republic. The troika also had a political dialogue meeting with Albania.

No votes were taken at this Council.

Mr. Niaz Ahmed

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when he expects a decision to be taken on an application made to the United Kingdom post in Islamabad by Mr. Niaz Ahmed, Ref: Imm/C8853, to join his wife and daughters in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement; [12953]

(2) when he expects to make a recommendation to the United Kingdom post in Islamabad regarding the application by Mr. Niaz Ahmed, Ref: Imm/C8853, to join his wife and daughters in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [12954]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further changes he proposes to make in his Department's diplomatic wing cash limits and running cost limits for 1995–96. [13452]

Mr. Hanley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the following changes will be made.

The cash limit for class II, vote 1—overseas representation—will be increased by £4,379,000 from £709,165,000 to £713,544,000. The increase is the net effect of take-up of capital end year flexibility entitlement of £14,614,000 less a transfer to class II, vote 2–other external relations—of £10,211,000 and a transfer of £24,000 to the Home Office. The gross running costs limit on class II, vote 1 has been reduced by £10,235,000 from £522,799,00 to £512,564,000 due to the transfers to the Home Office and class II, vote 2 as described.

The cash limit for class II, vote 2—other external relations—will be increased by £176,809,000 from £291,633,000 to £468,442,000. Parliamentary authority will be sought for additional expenditure in respect of certain international organisations and contributions to peacekeeping operations. The increase will be met partly by increased appropriations in aid, partly from a claim on the reserve and partly by offsets from other sections of votes 1 and 2.

The cash limit for class II, vote 3—BBC World Service—will be increased by £3,015,000 from £175,039,000 to £178,054,000. Parliamentary authority will be sought in order to take up an increased capital provision under the end year flexibility scheme. The increase will be met from the reserve.

The cash limit for class II, vote 4—the British Council—will be increased by £4,245,000 from £98,496,000 to £102,741,000 in respect of adverse overseas price movements; to take account of approved end year flexibility and a public expenditure survey transfer from the Welsh Office. Aside from the latter, the increase will be met from the reserve.

All the increases in provision will be offset by appropriations in aid or charged to the reserve, and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) hid Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. ## ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Public Interest Immunity

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what account he has taken of the case of Hehir, 1982, in advising Ministers and others on the freedom to waive necessary claims to public interest immunity; [12435]

(2) what account he has taken of the rules put forward on public interest immunity duties in the case of Makanjuola v. Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. [12436]

The Attorney-General: Advice to the Crown on public interest immunity takes account of all relevant case law, which includes Hehir and Makanjuola and, since 1994, the House of Lords decision in ex parte Wiley.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. French: To ask the Attorney-General what changes he proposes for the Crown Prosecution Service's cash and running costs limits for 1995–96. [13344]

The Attorney-General: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote 4 will be increased by £1,500,000 from £229,754,000 to £231,254,000. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The running costs limit of class IX, vote 4 will be reduced by £1,200,000 from £225,754,000 to £224,554,000. The reduction will fund an increase in capital provision and, with the increase mentioned earlier, will fund the accelerated implementation of team working and the CPS's SCOPE—standard case operations system—computer system.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cash and running cost limits for the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland departmental services, the independent living fund and certain national agricultural schemes for 1995–96. [13453]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Subject to parliament approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, it is proposed that the cash limit for class XVI vote I—the Northern Ireland Office—will be increased by £15,650,000 from £888,655,000 to £904,305,000. This reflects the take-up of end year flexibility on capital and departmental running costs, and the additional expenditure on compensation and the opening of border roads.

The cash limit which covers most Northern Ireland departmental services will be increased by £97,622,000 from £3,936,723,000 to £4,034,345,000. This increase reflects the take-up of end year flexibility on capital, departmental running costs and health, the EU peace and reconciliation programme expenditure and other technical changes.

The cash limit for the independent living fund—Northern Ireland Department of Health and Social Services vote 5—had been reduced by £1,125,000 reflecting lower than expected demands on the fund. This amount will be transferred to class XIII, vote 3.

The cash limit covering national agriculture capital grant schemes and certain assistance for production, marketing and processing and the fishing industry will increase by £1,120,000 from £6,882,000 to £8,002,000 as a result of the take-up of entitlement to end year flexibility on capital—£670,000—and a transfer from Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food of £450,000 in respect of the scheme to decommission nephrops vessels in Northern Ireland.

The combined gross running cost for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments will be increased by £29,782,000 from £789,017,000 to £818,799,000. This reflects the take-up of £29,877,000 of end year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82, a net transfer of £95,000 to the Department of Social Security in respect of work by the staff resources unit and adjustments to agency services. Of the revised gross running cost provision, £175,149,000 is for the Northern Ireland office and £643,650,000 is for Northern Ireland Departments.

The increases will be offset by transfers or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Health Service Planning

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what studies his Department has undertaken into work force planning in the last five years. [8333]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 10 January 1996]: The following studies have been carried out by the Department of Health and Social Services over the last five years:

(a) 1992 Nursing establishment and skill mix in Northern Ireland, "Making the best use of Resources in Northern Ireland".

(b) 1995 Nursing establishment and skill mix in Northern Ireland, "Mental Health Nursing Resources".

(c) 1995 Nursing establishment and skill mix in Northern Ireland, "Learning Disability Nursing Resources".

(d) 1993 report of the task force on nursing manpower.

TREASURY

Incomes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gross net income of a married man with two children under 11 years of age, earning a national average wage and paying non-contracted-out national insurance contributions, in each year since 1966; what was the annual percentage increase in the retail prices index; what was his net real income at 1995 prices; and what was the percentage increase in his net real income compared to (a) 12 months previously and (b) to the level in 1966. [9318]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The available information is contained in the table.

Real take-home pay

Taxation (Costs)

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the costs of collection of (a) income tax, (b) corporation tax and (c) capital gains tax in each year since 1974; what were the reasons for changes in costs between years; and in which areas of Government increased administrative costs were attributable to the complexity of legislation. [11135]

Mr. Jack: The following table shows the costs of collection in current prices and the costs expressed as a percentage of the yield for 1982–83 onwards. Figures for earlier years are not readily available.

£ million

| | Income tax cost | Corporation tax cost | Capital gains tax cost |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1982–83 | 650 | 60 | 15 |
| 1983–84 | 676 | 63 | 15 |
| 1984–85 | 730 | 60 | 14 |
| 1985–86 | 805 | 62 | 15 |
| 1986–87 | 883 | 71 | 18 |
| 1987–88 | 932 | 85 | 25 |
| 1988–89 | 973 | 91 | 27 |
| 1989–90 | 1,068 | 101 | 32 |
| 1990–91 | 1,203 | 125 | 39 |
| 1991–92 | 1,248 | 152 | 43 |
| 1992–93 | 1,366 | 149 | 38 |
| 1993–94 | 1,427 | 156 | 42 |
| 1994–95 | 1,353 | 149 | 33 |

Changes in costs reflect changes in prices, in the overall burden of work and in efficiency.

It would not be practical to attempt to list every area of government where increased administration costs were attributable to the complexity of legislation, but civil service running costs are falling in real terms and are planned to fall by 15 per cent. between 1993–94 and 1998–99.

Unemployment

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the costs to the Exchequer of unemployment in (a) 1979 and (b) the last year for which figures are available. [12688]

Mr. Waldegrave: Gross benefit payments to the unemployed in 1979–80 and 1994–95, at 1994–95 prices, are estimated to have been £3.4 billion and £9.1 billion respectively.

Disabled People (VAT)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the direction issued by Customs and Excise regarding the payment by registered disabled individuals of VAT on computers and printers specially adapted for them for home use. [12868]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Eccles (Miss Lestor) on 24 January 1996, Official Report, columns 228–29.

Special Dividends

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates his Department has made of the cost to the Exchequer from the tax loophole involved in the use of special dividends in takeover bids. [12539]

Mr. Jack: The payment of a special dividend does not involve a tax loophole. A special dividend carries a tax credit in the same way as an ordinary dividend. This mitigates the double tax charge on distributed profits since tax is payable by the company on the profits out of which the dividend is paid.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed in the cash limit and running cost limit for 1995–96 for the Inland Revenue. [13547]

Mr. Jack: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 4 will be increased by £25,000,000 from £1,630,358,000 to £1,655,358,000 and the running costs limit will be increased by £10,000,000 from £1,662,705,000 to £1,672,705,000. Within the cash limit increase is included the take up of £10,000,000 running costs end-year flexibility entitlement announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82. A further £1,330,000 is required in respect of a shortfall in law costs receipts. The balance of £13,670,000 is required to cover reduced receipts because of lower than expected charges to the Department of Social Security and the Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) for the cost of collecting of national insurance contributions. The £13,670,000 is entirely offset by a saving to the national insurance funds out of which the charges are met.

The increases other than that relating to the receipts from the national insurance funds will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Mr. Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes are proposed in the cash limit and running cost limit for 1995–96 for HM Customs and Excise. [13548]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XVII, vote 3, will be increased by £8,824,000 from £850,237,000 to £859,061,000 and the running cost limit for Customs and Excise by £7,955,000 from £741,377,000 to £749,332,000.

The increase in the running cost limit arises from the take up of £7,955,000 of the end-year flexibility entitlement announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776–82. The adjustment to the cash limit also reflects an increase to provide £869,000 capital provision transferred from Property Holdings. The increase, other than the capital transfer which is offset by a saving to class VII, vote 8 will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total income from all sources of all pensioners expressed as a percentage of (a) gross domestic product and (b) the total personal incomes of the population as a whole in each year since 1979. [10999]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 23 January 1996]: Available information is given in the table. The figures are influenced both by changes in the number of pensioners and by changes in their average incomes over time. Average pensioner incomes have increased by 50 per cent., in real terms, since 1979.

Total pensioner income[1] from all sources as percentage of:

| | (a) GDP[2] | (b) total personal income[3] |
|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 7.8 | 9.4 |
| 1981 | 8.7 | 10.0 |
| 1987 | 9.3 | 11.1 |
| 1988 | 9.2 | 10.9 |
| 1989 | 8.9 | 10.3 |
| 1990 | 9.0 | 10.0 |
| 1990–91[4] | 9.5 | 10.6 |
| 1992 | 10.2 | 11.1 |
| 1993 | 9.9 | 10.9 |

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97. [11448]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Expenditure on hospitality and entertainment by Her Majesty's Treasury and agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer is included in the published running costs.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96, and (g) 1996–97. [11451]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Expenditure on overseas travel and subsistence by Her Majesty's Treasury and agencies responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer is included in the running costs published for the Department and each agency.

PRIME MINISTER

Antigua and Barbuda

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he has had with the authorities of (a) Antigua and (b) Barbuda to prohibit the right of public access to beaches on these islands. [12877]

The Prime Minister: None.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 9 January, Official Report, column 16, to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) if he will place in the Library the evidence which he claims supports the charges against two accused Libyans in respect of the destruction of Pan Am 103 in 1988. [11739]

The Prime Minister: No. Details of the evidence cannot be released as this would prejudice the outcome of a trial.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 1 February. [11620]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 1 February. [11621]

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

St. David's Day

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what considerations underlie his Department's decision not to declare St. Davids day a bank holiday in Wales. [12576]

The Prime Minister: Successive Governments have kept the pattern of bank holidays in the United Kingdom under review. The introduction of any additional bank holiday must take account of the potential costs and disruption to industry. To declare St. David's day a bank holiday in Wales would create cost and disruption to businesses both in Wales and elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

Mitchell Report

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Prime Minister when a copy of his statement on the Mitchell report was communicated to the Irish Taoiseach; at what time it was (a) sent and (b) received; and what response he received from the Irish Government before to his statement to the House on 24 January. [13083]

The Prime Minister: A copy of the text of my statement was faxed to the Taoiseach's office at about 2 o'clock on 24 January. No response from the Irish Government reached me before I made my statement to the House.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11366]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 January 1996]: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Privatised Utilities (Employees)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many people were employed by (a) British Gas, (b) British Telecom, (c) Central Electricity Generating Board, (d) East Midlands electricity board, (e) Eastern electricity board, (f) London electricity board, (g) Manweb, (h) Midlands electricity board, (i) Northern electricity board, (j) Norweb, (k) Seeboard, (l) South Wales electricity board, (m) South Western electricity board, (n) Southern electricity board, (o) Yorkshire electricity board, (p) Anglian water authority, (q) Welsh water authority, (r) Northumbrian water authority, (s) North West water authority, (t) Severn Trent water authority, (u) Southern water authority, (v) South West water authority, (w) Thames water authority, (x) Wessex water authority, and (y) Yorkshire water authority, in the final year before each was privatised; [12189]

(2) what was the total amount of remuneration paid to people serving on the boards of (a) British Gas, (b) British Telecom, (c) Central Electricity Generating Board, (d) East Midlands electricity board, (e) Eastern electricity board, (f) London electricity board, (g) Manweb, (h) Midlands electricity board, (i) Northern electricity board, (j) Norweb, (k) Seeboard, (l) South Wales electricity board, (m) South Western electricity board, (n) Southern electricity board and (o) Yorkshire electricity board in the final years before each was privatised. [12187]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 30 January 1996, Official Report, column 656.

Nuclear Levy

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money at 1995 prices raised by the nuclear levy will be refunded to the Exchequer as a result of the proposed privatisation. [12476]

Mr. Eggar: No levy money will be refunded to the Exchequer as a result of the proposed privatisation.

Sydney Olympics

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 253, what is the make-up of the Sydney Olympics UK business task force. [12567]

Mr. Nelson: The membership of the Sydney Olympics UK business task force is as follows:

Chairman

The hon. Colin Moynihan

Members

Mr. Colin Adams—British Consultants Bureau

Sir Tim Bell—Lowe Bell Communications

Mr. G. Campkin—Confederation of British Industry

Mr. M. Cohen—Department of Trade and Industry

Dr. John Hooper—British Sports and Allied Industries Federation

Mr. Harvey Lipsith—Allders

Mr. Peter Lorschy—Australian Trade Commission

Sir Colin Marshall—British Airways

Mrs. Diana Morphew—Government of New South Wales

Mr. Alan Pascoe—API Sponsorship Ltd.

Mr. David Tate—Tate and Lyle plc

Mr. David Todd—Corrs Chambers Westgarth

Mr. Roger Withers—Bass Leisure Machines Services Ltd.

Polypropylene

Mr. Stevenson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the non-cadmium substitutes available to replace cadmium pigments in polypropylene following the implementation of European Union directive 91/338/EEC. [12821]

Mr. Page: There are many factors to consider when choosing a pigment to colour polypropylene, including the thermal stability of the pigment during processing, the service demands of the finished article—i.e. light and weather fastness—and suitability for use in toys and food contact articles. By assessing the demands of the application, it is then possible to choose the correct pigment for the particular application.

A wide variety of pigments can be used to colour polypropylene, varying in shade, colour, strength, physical properties and price. These include organic systems such as those based on quinacridone, diketo-pyrrolo-pyrrol, isolindolinone, quinophthalone, perylene and azo condensation products. Inorganic systems based upon nickel and chrome titanium and bismuth can also be used.

Scott Inquiry

Sir Peter Horden: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when Sir Richard Scott's report will be published. [13612]

Mr. Lang: On current plans, I expect Sir Richard Scott's report to be published on 15 February.

British Coal Land

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will halt the sale of British Coal land in Copeland and inquire into the procedure followed; [13154]

(2) if he will ensure that all relevant information is available to all potential purchasers of British Coal land before any sales are concluded; and if he will make a statement. [13156]

(3) if he will set out the guidelines to be followed in the sale of British Coal land; [13157]

(4) what assessment he has made of whether the method adopted to sell British Coal land in Copeland will maximise the return for the assets disposed of; and if he will make a statement. [13155]

Mr. Page: The management and disposal of its property is a matter for British Coal. I understand that the corporation has followed a normal commercial approach to the disposal of property in Copeland and related areas, including the provision of all relevant information to all potential purchasers; and that bids have been assessed with a view to obtaining the best terms available for the assets involved, in the light of the corporation's statutory duties.

Saudi Arabia (Trade)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the value of United Kingdom trade with Saudi Arabia in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [12748]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 31 January 1996]: The information is as follows:

UK visible trade with Saudi Arabia 1992–94 and January to November 1995

£ million

| Year | UK exports | UK imports |
|---|---|---|
| 1992 | 1,966 | 964 |
| 1993 | 1,826 | 1,275 |
| 1994 | 1,516 | 740 |

The kingdom of Saudi Arabia remains the largest market for UK exporters outside the OECD countries. The decline in our exports over the last three years is mainly due to budgetary constraints in Saudi Arabia.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Conveyancing Law

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the benefits and disbenefits of extending section 123 of the Land Registration Act 1925 to conveyances which do not accompany a transfer of the beneficial interest in the land. [12212]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The recommendations for the introduction of legislation to extend the compulsory registration of title provisions of section 123 of the Land Registration Act 1925 to various categories of disposition did not include extending compulsory registration at present to conveyances which do not accompany a transfer of the beneficial interest. This was because responses to the consultation document on extending section 123, issued by the Land Registry in November 1992, received general support but included reservations about extending the section to such conveyances—paragraphs 2.5 to 2.7 of the first report of a joint working group on the implementation of the Law Commission's third and fourth reports on land registration, Law Com. No.235, Cm 2950. Paragraph 2.6 of the first report proposed that matters—including the extension of section 123 to such conveyances—identified as having insufficient support to justify further action at present should be reviewed again after a period of five years.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Women Prisioners (Restraints)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the chair of the board of visitors of each prison in England and Wales as to the use of restraints when women inmates are taken outside prison for whatever reason. [11600]

Miss Widdecombe: At last September's annual conference of boards of visitors the issue of handcuffing women in sensitive situations was raised with me.

The chairmen of the boards at Bullwood Hall and New Hall prisons wrote to my right hon. and learned Friend on 16 and 17 October 1995 respectively, about the use of restraints on women when on escort. An earlier letter of 16 June 1995, from the chairman of the board at Askham Grange prison to the then Minister of State, the right hon. Member for Stirling (Mr. Forsyth), about women prisoners generally, also raised this issue. Askham Grange board wrote again on 13 November 1995.

When my right hon. and learned Friend and I visit prisons, we take the opportunity to speak to boards of visitors who raise a wide range of issues. None of the records of our visits indicates that the use of restraints on women prisoners outside their establishments was raised as a concern.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which powers contained in the Asylum and Immigration Bill affect foreign passport holders with permanent right of United Kingdom abode; if foreign passport holders will be re-classified as immigrants; how their right to remain in the United Kingdom will be affected; and if he will make a statement. [12180]

Miss Widdecombe: A Commonwealth citizen with the right of abode under section 2 of the Immigration Act 1971 will be unaffected by the Bill, except to the extent that certain provisions, such as the new power of search in clause 7, are applicable to all people regardless of their status under the Act.

The use of the term "immigrant" in clauses 8, 9, 10 and 12 of the Bill to refer to a person who, under the 1971 Act, requires leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom will not affect the immigration status of such a person. In particular, the entitlement of a person who is settled in this country to housing assistance and child benefit and their freedom to take employment will not be affected.

Asylum Seekers

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for asylum in the United Kingdom have been received from asylum seekers currently located in other EU countries for each year since 1990. [12607]

Mr. Kirkhope: An average of five asylum applications have been received from nationals of European Union countries in each year since 1990.

Information on non-EU nationals who have been located in EU countries since applying for asylum in the United Kingdom is not held centrally.

Police Vehicles (Bull Bars)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 261, if bull bars have now been removed from Metropolitan police vehicles. [12519]

Mr. Maclean: As I stated in my reply to an earlier question from the hon. Member on 29 November 1995, Official Report columns 781–82, and 12 December 1995, Official Report columns 604–5, this is an operational matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. However, I understand that the Commissioner has reviewed the situation in light of the guidelines issued by the Association of Chief Police Officers and is complying with them. So far as possible, bull bars will be fitted only to vehicles for use in public disorder and where that is required in the interests of officer safety.

Special Constables

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what benefits and payments are available to special constables. [12601]

Mr. Maclean: Special constables are unpaid volunteers, but they are eligible to receive a number of benefits. Under the Special Constables Regulations 1965, they may be reimbursed out-of-pocket expenses or receive payment of an allowance in lieu of reimbursement. Chief officers choosing to pay an allowance may draw on Home Office guidance about allowances in respect of footwear, tights and stockings, travel and refreshment.

Regulations entitle specials to sick pay in respect of injury suffered—or illness contracted—while on duty, and police authorities have discretion to make ex gratia payments to specials who do not qualify for sick pay under the regulations.

In addition, regulations give police authorities discretion to pay a small bounty to special constables who qualify under the criteria—which relate to a minimum commitment of hours in a defined six-month period.

We set up a working group on the special constabulary last year under Home Office chairmanship. We expect it to make a number of recommendations in March about the expenses and allowances that special constables should receive.

Firearms

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many legally held firearms there are in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales (i) in total and (ii) of each type. [12989]

Mr. Maclean: At the end of 1994, the latest year for which figures are available, it is estimated that some 375,000 firearms were covered by firearms certificates on issue in England and about 21,700 by firearms certificates on issue in Wales.

Information is not held centrally, however, on the type of firearm covered by these firearm certificates.

In addition, some 1,230,800 shotguns were covered by the shotgun certificates on issue in England at the end of 1994, and some 102,300 in Wales.

Figures for Scotland are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, but I understand that information on the number of weapons legally held is not available centrally.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the street value of all illegal drugs, per type of drug, seized by Government officials in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [12724]

Mr. Sackville: The total estimated street value of drugs seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, in the last five years for which data are available, is as follows:

1990: £245 million

1991: £308 million

1992: £546 million

1993: £475 million

1994: £551 million

Estimates of the street value of police seizures of illegal drugs are not collected centrally.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the street value of all illegal drugs seized by Government officials in each of the European Union member states in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [12725]

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest estimate of the total street value of the illegal drugs market in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [12727]

Mr. Sackville: It is not possible to make such an estimate with any accuracy.

Release of Offenders

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on informing the families of victims of manslaughter and murder of the release of offenders. [13003]

Mr. Sackville: Our policy is as set out in the 1995 national standards for the supervision of offenders before and after release from custody, a copy of which is in the Library. In such cases, the probation service should arrange for the victim's family to be contacted within two months of the imposition of the sentence and offered the opportunity of being kept informed of developments. Where this opportunity is taken up, the service should inform them when release from custody is imminent.

Informal Justice and Home Affairs Council

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the proceedings and outcome of the EU informal Justice and Home Affairs Council on 26 to 27 January. [13111]

Mr. Howard: The United Kingdom was represented at the informal council in Rome by the Minister of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe) and, on the second day, by Timothy Walker, a senior Home Office official. It is a rule of procedure within the European Union that informal councils cannot reach decisions or adopt texts. The main matters discussed at the meeting were as follows.

The Italian presidency invited Ministers to approve in principle the text of a draft declaration on organised crime. A number of member states, including the United Kingdom, had difficulty with the wording of the declaration as it stood, and the presidency concluded that further work was required at official level before the declaration could be submitted with a view to formal adoption at the Justice and Home Affairs Council in March.

The Council considered the presidency's work programme for the Europol drugs unit, and for developing the supplementary regulations to the Europol convention. The Council also discussed the outstanding issue of European Court of Justice jurisdiction in the Europol convention.

The presidency set out its priorities for work on immigration and asylum. These included taking forward certain of the proposals contained in the 1994 Commission communication on immigration and asylum, and securing early progress on the Dublin convention which deals with the determination of the state responsible for examining applications for asylum lodged in one of the member states. The presidency said that it also hoped to proceed with work on EURODAC, an initiative to establish a computer-based system of fingerprint exchanges on asylum claims.

The Council discussed some of the issues which are blocking agreement to the draft external frontiers convention, including the dispute between the United Kingdom and Spain over its application to Gibraltar, and held a general discussion on the temporary protection of refugees in the light of recent developments in the situation in Bosnia.

The Council discussed the main problems which had arisen during negotiations on the second convention on simplified extradition and the Brussels II convention on matrimonial matters, and examined ways in which these might be resolved.

The Council discussed arrangements for pursuing contacts with designated third countries on justice and home affairs issues, and the presidency outlined broad proposals for a multi-annual work programme within the third pillar.

Prisoners (Repatriation)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Irish Government responded to requests made by him in relation to the seven prisoners who have applied for repatriation from the United Kingdom; to prisons in the Irish Republic; and if he will make a statement. [12950]

Miss Widdecombe: Seven, out of 65 requests made by prisoners to be repatriated to the Irish Republic have been referred to the Irish Ministry of Justice for its consideration. Its response is awaited.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for changes to the 1995–96 cash and running costs limits within his responsibilities. [13624]

Mr. Howard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class VIII, vote 1—Home Office administration, police, probation and other services, England and Wales—will be increased by £11,809,000 from £4,440,076,000 to £4,451,885.000. This increase is the net effect of the partial take-up of running cost end year flexibility of £9,100,000—as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, on 13 July 1995, Official Report, column 776–82, transfer from Department of the Environment in respect of safer cities projects in Wales, transfer from Central Office of Information in respect of the media adviser service, transfer of running costs from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in respect of the United Kingdom central authority, transfer from Department of Social Security in respect of housing benefit, temporary absence from home, transfer from Property Holdings in respect to the refurbishment of Lunar house, transfer from the Ministry of Defence in respect of medical evacuation costs from the former Yugoslavia and a transfer of £1 million from non voted police credit approvals. This transfer from non-voted provision reduced the non-voted cash limit—HO/LACAP—by £1,000,000 from £115,765,000 to £114,265,000.

The cash limit on class VIII, vote 2—prisons, England and Wales—will be increased by £18,905,000 from £1,660,160,000 to £1,679,065,000. This increase has been reduced from the amount originally sought by £1,565,000, equivalent to the excess of expenditure over provision in 1994–95. The increase will be charged to the reserve and partly offset by the surrender of £6,470,000 end year flexibility. Additional provision is required to meet the further costs arising from the implementation of recommendations of the report of Sir John Woodcock into escapes from Whitemoor prison of 9 September 1994. As a result of reallocation of provision between subheads the running cost provision for vote 2 will be reduced by £5,821,000.

The Home Office running costs limit, which covers votes 1 and 2, will be increased by £3,718,000 from £1,740,615,000 to £1,744,333,000.

Extraterritorial Jurisdiction

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the jurisdiction of the courts to enable them to deal with offences committed outside the territory of the United Kingdom by United Kingdom nationals. [13625]

Mr. Howard: With some exceptions, the jurisdiction of courts throughout the United Kingdom is territorially based. There are long-standing arguments of principle and of practicality which support this approach.

It is right, however, that we should, from time to time, examine whether those arguments remain valid in the light of changing circumstances. With the agreement of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, I have established an inter-departmental review to look at the implications for both policy and procedure of any change to the current position on jurisdiction over offences committed by United Kingdom nationals overseas throughout the United Kingdom.

The review is under way and is expected to take four or five months to complete.

Welsh Fire Services

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the total transition cost for the new Welsh fire services; and what are the expected figures for the total cost of new services in each of the next five years expressed (a) in real terms and (b) as a percentage of the cost of the services they replaced. [11065]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The position will depend on key decisions yet to be made by the authorities concerned. The three new combined fire authorities were established in shadow form on 11 December. They are engaged in the planning and preparation for taking over their full function from 1 April. The scale of the transitional costs will depend largely on the approach which the new authorities, once fully constituted, take on the pace and degree of the changes required to amalgamate the existing brigades into the new structure. Supplementary credit approvals of up to £2.7 million have been provisionally set aside for this purpose in 1996–97.

Game Birds

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to enforce European Commission regulation EC 1798 banning the use of Emtryl in treating game birds; what penalties he plans to apply to offences against the regulation when it comes into force; and what warnings have been issued to (a) land owners, (b) breeders, (c) owners of shooting rights and (d) others involved against using Emtryl. [11626]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Food at the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 30 January 1996, Official Report, column 694.

Dalkeith Park

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the cost of the alternative route one mile west of the proposed dual carriageway through Dalkeith park. [12465]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Appraisals, including the costs of several routes were undertaken in 1989. One of these routes was the Dalkeith park line which is approximately 1 km west of the route now proposed for the dual carriageway. As this Dalkeith park line was the most expensive alignment option and as it would have caused significant damage to the area of great landscape value within Dalkeith park, it was not pursued. Only routes further to the east were subsequently investigated.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the environmental impact on Dalkeith park of the proposed (a) roads and (b) bypass in the area. [12179]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Prior to examination of proposals at a public local inquiry in May 1992, an environmental appraisal of the proposed bypass and ancillary roads was undertaken in accordance with the procedures recommended in the Scottish traffic and environmental appraisal manual. In particular, this considered the purpose of the route, and the impact on the landscape, heritage and ecology of Dalkeith park. The reporter appointed to hear evidence at the public local inquiry recommended the proposed alignment should be adopted and this was supported by the Secretary of State in his decision.

The preferred scheme was reviewed in 1995 and is now proposed to be constructed as a dual carriageway. It was subject to a further environmental assessment as required by environmental legislation.

Housing

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to reconcile the difference between the data for starts and completions of housing association and co-operative dwellings published in Scottish Homes regular development programme announcements and those published in the quarterly Scottish Office housing statistical bulletins. [11928]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Scottish Home's development programme announcement bulletins contain information on planned starts for the following year. They do not give information on completions. For a variety of reasons. The number of planned starts may differ from the number which finally take place in any year.

Actual starts and completions are reported in Scottish Home's statistical report. Figures published by Scottish Homes for actual starts closely match those published in the Scottish Office statistical bulletin series. There is, however, a known problem with the quarterly figures for completions which Scottish Homes provides for the statistical bulletin series. This is acknowledged in the publication. To remedy the problem, Scottish Homes carried out a major exercise in 1995 which produced validated completions data for several thousand dwellings. I understand that it plans to complete the exercise by the end of March 1996.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assumptions he has made on the level of spending by local authorities in 1996–97 under the former non-housing revenue account block; and what measures he proposes to put in place to monitor and to publish details of expenditure or repair and improvement grants and other forms of assistance by local authorities to the private sector housing stock. [11929]

Mr. Robertson: It will be for local authorities to decide the level of investment in private sector housing within the single allocation which they will receive in 1996–97 for capital investment outwith their own housing stock. Local authorities will be expected to take account of the need for such investment in preparing their housing plans and capital programmes.

Information on improvement and repairs grants approved by local authorities will continue to be published quarterly in the Scottish Office statistical bulletin "Housing Trends in Scotland".

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discretion local authorities have to operate (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory contents insurance schemes for tenants of their housing stock; what guidelines his Department issues to local authorities on such schemes; and if he will make a statement. [12222]

Mr. Robertson: Local authorities are free to introduce arrangements whereby their tenants can insure their possessions under a block insurance policy arranged by the local authority. A number of authorities operate block insurance schemes. It is open to individual tenants to participate in such schemes if they wish to do so. The Department is currently considering whether guidance to local authorities on this matter is necessary.

Civil Justice System

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what proposals exist to initiate a consultative inquiry into the Scottish civil justice system with a similar remit to that of the recent Woolf inquiry in England and Wales; [12086]

(2) if he will make it his policy to instigate a fundamental review of the civil justice system in Scotland. [12087]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The civil justice system in Scotland is kept under constant review through standing groups such as the sheriff court rules council and the Court of Session rules council and takes account of initiatives by ministerial and judicial interests.

The rules of both the Court of Session and sheriff court have recently been reviewed and reforms were introduced into both during 1994. The effects of these changes are being monitored by a research programme and it would be premature to initiate a further fundamental review of the whole system at this time.

Carbon Monoxide Detectors

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make additional resources available to housing associations to install carbon monoxide detectors in their housing stock; and if he will make a statement; [12219]

(2) if he will make additional resources available to local authorities to install carbon monoxide detectors in their housing stock; and if he will make a statement; [12218]

(3) if he will make additional resources available to Scottish Homes to install carbon monoxide detectors in their housing stock; and if he will make a statement. [12217]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Substantial resources have been made available to local authorities and Scottish Homes for investment in public sector housing stock. Decisions about the installation of carbon monoxide detectors are for local authorities and Scottish Homes in the light of their assessments of priorities. Similarly, decisions about the installation of detectors in housing association properties are a matter for each association, but they would be expected to fund such work from their own resources.

NHS Finance

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the recipients of supplementary allocations from underspend on the NHS budget in each of the past three years; and if he will publish the rules pertaining to the application for an award of such allocations. [12009]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The recipients of the supplementary allocations from underspend on the NHS budget in each of the past three years are as shown in the following table:

£ thousand

| Recipient | 1993–94 | 1994–95 | 1995–96 |

| Argyll and Clyde health board | 2,600 | 1,815 | 1,414 |
| Ayrshire and Arran health board | 2,000 | 871 | 1,198 |
| Borders health board | 750 | 443 | 363 |
| Dumfries and Galloway health board | 900 | 885 | 517 |
| Fife health board | 1,950 | 2,393 | 1,074 |
| Forth Valley health board | 1,500 | 884 | 842 |
| Grampian health board | 2,850 | 2,367 | 1,527 |
| Greater glasgow health board | 6,100 | 5,111 | 3,115 |
| Highland health board | 1,400 | 796 | 685 |
| Lanarkshire health board | 3,000 | 1,719 | 1,671 |
| Lothian health board | 4,200 | 3,330 | 2,310 |
| Orkney health board | 300 | 329 | 68 |
| Shetland health board | 200 | 197 | 74 |
| Tayside health board | 2,450 | 1,914 | 1,319 |
| Western Isles health board | 650 | 196 | 124 |
| State Hospital | — | 220 | — |
| Common Services Agency | — | 280 | — |
| Scottish Council for Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education | — | 185 | — |
| Total | 30,850 | 23,935 | 16,301 |

There are no rules pertaining to the application for an award of such allocations. The allocations made to enable health boards to meet national and local priorities are generally made on a weighted capitation basis.

Sheriff Court

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the timetable for introducing the next two tiers of the full costs recovery programme in civil actions raised in the sheriff court; and what mechanisms exist to monitor the impact of each tier of full cost recovery on the numbers of actions raised in the sheriff court and its effect on access to justice. [120088]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The current fee structure is design to recover 100 per cent. of administrative costs and one-third of judicial costs in civil proceedings in the sheriff courts and the supreme courts. There is no set timetable for introducing any further tranche of judicial costs and any such proposal would be laid before the House for approval. The Department regularly monitors the level of business coming before the courts. There is no evidence that fee levels are a deterrent to those wishing to raise actions.

Mediation

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has (a) to pilot a court-annexed mediation project in the Scottish courts and (b) to introduce a state-funded mediation agency related to court matters. [12091]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. There are existing rules of court which allows cases to be referred for mediation in relation to family actions and these are used approximately 1,000 cases per annum. The sheriff court rules council is currently considering the procedure rules in relation to mediation and conciliation and considering whether there is any need to strengthen these rules.

Farm Support Scheme

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the publicly funded support schemes available to farmers and growers in Scotland giving the amount paid under each scheme for the most recent year for which figures are available. [11966]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Information for the latest complete financial year—1994–95—is set out in the table. In 1995–96, organic aid, heather moorland, habitats and set-aside access schemes commenced.

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| Sheep Annual Premium | 90 |
| Suckler Cow Premium | 49 |
| Beef Special Premium | 26 |
| Arable Area Payments | 121 |
| Milk Quota—Surrender or Reduction | 1 |
| Environmental Sensitive Areas | 1 |
| Farm Woodland Schemes | 2 |
| Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances | 40 |
| Rural Enterprise Programme | 4 |
| Crofting Counties Agricultural Grants | 3 |
| Cofters etc. Building Grants and Loans | 5 |
| Farm and Conservation Grant Schemes | 5 |
| Other minor Schemes | 1 |
| Total | 348 |

Judiciary

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to (a) allow pursuers/defenders to choose an appropriate member of the judiciary to hear their case, (b) ensure that the judge in each case has an appropriate expertise in the areas of law raised by that case and (c) initiate a wide consultation on the level of judicial salaries. [12089]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In relation to parts (a) and (b) of the question, there are no plans to alter the current arrangements whereby the allocation of judges and sheriffs to particular cases is entirely a matter for the Lord President of the Court of Session or the appropriate sheriff principal. Within our current system there are opportunities for individual sheriffs and judges with particular expertise to be allocated to specific items of business. On part (c), judicial salaries are determined by the Senior Salaries Review Body and there are no plans to change these arrangements.

Water Authorities

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the names of those current local authority councillors who are members of the East, West and North of Scotland water authorities; how much time each annually will spend on each body; and what is the salary paid in respect of each position. [12432]

Mr. Kynoch: The following current local authority councillors are members of the water authority indicated:

East: Councillor Ian J. Berry, Councillor Ann Dickson, Councillor Ian Galloway, Councillor Tom Kerr and Councillor Pat McCafferty.

West: Councillor Mungo Bryson, Councillor William Petrie, Councillor Robert R. Reid, Provost Leslie Rosin and Councillor Ian R. Young.

North: Councillor Raymond Bisset, Councillor Joan Easten, Councillor Nigel J. O. Graham, Councillor Olwyn J. Macdonald and Councillor Donald I. Nicholson.

Each councillor is expected to devote between 24 and 36 days per annum to his or her duties, and receives £6,000 per annum in remuneration.

Nuclear Industry (Accidents)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the requirements for insurance to cover the risk of accidents involving radioactive materials following privatisation of the nuclear industry; what assessment he has made of whether appropriate cover is available from commercial insurance sources; what contingency plans have been drawn up for the Government to continue to cover such risks in the absence of commercial insurance; and what charge would be made to the privatised industry for such state insurance. [12239]

Mr. Kynoch: I refer the hon. Member to answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Small Business, Industry and Energy, Department of Trade and Industry, on 30 January, Official Report, column 657.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how long a planning appeal to his Department may be outstanding before a public inquiry must be held; and if he will make a statement. [12246]

Mr. Kynoch: Planning legislation does not limit the period within which a public inquiry into a planning appeal must be held.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the regulations relating to amendments to a planning application in the appeal process being accepted by the report to the inquiry unit; and what are the inquiry's powers in this respect. [12247]

Mr. Kynoch: Planning regulations neither provide for, nor restrict, amendment to planning applications during the appeal process.

The consideration of applications at appeal is based primarily on the details of the proposal as submitted to and considered by the planning authority. Alteration to the detail of an application at appeal stage may exceptionally be allowed by the reporter provided that parties to the appeal are not prejudiced in any way and the following criteria are satisfied.

- the alteration does not fundamentally alter the nature of the proposed development;
- those parties consulted or notified of the original application are re-consulted or notified in any case where amendment is likely to have significant change in the impact of the development;
- the planning authority and all parties have adequate opportunity to consider the amendments;
- whether the application is solely for change of use, or is an outline application or is for full planning permission for all building and engineering works.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average time lapse between the lodging of planning appeals and the holding of a public inquiry. [12252]

Mr. Kynoch: Of those planning appeal cases dealt with by public local inquiry in the years 1994 and 1995, the average time lapse between the lodging of the appeal and the commencement of the inquiry was 40 weeks and 31 weeks respectively.

Gateside Primary School

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the costs associated with the holdings of an opt-out ballot in respect of Gateside primary school. [12755]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To date, the Secretary of State has reimbursed the Gateside primary school board for £225.60 spent on the notice to parents which it is required to place in the press to invite parents to check that their name is on the list to be used in the ballot. The Secretary of State has not yet received an account from Electoral Reform (Ballot Services), which is managing the ballot of parents, or from the school board in respect of its campaign and postal expenses. However, the likely final cost is expected to be slightly less than £900.

Electorates

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1995, Official Report, column 703, relating to electorates on 16 February 1994, what were the electorates on 16 February 1995 of (a) East Dunbartonshire electoral ward 26, South Lensie/Waterside, (b) those parts of Strathclyde electoral division, 35 Toryglen/Kingspark, included in South Lanarkshire electoral wards 62 Rutherglen West, 64 Bankhead and 65, Spittal/Blairbeth, (c) those parts of Strathclyde electoral division 8 Vale of Leven, included in Argyll and Bute electoral ward, 31 Rhu/Garelochhead/Luss and (d) these parts of Tayside electoral division 31, Sidlaw, included in City of Dundee electoral wards, 13, Menzieshill West, 16 Pitalpin, 17 Ardler, 19 St. Mary's West, 20 Downfield, 27 Fintry North, 29 Whitfield North, 35 Balgillo, and 36 Dalhousie. [12734]

Mr. Kynoch: The information is set out.

Local Authority Advertising

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the costs incurred by each Scottish local authority in 1995 on advertising performance indicators under the citizens charter; how many (a) responses and (b) inquiries were received from the public concerning these advertisements; and if the requirement to publish such advertisements will applying in 1996 to those councils which are to be abolished in April. [12500]

Mr. Kynoch: The information requested about costs incurred by and responses and inquiries received by local authorities is not held centrally.

In the light of a direction issued in December 1994 by the accounts commission, in terms of section 1(1) of the Local Government Act 1992, information about the performance of the existing regional, islands and district councils in delivering services during the 1995–96 financial year will require to be published by 31 December 1996. The Government intend to specify, in regulations which will be laid before the House in due course, in each case a successor new council which will be responsible for publishing this information.

Judicial Remuneration

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current levels of remuneration of (a) stipendiary magistrates, (b) sheriffs, (c) sheriffs principal, (d) Court of Session judges, (e) the Lord Justice Clerk and (f) the Lord President. [12134]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The current levels of remuneration are

(a) £36,576 to £39,180;

(b) £72,524;

(c) £85,241;

(d) £98,957 (Outer House) and £110,137 (Inner House);

(e) £114,137; and

(f) £114,874.

Health Service (Waiting Times)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many in-patient/day case episodes had a wait of greater than one year in each NHS hospital trust and health board; and what proportion of the total number of discharges these episodes represent in (a) 1994 and (b) 1995. [11215]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is shown in the tables.

NHSiS—In-patient/day case discharges after admission from the waiting list where the wait was greater than one year: non-psychiatric and non-obstetric specialties

Hospitals (Patient Care)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the hospitals in Scotland in which a system has been devised under which a named nurse or midwife is responsible for an individual patient's care while in hospital. [11217]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: All hospitals.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of patients in Scottish hospitals had a named nurse or midwife responsible for their hospital care in December 1995. [11218]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Full implementation of the named nurse in Scotland is to be achieved by June 1997. Health boards have agreed targets with provider units working towards 100 per cent. coverage. At December 1995 the average coverage across Scottish hospitals was 89 per cent.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the Scottish gross domestic produce per head as a percentage of the United Kingdom average in each year since 1978. [13153]

Mr. Kynoch: The latest available estimates are shown in the following table. Figures for 1994 were published in the article "Regional accounts 1994: part 1" in the December 1995 edition of "Economic Trends". The article includes revisions to data on GDP per head for earlier years and an explanation of the reasons for the revisions. Copies of "Economic Trends" are available in the Library.

Burns Statue, London

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland who made the proposal that a wreath be laid at the Burns statue in London on 31 January; what it was proposed to commemorate; who was responsible for sending out invitations; who was invited to attend; what is the estimated cost of the event; who will be responsible for covering the cost; and what was the purpose of the event. [12961]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I was first approached in July 1995 by the hon. Member for Ayr (Mr. Gallie), who had been discussing with Enterprise Ayrshire the possibility of marking the bicentenary of the death of Robert Burns with a ceremony at the Burns statue in London. I was happy to participate in what was one of a number of events taking place on 31 January in London and, as requested, to lay a commemorative wreath. The administrative arrangements are matters for the hon. Member for Ayr, whose constituency contains the birthplace of Robert Burns. I understand that invitations were issued to all Members of Parliament for Scottish constituencies.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he intends to make to the cash limits and running costs provision for 1995–96 within his responsibility. [13545]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, I intend to make changes to eight voted cash limits, three non-voted cash blocks and five running costs limits:

The cash limit element for class XIV, vote 1, agriculture and fisheries, Scotland will be reduced by £3,000,000 from £131,167,000 to £128,167,000 to take account of slower than expected take-up of measures aimed at providing support in special areas.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 2, training programmes, roads and transport services, industrial and regional support, Scotland, will be reduced by £7,967,000 from £962,881,000 to £954,914,000. The reduced cash limit takes account of a transfer to the Department of Transport reflecting a decrease in requirement of £9,766,000 for grants to Strathclyde passenger transport authority to meet the costs of supporting rail services resulting from the restructuring of the railways; and the need to provide a non-voted external financing limit of £1,600,000 for the Scottish Transport Group. It also reflects increased provision of £3,000,000 transferred from class XIV, vote 1, to address pressure on the motorways and trunk roads current expenditure programme; and additional provision of £400,000 to meet costs resulting from the privatisation of the electricity industry which will be met from the proceeds of privatisation.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 5, housing and environmental services, Scotland will be increased by a net total of £213,000 from £416,704,000 to £416,917,000. This reflects a reduction in housing support grant provision by £340,000, an increase in grant in aid to Scottish Homes of £169,000, provision of £176,000 transferred to class XIV, vote 8, and a net increase of £560,000 in gross running cost provision for Historic Scotland, from £15,821,000 to £16,381,000, reflecting the take-up of end year flexibility. Further increases in provision of £161,000 are offset fully by increased appropriations in aid. There is an increase in grant in aid provision for Scottish Natural Heritage of £1,000,000 which is offset fully by savings within the vote.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 7, revenue support grant and payment of non-domestic rates, etcetera, Scotland will be increased by £256,000 from £4,974,997,000 to £4,975,253,000. The increase is a transfer from DSS class XIII, vote 2, in respect of residual housing benefit for Kirkcaldy and East Kilbride district councils following the recent transfer of new towns housing stock.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 10, law, order, miscellaneous health and social work services, Scotland, will be increased by a net total of £358,000 from £315,773,000 to £316,131,000. The changes include a net transfer of £341,000 to the Scottish police college current provision from class XIV, vote 9, in respect of police superannuation. There is also a number of minor transfers within the vote and from other votes within the Scottish Office. The running cost provision decreases by £580,000 from £150,909,000 to £150,329,000.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 12, hospital, community health, family health (part) and other health services, Scotland will be decreased by £9,416,000 from £3,161,003,000 to £3,151,587,000. This is due to: a transfer of £10,000,000 to class XIV, vote 11, to provide for increased expenditure on family health services, mainly drugs costs; a transfer of £11,000 to the health part of Class XIV, vote 10, for the Mental Welfare Commission; and an increase of £595,000 as a result of a transfer from the non-voted element of the NHS trusts' external financing limit. This, together with other transfers within vote 12, means that the NHS trusts' external financing limit will be increased by £6,702,000 from £36,403,000 to £43,105,000. Overall, the above changes will have no effect on provision for the Scottish health programme.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 18, Scottish Office administration, is being increased by £1,327,000 from £174,607,000 to £175,934,000. Within this total, the running cost provision for Scottish Office administration is being increased by £619,000 from £153,120,000 to £153,739,000 as a result of transfers from Property Holdings, from an agreed claim on the reserve covering the Scottish Office apportionment for rent registration costs arising from housing benefit changes, less an intra vote transfer. The capital provision is also being increased as a result of a transfer from Property Holdings less an inter vote transfer and a technical transfer from running costs.

The Scottish Office running cost limit—covering votes 1, 5, 10, 15 and 18—is increased by £608,000 from £339,608,000 to £340,216,000. In addition to the changes referred to, running cost provision on vote 1 will increase by £9,000.

The cash limit for class XIV, vote 19, Scottish Record Office is being increased by £1,641,000 from £5,459,000 to £7,100,000. Within this total, the Scottish Record Office running cost limit is being increased by £641,000 from £5,586,000 to £6,227,000 and results from a transfer from Property Holdings and the take-up of 50 per cent. marginal extra receipts.

The non-voted cash limit SO/LA1, which covers non-housing capital expenditure by local authorities, is to be increased by £6,911,000 from £592,392,000 to £599,303,000, reflecting take-up of end year flexibility. The non-voted cash limit SO/LA2 which covers housing capital expenditure by local authorities and capital expenditure by new towns will be increased by £4,841,000 from £229,973,000 to £234,814,000. This reflects take-up of capital end year flexibility of £5,010,000 and a transfer of provision to Scottish Homes of £169,000, for which a complementary increase is included in the spring supplementary estimate for class XIV, vote 5. The non-voted cash limit SO/ERDF which covers European regional development fund payments in Scotland will be increased by £10,025,000 from 110,000,000 to £120,025,000 reflecting the take-up of end year flexibility.

All the increases will be offset by savings, transfers from other votes or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

After-school Care Initiative

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money will be available in Scotland in 1996–97 for the after-school care initiative. [7742]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 19 January 1996]: The out-of-school child care initiative has offered good value for money in its first three years of operation, with 5,467 places created in Scotland to date. The scheme will continue to be delivered in Scotland until March 1999 by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. Around £500,000 will be made available for each of the three years.

General Practitioners (Rural Areas)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many general practitioners were practising in rural areas in Scotland in (a) 1990 and (b) 1995. [11583]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 23 January 1996]: The numbers of general medical practitioners working in rural areas in Scotland at 1 October 1990 and 1 October 1995 were 394 and 441 respectively.

Trade missions are essentially commercial events in which individual companies develop contacts with potential partners in the target market.

Members of this mission were provided with briefing about the commercial situation in Indonesia.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he raised the question of human rights during his recent visit to Indonesia; and if he will make a statement. [11818]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Delyn (Mr. Hanson) by the Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-West (Mr. Richards) on 26 January, Official Report, column 478.

Patient Death (Legal Action)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what legal action is outstanding in the case of Patient C, subject of an inquest in north Wales. [11926]

Mr. Richards: I believe that no legal action is outstanding in respect of the High Court proceedings commenced by originating summons which resulted in a declaration leading to the withdrawal of mechanical feeding and the consequent death of Patient C, who had been in a persistent vegetative state. Further legal action is involved in connection with the inquest which is due to be resumed and it is also possible that further legal action will take place if claims are pursued in the courts on behalf of C's estate or family, but the Welsh Office has no direct knowledge concerning such claims.

School Funding (Flintshire)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what capital funding allocations have been made to local education authority schools for the new unitary authority of Flintshire for 1996–97. [12421]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Flintshire county council has been issued with a basic credit approval of £66.441 million for 1996–97, which allows borrowing for any capital purpose including schools. Essentially the Government provide moneys, and borrowing approval to local government on an unhypothecated basis and it is up to the council to determine the use of such resources.

In addition, Hawarden high school, Deeside, has been awarded funding of £250,000 commencing in 1995–96 under the technology schools initiative. Of this £120,000 will be issued to Flintshire county council in 1996–97 as a supplementary credit approval.

Under the popular schools initiative supplementary credit approval of £155,000—phased over three years from 1995–96—has been offered to Clwyd local education authority and Flintshire county council in respect of an extension to Ewloe Green county primary school.

Planning Policy Guidance

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish new guidelines for planning in Wales. [12687]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Comments on the draft planning policy guidance (Wales) documents issued in July have been thoroughly evaluated and my right hon. Friend will be making a decision shortly on what planning policy guidance to publish in Wales.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the impact on his Department's work priorities of the advice to Her Majesty's Government contained in the second report of the Government's panel on sustainable development. [12686]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government are considering this report and will respond shortly.

Nutrition Task Force

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 599, what plans he has to set up a nutrition task force and a low income project team for Wales; and if he will make a statement. [13148]

Mr. Hague: The Health Promotion Authority for Wales has pioneered a range of programmes to help people in Wales, including those on low incomes, to eat more healthily. I have no plans to establish a nutrition task force or low income project team for Wales to duplicate the work already undertaken by HPW.

NHS EstateCare

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 599, on what date the decision was taken to instruct the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to invite bids from the private sector for NHS EstateCare. [13146]

Mr. Hague: My department wrote to the chairman of the authority on 16 August 1995 confirming my predecessor's decision to privatise the current function of EstateCare group. The conduct of the process, including the seeking and evaluation of bids, is a matter for the authority.

University Hospital of Wales

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the letter from the director of the NHS in Wales to the chief executives of the South Glamorgan health authority and the University Hospital of Wales NHS trust received on 29 January, concerning the proposed transfer of accident and emergency facilities from the Cardiff royal infirmary to the University hospital of Wales. [13151]

Mr. Hague: Copies of the relevant decision letter have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chief executive of University hospital of Wales concerning the (a) private and (b) public funding of the (i) new multi-level access road and (ii) new accident and emergency services; on what criteria he proposes to judge private sector offers to design, build, finance and operate the two projects; and if he will make a statement. [13149]

Mr. Hague: None. This is a matter for the trust in producing an acceptable business case which will then be tested for private sector interest.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has discussed with the chief executive of the University hospital of Wales concerning the means of acquiring land for the construction of the access road across the A48 in connection with the transfer of accident and emergency services from the Cardiff royal infirmary to the University hospital of Wales; and what estimate he has made of the time required for such land acquisition by (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory means. [13150]

Mr. Hague: None. This is a matter for the trust in consultation with the local planning authority.

Crickhowell House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date he expects Crickhowell house to be available with vacant possession for sub-letting. [12942]

Mr. Hague: No date has been fixed.

Urban Investment Grant

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what urban investment grant he has awarded (a) the financial year 1994–95 and (b) this financial year; and if he will give the same information for grants awarded by the Cardiff Bay development corporation. [12943]

Mr. Hague: A list of all projects awarded urban investment grant, by the Welsh Office, in 1994–95 and 1995–96 is in the following tables. Cardiff Bay development corporation did not make any awards of urban investment grant in the period.

Mr. Hague: It is the responsibility of registered organisations within the NHS to account for VAT. Advice about VAT was last given to the NHS in Wales on 12 December 1994. This gave advance notice of a change in the registration arrangements from 1 April 1995.

Fluoridation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the most recent guidance on fluoridation he has issued to Welsh health authorities; and what discussions he has had with those authorities and with Welsh Water to update it. [12945]

Mr. Hague: The most recent guidance to health authorities in Wales on fluoridation is contained in the "Protocol for Investment in Health Gain" of November 1992. The protocol advises that health authorities should give high priority to water fluoridation. Welsh Office officials discuss fluoridation issues with health authorities from time to time. I have had no discussions with the chairman of Welsh Water on this issue.

NHS Hospitals

[12946]

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all loans outstanding by NHS trusts in Wales; and if he will specify the terms on which the loans were arranged and the dates of commencement and final repayment of principal. [12947]

Primary Care (Out-of-hours Centres)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with health authorities concerning the provision of out-of-hours centres for primary care and the issuing of new guidelines with respect to such centres; and if he will make a statement. [12948]

Mr. Hague: My officials met representatives of family health services authorities on 2 November 1995 to discuss the new arrangements for delivering GP out-of-hours services. The arrangements provide an opportunity for GPs to organise their emergency services in ways that will maintain and improve patient care.

Pembrokeshire NHS Trust

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department's officialS received a copy of the draft report produced by the auditors of Pembrokeshire NHS trust, Coopers and Lybrand, into the circumstances leading up to, and the financial implications of, the departure of the chief executive of the Pembrokeshire NHS Trust in 1994. [13002]

Mr. Richards: Welsh Office officials received a copy of a draft on 30 June 1995. Questions arising on the draft were raised by officials who are now considering a further draft. Whether a final report is submitted at a future date to the Secretary of State will be for the Audit Commission to determine.

Cash Limits

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes he is proposing to make to the cash limits for his Department and the Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in Wales for the current year. [13543]

Mr. Hague: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit on class XV, vote 1 will be reduced by £1,799,000 from £24,557,000 to £22,758,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 2 will be reduced by £4,256,000 from £659,934,000 to £655,678,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 3 will be increased by £5,500,000 from £561,690,000 to £567,190,000; the cash limit on class XV, vote 5 will be reduced by £2,724,000 from £1,789,920,000 to £1,787,196,000 and the cash limit on class XV, vote 7 will be reduced by £500,000 from £8,746,000 to £8,246,000.

The decrease in the cash limit for vote 1 arises mainly from a transfer of a forecast underspend on cash limited agricultural grants to the resources for demand-led agricultural grants including hill livestock compensatory allowances and compensation payments for the control of animal diseases.

The net reduction in the cash limit for vote 2 comprises mainly a transfer of £750,000 from class I, vote 3 for the local initiative fund and a transfer of £5,000,000 to class XV, vote 3.

The cash limit increase on vote 3 relates to a transfer from class XV, vote 7 for Welsh Office administration capital and a transfer from class XV, vote 2 for the central Government roads programme.

The cash limit reduction on vote 5 results mainly from a transfer from cash limited resources within the vote to meet higher than forecast expenditure on demand-led family health services.

The decrease in the cash limit for vote 7 results from fewer than expected tenders being received for school inspections.

None of the proposed changes adds to the overall level of public expenditure.

Dance and Drama Students (Funding)

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which local education authorities have sought from her Department improved funding for students of dance and drama in the past two years. [10349]

Mr. Forth: The Department is in frequent contact with local authorities to discuss a wide range of issues. It is not possible to identify from the Department's records every instance in which the issue of funding for dance and drama students may have arisen during the course of those discussions. However, my right hon. Friend has within the past two years received letters from Lancashire and Sutton local authorities proposing that a wider range of dance and drama courses should be designated for mandatory awards.

Schools (Balances)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list, by local education authority, the total amount of balances held by schools in England according to the latest figures. [11747]

1. The figures (derived from the LMS outturn statements for 1994–95 published by LEAs under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988) cover all county, voluntary and special schools. Prior to 1994–95 special schools were covered by LMS only in the case of 8 LEAs

2. All figures represent surpluses net of deficits.

National Vocational Qualifications

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the average cost per place of delivering NVQ levels 1, 2 and 3 for (a) the unemployed funded by training and enterprise councils and (b) those in work attending further education courses or day release. [12753]

Mr. Paice: The information requested is not available.

Jobcentres (Advertised Pay Rates)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average pay rate on offer at each jobcentre in England for the latest week for which figures are available. [12841]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from R. D. Horne to Mr. Peter L. Pike, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the average pay rate on offer at each Jobcentre in England. In the absence of Mr Fogden I have been asked to reply.

The Employment Service does not collect regular figures on wage rates of vacancies held by Jobcentres.

However, research has been undertaken on advertised vacancies in February 1994 which gave the following estimates for Great Britain, based on those vacancies for which wages and hours were given (ie not those open to an element of negotiation). These show that at that time 11% of vacancies were for hourly rates of pay of £2.50 or below, 47% for £2.51–3.50, 27% for £3.51–£4.50, 8% for £4.51–£5.50 and 7% for over £5.50. Research on the value of vacancy circulation is being carried out at present and is expected to be published by the summer. It is expected to provide some further, limited information on wage rates of Jobcentres vacancies.

I am sorry that I cannot be of more help.

School Premises Regulations

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to lay new drafts of the Education (School Premises) Regulations before Parliament; and what the time scale will be for their coming into effect. [13080]

Mrs. Gillan: We expect to lay the revised Education (School Premises) Regulations before Parliament in February. Subject to the consent of Parliament, they will take effect 21 days later.

Public Supplies Contract Legislation

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what occasions her Department received correspondence from the European Commission during the review of public supplies contract legislation in 1992, on the subject of what preferential schemes were in operation in the United Kingdom; when her Department responded to this consultation; and at what point her Department informed the European Commission that the priority suppliers scheme was in operation. [12917]

Mr. Robin Squire: The European Commission was informed in 1981 that the priority suppliers scheme was in operation. The Department did not receive any correspondence from the European Commission on the subject of preference schemes during the consolidation and revision of the supplies directive in 1992.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the range of accommodation for play groups which is likely to qualify for the scheme for nursery vouchers. [12918]

Mr. Robin Squire: To qualify for initial validation to redeem nursery vouchers, all play groups must be registered under part X of the Children Act 1989. As such, their accommodation and facilities should comply with the guidance on premises in volume 2 of the Children Act guidance and regulations.

European Social Fund

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what amount of European social fund money is currently being held in reserve by the European Commission; and what reasons have been given for a reserve being put on this funding. [13079]

Mr. Forth: Some 3,377 million ecu are available for spending in Great Britain under objectives 3 and 4 of the structural funds between 1994 and 1999. The objective 3 plan for 1994 to 1996 period, which was agreed with the European Commission, provided for 1,501 million of that money to be spent in the UK. The remaining 1,876 million ecu are available for spending in Great Britain under objectives 3 and 4 of the structural funds between 1997 and 1999. The plans for spending that money will be negotiated this year.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what changes she has made to cash limits and running cost limits on votes within her responsibility for the year 1995–96. [13546]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limits for class V, vote 1, employment programmes and central services; class V, vote 2, Department for Education and Employment: Employment Service; class X, vote 1, schools research and miscellaneous services; class X, vote 3, Department for Education: administration; and class X, vote 5, Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England, will be amended as follows:

| Class | Vote | Existing cash limit | Change | New cash limit |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| V | 1 | 2,122,564,000 | 9,480,000 | 2,132,044,000 |
| V | 2 | 906,952,000 | –8,600,000 | 898,352,000 |
| X | 1 | 735,483,000 | –75,000 | 735,408,000 |
| X | 3 | 90,295,000 | –2,000,000 | 88,295,000 |
| X | 5 | 98,152,000 | –12,875,000 | 85,277,000 |

The cash limit for class V, vote 1 will be increased by £9,480,000 from £2,122,564,000 to £2,132,044,000. This is as a result of a running costs transfer of £11,600,000 from the Employment Service—£2,700,000 for jobseeker's allowance consultancy costs and £8,900,00 to cover restructuring costs—offset by a transfer of £1,983,000 to the Department for Social Security class XIII, vote 1 for youth training provision; and additional receipts in respect of a recovery of VAT on consultancy fees totalling £138,000. A new net subhead is also being added to the vote for agency payments on behalf of the European regional development fund. The increase will be offset by transfers and a charge to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

The running costs limit for class V, vote 1 will increase by £4,992,000 from £294,401,000 to £299,393,000 as a result of the transfer of running costs of £11,600,000 from the Employment service class V, vote 2, offset by a transfer of £6,608,000 to the Department for Trade and Industry class IX, vote 1, as part of the machinery of government changes announced on 5 July 1995.

The cash limit for class V, vote 2, will be reduced by £8,600,000 from £906,952,000 to £898,352,000. The running costs limit for that vote will be reduced by £12,600,000 from £1,023,060,000 to £1,010,460,000. This is as a result of transfers of £11,600,000 to class V, vote 1 in respect of additional jobseeker's allowance consultancy costs and restructuring costs, and of £1,000,000 to the Department of Social Security in respect of salary costs of staff transferred to the Benefits Agency. This decrease is offset by capital transfers of £2,000,000 from class X, vote 3 and the take-up of £2,000,000 under the capital end year flexibility scheme from class V, vote 1 in respect of labour market system infrastructure requirements and rationalisation of the Employment Service estate.

The gross running costs limit for the Department for Education and Employment is reduced by £7,608,000 from £1,403,916,000 to £1,396,308,000 as a result of the running costs changes to class V, votes 1 and 2.

The cash limit on class X, vote 1 will be reduced by £75,000 from £735,483,000 to £735,408,000 as a result of a transfer of £25,000 to the Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools in England to cover the costs of setting up an inspection framework for institutions intending to take part in the new arrangements for the education of the under-fives and a transfer of £50,000 to the Department of Social Security to cover work undertaken in connection with the new under-fives arrangements.

Payments will be made from class X, vote 1 to capita, the body selected to administer the new under-fives arrangements, to cover the setting-up costs of the new scheme. There will be no change in the net provision on the vote as a result.

The cash limit for class X, vote 3 will be reduced by £2,000,000 from £90,295,000 to £88,295,000. This is as a result of the transfer of £2,000,000 of capital provision to the Employment Service class V, vote 2.

The cash limit for class X, vote 5 will be decreased by £12,875,000 from £98,152,000 to £85,277,000. This is as a result of a reduction in forecast expenditure on the inspection of schools. The running costs limit will be increased by £25,000 from £28,451,000 to £28,476,000. This is to allow a transfer of £25,000 from class X, vote 1, to cover the costs of setting up an inspection framework for the pre-school sector.

The opportunity is also being taken to increase provision for appropriations in aid to class X, vote 5 of additional receipts in the form of VAT refunds. This is to offset increased payments resulting from greater contracting out to the private sector. There will be no change in the net provision as a result.

The planned total of public expenditure for these votes is reduced by £14,070,000 as a result.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11909]

Mr. Willetts: The Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service, is signing up in the near future to use the symbol for external recruitment and internal recruitment and promotion.

The non-agency areas of the Cabinet Office have been putting procedures in place to make the five commitments. These will be introduced in the next two months. This will qualify the Department to use the symbol.

The Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency has also put the relevant procedures in place and intend to use the symbol from February 1996.

The Buying Agency uses the symbol for external recruitment purposes.

The Security Facilities Executive has declared an intention to follow the Cabinet Office's lead in introducing the symbol.

The other OPS agencies, Central Office of Information and Her Majesty's Stationary Office have not yet considered using the symbol.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people are employed in (a) the Prime Minister's Office and (b) his own office; and what percentage are disabled. [12228]

The Deputy Prime Minister: For these purposes, the Prime Minister's Office and my own form part of the Cabinet Office. The latest available figures showing disability in the Department relate to 1 April 1995. They showed that, of the 1,549 staff in the Cabinet Office—excluding executive agencies—at the time, 49 staff, 3.1 per cent., had a disability. However, this was before the machinery of government changes of July 1995 which had an impact on the Department's organisation. The Department is about to undertake a new survey of disability among its staff in preparation for adopting the positive about disabled people symbol. I shall write to the hon. Member when the results are available.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) to date and (b) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11371]

Mr. Willetts: Information on consultancy expenditure is not held centrally and can be provided only for earlier years at disproportionate cost. The expenditure on external consultants for 1993–94, 1994–95, year to date and estimated expenditure for the whole of 1995–96 is shown as follows:

Cabinet Office (including 10 and 12 Downing street)

| | Office of Public Service, and agencies |
|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 5,936,200 |
| 1994–95 | 5,969,000 |
| Year to date | 3,272,400 |
| 1995–96 estimated total | 7,276,000 |

A large part of these totals was consultancy to CCTA, the Government Centre for Information Systems.

| | HMSO | COI |
|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 1,061,000 | 66,700 |
| 1994–95 | 1,750,700 | 162,200 |
| Year to date | 827,000 | 21,400 |
| 1995–96 estimated total | [1]827,000 | 132,400 |

[1] HMSO financial year: 1 January to 31 December.

Detailed estimates for 1996–97 are not currently available.

Consultants are used in a variety of activities designed to produce different types of benefits, not just cost saving.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of his Department's expenditure on newspapers and magazines for 1995–96 to date; and if he will list the publications purchased. [11508]

Mr. Willetts: This information, and similar information for earlier years, can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

EU Regulations and Directives

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the EU regulations and directives which will not be enforced in the United Kingdom (a) in part and (b) as a whole. [13081]

Mr. Freeman: The Government's policy is to implement EC legislation in an effective, timely and proportionate manner. The enforcement regime adopted in each case should impose least burden on business and others affected.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Dicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on changes to the 1995–96 cash limit and running costs limit for the Office of Public Service. [13542]

Mr. Freeman: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for the Office of Public Service, class XVIII, vote 1, will be increased by £1,636,000 from £53,713,000 to £55,349,000 and the gross running cost limit will be increased by £291,000 from £78,830,000 to £79,121,000. The changes reflect the transfers of the Security Facilities Executive Agency and the Buying Agency from the Department of the Environment—class VII, vote 8, the Office of Science and Technology being transferred to the Department of Trade and Industry and the deregulation unit and competitiveness division being transferred from the Department of Trade and Industry. Provision is also made for the privatisation of executive agencies. SAFE will have a net running cost limit of zero.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-used properties for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [11506]

Mr. Willetts: Until 1 April 1996, responsibility for Cabinet Office empty and under-used property on the common user estate falls to Property Holdings Division of DoE.

For the years in question, there has been no vacant space within Nos. 10 to 12 Downing street or the central Cabinet Office estate in London. Over this period, only HMSO had empty or under-used departmental estate. The costs were as follows:

1979: Not available
1989: Nil
1991: Nil
1993: £137,300
1994: £252,800
1995: £88,700
1996: £34,825 (January–March).

After 1 April 1996, responsibility for Cabinet Office property on the CUE will fall to the Department. It is forecast that the estimated cost to the Cabinet Office of empty and under-used properties in 1996–97 will be £2,035,739, consisting of HMSO; Crown buildings, Basingstoke; and Leatherhead road, Chessington.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps are being taken to eliminate the sale of nation lottery tickets to under-age children. [10581]

Mr. Sproat: The Secretary of State has, under section 11 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993, issued a direction to the Director General of the National Lottery, that no licence should be granted which authorises the promotion of any lottery which does not allow for sufficient controls to prevent persons who have not attained the age of 16 from participating. I have therefore asked the director general to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what inquiries she has instigated into the delay to the British library project; what reports she has received from those inquiries; and what measures have been taken as a consequence. [11990]

Mrs. Bottomley: The primary cause of delay to this project has been the need to identify and specify the technical changes required to deal with problems discovered since 1991. In particular, these relate to the mobile bookshelving, the low voltage cabling, and the fire protection system. I and my predecessors have commissioned leading experts to report on the issues and we have received a number of technical reports. As a consequence, the key changes which have been made, or are in the process of being made, include the replacement of faulty components in the bookshelving, at the contractor's expense; the repair and replacement of cabling, where necessary and practicable, and the installation of automatic fuse switches to protect the cabling system; and changes to the fire protection system to reduce the likelihood of corrosion, and improve effectiveness.

Millennium Site, Greenwich

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will consider themes or other suggestions, brought to her attention by (a) hon. Members, (b) organisations and (c) members of the public, which add to those which have already, or will be, submitted by Imagination Ltd. relating to the proposed exhibition on a site, or sites adjacent or near to, that designated by the Millennium Commission on the Greenwich peninsula. [11734]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 26 January 1996]: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall reply to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) her Department, (b) her Department's agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies for (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95, (iii) 1995–96 and (iv) 1996–97. [11509]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The available information is given in the following table:

| | 1993–94 actual £ | 1994–95 actual £ | 1995–96 spend to date £ | 1996–97 estimate £ |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Department of National Heritage | 18,277 | 14,967 | 20,795 | n/a |
| Historic Royal Palaces Agency | 16,800 | 16,313 | 32,394 | n/a |
| Royal Parks Agency | 8,926 | 23,862 | 14,819 | 12,150 |

Information on non-departmental public bodies is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her estimate of the expenditure of her Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [11512]

Mr. Sproat: The available information is given in the following table:

| | 1993–94 £ | 1994–95 £ | 1995–96 £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| Department of National Heritage | 99,152 | 161,396 | 132,518 |
| Historic Royal Palaces Agency | 4,567 | 14,605 | 18,135 |
| Royal Parks Agency | Nil | Nil | 2,000 |

Information on non-departmental public bodies is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Estimated figures for 1996–97 are not yet available.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her estimate of departmental expenditure on administration for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [11510]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Expenditure on administration for my Department is included in the expenditure plans table which is published in the annual report, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Eurimages Scheme

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment she has made of the impact on film production companies arising from the United Kingdom's withdrawal from participation in the Eurimages scheme; and if she will make a statement. [12714]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: I am confident that the very high quality of production facilities in this country, along with the excellent skills of those working in the industry, and the distribution value of the English language, will continue to make the British product truly competitive, and British production companies much sought after as co-production partners supported by the European co-production fund which my Department sponsors.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations took place prior to the announcement of the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the Eurimages scheme; and with whom. [12713]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Normal confidentiality requirements as to the contents of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget statement and my Department's spending plans did not allow for prior consultation.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many United Kingdom production companies received awards from Eurimages in each year of the United Kingdom's participation in the scheme; what were the total amounts received each year; and if she will provide a breakdown by (a) nation and (b) region within the United Kingdom. [12711]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The UK joined Eurimages in April 1993. The number of films awarded Eurimages funding and involving UK co-production companies since April 1993 was 12 in 1993, 21 in 1994 and 22 in 1995, and the total amounts awarded were FF23.3 million—£2.66 million—FF45.05 million—£5.45 million—and FF48.15 million—£6.138 respectively.

The information necessary to provide a breakdown by (a) nation and (b) region within the United Kingdom is unavailable.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the estimated savings which are expected for 1996–97 as a result of the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the Eurimages scheme; and if she will make a statement. [12715]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: My Department's contribution to Eurimages in 1995–96 was £2 million. The rate of exchange against the French Franc indicates that the subscription for 1996–97 would have been £2.6 million.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many film production companies were awaiting a determination on funding from Eurimages when the United Kingdom withdrew from the scheme; and if she will provide a breakdown by (a) nation and (b) region within the United Kingdom. [12712]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: There were no Eurimages funding decisions involving UK companies outstanding when we announced our intention to withdraw from the scheme last November.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her estimate of the annual cost to her Department and her Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-used properties for (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95, (c) 1995–96 and (d) 1996–97. [11511]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: My Department, which was created in April 1992, occupies properties which form part of the common user estate. The Department of the Environment will provide central figures covering all common user estate vacant space.

Of my two agencies, only the Royal Parks, formed in April 1993 has any vacant or under-used space, all of which are park buildings, the majority greenhouses. The cost of maintaining these net of VAT is as follows:

1993–94: £12,300.00

1994–95: £11,500.00

1995–96: £26,700.00

1996–97: £4,400.00 (estimated)

To provide this information for the properties for which my non-departmental public bodies are responsible could be achieved only by incurring disproportionate cost.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the surplus or deficit in her museums and galleries account for 1994–95; and what is the estimated surplus/deficit for 1995–96. [12705]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The surplus on this vote for 1994–95 was £2,117,638.77. Full details were published in the appropriation account for class XI, vote 1 (HC 15-VIII of 1995–96), copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Provision for 1995–96 is given in section A of class XI, vote 1—Department of National Heritage (Programme expenditure and administration), HC 271-XI of 1994–95—copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Northern and Yorkshire Outpost Headquarters

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated capital cost of acquiring the site, building and commissioning the new headquarters building of the northern and Yorkshire outpost of the NHS executive; what is the estimated annual revenue cost of the capital or leasing charges for the building; who will own it; when it will open; and how many people will work in it. [11113]

Mr. Malone: The estimated capital cost of the new headquarters building for the northern and Yorkshire regional office in Durham is £2.54 million. This is more than offset by the proceeds from the sale of one of the existing regional health authority's former headquarters buildings in Harrogate of £2.825 million. The accommodation charge will not be determined until the building is complete but, on the basis of comparison with other Department of Health regional headquarters buildings, this move will result in minimum revenue savings of £300,000 per annum. The freehold of the building will be owned by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. The building is expected to be complete for handover on 29 April 1996, ahead of schedule. One hundred and thirty staff will work in the building.

Prescriptions (Students)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the effect on a student's entitlement to free prescriptions of (a) the award of and (b) taking out a student loan through the Student Loans Company; [12099]

(2) which categories of student are not entitled to free prescription charges. [12098]

Mr. Malone: Those in full-time education between the ages of 16 and 18 are entitled to free national health service prescriptions.

Any student aged 19 or over who is not entitled to free NHS prescriptions on health grounds may make a claim to the national health service low income scheme for free prescriptions on an income-related basis.

Student loans have been an integral element of the provision made from public funds for student support since September 1990. Wherever a loan would be available to a student, it is taken into account as a resource in assessing entitlement to help through the low income scheme.

Mental Health

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been allocated annually for mental illness specific grants since 1990, showing in each year the amount contributed (a) by central Government and (b) by local authorities, including the amounts projected for the next two years. [12295]

Mr. Bowis: The table shows the amount of mental illness specific grant allocated in each year since the grant was introduced in 1991–92 showing the sums contributed by central and local government for each year. The table also shows the amounts projected for 1996–97. The figures assume that local authorities will take up the full amount of grant made available to them in 1995–96 and 1996–97. The figures for 1991–92 to 1994–95 represent actual expenditure.

The contribution from central Government includes an amount, currently £2.2 million, which helps to fund the homeless mentally ill initiative in London.

The circular announcing the arrangements for the 1996–97 MISG will be published shortly.

£million

| Year | Total contribution from central Government | Amount of central Government's contribution taken up by local authorities | Local authority contribution | Total expenditure |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1991–92 | 21.0 | 18.9 | 7.8 | 26.7 |
| 1992–93 | 31.4 | 30.8 | 12.8 | 43.6 |
| 1993–94 | 34.4 | 34.4 | 14.0 | 48.4 |
| 1994–95 | 36.0 | 36.0 | 14.5 | 50.5 |
| 1995–96 | 47.3 | 47.3 | 19.3 | 66.6 |
| 1996–97 | 58.3 | 58.3 | 21.3 | 79.6 |

Psychiatric Hospitals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 17 January, Official Report, column 671, (1) of the 80,000 beds how many are psychiatric hospital beds; [12293]

(2) whether the 20,000 acute beds referred to are (a) psychiatric hospital beds and (b) included within the figure of 80,000 beds referred to at the same time, or additional to that figure. [12294]

Mr. Bowis: The figure of 80,000 refers to the number of beds in hospital and residential units for mentally ill people. This figure includes some 66,000 hospital beds of which some 20,000 are "acute" or "short-stay" beds.

Hip Replacement Operations

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hip replacement operations have been carried out by the NHS on individuals over the age of 65 years during the past 12 months. [12330]

Mr. Horam: The latest year for which information is available is 1993–94. The number of finished consultant episodes for hip replacement and other arthroplasty of the hip operations, carried out on patients aged 65 years and over, in England during that period was 45,570.

Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much NHS trusts and general practitioner practices pay Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. of Loughborough for the use of the Read clinical coding system broken down by (a) trust and (b) family health services authority. [12749]

Mr. Horam: The Read codes are Crown copyright and there is no change to the national health service for their use.

National Health Service users of Read codes pay Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. for support and distribution services only. These services are charged under a formula agreed with the Department of Health, subject to a permitted cost plus mechanism to ensure value for money and audited annually by external auditors acting for the Department of Health.

The annual sums payable by users for support and distribution services are:

general practitioners—£75 per practice.

Family health services authorities—normal charges are £75 per computer screen in each authority.

Trust/unit users are charged according to usage: the current annual charge is £3,691.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money the NHS receives each year from Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd.; when the contract comes up for renewal; and if the current contracted arrangement will remain unchanged after renewal. [12751]

Mr. Horam: The national health service receives no payment from Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. in respect of its work in distributing and supporting the use of Read codes within the service.

The contract for this work, between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health and Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. is subject to annual audit by external auditors acting for the Department of Health to ensure value for money. It is three-year rolling contract, subject to continuing review.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the contractual relationship between Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. and the NHS centre for coding and classification. [12750]

Mr. Horam: There is no direct contractual relationship between Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd. and the NHS centre for coding and classification; however, there is a contract for the distribution and support of the use of Read codes between my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health and Computer Aided Medical Systems Ltd.

Cardiac Surgical Centres

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received from the Royal College of Surgeons about supra-regional paediatric cardiac surgical centres. [12493]

Mr. Horam: The Department has received no formal representation from the Royal College of Surgeons about supra-regional paediatric surgical services. The supra-regional services advisory group sought the advice of the Royal College of Surgeons when considering whether the service should remain designated. In the event, the group recommended that the service should no longer be designated from 31 March 1994.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms exist for supra-regional cardiac surgical centres to report or account to his Department. [12498]

Mr. Horam: The only supra-regional cardiac service currently designated is that for thoracic—cardiac and lung—transplantation. The supra-regional services advisory group is responsible for managing the SRS arrangements and for monitoring designated units performance against contract. Designated units provide the SRSAG with monthly activity reports and an annual report giving additional information about performance. The SRSAG makes recommendations on any changes to the supra-regional service arrangements through the national health service executive to me.

Neo-natal Cardiac Surgery

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department has given during the last five years to (a) the United Bristol Healthcare NHS trust and (b) other bodies about the performance of neo-natal arterial switch operations at Bristol royal infirmary. [12494]

Mr. Horam: The performance of specific clinical procedures is a matter of clinical judgment on which it would not generally be appropriate for my Department to advise. In the case of the United Bristol Healthcare NHS trust however, my Department's advice was sought on how to resolve a difference of clinical opinion about the advisability of proceeding with "switch" operations. My Department's advice was that procedures should not be performed about which concerns had been raised until appropriate expert clinical advice had been obtained.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations his Department has received during the last five years about the performance of neo-natal arterial switch operations at Bristol royal infirmary, from (a) the Royal College of Surgeons, (b) Dr. Steven Bolsin, (c) other medical professional bodies and (d) other bodies. [12495]

Mr. Horam: My Department has received a number of expressions of concern from Dr. Steven Bolsin and others about the difficulty of resolving professional differences of opinion about the performance of certain paediatric cardiac surgical procedures, including the arterial "switch".

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make an assessment of which health authorities in the South Western region refer patients needing neo-natal cardiac surgery to health care providers other than Bristol royal infirmary. [12496]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the appropriate health authorities for this information.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish comparative statistics showing the success rate of neo-natal arterial switch operations at those hospitals or institutions performing such operations within the NHS during the last five years. [12497]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. Outcomes of treatment are a matter for clinical audit.

Newcastle and North Tyneside Health Authority

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the projects in Newcastle and North Tyneside health authority for which business cases have been submitted to the NHS executive since 1 April 1995 indicating for each (a) the location, (b) the projected cost and (c) the date on which the business case was received. [12752]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library.

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes will be made to the cash limits and running cost limits of his Department in 1995–96. [13717]

Mr. Dorrell: The cash limit for class XII, vote 1—hospital, community health, family health services and related services, England—will be increased by £68,671,000, from £26,539,964,000 to £26,608,635,000. This allows for an increase of £210,159,000 in respect of the take-up of entitlements to carry forward of underspends from the 1994–95 financial year under the end year flexibility arrangements as announced by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 13 July 1995, Official Report, columns 776-82, partially offset by £140,082,000 following a reappraisal of drugs budget requirements. In addition, the following transfers will take place; £1,145,000 to class XV, vote 5—national health service, Wales—for services provided by the London post-graduate teaching hospital, £1,050,000, and for operating costs of the NHS Supplies Authority, £95,000; £8,000 to the Department of Health and Social Services, Northern Ireland in respect of services provided by the London post-graduate teaching hospital as mentioned and £253,000 to class XII, vote 2—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England—for day care and domiciliary services, £106,000, for research work undertaken on behalf of the Clinical Standards Advisory Group, £248,000, partially offset by £101,000 for work of the NHS Estates agency.

The cash limit for class XII, vote 2—Department of Health, administration, miscellaneous health services and personal social services, England—will be increased by £628,000, from £1,279,378,000 to £1,280,006,000. This increase allows for transfers of £253,000 from class XII, vote 1 as mentioned, £212,000 from class XIII, vote 4—Department of Social Security, administration and miscellaneous services—for the headquarters recreational association, £62,000 running costs; and for storage and distribution costs, £150,000 running cost; and £169,000, running costs, from class XVII, vote 1—HM Treasury—for superannuation costs. The overall increase is partially offset by transfers of £3,000 to class XIV, vote 14—national health service (superannuation etc.), Scotland; £2,000 to class XV, vote 5—national health service, Wales—and £1,000 to DHSS, Northern Ireland, for services provided by the NHS Estates agency.

The Department's gross running costs limit will be reduced by £4,436,000 from £239,350,000 to £234,914,000. This reflects a reallocation of £4,817,000 for capital works partially offset by the transfers mentioned.

All increases will either be offset by savings, increased receipts or transfers to or from other votes or charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Nutrition and Low Incomes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which Departments were represented in the work of (a) the nutrition task force and (b) the low income project team. [13152]

Mr. Horam: Department of Health, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Department for Education and Employment and the Office of Science and Technology are represented on the nutrition task force; Welsh Office, DHSS Northern Ireland, Scottish Home and Health Department and the Department of Social Security have observer status. Department of Health and Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are presented on the low income project team and the Department of Social Security has observer status.

Family Planning

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implementation of guidelines laid down by the Human Fertilisation and Embryo Authority; and if he will make a statement. [13011]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley) on 19 October 1995, Official Report, column 367. The Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority is required to maintain a code of practice about the proper conduct of licensed activities. The current code was laid before the House on 14 December 1995.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the viability of human embryos following freezing. [13009]

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many inspections have been carried out on licensed in vitro fertilisation centres in the last two years; and if all such centres have been inspected in that period. [13010]

Mr. Horam: Between 30 January 1994 and 30 January 1996 the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority made 256 inspections of licensed IVF centres. All such centres were inspected during that period.

Pharmaceutical Imports

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the value of prescribed products which are imported from overseas having been manufactured in the United Kingdom: and of what savings are achieved as a result of not purchasing direct from a United Kingdom manufacturer. [13078]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Bed and Staff Shortages (Liverpool)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he received the letter from the Liverpool Central and Southern community health council respecting bed and staff shortages and the problems of accident and emergency units at Liverpool hospitals; what response he has made; what action he plans to take; and if he will make a statement. [13082]

Mr. Horam: We received the letter on Monday 15 January and I expect to reply shortly. My reply will include a full explanation of the measures which the national health service has implemented to deal with the recent high levels of demand.

Intensive Care (Bradford)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will arrange for additional funding from his Department to be made available to provide more intensive care and high dependency beds in Bradford; if he will discuss with the regional health authority the funding of intensive care and high dependency beds in Bradford from the authority's unrenewable resources budget; and if he will make a statement. [12955]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter for Bradford health authority. The national health service executive's Northern and Yorkshire regional office has asked health authorities to give a high priority to intensive care provision.

Nurses

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the proportion of nursing staff that are (a) full time and (b) bank or temporary in each hospital trust in the north-west region. [10466]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 22 January 1996]: The information will be placed in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11335]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The Department of Health and its agencies have spent the following amounts from running costs on consultancy:

1991–92: £24,258,000
1993–94: £15,933,037
1994–95: £18,479,405
1995–96: £11,100,000 (to date)

Expenditure of some £17 million is estimated for the whole of the 1995–96 financial year. Estimates of expenditure for 1996–97 are not yet available.

Details of consultancy expenditure for 1979–80 and 1989–90 are not available, the Department of Health formed part of the Department of Health and Social Security until July 1988 and the Department's accounting records did not identify consultancy expenditure separately.

Consultancy expenditure by non-departmental public bodies is as follows:

1989–90: £125,532
1991–92: £271,237
1993–94: £661,256
1994–95: £664,984
1995–96: £333,532 (to date)

Expenditure of some £538,000 is estimated for the whole of the 1995–96 financial year and expenditure of some £510,000 is estimated for 1996–97.

Details of expenditure by non-departmental public bodies for 1979–80 are not held.

External consultants provide advice on improving efficiency and effectiveness in the Department. They have contributed to a large variety of projects, including the Department's "Competing for Quality" programme; but it is not possible to assess the savings which are a direct consequence of their activity.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11336]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Annual publicity spend information for the financial years 1989–90 to 1996–97 is shown in the table. ## Medicinal Drugs (Deaths)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of deaths and serious illnesses that resulted from the use of (a) antibiotics and (b) other medical drugs in each of the last five years. [12166]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Tables 1 to 3 show the number of people who have died as a result of using drugs, medicaments and biological substances in England and Wales in the last five years for which figures are available. Deaths are broken down into adverse effects in correct usage, accidental poisoning, suicides and undetermined deaths.

Table 4 shows the number of serious adverse reactions in patients taking antibiotics and other drugs reported by health professionals to the Committee on Safety of Medicines. A report does not necessarily mean the reaction was caused by the drug and the levels of reporting vary due to many factors, so comparisons of absolute numbers are not valid.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Set-aside Scheme

15. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new measures he intends to introduce to improve the set-aside scheme. [11280]

Mr. Baldry: We will continue to manage the scheme so as to provide maximum flexibility for farmers as well as environmental benefits.

Live Animal Transport

16. Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the live transportation of animals; and if he will make a statement. [11281]

Mrs. Browning: We continue to receive a wide range of representations. We have been pleased with the level of response to our consultation exercise on implementation of the new EU rules.

21. Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will announce the results of his consultations on his proposals for the implementation of EU directive 95/29 on the welfare of animals in transit; and if he will make a statement. [11286]

Mrs. Browning: Consultation has not yet finished. As our initial document set out, we shall undertake further consultation on draft proposals for legislation, which we are putting together taking account of the first round of comments we have received.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will issue a consultation document on the consolidation of legislation relating to the welfare of animals in transit. [11983]

Mrs. Browning: Our intention to consolidate existing rules on welfare during transport was set out in the consultation document which was announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister on 23 October 1995, on our initial ideas for implementation of directive 95/29/EC on the protection of animals during transport. As confirmed in the consultation document, we shall be consulting further on draft legislative texts, including consolidation of all extant legislation.

Fishing Industry

17. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals his Department has to improve market mechanisms in the fishing industry. [11282]

Mr. Baldry: The main responsibility for improving market mechanisms rests with the industry itself. The Government will play their part by continuing to do all that they can to create an environment in which the industry can prosper.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans next to meet his German counterpart to discuss CAP reform. [11283]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The German Minister of Food, Agriculture and Forestry, Mr. Jochen Borchert, has accepted my invitation to visit the UK to discuss the future of the CAP. I hope we will shortly be able to agree specific dates. We do, of course, meet regularly at meetings of the Council of Agriculture Ministers in Brussels or Luxembourg.

25. Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how often the common agricultural policy advisory group has met to discuss the future of the CAP; and what is its intended programme of meetings for the coming year. [11290]

Mr. Hogg: The report of the CAP review group, which records the conclusions of its 11 independent members, was published on 26 July 1995. The report, which was circulated widely to politicians, academics and non-Governmental public bodies both here and throughout Europe, was instrumental in promoting a genuine debate on the future of the CAP. Copies of the report were placed in the House Library.

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has made to curb fraud within the CAP across the EU. [11275]

Mr. Baldry: The Government have fully supported Commission initiatives to introduce tough automatic penalties against those proved to have benefited from fraud.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

19. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the procedures for ensuring that only calves born to mothers who are free of BSE are exported from the United Kingdom. [11284]

Mrs. Browning: Before signing an export health certificate for any consignment the certifying local veterinary inspector must obtain documentary evidence from owners, exporters or auctioneers that none of the calves is the progeny of a BSE-infected dam. In addition, the ear tag numbers of all calves intended for export are checked against the Ministry's computer records. I have no plans to review these procedures.

Confiscated Animals (Disposal)

20. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to change the law with regard to the disposal of confiscated animals; and if he will make a statement. [11285]

Mrs. Browning: Under the Protection of Animals Act 1911, as amended, the police have powers to remove animals, pending a prosecution for cruelty offences, or to require an animal to be slaughtered where a veterinary surgeon has certified that it would be cruel to keep it alive.

The Act also empowers courts, on conviction for cruelty offences, to order the disposal of an animal if they are satisfied that it would be cruel to keep it alive, or to deprive the person convicted and to make orders as to the disposal of the animals concerned.

We have no plans at present to introduce changes to this legislation.

Fisheries (Access)

22. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with fishermen's organisations about access to the Irish box. [11287]

Mr. Baldry: I have had frequent discussions with fishermen's organisations over the last six months on a wide range of issues including access to the Irish box and its enforcement.

28. Mr. Clapham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the fishing industry to discuss Spanish and Portuguese fishing access. [11293]

Mr. Baldry: I have had frequent meetings with representatives of the fishing industry over the last six months at which a wide range of issues have been discussed including Spanish and Portuguese access to western waters.

Milk

23. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money the United Kingdom received from the EU to help pay for milk in secondary schools and milk in school catering in 1994–95. [11288]

Mr. Baldry: EU expenditure on these discretionary elements of the school milk scheme in the UK in 1994–95 totalled £6.1 million.

24. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the percentage of milk sold in each of the last three years (a) in supermarkets and (b) by doorstep delivery. [11289]

Mr. Baldry: The percentage of milk sold in supermarkets and at the doorstep for household consumption in England and Wales is as follows:

| | Doorstep delivery | Supermarkets | Other shops |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1993 | 56.9 | 32.3 | 10.8 |
| 1994 | 51.1 | 38.4 | 10.5 |
| 1995 | 45.2 | 43.3 | 11.5 |

Surplus Male Calves

26. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage the use of separated sperm to reduce the number of surplus male calves; and if he will make a statement. [11291]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry is well aware of the potential of this technique. However, it is not yet ready for commercial application.

Countryside Conservation

27. Mr. Spring: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that the Government are working in partnership with farmers to conserve the countryside. [11292]

Mr. Boswell: The White Paper "Rural England—A Nation Committed to a Living Countryside" sets out the objectives which guide the Government's approach to the countryside. It contains a number of initiatives aimed at conserving the countryside. "Rural England" is not intended to be a blueprint imposed by Government but is a framework for working in partnership with others who care about rural issues.

Since publication of the White Paper, I have announced that £5 million will be available for new applications under countryside stewardship in 1997 and a further £5 million for applications in 1998.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the extent of compliance with paragraph 3 of part IV of schedule 3 to the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994; and if he will make a statement; [13085]

(2) what plans he has to monitor the effect of paragraph 3 of part IV of schedule 3 to the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994 on the incidence of tail docking of piglets; and if he will make a statement. [13013]

Mrs. Browning: Compliance with all aspects of the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994 is monitored by the state veterinary service. Welfare inspections of pig farms include, where appropriate, an assessment of compliance with paragraph 3 of part IV of schedule 3 to those regulations which relates specifically to the tail docking and tooth clipping of piglets.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11352]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 25 January 1996]: Expenditure on paid publicity by the Department in the financial year 1979–80 and in each of the subsequent years, broken down into advertising and press and public relations, is as follows:

| | Advertising £ | Paid publicity[1] £ | Total £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1989–90 | 116,000 | 2,373,000 | 2,489,000 |
| 1990–91 | 126,719 | 2,305,281 | 2,432,000 |
| 1991–92 | 402,903 | 3,691,097 | 4,094,000 |

| 1994–95 | 827,115 | 3,972,885 | 4,800,000 |
| 1995–96[2] | 606,583 | 3,819,417 | 4,426,000 |
| 1996–97[2] | 455,000 | 3,712,000 | 4,167,000 |

[1] These figures represent other expenditure associated with paid publicity campaigns, they do not include staff costs.
[2] Forecast.

Paid publicity expenditure prior to 1984–85 was not kept in this form and figures would be available only at disproportionate cost.

Figures for advertising, include poster campaigns and port boards, and are different from previous answers as these forms of advertising had previously been included under the heading of "other publicity and promotional activities".

Expenditure on publicity by agencies is a matter for their chief executives. I have asked them to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question concerning expenditure on publicity. [11352 ]

The Directorate was launched as an executive agency on 1 April 1993. Figures prior to this date are not available. PSD incurred expenditure totalling £14,990 on publicity in 1993/94 in connection with the launch of the agency which can be classified as 'public relations'. No expenditure on publicity was incurred in 1994/95 and no expenditure is anticipated in 1995/96 or 1996/97.

In addition, PSD spent £481 on newspaper advertising in 1993/94 and £4,440 in 1994/95. There has been no expenditure in 1995/96 to date but the agency expects to spend £2,000 before the end of the year and we estimate expenditure of £5,000 in 1996/97. All of this expenditure is directly attributable to recruitment advertising.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on publicity by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, for 1979/80 and each year since 1989/90, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

The Directorate was established as a Next Steps Agency on 2 April 1990 and did not maintain its own accounts until 1991/92. Details of expenditure on publicity since that date are as follows:

| | Advertising £ | Press and public relations £ | Total £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1991–92 | 34,376 | 7,730 | 42,106 |
| 1992–93 | 22,993 | 21,339 | 44,332 |
| 1993–94 | 19,593 | 60,513 | 80,106 |
| 1994–95 | 10,883 | 41,246 | 52,129 |
| 1995–96 to date | 4,855 | 43,786 | 48,641 |
| 1995–96 Forecast | 11,000 | 58,543 | 69,543 |
| 1996–97 Forecast | 11,300 | 60,300 | 71,600 |

Advertising covers the announcement of the grant and expiry of Marketing Authorisations in the official gazettes and, up to 1993/94, direct recruitment advertising.

Press and public relations includes the VMD's Annual Report and Accounts, publicity relating to the safe use of organophosphorus sheep dips, and expenditure on the VMD's quarterly newsletter MAVIS. This newsletter is circulated to the veterinary profession, the veterinary medicinal products industry, representative bodies and opinion formers.

Letter from Professor P. I. Stanley to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

EXPENDITURE ON PUBLICITY

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for details of expenditure on publicity by his Department and its Agencies during certain specified years. The Minister has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.(11352)

CSL was first launched as an Agency in April 1992 and therefore expenditure for earlier years is included in the Departmental totals. Further, CSL was significantly enlarged in April 1994 following its merger with the MAFF Food Science Laboratories and this is reflected in increased expenditure from 1994–95.

Expenditure in £'000s for each of the years specified is:

| | 1993–94 | 1994–95 | 1995–96 | 1996–97 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Advertising | 0.08 | 11.20 | 6.03 | 4.50 |
| Press + P.R. | 16.30 | 29.93 | 20.42 | 17.00 |
| Total Publicity | 16.38 | 41.13 | 26.45 | 21.50 |

Advertising includes all forms of business advertising and excludes costs of recruitment advertising in newspapers and journals. Press + P.R. includes marketing expenses such as promotions and exhibitions at agricultural shows.

The final out-turn 1995/96 and the 1996/97 figures are estimated.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary question in which you asked what assessment has been made of the total expenditure on publicity for each of the years i) 1979–80 ii) 1989–90 iii) 1991–92 iv) 1993/94 v) 1994/95 vi) 1995/96 todate and what estimate has been made of such 1996/97; and if the figures could be broken down to indicate expenditure on a) advertising and b) press and public relations.[11352]

ADAS was formed as an Executive Agency of MAFF and the Welsh Office in 1992. Any detail relating to expenditure prior to that date would be available from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

The assessment of expenditure on publicity is as follows:

| | Advertising £ | Press public relations £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1993–94 | 49,000 | 58,017 |
| 1994–95 | 102,000 | 79,540 |
| 1995–96[1] | 27,747 | [2]24,389 |

[1] to January 1996
[2] to December 1995

There are no forecasts available for 1995/96 and 1996/97.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on expenditure on publicity in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service.

VLA expenditure on publicity, which is confined to job advertisements only, is as follows:

1993/94: £5,000

1994/95: £5,000

1995/96: £5,000

1996/97: £6,000 (estimated)

Expenditure prior to 1993/94 is included in MAFF figures.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the annual telephone costs to (a) his Department, (b) his Department's agencies and (c) his Department's non-departmental public bodies staff for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in all areas of (a) to (c). [11354]

Mr. Hogg [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The annual telephone costs, including VAT, for the Ministry, but excluding all agencies, was as follows:

1979–80: This information is no longer available;

1989–90: £4.924 million

1991–92: £6.646 million

1993–94: £3.910 million

1994–95: £3.636 million

1995–96: £1.977 million—this figure includes expenditure up to 24 January 1996.

1996–97: This estimate is not as yet available.

The Ministry has an internal directory which includes staff within all our major offices.

Letter from Professor P. I. Stanley to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

TELEPHONE COSTS AND DIRECTORIES

You asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food about annual telephone costs of his Department and its Agencies during certain specified years and whether internal telephone directories are available to staff. The Minister has asked me to reply to you in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. (11354)

CSL was first launched as an Agency in April 1992 and therefore expenditure for earlier years is included in the Departmental totals. Further, CSL was significantly enlarged in April 1994 following its merger with the MAFF Food Science Laboratories and this is reflected in increased expenditure from 1994/95.

Telephones costs in £'000s for each of the years specified is:

1993/94: 157.3

1994/95: 255.9

1995/96: 252.2

1996/97: 175.2

The final out-turn for 1995/96 and the 1996/97 figures are estimated.

The Government Telephone Network (GTN) connects over 1,000 government offices nationwide. As a user of the GTN, a GTN Dialling Codes booklet is available to all CSL staff. It enables staff to identify the operator in any government building for enquiry services. Further, MAFF Directories and internal CSL Directories are available to all staff in the Agency.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question seeking information on the estimated expenditure on annual telephone costs in the agency. (11354)

PSD relocated to its new offices in York during October 1994. Prior to this date, the annual telephone costs for the agency were included in the overall budget of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The Minister will therefore respond to you separately covering this period. Full year estimates for the agency are available for the following periods:

1995/96: £37,000

1996/97: £38,000

Staff within the agency are both included in, and have access to, MAFF's telephone directory. In addition, PSD maintains its own internal telephone directory and all staff have a copy.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

PQ2: 18 January 1996 (11354)

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about annual telephone costs incurred by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, for 1979/80 and each year since 1989/90, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.

The Directorate was established as a Next Steps Agency on 2 April 1990 and did not maintain its own accounts until 1991/92. Details of annual telephone costs since that date are as follows:

1991/92: £11,200

1992/93: £9,477

1993/94: £11,553

1994/95: £8,199

1995/96: £10,140 (forecast)

1996/97: £11,000 (forecast)

Internal telephone directories are available to all staff.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on annual telephone costs in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).(11354)

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service.

Annual telephone costs, inclusive of VAT, from 1993/94 are as follows:-

1993/94: £100,200

1994/95: £94,800

1995/96: £100,200

1996/97: ££120,000 (estimated)

Telephone costs prior to 1993/94 are included in MAFF figures.

Internal telephone directories are available to all staff.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary question in which you asked what estimate has been made of the annual telephone costs for each of the years (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97 and if internal telephone directories are available to staff in the Agency. (11354)

ADAS was formed as an Executive Agency of MAFF and the Welsh Office in 1992. Any detail relating to expenditure prior to that date would be available from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

The telephone costs for ADAS are as follows:

1993–94: £1,217,675

1994–95: £1,177,311

1995–96: £1,268,243 (forecast)

1996–97: £1,250,000 (forecast)

Internal telephone directories are available to all staff in ADAS.

Mr. Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is his estimate of expenditure on all forms of hospitality and entertainment by (a) his Ministry, (b) his Ministry's agencies and (c) non-ministerial public bodies, for (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1989–90, (iii) 1991–92, (iv) 1993–94, (v) 1994–95, (vi) 1995–96 and (vii) 1996–97; [11413]

(2) what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Ministry, his Ministry's agencies and non-ministerial public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11416]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The information requested in respect of 1979–80 is no longer available.

The table details expenditure in respect of (a) all forms of hospitality and entertainment and (b) all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, excluding its agencies, for the years 1989–90, 1991–92, 1993–94, and 1994–95, together with expenditure for the first nine months of 1995–96.

| Year | (a) £ | (b) £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1989–90 | 45,817.93 | 1,194,517.48 |
| 1991–92 | 64,851.87 | 1,954,411.83 |
| 1993–94 | 79,758.19 | 2,103,838.99 |
| 1994–95 | 64,092.62 | 1,872,568.44 |
| 1995–96 | 42,734.07 | 1,202,142.30 |

Detailed information relating to 1996–97 is not yet available, but it is expected that budgets will be similar to those for the current year.

The agency chief executives have been asked to provide similar information for each agency.

Information on the expenditure of self-accounting non-departmental public bodies is given in their annual accounts. Further analysis could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Dr. J. M. Rutter to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about expenditure on hospitality and entertainment by the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, for (i) 1979/80, (ii) 1989/90, (iii) 1991/92, (iv) 1993/94, (v) 1994/95, (vi) 1995/96 and (vii) 1996/97, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. (11413)

The Directorate was established as a Next Steps Agency on 2 April 1990 and did not maintain its own accounts until 1991/92. Since that date, expenditure on hospitality and entertainment, which principally covers working buffet lunches for industry liaison meeting and advisory groups, is as follows:

1991/92: £1,239

1993/94: £1,035

1994/95: £1,817

1995/96: £1,000 (forecast)

1996/97: £1,000 (forecast)

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS), your questions regarding costs of empty/under-utilised properties, hospitality and entertainment, overseas expenses, publicity, telephones and external consultants have been passed to me for response with respect to this Executive Agency.(11413)

As I am sure you are aware, the MHS was established on 1 April 1995 and therefore has incurred no such costs for all but one of these areas prior to this date.

The Meat Hygiene Service has incurred no costs to date resulting from empty or under-utilised properties and does not expect to do so in 1996/97.

With regard to hospitality and entertainment, £10,580 was spent in 1994/95, prior to the Agency's launch. A total of £7,000 is expected to be spent in 1995/96 and £9,000 in '96/97.'

There has been no overseas travel by MHS staff to date and none is anticipated in 1996/97.

In the 1995/96 financial year, the MHS incurred no costs for publicity, although leaflets about the Agency, costing £2,570, were produced and paid for by MAFF prior to launch. The MHS expects to spend no more than £1,000 on publicity in 1996–97.

Current forecasts of telephone costs for the 1995/96 financial year are £112,000 and the estimate for 1996/97 is £123,000. Both these figures include mobile phone costs. The Government Telephone Network (GTN) connects over 1000 government offices nationwide. As a user of this system, a GTN dialling codes booklet is available to all MHS office staff. It enables staff to identify the operator in any other government building connected to GTN, for enquiry services.

The MHS has spent £375,000 on external consultancy so far in 1995/96 and estimates that such costs will total £496,000 for the current financial year. Early projections for 1996/97 anticipate expenditure of no more than £200,000. The savings gained from using consultants are difficult to estimate. Many of these services provided have been on financial and computer systems where benefits will be achieved in long term savings which cannot accurately be quantified.

In the first year of operation it has been necessary to use consultants to deal with start-up issues; providing resources to cope with short-term workload peaks whilst avoiding the need to incur long-term costs of employing permanent staff. Consultants have also provided necessary expertise in certain specialised areas either not contained within the MHS, to an insufficient degree, or that has only been required for limited periods. As you can see from the estimates for the future, the use of consultants is expected to reduce considerably.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question on expenditure on hospitality and entertainment in the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA).

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service.

Figures for expenditure on hospitality are as follows:

1993/94: £16,720

1994/95: £12,076

1995/96: £16,400 (estimated)

Figures prior to 1993/94 are included in MAFF figures. We expect expenditure in 1996/97 to be of the same order as that of 1995/96.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question concerning expenditure on hospitality and entertainment. [11413]

Expenditure on hospitality in 1995/96 includes the costs of the Visiting Group to CSL's Agriculture and Environment Directorate. The purpose of the Visiting Group was to assess the quality and management of the science delivered by the Directorate.

The final out-turn for 1995/96 and the 1996/97 figures are estimated.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Malcolm Bruce, dated 1 February 1996:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims for incapacity benefit have been made since April in each of the benefit district offices that covers Doncaster and Mexborough; what percentages of these have been for (a) males and (b) females; and what percentages were unsuccessful; [8453]

(2) how many claims there have been for the new incapacity benefit in each of the benefit district offices that cover Doncaster and Mexborough; and how many of these were claimants with mental health problems. [8454]

Mr. Burt: The administration of incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about how many claims for incapacity benefit (IB) have been made since April in each of the benefit district offices that covers Doncaster and Mexborough; what percentage of these have been for (a) males and (b) females; and what percentage were unsuccessful; and how many of these were claimants with mental health problems.

The number of IB claims since April 1995 to November 1995 for Doncaster District is 5171. This District comprises of Doncaster East and Doncaster West Offices. Figures for the Mexborough Branch office, which forms part of the Rother and Dearne District are available for the same period. The number of IB claims is 1607.

The percentage of claims for male and female and those that were unsuccessful could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Details about a persons incapacity, for example mental health problems, could also only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average cost of each incapacity benefit appeal (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in the Greater Manchester area. [12236]

Mr. Burt: The average cost of an incapacity benefit appeal is estimated to be approximately £340. It is not possible to provide estimates of the average cost in individual areas.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 12 December, Official Report, column 625, what considerations led the chief executive of the Child Support Agency to conclude that including fully assessed cases only in respect of child maintenance assessments gives a more accurate picture. [10189]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 31 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

My letter to you of 12 December 1995 updated information I had provided on 18 May 1995.

The table providing information on the benefit status of parents with care and absent parents was amended to provide information at the full maintenance assessment stage. Previously the benefit status was determined at the point when maintenance application and enquiry forms were returned. It is more accurate to record benefit status at the end of the assessment process as there may be considerations that affect the benefit status between the time of receipt of the relevant maintenance form and completion of a full maintenance assessment.

All the other tables shown in the answer were updated using the same definitions as previously used (which was fully assessed cases for all tables, apart from those relating to interim maintenance assessments).

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to transfer Child Support Agency operations to local offices; and how this transfer will affect the operations of the agency's main centres. [11183]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 31 January 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the transfer of work from the Child Support Agency's six centres to local Field offices.

As the Agency's Business Plan for 1995/96 explains, from April 1995 nearly all our field staff, who are based in local Social Security offices, have had better access to the Child Support Computer System (CSCS). They are able to register cases on the system and to deal with client enquiries more effectively. As much of our paper work is automated this has reduced clerical administration and the amount of forms and work sent between the centres and field offices.

Plans are in hand for our staff in the field to play an even larger role during 1996/97 as they will also complete some maintenance assessments locally using CSCS. A pilot exercise will take place in six field offices within Dudley CSAC Business Unit involving the take-on of new applications for child support maintenance. Training for staff is due to be delivered next month, with the pilot exercise running from March to May. The exercise will be subject to a full and robust evaluation prior to any decision being made on the timing for national rollout. This work will be carefully integrated with the work on implementing the Departures system and is likely to continue over a two year period.

The movement of the bulk of maintenance assessment work to the field will allow the centres to concentrate on maintaining an ever increasing caseload and the efficient and effective collection of child maintenance.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many two-parent families are in receipt of (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) disability working allowance; and for each benefit what is the number of two-parent families estimated to included a qualifying child for the purposes of the Child Support Act 1991; [12800]

(2) how many lone parent families are in receipt of (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) disability working allowance; and for each benefit what is the number of lone parent families estimated to include a qualifying child for the purposes of the Child Support Act 1991. [12801]

Mr. Mitchell: The latest available information as at May 1994 is as follows:

| | Two-parent families | Lone parent families |
|---|---|---|
| Income support | 537,000 | 1,089,000 |
| Family credit | 315,000 | 236,000 |
| Disability working allowance | 1,000 | — |

There is no information available on the number of two-parent families that include a qualifying child for the purposes of the Child Support Act 1991.

We estimate that 1,068,000 lone parents receiving income support and nearly all of the lone parents in receipt of family credit have a qualifying child for the purposes of the Child Support Act 1991.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many of the cases in which a child support officer refused a parent with care exemption on the grounds of harm or undue distress he or she decided not to issue a reduced benefit direction because there was a risk to the welfare of the child. [12781]

Mr. Mitchell: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when it is planned to republish the CSA's charter; and what plans there are to extend the commitments given to clients. [12790]

Mr. Mitchell: The Child Support Agency will publish its new charter in the next financial year. The charter will contain more information than the first version, cover a wider range of the agency's business, and concentrate on the agency's principle functions.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many child support appeal tribunals hearings have been held to date; what proportion of appeals have been successful; how often both the person with care and the absent parent attend; and how often the parties are represented; [12794]

(2) what proportion of child support appeals has been lodged with the independent tribunal service within the required 28 days; and, of those lodged after this time limit, what proportion are accepted. [12793]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

| | 1994 | 1995 |
|---|---|---|
| Appeals lodged within 28 days | — | 71 per cent. |
| Appeals lodged over 28 days admitted | — | 89 per cent. |
| Hearings held | 6,129 | 6,859 |
| Success rates | — | 64 per cent. |
| Attendance by absent parent and person with care | — | 21 per cent. |
| Attendance by representative | — | 16 per cent. |

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many (a) lone parent families and (b) two-parent families are denied access to the CSA by section 4(10)(a) of the Child Support Act 1991. [12797]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on research his Department (a) is conducting, and (b) has commissioned, on the subject of the Child Support Agency and child maintenance. [12779]

Mr. Mitchell: This Department does not generally carry out its own research. However, we have commissioned the following research from outside contractors, which is either in progress or under negotiation: a review of the operation of the requirement to co-operate provision; measuring self-employed income for the purposes of the Child Support Agency; a number of surveys on how absent parents view the system and the impact on their lives; and an extension of work on lone parents, benefits and maintenance by the Policy Studies Institute.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many potential section 4 applicants come to private arrangements for child maintenance and do not seek the CSA's services. [12798]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to extend the Child Support Agency's powers to obtain information from the Inland Revenue. [12785]

Mr. Mitchell: The Child Support Agency already has powers which allow it to obtain information from the Inland Revenue. These powers relate solely to the tracing of both the current address, or the current employer, of the absent parent. We have no current plans to extend these powers further.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate how many departure applications are likely to be made to the CSA over each of the next three financial years and how many departure directions issued; what further grounds for departure will be added to those included in the Child Support Act 1991; and how long it is estimated that it will take for a departure officer to make a decision on a departure application. [12789]

Mr. Mitchell: There is insufficient data available at present to enable accurate estimates to be made of the likely number of departure applications or the proportion that are likely to be successful. However, estimates of the financial effect have been based on the broad assumption that no more than 10 per cent. of the Child Support Agency's caseload will qualify for a departure direction. One of the main reasons for running the pilot exercise from April this year is to provide the detailed information necessary to make accurate estimates.

Regulations for the conduct of the pilot exercise will be laid before Parliament in March. There are no plans for these regulations to add further grounds for a departure direction beyond those exemplified in the Act. However, the ground which deals with cases of inconsistent life style has been enhanced. It will now, for example, cover instances where parents divert income over which they have control to a third party in order to avoid their true liability.

The pilot exercise will also enable the Child Support Agency to produce estimates of the time it will take to process applications.

Mr. Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will be making an announcement about the changes to compensation available to clients of the Child Support Agency who have suffered loss and distress; how many applications have been made to the Child Support Agency for compensation to date and how many have been successful; and what is the total that has been paid out in compensation. [12780]

Mr. Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Broxbourne (Mrs. Roe) on 7 November 1995, Official Report, columns 830–31.

There have been 1,182 applications for compensation made to the agency from launch in April 1993 to the 30 November 1995; the number of successful claims is 112; the total that has been paid out in compensation is £56,752.50.

Pensions (Automated Credit Transfer)

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners opted to receive their state pension by automated credit transfer in 1995. [11044]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Sir Andrew Bowden, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what proportion of pensioners opted to receive their state pension by automated credit transfer (ACT) in 1995.

As of 9 October 1995, the latest date for which figures are available, a total of £3,040,729 pensioners were having their Retirement Pension paid by ACT. This represents 30.3 per cent of the total caseload.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Vibration White Finger

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claimed disablement benefit because of vibration white finger in the period 1990 to 1995; and how many of those claims were approved between 1990 and 1995. [11594]

Mr. Burt: Information is not readily available in the formate requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Such information as is available is in the table.

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11924]

Mr. Burt: The Department of Social Security and its agencies, the Benefits Agency, the Contributions Agency, Child Support Agency, War Pensions Agency and the Information Technology Services Agency, adopted the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol in May 1995, to demonstrate their commitment to disabled staff. In light of this, all disabled staff who apply to be treated under the symbol, and who satisfy the minimum criteria for a job, will be offered an interview. This applies to direct recruitment, advertised internal vacancies, promotion boards, selection for management development programmes and the selection of in-service candidates for the fast-stream selection board.

The Resettlement Agency is closing in April 1996 and has therefore not adopted the symbol.

Benefit Payment Card

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to make sure that the new benefits payment card is user-friendly to older people and people with disabilities. [11751]

Mr. Heald: We have had extensive consultations with a wide range of customer representative organisations, including those with a special interest in the needs of the elderly and of people with disabilities. They have provided valuable input into the design requirements of the benefit payment card.

The final card design has not yet been chosen, being subject to the evaluation of service providers' proposals, but we are looking to ensure that the new system will be simple and straightforward for all our customers to use, as well as secure.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to ensure that information currently contained in the pension book will be preserved and improved with the proposed new benefit payment card system with particular reference to (a) a permanent record of pension payments received, (b) details of how the pension is made up, (c) clear information on the amount due and the date available, (d) information on change of circumstances and (e) details of claiming income support. [11750]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 31 January 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what plans he has to ensure that information currently contained in the pension book will be preserved and improved with the proposed new benefit payment card system with particular reference to (a) a permanent record of pension payments received, (b) details of how the pension is made up, (c) clear information on the amount due and the date available, (d) information on change of circumstances and (e) details of claiming Income Support (IS).

The Benefits Agency is committed to continuing to provide full information and advice about benefits to all our customers.

Each time a customer receives a payment of benefit at a post office a receipt will be issued. This receipt will include details of the type(s) of benefit paid, the amount(s) payable, the due date and the date of payment and the date of the last payment(s) made. Customers will be encouraged to retain these receipts as a record of the pension they have received, although full statements of the account will be available on request from the DSS office responsible for authorising the payment.

New pensioners will continue to receive a notice of entitlement before their Retirement Pension is due, as they do now, which will include details of how their benefit is made up. Existing pensioners will receive a notification before their first card is issued. When a customer notifies a change in circumstances which affects the amount of benefit payable, a written notification will be issued. These arrangements reflect those which are already in place for pensioners who have chosen to be paid by Automated Credit Transfer.

It is intended that details of the date the next pension payment is due will be included on the last benefit receipt issued.

There will be information about the need to report changes of circumstances printed on the reverse of the card.

Final decisions have not yet been made about how information on other benefits such as IS will be made available to individual customers. Current communication facilities will continue to be used for example, leaflets, advertisements etc. Firmer proposals will be available once the final selection of the card payment system supplier is made.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefits Agency Offices

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average daily attendance at the Benefits Agency offices at (a) Highgate and (b) Finsbury Park for (i) 1993, (ii) 1994, (iii) 1995 and (iv) the current year to date; what were the staffing levels for (i) to (iv); and if he will make a statement. [12270]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 31 January 1996:

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes there have been in the cash limits or running costs limits of his Department. [13179]

Mr. Roger Evans: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate the cash limit for class XIII, vote 3—housing benefit administration and council tax benefit administration, payments into the social fund in respect of discretionary expenditure and other grants—will be increased by £1,550,000 from £417,705,000 to £419,255,000. The cash limit for class XIII, vote 4—administration and miscellaneous services—will be increased by £19,355,000 from £2,676,396,000 to £2,695,751,000.

The revision for vote 3 takes account of an increase in the grant in aid to Independent Living, £1,550,000, to enable it to continue to help severely disabled persons to live independently, partly offset by a reduction of £1,125,000 on Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) vote 5. The balance of £425,000 will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Vote 4 revisions take account of increased requirements resulting from policy changes and work load increases—£93,378,000 of which £62,967,000 is running costs a reduction of £212,000 (running costs) offset by a corresponding increase in Department of Health administration and miscellaneous health services and personal social services England, class XII, vote 2, a reduction of £10,000 (running costs) offset by a corresponding increase on Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) vote 3, an increase of £50,000 (running costs) offset by a corresponding reduction on schools, research and miscellaneous services class X, vote 1 and an increase of £1,000,000 (running costs) offset by a corresponding reduction on Department of Employment: Employment Service, class v, vote 2, an increase of £105,000 in running cost cover for services provided to the Department of Health and Social Services (Northern Ireland) on repayment and an increase of £74,851,000 in appropriations in aid.

Further running costs changes arise from a reduction of £6,239,000 as a result of a re-allocation to capital and other current expenditure and an increase of £5,633,000 in value added tax refunds.

As a result of these changes the running costs limit of the Department of Social Security will be increased by £52,028,000 from £3,035,513,000 to £3,087,541,000.

The additional vote 4 requirements will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Pensions (Uprating)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to bring the uprating of pensions forward to 1 April in each year. [13077]

Mr. Heald: None.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what changes have been made to the cash limits for class IX, votes 1, 2 and 3. [13764]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit for class IX, vote 1 will be reduced by £1,850,000 from £783,014,000 to £781,164,000, and the running cost limit reduced by £150,000 from £439,329,000 to £439,179,000. This reduction has been made to offset extra provision required by the Northern Ireland Court Service for legal aid and by the Public Record Office for works to remove asbestos.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 2 will be reduced by £2,300,000 from £28,794,000 to £26,494,000 partly to offset an increase of £4,000,000 in non-cash limited expenditure.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 3 will be increased by £2,310,000 from £40,396,000 to £42,706,000 and the running cost limit increased by £310,000 from £26,945,000 to £27,225,000. Some £2,000,000 of the cash limit increase is covered by take up under the capital end year flexibility scheme and £160,000 of the running cost limit is similarly covered by the running cost end year flexibility scheme. The remaining £150,000 increase is offset by a reduction in LCD's running cost limit—class IX, vote 1.

The increases will be offset by savings or charged to the reserve and will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Land Transfers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 January, column 674, if he will seek reasons from the Law Commission and Land Registry, beyond those which appear in the Law Commission's report, No. 235, as to why they did not feel able to recommend the extension of section 123 of the Land Registration Act 1925 to conveyances which do not accompany a transfer of the beneficial interest in the land. [12333]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: As referred to in my answer of 18 January, the recommendations made were informed by the responses to an earlier consultation document issued by the Land Registry. The consultation document was widely circulated and drew responses from a broad range of bodies and individuals, including local authorities, Government landowners, utilities, financial institutions, those requiring information about land, professionals advising those dealing with land and property, academic institutions and consumer bodies. The responses showed a consensus in favour of extending the application of section 123 of the Land Registration Act to other dispositions than those to which it currently applies.

However, objections were raised to its possible extension to conveyances not accompanying a transfer of the beneficial interest by a significant number of respondents, particularly having regard to the cost likely to be incurred in preparing such applications for registration. It was not considered appropriate to recommend, as a priority, the adoption of proposals which lack sufficient support from those who would be affected by them. Instead, the Government have accepted the recommendation that the issue is one which it would be appropriate to consider further after a period of five years.

Pensions (Divorce)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he plans to introduce regulations on shared pensions on divorce under the Pensions Act 1995; what factors have prevented their introduction to date; and if he will make a statement. [12438]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government plan to introduce regulations under sections 166 and 167 of the Pensions Act 1995, concerning the courts' treatment of pensions on divorce, on 1 July 1996. The Government are concerned to ensure full consideration of the proposed regulations, which will bring these sections into force, and to allow consultees sufficient time to comment on the proposals.

SCOTLAND

Legal Aid

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce a Green Paper on legal aid in Scotland. [12090]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to introduce a Green Paper on legal aid in Scotland.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has (a) to implement part V of the Legal Aid (Scotland) Act 1986 and (b) to introduce non-solicitor legal aid franchising in Scotland. [12080]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend currently has no plans to implement part V of the Legal Aid (Scotland) Act 1986 or to introduce non-solicitor legal aid franchising in Scotland.

Conveyancing

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the estimated expenditure on the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board for 1996–97 relates to (a) Government guarantees in respect of the compensation fund to be established by the board and (b) any provision to secure that successful claims made against a conveyancer in connection with a provision of conveyancing services are satisfied. [12081]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None of the estimated expenditure relates to Government guarantees. The Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board will require to make payments to cover premiums and fees for the management of the compensation fund and the indemnity policy, with fees to the board's brokers. The brokers are still negotiating with the insurance industry and the level of these payments is not yet clear.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated annual subscription of practitioners under the Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board to the compensation fund established by the board; and what is the estimated annual premium to be paid by (a) an independent qualified conveyancer, (b) a qualified conveyancer and (c) an executry practitioner in respect of indemnity insurance. [12082]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Conveyancing and Executry Services Board's brokers have entered into negotiations with the insurance industry over the compensation fund and indemnity policy. It is not yet clear, however, what the cost of the subscription and annual premium will be to individual practitioners.

Child Care

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to establish a presumption in the law on registration of day care and other provision for young children that registration should be granted unless there is some good reason not to. [12434]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A local authority may refuse to register providers of day care for children under eight except only on the specific grounds set out in section 71 of the Children Act 1989.

PRIME MINISTER

Positive about Disabled People Symbol

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list for his Department and each of the agencies for which he is responsible if it uses the Employment Service's positive about disabled people symbol for (a) external recruitment and (b) internal recruitment and promotion. [11921]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, on 1 February.

Honours (Public Nominations)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many persons have been (a) created knight or dame and (b) elevated to the peerage following nomination by members of the public since April 1992. [12385]

The Prime Minister: It is not normal practice to reveal the sources of nomination for particular levels of award. Overall, nearly a third of awards have been supported by members of the public. The bulk of the remainder are recommended from a variety of official sources, for example health and education authorities.

Jewellery

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what items of jewellery given to previous Prime Ministers are kept on the official inventory at 10 Downing street. [13385]

The Prime Minister: Gifts received by Ministers in their official capacity are dealt with in accordance with the procedures set out in "Questions of Procedures for Ministers". The details are not made public.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the expenditure of his Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all external consultants including management consultants for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will estimate the savings accruing to his Department from the use of consultants in each of these years. [11363]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 25 January 1996]: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, on 1 February Official Report, column 911.

Departmental Property

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Prime Minister what is his estimate of the annual cost to his Department and his Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies of their empty and under-utilised properties for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11455]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 30 January 1996]: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service, on 1 February Official Report, column 912.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Efficiency Unit

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what studies the efficiency unit has undertaken since 1994; and if he will make a statement on its findings. [12603]

Mr. Willetts: Since 1994, the efficiency unit has undertaken two multi-departmental efficiency scrutinies: resource management systems and construction procurement by Government, and participated in the following single Department scrutinies:

Department of Employment: Training Enterprise Councils;

Department for Education: Burdens of Bureaucracy on Schools;

Home Office: Burdens of Bureaucracy in the Context of the Criminal Justice System;

Department of Health: Burdens of Bureaucracy in General Practice;

Department of Transport: Traffic Area Offices;

Inland Revenue: Scrutiny on Charging;

Overseas Development Administration: Delegated Authority for Bilateral Financial Commitments;

Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food: Burdens of Bureaucracy on Farmers (in progress);

Department of Health: Burdens of Bureaucracy on Hospital Trusts and Health Authorities (in progress).

The unit is currently carrying out a review of the competing for quality initiative and a review of objective setting and monitoring in executive non-departmental public bodies. It is normal practice for scrutiny reports to be published.

Individual members of the efficiency unit have also worked with officials from other Departments to contribute to a range of individual studies and reviews including fundamental expenditure reviews and senior management reviews.

The efficiency unit's scrutiny programme continues to deliver value-for-money solutions across a wide range of issues. Since 1979, the scrutiny technique has proved its worth as a catalyst for improvement, resulting in better management, less bureaucracy and real cost savings. As an example, the first tranche of the burdens of bureaucracy scrutinies, whose reports were published in 1995, looked at paperwork imposed on the police and the courts, GPs and teachers. Recommendations from the reports will, on implementation, result in annual cost savings for the police of £30 million; 15 million fewer forms will need to be completed by busy GPs; and, teachers will receive 10 million fewer pieces of paper.

ENVIRONMENT

Sustainable Development

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment how many countries had submitted national reports to the United Nations Commission on Sustainable Development for 1996 by 23 January 1996; and to whom Her Majesty's Government have made available the United Kingdom's report in addition to the UN commission. [13969]

Mr. Gummer: I understand that 13 countries, including the United Kingdom, had submitted reports to the UN Commission by 23 January 1996. Copies of the UK's report have been placed in the Library, and are being sent to all member countries of the Commission on Sustainable Development, and to other interested parties. Further copies are available from the Department of the Environment.

Vacant Local Authority Dwellings

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for vacant local authority dwellings in England. [13968]

Mr. Clappison: At 1 April 1995, the total number of empty council homes in England stood at some 71,800—2 per cent. of council stock. This represents a slight increase on the 1994 figure—70,300—but follows nine successive years in which the number fell. The latest figure is nearly 40 per cent. lower than the total for 1985—116,500.

Within the overall total, "management vacants"—dwellings ready for occupation immediately or after minor repairs—accounted for around 41,000 of the vacants. I am placing in the House of Commons Library a list of local authorities ranked on the basis of the number of their management vacants at 1 April 1995.

We want to see the best use made of existing council stock and I look to local authorities to continue their efforts to keep their own empty dwellings to a minimum. Most authorities have a good record on filling their vacant dwellings but there are still some where there is room for improvement.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Small and Medium Enterprises

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount of EU funding intended to help small and medium enterprises Her Majesty's Government cancelled in 1990 to 1993, expressed in ecus; what factors led to the decision to cancel; and what proportion of all such cancellations in the EU this figure represents according to figures produced by the Court of Auditors. [10836]

Mr. Oppenheim: None of the EU funding which my Department is responsible for administering was cancelled in 1990 to 1993.

British Workers Overseas

Miss Lestor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many British citizens work for (a) British or (b) other companies in (i) Asia and (ii) Africa; [12243]

(2) how many United Kingdom companies regularly employ expatriate staff in (a) Africa and (b) Asia. [12244]

Mr. Oppenheim: The information requested is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bus Company Mergers

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bus company mergers or takeovers have been referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in each year since 1985. [123835]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information requested is as follows:

| | Number |

| 1985, 1986, 1987 | none |
| 1988 | 1 |

[1] To 31 January.

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many bus company mergers or takeovers his Department has been requested to refer to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in each year since 1985. [12864]

Mr. Taylor: Under merger control procedures, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade receives advice from the Director General of Fair Trading about whether specific mergers would be referred to the MMC. Since 1985, in all merger cases involving bus companies, where the DGFT has recommended reference, my right hon. Friend and his predecessors have accepted the advice of the DGFT to refer to the MMC. In addition, from time to time my right hon. Friend and the DGFT receive requests from third parties for specific mergers—including those involving bus companies—to be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. It is not possible to quantify those requests except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Pike: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will refer the proposed sale of Pendle borough council's 50 per cent. stake in Burnley and Pendle Transport to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement. [12837]

Mr. Taylor: In the event that such a merger were announced, it would be for the Director General of Fair Trading to consider the matter in the first instance. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade would then make his decision whether to refer the proposed merger to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission once he had the DGFT's advice.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many prosecutions have been brought for insider dealing since 1 March 1994. [13129]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Since 1 March 1994, three prosecutions against four individuals have been commenced under insider dealing legislation. One individual was convicted in 1995. Proceedings against the remaining individuals have not yet been concluded.

World Trade

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the United Kingdom's current share of world trade. [12929]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information on the UK share of world trade is published by the World Trade Organisation in "International Trade, Trends and Statistics 1995", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Electricity Imports

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated cost of the importation of electricity from France for the years (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95. [13668]

Mr. Page: This is a commercial matter for the parties to the relevant contracts.

Working Time

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library copies of all (a) relevant academic and departmental research papers relating to the impact of working time on health and safety at work on which the Government have based their response to the European directive on working time and (b) departmental studies he has commissioned with regard to working time and its effects on health and safety. [12774]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 30 January 1996]: The Government commissioned Professor J. M. Harrington of the university of Birmingham institute of occupational health to identify and evaluate pertinent medical and scientific literature relating to the effect, if any, of hours of work on employees' health. The study forms part of the Government's legal challenge to the working time directive, 93/104/EC. I have been advised that, in accordance with established practice, it should not be published now; I expect to be able to do so after the case has been concluded. No other studies have been commissioned with regard to working time and its effects on health and safety by this Department.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Cash and Running Cost Limits

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what changes she proposes to make to her Department's running costs and cash limits for 1995–96. [13763]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimates, the cash limit for class XI, vote 1 will be increased by £4,570,000 from £1,017,049,000 to £1,021,619,000. This is to increase provision for assets accepted in lieu of tax and to increase the gross running costs limit for the Department by £1,900,000 from £26,975,000 to £28,875,000. The increases will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

NORTHERN IRELAND

European Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the guidance notes, office notes and other relevant documents which relate to his efforts in (a) removing gold plating from existing domestic regulation and (b) ensuring new European directives are not gold plated. [10058]

(2) what new systems he has put in place to ensure that European directives are not gold plated in domestic regulations. [10062]

Mr. Ancram: My Department's policy is not to gold plate EC directives by the addition of unnecessary burdens when implementing them in Northern Ireland. We keep existing legislation under review in the light of this policy. Official guidance on gold plating is currently being reviewed in consultation with other Government Departments.

Shantallow RUC Station—Fort George Army Base

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the future of the joint Shantallow RUC station—Fort George Army base; and what plans the Government have for the property after 1 September. [12237]

Sir John Wheeler: Accommodation for the police is a matter for the Police Authority for Northern Ireland in line with the operational requirements of the Chief Constable.

I understand that the RUC is currently examining its accommodation requirements to meet future policing needs in Londonderry. As the provision of new facilities at the Maydown complex nears completion, a number of options to rationalise existing accommodation are being considered, including the future of the Shantallow base. The army will consider the position with Fort George once the outcome of the RUC review is known.

Mobile Phones

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what procedures were used by his Department in awarding contracts for the supply of mobile and car phones to his Department and its executive agencies; and which companies were involved in tendering for these contracts. [9744]

(2) what agreements his Department and its executive agencies have with companies for the provision of mobile and car phones; and if he will list the companies having these contracts, the duration of the contracts, the number of phones covered by each agreement and the cost to public fund of each agreement. [9743]

(3) what costs his Department and executive agencies have incurred as a result of withdrawing from contracts under which mobile phones are provided; and if he will list the companies concerned. [9745]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 17 January 1996]: Within the Northern Ireland departments and agencies, the procurement of mobile equipment and car phones is carried out using normal Government procurement and accounting procedures, advised by the department of finance and personnel's telecommunication branch. It is normal practice to obtain three quotations for the instruments themselves and a quotation from each of the network providers in Northern Ireland. Quotations are normally obtained from among the following:

British Telecom
Cartec
Motorola
Netcom
Vodac
Communications Shop
Mobile Communications Specialists
CAB Phones
Euromobile
Cellularphones
Hutchison Telecom
Vodafone

The Northern Ireland Office and its agencies have also obtained mobile and car phones, taking into account the cost and most suitable network.

Individual agreements are taken out for each mobile and car phone purchased within the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland departments and agencies. Agreements have been taken out with British Telecom, Hutchison Telecom, Vodafone, Netcom, Vodac, Cartec, Motorola, The Communication Shop, Mobile Comms Specialists, CAB phones, Euromobile and Cellularphones covering 533 phones at a total annual cost of £145,026 rental plus call charges.

The normal duration for each agreement is one year plus a three-month cancellation period and the cost depends on the type of service required.

The costs incurred by the Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland departments and agencies withdrawing from such agreements has been £94. The company involved was British Telecom.

Deportation

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what review of practices related to deportation or refoulement he has carried out in accordance with the recommendations of the United Nations committee against torture. [12849]

Mr. Kirkhope: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have noted the Committee's recommendations. We are satisfied that our practices relating to deportation do not conflict with our international obligations, including those under the United Nations convention on torture, and do not plan to undertake a review of the kind proposed.

TRANSPORT

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the new en-route air traffic control centre at Swanwick will be on line to meet traffic demands; to what extent this is in accordance with the original time scales for the project; and what implications this has for the new Scottish centre. [12466]

Mr. Norris: The original target date set for the centre to enter operation was the end of 1996. The CAA has announced that, in view of problems that have arisen in integrating the software sub-systems of the air traffic management system, it has been decided to re-schedule the operational date to December 1997.

There are no implications for the new Scottish centre.

Road Schemes (Violence)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will instruct the Highways Authority to issue instructions to the security firms they have hired in relation to his Department's road schemes not to instigate violence against demonstrators; [12814]

(2) what reports have been received by the Highways Authority in respect of violent incidents involving private security firms at Newbury; and if he will make a statement. [12762]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 2 February 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about security firms in general and the security firm involved with the Newbury Bypass.

There have been a number of media articles about violent incidents involving security guards at Newbury and we are aware of the incidents where protestors appear to have assaulted security guards. But we have received no formal substantiated reports of such incidents and none have been reported to us by the Police, who are present on site at all times when the security firm's staff are present.

It is a requirement of the Highways Agency that sub-contracted security firms are members of the British Security Industry Association and that they conform to British Standard 7499 covering static guards and mobile patrols; they are instructed to work within the law.

TREASURY

Child Tax Allowance

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many claimants (a) would cease to be eligible for family credit, housing benefit and other means tests if a child tax allowance was re-introduced and set each at multiple of £100 up to an including £1,000 and (b) would cease to pay tax at each charge; if he will estimate the cost in gross and net terms of such a charge; how many tax payers would not have a high enough income to use each of the tax allowances; and if he will estimate an average amount of unused allowances for each £100 median in child tax allowances. [9935]

Mr. Jack: Information for 1995–96 is given in the tables. It has been assumed that either partner of a married couple may use such a child tax allowance. Estimates in the tables have been produced for three of the multiples of £100. Estimates for all 10 multiples could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Table 1: Effect on recipients of means-tested benefits

| Tax allowance per child (under 16) | Number of recipients of: Family credit | | Housing benefit | | Council tax benefit | | Income support | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | No longer eligible (000) | Taken[1] out of tax (000) | No longer eligible (000) | Taken[1] out of tax (000) | No longer eligible (000) | Taken[1] out of tax (000) | No longer eligible (000) | Taken[1] out of tax (000) |
| £100 | [2]— | 10 | [2]— | [2]— | [2]— | [2]— | [2]— | [2]— |
| £500 | 10 | 30 | 10 | 20 | [2]— | 20 | [2]— | [2]— |
| £1,000 | 20 | 60 | 10 | 30 | [2]— | 30 | [2]— | [2]— |

[1] Husbands and wives treated separately.
[2] Denotes estimates of less than 5,000.
The total numbers of claimants no longer eligible for any means-tested benefit or taken out of tax cannot be obtained by adding together the estimates for each benefit. This is because claimants for one benefit are often also claiming one or more of the other benefits. It is only possible to provide figures for claimants of each benefit separately.
These estimates are based on data drawn from the 1991 1992 and 1993 Family Expenditure Surveys uprated to 1995–96 price and benefits levels. Income related benefit cases have been calibrated to those contained in the 1995 DSS Departmental Report.

Table 2: Effect on tax liabilities

| Tax allowance per child (under 16) | Exchequer cost £ million | Net cost[1] £ million | Married couples and single individuals taken out of tax (thousand) | Average amount of unused child tax allowances[2] £ per child |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| £100 | 250 | 240 | 50 | 98 |
| £500 | 1,200 | 1,150 | 200 | 465 |
| £1,000 | 2,300 | 2,200 | 350 | 902 |

[1] Tax revenue cost less reductions in means-tested benefits.
[2] This is the average for those who have an unused allowance.
These estimates are based on information projected from the 1993 Family Expenditure Survey and are therefore provisional.

Unemployment

Ms Gordon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made to the value of the economy of a reduction of unemployment by 100,000 assuming normal cost-benefit assumptions. [12600]

Mr. Waldegrave: A fall of 100,000 in unemployment in the UK is a strong signal of the fundamental strength of the UK's economy, and unemployment in the UK has fallen by 741,600 since December 1992 as a result of Government policies.

Estimating the overall numerical value of a reduction in unemployment of 100,000 requires several heroic assumptions. However, the Department of Social Security's departmental report shows that a variation in unemployment of 100,000, assuming the 100,000 have the same characteristics as the existing unemployed population, would change total expenditure on benefits paid to the unemployed by £385 million in 1995–96.

Taxation

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage of taxation taken in (a) direct and (b) indirect taxation in (i) 1979–80, (ii) 1985–86 and (iii) 1995–96. [11126]

Mr. Jack: The national accounts distinguish between taxes on income and capital, and taxes on expenditure. Social security contributions are identified separately. The table presents the information requested on this basis. Rates and community charge/council tax are shown separately so as to avoid the distortion to the series resulting from the 1990 switch from domestic rates to community charge. The table also shows equivalent figures for 1978–79.

Direct and indirect tax receipts as a percentage of total taxes and social security contributions

| Year | Taxes on income[1] | Taxes on expenditure[2] | Taxes on capital | Rates[3] council tax, community charge | Social security contributions |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1978–79 | 40¼ | 31 | 1½ | 10 | 17½ |
| 1979–80 | 38 | 34½ | 1½ | 9½ | 16½ |
| 1985–86 | 39 | 31½ | 1¾ | 10 | 17¼ |

[2] Excludes rates.
[3] Business rates from 1990.
[4] Budget forecast.

Employment (Year-on-year Change)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the year-on-year change in employment in the United Kingdom, Belgium, France and the Netherlands for each year since 1987. [12599]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The latest available information is shown in the table. For Belgium, France and the Netherlands, it is for the period 1986 to 1993.

Employment: year on year change 1987 to 1995 (thousands)[1]

| | United Kingdom | Belgium | France | Netherlands |

Privatisation

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the proceeds from privatisation indicating source and cash in real terms and constant value terms in each year since 1979. [12854]

Mr. Jack: Table 5.6 to the statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1995–96" (HMSO Cm 2821) gives privatisation proceeds by source in cash terms. The table sets out the annual proceeds in cash and real terms at 1995–96 prices.

Privatisation proceeds

| Year | Cash | Constant 1995–96 prices |
|---|---|---|
| 1979–80 | 0.4 | 1.0 |

| | 61.6 | 78.9 |

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the golden shares held by Her Majesty's Government in the privatised industries, indicating when these lapse. [12853]

Mr. Jack: The remaining special or golden shares and their expiry dates, where applicable, are as follows:

| Company | Expiry date |
|---|---|
| Cable and Wireless | — |
| Sealink Stena Line | — |
| BT | — |

Income Tax

Mr. Dobson: To ask Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer how much total tax revenue would be generated if the 1978–79 income tax regime were in place today assuming no behavioural change; and what would be (a) the total difference over the period and (b) the average yearly difference for taxpayers, broken down into the top 1 per cent. of tax payers and thereafter each 10 per cent. band of tax payers. [1483]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 21 November 1995]: Information on the reduction in income tax liability for 1995–96 compared with the 1978–79 indexed regime is given in the table. This comparison is hypothetical since if an indexed version of the 1978–79 tax regime had prevailed over the last 17 years, the income base would not have grown as it has. The effect of changes in mortgage interest relief cannot be included in the analysis because most mortgage interest relief is given at source and therefore is not recorded on individual tax records.

Table A

| Quantile group of taxpayers under the 1978–79 indexed regime Per cent. | Reduction in tax £ million | Average reduction £ |
|---|---|---|
| Top 1 | 9,900 | 36,900 |
| 2–10 | 6,800 | 2,800 |
| 11–20 | 4,100 | 1,500 |
| 21–30 | 3,200 | 1,200 |
| 31–40 | 2,600 | 960 |
| 41–50 | 2,100 | 770 |
| 51–60 | 1,600 | 610 |
| 61–70 | 1,300 | 470 |

| 81–90 | 530 | 200 |
| Bottom 10 | 300 | 110 |
| All taxpayers | 33,300 | 1,240 |

In contrast to these hypothetical figures, table B shows how the share of income tax actually paid by high income groups has risen since 1979, while the share of the income tax burden borne by low income tax payers has fallen.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Holloway Prison

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which the previous Director General of the Prison Service brought to his attention the conditions at Her Majesty's prison Holloway. [8129]

Miss Widdecombe: I had regular discussions with the previous Director General of the Prison Service on a wide range of matters. The conditions at Holloway were raised during our discussions.

Residential Estates (Isle of Wight)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what have been (a) the allocations and (b) the sums actually spent on maintenance on (i) the Camp Hill residential estate, (ii) Parkhurst residential estate and (iii) Albany residential estate on the Isle of Wight for the last five years. [11749]

(2) what has been the annual budget for the last five years for (a) maintenance on prison officers residential estates and (b) for residential estates where the Home Office retains a liability. [11748]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Barry Field, dated 2 February 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about expenditure on the maintenance of Prison Service and former Prison Service residential estates. In particular, the estates adjacent to Camp Hill, Parkhurst and Albany prisons on the Isle of Wight.

Information on the annual expenditure by each establishment on the maintenance and repair of Prison Service residential quarters and estates is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, information is available on the expenditure over the last five years (1990–91 to 1995–96) for Camp Hill, Parkhurst and Albany residential estates. Total expenditure during that period on maintenance and repair for roads, pavements, paths, sewers/drains, street lighting and verges has been as follows:-

Camp Hill: £5,750 (including £4,300 in respect of street lighting supply and maintenance).

Parkhurst: £55,680 (including £41,405 on maintenance of retained quarters).

Albany: £7,370 (this was in respect of street lighting supply and maintenance).

The average expenditure on maintenance is in the region of £750 per annum for each quarter, or about £1.5m per annum in total. Actual expenditure will vary between establishments and would include an element for improvements in many cases. Establishments do not have a formal allocation of funds for this purpose and expenditure is met from their local building and repair fund.

With regard to former prison officers' quarters estates where there are unadopted roads and street lighting, most of the properties have been sold, either to prison officers or to private owner/occupiers. Owners are responsible for paying a fair proportion of any expenditure on repairs or maintenance of the private roads and footpaths and the cost of street lighting. The Prison Service has the same liability for the properties which are still owned.

Fire Cover (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the proposed reduction in fire cover in the London fire brigade; and what representations he has received on these proposals from (a) insurance companies and (b) property policy holders in London. [12867]

Mr. Sackville: Statutory responsibility for the provision of the fire service rests with the fire authority—in this case the London fire and civil defence authority. Under section 19 of the Fire Services Act 1947, my right hon. and learned Friend has to be notified of the fire authority's establishment—the number of fire stations, fire appliances and firefighting posts—as at 1 January each year. The fire authority may not reduce its establishment without his consent. He grants approval only where he is satisfied that the proposals have been sufficiently widely publicised, in sufficient detail and with adequate time, to enable any interested party to make representations; the representations have been considered by the fire authority; and that, after taking advice from Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire services, the nationally recommended standards of fire cover will be maintained.

My right hon. and learned Friend has received no application from the fire authority for his approval. However, he has received a number of representations, some of which may well have come from holders of property insurance policies, but, as at 31 January, none from insurance companies. Should the authority decide to make an application to reduce fire cover, any representations made to the Secretary of State would be taken into account when that application is considered.

Laboratory Animals

Mr. Mellor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 with particular reference to its proposals for (a) reductions in the number of animals used in laboratories and (b) a reduction in the suffering of laboratory animals. [12820]

Mr. Sackville: The animal procedures committee will review the working of the Act and offer advice to my right hon. and learned Friend. I expect that the review will consider the impact the Act has had both on the number of animals used in scientific procedures and on the extent of animal suffering.

Amusement-with-prizes Machines

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the ages at which people may play on AWP machines in different categories of establishment; what representations he has received for standardisation of age; and if he will make a statement. [12852]

Mr. Kirkhope: The playing of amusement-with-prizes machines in current use is not subject to any statutory age restriction. Amusement arcade operators who are members of the British Amusement Catering Trades Association—BACTA—operate a voluntary police whereby persons under 16 are not allowed in inland arcades and local school children of any age are not allowed in seaside arcades during school hours.

The Government have received representations from the amusement arcades action group. United Kingdom forum on young people and gambling and Dr. Sue Fisher at the university of Plymouth that all AWP machines should be subject to a statutory age limit of 18; and from the National Council on Gambling that all AWP machines should be confined to adult premises.

The draft Deregulation (Gaming Machines and Betting Office Facilities) Order provides for a machine with a £10 cash prize. Persons under 18 would not be allowed access to these machines in arcades. The machines would also be permitted in betting shops, where there is a statutory prohibition on access by persons under 18, and in liquor licensed premises and licensed bingo clubs, which are essentially adult environments.

Women's Prisons

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women's prisons do not currently meet (a) fire compliance standards and (b) statutory and safety standards; and how much must be spent to bring each prison into compliance with those standards. [11494]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 31 January 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the temporary Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 2 February 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many womens' prisons do not currently meet (a) fire compliance standards and (b) statutory and safety standards; and how much must be spent to bring each prison into compliance with those standards.

All prisons are subject to statutory standards set by the Fire Precautions Act 1971, the Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 and the Food Safety Act 1990. These Acts are enforced by the Crown Premises Inspection Group of HM Fire Service Inspectorate, the Health and Safety Executive and local authority environmental health departments.

Inspectors have the authority to inspect and issue Crown Improvement and Prohibition Notices should any failures be discovered which are deemed to be a risk to health, safety or hygiene. No such notices have been served on a women's prison within the last three years.

In addition, all prisons are inspected by the Fire Safety Section of the Prison Service and the Home Office Health and Safety Services. Reports of the visits are sent to the governors and area managers concerned, who are required to deal promptly with any shortcomings discovered.

All female prisons, except Drake Hall, have had a full fire inspection within the last three years. Recommendations for improvements were made at each establishment. Drake Hall has been visited during its rebuilding programme and recommendations have been incorporated into all the living accommodation.

During the last two years, all the female prisons have been visited by the Home Office Health and Safety Service. In some cases minor faults were discovered in the fabric of the buildings, but in the majority of cases improvements to management systems were needed.

The cost of making improvements to the fabric of a prison is normally contained within the prisons maintenance budgets and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Illegal Drugs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest estimate of the number of people involved in the illegal drugs market in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [12726]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 1 February 1996]: Since drug dealing is an illegal and, therefore, clandestine activity it is not possible to produce a reliable estimate of the number of people involved.

The number of offenders found guilty, cautioned or dealt with by compounding for drug offences is contained in table 1.1 of "Statistics of Drugs Seizures and Offenders Dealt with, United Kingdom, 1994", a copy of which is in the Library.

Parole Board

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) for what reasons Paul Norney was not informed that he was required to appear before the Parole Board when his parole was last considered; for what reasons he was not asked to appear before the Parole Board in (a) Great Britain and (b) Northern Ireland; when his parole is to be considered; and if he will make a statement. [12949]

(2) what factors led to Brendan Bond being refused parole by the Parole Board; and if he will make a statement. [12951]

(3) what factors led the Parole Board to require Stephen Nordone, Noel Gibson and Sean Kinsella to remain in Britain for three months after their release; and if he will make a statement. [12952]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 1 February 1996]: These matters are the responsibility of the Parole Board. I have asked the chairman of the Parole Board to write to the hon. Member and I will place a copy of his reply in the Library.

HEALTH

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all the helplines, or schemes which include a helpline service, for which his Department provides any funding, stating which are (a) independent organisations, (b) run by his Department or agencies of his Department or (c) of another classification; however many calls each received in each of the last five years; and how much money each received from his Department in each of the last five years. [9800]

Dental Records

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is his Department's policy regarding the transfer of patients' dental records when the patient is transferring from one NHS dentist to another. [12830]

(2) what is his policy regarding transfer of a patients' dental records if a dental practice leaves the NHS. [12831]

Mr. Malone: It is a condition of dentists' terms of service that dentists should provide, within 28 days of a request from registered patients leaving to join another dentist, a summary of the care and treatment given to that patient. Local family health services authorities provide a form, FP26, for that purpose.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

International War Crimes Tribunal

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the letter to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West of 29 September 1995 concerning the International War Crimes Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, what further measures he now proposes as regards equipment, staff and funding to assist the tribunal in its work; what is the intended timetable for investigation, arrest, charging and trial; and if he will make a statement. [13397]

Mr. Hanley: The International War Crimes Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia has announced indictments against 52 individuals. It has held preliminary hearings in the trial against Dusko Tadic, a guard at the Omarska Camp, the trial is due to start on 18 March.

The tribunal does not disclose its operational timetable.

As concerns the level of our contribution to the tribunal this year, I shall arrange for the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Upminister (Sir N. Bonsor) to write to the hon. Gentleman with details shortly.

BBC World Service

Mr. Hanley: The figures are:

BBC World Service grant in aid 1990–91 to 1995–96

| | Actual grant | At constant prices (1995–96) |
|---|---|---|
| 1990–91 | 146 | 174 |

Mr. Hanley: UN sanctions prohibit the export to Iraq of goods other than food, medicine and other humanitarian supplies. These require an export licence obtained from the Department of Trade and Industry. The Post Office will not accept any items for Iraq that do not have the appropriate licence.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the expenditure of his Department, his department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and other associated expenses for (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95, (f) 1995–96 and (g) 1996–97. [11441]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 30 January 1996]: Diplomatic wing expenditure on all forms of overseas travel, overseas accommodation and related expenses is:

1993–94: £28,792,720

1994–95: £25,790,597

The above includes expenditure on transfer journeys, medical journeys, local and regional travel, Queen's messenger travel, ministerial visits and subsistence, including accommodation costs. Figures for earlier years cannot be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

Estimated outturn figures for overseas expenditure for 1995–96 cannot be provided as the apportionment between UK and overseas expenditure can, under the present accounting system, be made only after such expenditure has been incurred. The allocation of funds for 1996–97 has not yet been determined.

The aid wing does not hold the information in the form requested. The total spent on travel and subsistence—including UK travel, hotel and associated costs both in the UK and overseas—is as follows:

1991–92: £1,066,000

1993–94: £1,375,000

1994–95: £1,374,000

1995–96: £1,514,000 (projected)

1996–97: £1,370,000 (estimate)

Figures for other years cannot be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

Expenditure by NDPBs and agencies is as follows:

1996–97: £15,000 (estimate)

Britain-Russia Centre
Not funded from grant in aid.

1994–95: £7,114
1195–96: £19,875 (projected)

Great Britain-China Centre
1989–90: £1,813
1991–92: £3,178
1993–94: £7,580

Figures for other years could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

The 1996 departmental report, due to be published in March, will provide details of FCO expenditure in recent years and expenditure plans for the years 1996–97 to 1998–99.

WALES

Llanelli (Development)

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what contribution was made by the Welsh Development Agency through the joint venture agreement between the agency and the Llanelli borough council to the development of south Llanelli in 1994–95; what is the estimated outturn for 1995–96; and what is the planned expenditure for 1996–97. [11829]

Mr. Hague: I will arrange for the chief executive of the agency to write to the right hon. Member and for a copy of his letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Redundancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many redundancies were declared in 1995; and what percentage of those redundancies were in manufacturing. [12425]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The only information available is from the quarterly labour force survey, which estimates the number of people who were made redundant in the three months prior to the survey. In Wales, an estimated 15,000 people were made redundant in the three months prior to interview in the spring 1995 labour force survey. The corresponding figure for the summer 1995 survey was 10,000.

The results from autumn 1995 and winter 1995 are not yet available. No reliable estimates relating to manufacturing can be made because of the relatively small sample size.

Part-time Jobs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were in part-time jobs in Wales at the latest available date. [12424]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The labour force survey for summer 1995 estimated that 300,000 people in Wales aged 16 or over worked part-time in their main job.

Agriculture Department Employees

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many full-time members of staff are currently employed at each of the Welsh Office agricultural department divisional offices. [12309]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The following full-time members of staff, excluding short-term casual staff, are currently employed at each of the agricultural divisional offices—as at 26 January:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Caernarfon | 141 |
| Carmarthen | 145 |
| Llandrindod Wells | 168 |
| Total | 454 |

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what reductions he estimates will take place in current staffing levels within the agriculture group of the Welsh Office in 1996–97; and what assessment he has made of his Department's capacity to meet the standards set out in "Helping Farmers in Wales" following these reductions. [12307]

Mr. Jones: Final decisions on the 1996–97 running cost budgets for individual groups have not yet been made.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many full-time members of staff are currently employed by the Welsh Office agricultural department in Cardiff; and at what grades. [12310]

Mr. Jones: There are the following full-time staff in the agriculture department in Cardiff—as at 26 January 1996:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Grade 3 | 1 |
| Grade 5 | 3 |
| Grade 7 | 5 |
| SEO | 4 |
| HEO | 13 |
| EO | 18 |
| AO | 9 |
| AA | 9 |
| PS | 4 |

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current ratio of Welsh Office agricultural department staff to the total number of farmers, partners and directors in Wales. [12308]

Mr. Jones: The ratio of current Welsh Office agricultural staff, excluding short-term casual staff, to the total number of farmers, partners and directors in Wales is 1:63 (rounded).

Temporary Jobs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of people who are in temporary jobs because they are unable to find permanent work. [12423]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The labour force survey for summer 1995 estimated that the number of employees in Wales aged 16 or over who were in a temporary job, and who gave the reason as being that they could not find a permanent one, was 48,000.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent assessment he has made of the persistent environmental effects on Welsh farms of the radioactive fallout from the Chernobyl accident in 1986; and if he will make an assessment on the effect on the Welsh economy of the radioactive pollution. [12685]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: In Wales radiocaesium contamination from the Chernobyl accident affects certain upland areas of sheep grazing, predominantly where there is a high peat content. While there is a general decline from year to year in the activity rate of radiocaesium, the actual rate of decline in these areas depends on the interaction of a number of factors such as soil type, vegetation, weather, drainage and sheep grazing preference. The variable interaction between these factors does not enable an accurate forecast to be made of the length of time sheep controls will be required.

Regular monitoring of radiocaesium levels in sheep, and other relevant information, enables suitable areas to be identified for a comprehensive survey and assessment to determine the prospects for removing controls. Following such work, my right hon. Friend was able to life controls from more than 65 sq km in the Snowdon area on 17 January 1996. This reduced the area originally affected by sheep controls from more than 4,000 sq km to approximately 580 sq km.

It was recognised that the introduction of sheep controls would have some economic effect on part of the Welsh sheep industry. To mitigate this, the sheep compensation scheme was introduced in July 1986 to compensate farmers whose enterprises had been disrupted as a consequence of sheep controls. So far in Wales over £7,900,000 has been paid to farmers affected. This compensation has been paid primarily to recompense farmers for the inconvenience and disruption of sheep controls; payments for market losses as a result of the Chernobyl accident have been comparatively small.

Fire Service Personnel

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors led to the decision to permit employees of the fire services to stand for election in local authority areas in their areas. [12561]

Mr. Hague: Employees of combined fire authorities can become members of unitary authorities, but cannot be representatives of their councils on the fire authority of which their council is a constituent.

The Government consider that the responsibilities of combined fire authorities are such that membership of a constituent council would not present any conflict of interest for an employee of the combined fire authority provided that the employee is not a representative of the council on the combined fire authority.

National Parks Employees

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what factors led to the decision not to permit employees of the national parks to stand for elections to local authorities in their areas. [12489]

Mr. Hague: The planning and development control responsibilities of national parks require them to take decisions which directly affect the interests of individual residents and businesses in the parks. People in the parks should be confident that there is no possible conflict between an individual's interest as an employee of a national park authority and his position as a member of a local authority. The Environment Act 1995 preserves this position by providing that an employee of a national park authority is not only disqualified from being a member of that authority, but from being a member of any local authority represented on that national park authority.

Industry Acts Expenditure, Gywnedd

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much expenditure was incurred in the county of Gywnedd during the financial year 1994–95 under the Industry Acts; and how many new jobs have been facilitated by such expenditure. [12491]

Mr. Hague: In 1994–95, companies in Gywnedd accepted assistance worth £4,438.025 under regional selective assistance, RSA; regional enterprise grants; SMART, small firms merit award for research technology, and SPUR, support for projects under research, schemes. Of these, only RSA is job-related, and 600 jobs were forecast to be created and/or safeguarded.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the grants paid by (a) the Welsh Office and (b) its NDPBs to supermarket chains in (i) 1992, (ii) 1993 and (iii) 1994. [12520]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office offered Tesco a grant of £2 million in 1989 to encourage it to relocate its administration centre to Cardiff. In 1992, an offer of £3.8 million was made to encourage it to locate a distribution centre at Magor. Details of individual payments within these offers are commercially confidential, but payments on both projects have been made during the period 1992 to 1994. No other supermarket chains have received Welsh Office grant assistance and no supermarket chain has received grant from Welsh Office public bodies.

Offa's Dyke

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to preserve the section of Offa's Dyke at Rhostyllen, near Wrexham, Clwyd, currently offered for sale; and if he will make a statement. [12872]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. T. J. Cassidy, to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from T. J. Cassidy to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 2 February 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question in which you asked about the Department's plans to preserve a section of Offa's Dyke at Rhostyllen which is currently offered for sale.

Cadw's interest arises as the Agency has day to day responsibility for the Secretary of State's functions under the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979. These include our work related to ancient monuments scheduled—that is protected—under the provisions of the Act. Much of Offa's Dyke is scheduled—including the section to which you refer.

Given the importance of the Dyke I can assure you that Cadw takes a close interest in the various sections which are routinely monitored by our Field Monument Wardens. In 1991 we commissioned a full field assessment of the Dyke which confirmed that the Welsh sections were appropriately scheduled including the section at Rhostyllen, currently offered for sale.

I understand that it is owned by British Coal and has been offered for sale as part of the company's disposal of its non-mining assets. Its sale will not affect its scheduled status. I am told by our professional staff that this section of the Dyke is in good condition, and we will draw the monument's importance to the attention of any new owner.

Housing Stock (Alyn and Deeside)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new moneys he plans to give to Alyn and Deeside district council to enable the authority to modernise more of its housing stock; if he will visit Alyn and Deeside district council and undertake a tour of inspection of the older council estates; and if he will make a statement. [12990]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have no plans to change Alyn and Deeside district council's housing capital allocations or to visit council estates in the area. It is for the local authority to determine capital spending priorities.

Medical Treatment Centres

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many treatments are available at each treatment centre; and what guidelines he has issued on the provision of free transport to each treatment centre for (a) pre-operative, (b) surgery and (c) follow-up consultations. [12964]

Mr. Hague: In 1995–96, the number of procedures available at each treatment centre is:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Surgical centre, Bridgend (hernia, varicose vein and some minor surgical procedures) | 1,080 |
| Ophthalmic centre, Bridgend (cataract procedures) | 1,060 |
| Orthopaedic centre, Rhydlafar (hip/knee replacement and joint revision procedures | 298 |

Patient transport services are provided free of charge for all visits to and from treatment centres for those patients with medical need as determined by their doctor.

Health Service Referrals

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 25 January 1996, Official Report, column 400, if he will list those Welsh health authorities which have stopped funding extra-contractual referrals until 1 April and in each case the estimated cost overrun of the health authority prior to the decision. [13016]

Mr. Hague: South Glamorgan and Dyfed health authorities have suspended funding of non-urgent extra-contractual referrals for the balance of the current financial year. The projected overruns when the decisions were made were £1.4 million and £1.5 million respectively.

Health Service Materials Management

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the announcement of the award to Excel Logistics of the materials management contract under the market testing of the Welsh health common services authority, how the capital receipts for the disposal of Bridgend, Swansea and Whitchurch will be treated; and what undertakings have been given to NHS trusts concerning rebates or other financial consideration from the disposals in the price to be offered for materials management services. [13389]

Unexploded Bombs

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will undertake a survey of the waters in Cardigan bay and the Irish sea to identify unexploded bombs; and if he will make a statement. [12490]

Mr. Soames: I have been asked to reply.

If left undisturbed, munitions on the sea bed present no significant risk to human health or to the marine environment. Accordingly, my Department has no plans to survey Cardigan bay or the Irish sea to identify munitions.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fish Quotas

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the fish quotas for each EU country in (a) the current year and (b) each of the last five years; and what were the national fish catches in each of the last five years. [13089]

Mr. Baldry: Detailed tables are being placed in the Library of the House showing

(i) the quotas allocated to each member state at the start of each of the years 1991 to 1995; and

(ii) uptake by each member state over the period 1991 to 1995 against their end-of-year quota i.e. after quota exchanges have been taken into account.

The quotas for each member state for the current year have not yet been published, but I will send them to the hon. Member as soon as they are.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the enforcement of the requirements of article 4(1)(a) of Council directive 91/628: Ovine and Caprine Animals, in terms of identification and registration in accordance with the requirements of article 3(1)(c) of Council directive 90/425EEC. [12543]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 February 1996]: The Sheep and Goats (Registration, Identification and Movement) Order 1996, which implements the requirements on sheep and goats in Council directive 92/102.EEC on the registration and identification of livestock, came into effect on 1 February this year. The responsibility for enforcing this legislation falls to local authorities.

Mr. Boswell: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, selected aggregated data on sickness absence in respect of calendar years has been available since 1985 in the form of reports from HM Treasury and more recently the Civil Service Occupational Health and Safety Agency (OHSA). Figures for the Department based on these data, which necessarily include some of the agencies in the period 1990 to 1994, are as follows:

| Year | Average number of days sick absence per staff year |
|---|---|
| 1989[1] | 6.3 |
| 1990[2] | 7.5 |
| 1991 | 8.1 |
| 1992 | 8.0 |
| 1993 | 8.4 |

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Education Funding (Brent)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what is the standard spending assessment for Brent in the next financial year; and what is the actual projected spending; [12501]

(2) if she will ask for a report on the resources being made available to schools in Brent. [12562]

Mr. Robin Squire: Brent local education authority's final education standard spending assessment for 1996–97 is £109.69 million, which represents an increase of £3.37 million—3.2 per cent—from 1995–96. It is for Brent council to decide on spending for 1996–97, when it sets its budget, and to determine the level of funding for the schools for which it is responsible. The Funding Agency for Schools will calculate the budgets for grant-maintained schools.

Pupil-teacher Ratios (Brent)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what reports she has received about pupil-teacher ratios in schools in Brent over the last six years. [12563]

Mr. Robin Squire: The amount is £52,239,000. This figure is derived from the local management of schools budget statement for 1995–96 published by the local education authority under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988 and relates to all planned expenditure on mandatory and discretionary "excepted items". It does not include educational expenditure which falls outside the scope of the authority's general schools budget.

[13387]

(2) how many teachers were granted early retirement in 1994–95; and of these how many were on the grounds of (a) infirmity and (b) premature retirement. [13388]

Mr. Robin Squire: The first-year costs to the teachers' superannuation scheme of early retirements on the grounds of (a) infirmity and (b) premature retirement in 1994–95 were £83.8 million and £49.8 million respectively. Information on the amount of expenditure borne by local education authorities for teachers' early retirements in 1994–95 is not yet available.

The total number of teachers who were granted early retirement in 1994–95 in England and Wales was 16,682. Of these, 6,075 were on the grounds of infirmity and 10,608 on the grounds of premature retirement.

Jobseekers (Project Work Scheme)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 560, if she will identify the labour market data and pre-existing documents; and if this information is available to hon. Members in the Library. [13357]

Mr. Forth: My reply of 29 January explained the considerations that were taken into account when selecting the pilot areas. Information on claimant unemployment rates for travel-to-work areas is published in the Employment Gazette. Other information on claimant unemployment, such as small area statistics by duration, is available on the NOMIS database, to which the Library has access.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 560, if she will identify by name the other travel-to-work areas which were considered for the project work scheme; and what are the respective rates of unemployment and very long-term unemployment in these travel-to-work areas. [13358]

[12792]

(9) how many times inspectors have been appointed under section 15 of the Child Support Act 1991; how many charges have been brought under section 15(9) of the Act for non-co-operation with an inspector; and how many employees of the Child Support Agency have been charged under section 50 of the Act for unlawful disclosure of information. [12802]

(15) how many assessments were reduced as a result of the 18 April 1995 changes to the child support formula; what was the average reduction; and what effect this will have had on the 1995–96 benefit savings. [12799]

(16) what proportion of absent parents are assessed to pay child support maintenance by the CSA at a rate lower than the maintenance requirement. [12796]

(17) how many of the persons with care sent maintenance application forms by the CSA to date during 1995–96 were (a) income support claimants, (b) family credit claimants and (c) private clients; [12805]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(1) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency operations.

The trend changed with the introduction in late 1994, of a requirement to seek the PWC's authorisation to pursue maintenance. It increased awareness amongst PWCs that they did not have to co-operate with the Agency and led to an increase in the proportion of new cases seeking Good Cause. It is of note that whilst the number of cases where good cause has been turned down has gone up, the number accepted has remained fairly constant.

Following the Social Security Select Committee's recommendation that a review of the Good Cause process should be conducted, the Government charged the Agency with carrying out such a review. The report, to be published before the end of March 1996, will include detailed information about decision making by child support staff.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(2) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the success rate of specialist tracing of absent parents by the Child Support Agency.

In 1993/94 the success rate was 85%; in 1994/95 it was 66% and at the end of November 1995 the success rate was 63%.

Although the success rate is diminishing the actual number of absents parents that have been traced is increasing. In 1993/94 28,240 cases resulted in a successful trace, in 1994/95 this increased to 49,632 and in the first eight months of 1995/96 the Agency has been successful in 35,084 cases.

Since August 1994 to the end of November 1995 23,420 cases have been abandoned/withdrawn by the Agency. Information is not available for the period prior to August 1994.

At the end of November 1995 there were 17,145 cases that remained outstanding.

You may be interested to know that information on specialist tracing action is included in the Child Support Agency Statistical Information that is placed in the House of Commons Library every month.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(3) I am replying to your parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security on the percentage of cases cleared by individual Child Support Agency centres.

At the end of September 1995 159,041 cases had been cleared by the Agency. The percentage of these cases cleared by individual CSA centres during the first half of 1995/96 is shown in the table below for each of the categories required.

Per cent.

| | Clearances | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| CSAC | (a) under 13 weeks | (b) between 13 and 26 weeks | (c) in over 26 weeks |
| Dudley | 4.15 | 3.63 | 8.98 |
| Hastings | 5.41 | 4.06 | 8.76 |
| Falkirk | 3.35 | 2.52 | 7.56 |
| Plymouth | 4.41 | 3.84 | 10.38 |
| Birkenhead | 6.45 | 3.80 | 7.48 |
| Belfast | 3.93 | 3.75 | 7.55 |
| Agency | 27.70 | 21.60 | 50.71 |

Figures do not sum to 100 per cent due to rounding.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(4) I am replying to the Parliamentary Question requesting information on how the Child Support Agency performed against its performance targets in the first nine months of 1995/96.

As December's information has not yet been published, the response covers the eighth months to the end of November.

At that point, the Agency's overall performance continued to represent a significant improvement over both the first year's performance and the situation at the same stage in 1994/95.

Details of performance against individual targets are as follows:

"£300 million of maintenance to be collected, or arranged for direct payment from Absent Parent (AP) to Parent With Care (PWC), in 1995/96."

This totalled £181.92 million for the year-to-date, with the total for the month continuing to increase. We are still on track to achieve this challenging target.

"90% of payments made to PWC to be made within 10 workings days of receipt from AP."

These have been made within 10 working days in 97% of cases. November was the eight consecutive month in which the target was achieved.

"To achieve rapid continuing improvement in accuracy, so that in at least 75% of cases checked during March 1996 the cash value will be for the correct cash amount."

Maintenance assessments were accurate in 71% of cases checked during November.

"Where a client is dissatisfied with a Child Support Officer's decision and requests a review, 50% to be cleared within 13 weeks; 80% within 26 weeks; and no more than 20% to be older than 26 weeks at 31 March 1996."

—52% of second tier reviews were cleared within 13 weeks.

—68% were cleared within 26 weeks.

—23% were outstanding for more than 26 weeks.

"60% of new maintenance applications to be cleared within 26 weeks, and as at 31 March 1996 no more than 10% of all maintenance applications received by the Agency to be over 52 weeks old."

—The year-to-date figure at the end of November was 39%.

—Applications awaiting assessment for over 52 weeks stood at 14%.

"To manage the Agency's resources to deliver its Business Plan within the gross vote (cash) budget allocation."

The forecast outturn to the end of March 1996 continued to be in line with the budget.

I hope this is helpful for the moment, I will update the figures when the December information is published very shortly.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(5) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about staffing within the Child Support Agency.

The details you have requested regarding employees working within the six Child Support Agency Centres and in the field are shown in the attached table.

The Agency is still assessing the impact which the Public Expenditure Survey 1995 will have on the 1996/97 staffing complement.

I hope this is helpful.

| | Permanent staff | Temporary contract staff | Total |
|---|---|---|---|
| Birkenhead | 773.5 | 13 | 786.5 |
| Dudley | 705.3 | 1 | 706.3 |
| Hastings | 714.5 | 48 | 762.5 |
| Falkirk | 721.9 | 4 | 725.9 |
| Plymouth | 722.5 | 67 | 789.5 |

| Field | 1,910.1 | 255.34 | 2,165.44 |

1. Staff shown as whole time equivalents.
2. Temporary contract staff are staff employed either on a casual basis or for a fixed term of between one and five years.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(6) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance.

The total Maintenance Debt as of 30/11/95 was £793.9m. This includes the debt for both Full and Interim Maintenance Assessments and arrears that have been rescheduled for future payment. Around 65% (£516m) of the £793.9m is provisional debt as it relates to interim maintenance assessments. In a further 16% (£130.3m) an agreement has been made with the absent parent for the maintenance to be paid either in instalments or at a future date; these cases are carefully monitored.

Information on the proportion of Agency accounts currently in arrears and how many have not received a payment is not currently available. This information will be available from the Agency's Debt Management System which will be introduced during 1996/97.

The average amount of debt on an Agency account is not currently available. The Financial Management System will provide this information from December 1995 when the number of cases with maintenance debt becomes available.

When the information you require from the Debt Management and Financial Management System is available, I will consider including this data in the monthly statistics placed in the library.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(7) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Deduction of Earnings orders (DEOs).

A scan of the Child Support Computer System which took place in January 1996 showed that there are just under 40,000 DEOs currently in force on regular payment accounts.

Information is not available on the number of DEOs that have been challenged in court, or the number of such challenges that have been successful.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(8) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about absent parents who are self-employed.

In August 1995 a computer scan of 5% of live cases on the Child Support Computer System showed that 3.9% of absent parents who have a full maintenance assessment were self-employed. I am unclear as to what is being referred to as "a dispute between the parents" and the Agency has no requirement to differentiate between the employed and self-employed until an assessment is calculated. Even if this phrase is taken to mean one or other parent has asked for a review or has appealed, we do not keep separate statistics on this basis.

Records show that 5 category C interim maintenance assessments have been issued since April 1995.

Finally, information is not held as to how many Category A and D interim maintenance assessments relate to self employed absent parents or the proportion of liability orders relating to self-employed absent parents. But in this last case, I can tell you that the great majority of liability orders relate to self-employed absent parents because the alternative of Deduction from Earnings Order would nearly always be appropriate for employees.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(9) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about sections of the Child Support Agency Act 1991.

Precise information on the number of time inspectors have been appointed under Section 15 of the Child Support Act 1991 can only be obtained at a disproportionate cost; this is a very rare occurrence. The Departmental Solicitors Office has confirmed that charges under Section 15(9) of the Act for non-cooperation with an inspector have been brought in one case.

It is a matter for the police to bring proceedings under Section 50 of the Act. I have no record of any Agency employee who has been charged under this section.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(10) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance.

You asked about parents with care using the Agency collection service. Information is not available in the exact form you requested but it is hoped that the following may be of use to you. Figures on the attached table are based on a scan of the live cases on the Child Support Computer System which took place in November 1995.

A breakdown of the proportions of each parent with care type using the collection service is not available.

There are no precise figures available for these groups relating to a request for collection via the Agency being refused, but a refusal would be extremely rare.

I hope this is helpful.

Parents with Care

| Number of cases of all types where an account has been set up using the assessment, collection and enforcement service | 257,842 |

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(11) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security on how much child support maintenance has been paid through the Child Support Agency.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(12) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency review into the requirement to co-operate procedures.

The Agency devised a detailed work programme to thoroughly examine all issues related to the requirement to co-operate procedures in order to address the concerns raised by the Social Security Select Committee. A number of special exercises were commissioned including the examination of client files, consultation with staff and consultation with external organisations.

The Agency, with the aid of external researchers, is in the final stages of analysing the results of the various exercises and expects to publish a report before the end of March 1996. Throughout the review the Agency liaised closely with all Departmental colleagues, including Benefit Agency staff who formed part of the working group established to take forward the review. This ensured a proper balance was maintained between protecting single parents and their children, and abuse of the Social Security benefit system.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(13) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about DNA tests.

The discounted DNA scheme was introduced in July 1995. Normally there are three separate tests involved for each case ie the parent with care, the alleged absent parent and the child. The total cost for discounted DNA testing is £426.92. This figure is inclusive of VAT and doctors fees. One of the advantages of the scheme was that it would effectively eliminate the need for cases of disputed paternity to go through the court system. Up to the end of November 1995 we have completed 904 discounted DNA tests; I am not aware that any of these cases have been referred for court action.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(14) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency operations.

You asked about absent parents (APs) maintenance and benefit status for 1995/96. The information is not available in exactly the form you requested but I hope the information contained within the attached table is helpful. The table does not show the number of APs with minimum assessments at 31/8/95, however 67,700 APs were paying between £0.01 and the current minimum amount of £2.35.

Figures are based on a 5% scan of live cases on the Child Support Computer System on 31 August 1995. All figures relate to live fully assessed cases at that date.

Details of absent parents as at 31 August 1995

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Absent parents on Income Support whose cases have been taken on by CSA | 96,300 |
| Absent parents on Income Support where the minimum amount (currently £2.35) is deducted | 37,500 |
| Absent parents not on Income Support paying between £0.01 and the minimum amount (currently £2.35) | 30,200 |
| Absent parents not on Income Support paying NIL | 27,300 |

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(15) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the effect of the April policy changes on child maintenance assessments.

In April 1995 an exercise took place to consider all live cases on the Child Support Computer System and re-assess where applicable. Of the live cases re-assessed automatically by computer 33,000 resulted in a reduced maintenance liability averaging £8.33; of the cases requiring clerical re-assessment a further 7,000 saw a reduction in maintenance liability, but no information is held regarding the average reduced maintenance liability.

In addition, just under 4,500 absent parents have benefitted from either the award of allowances for property and capital settlements or from the award of an allowance for travel to work costs.

Figures relating to the impact of the April policy changes on benefit savings for 1995/96 are not yet available.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(16) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support maintenance.

The child maintenance requirement is a set amount based on the number of qualifying children which is the starting point of an assessment. An assessment is then made based on the full individual circumstances of both the absent parent and parent with care.

Information on the number of assessments that fall below the child maintenance requirement is not available.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(17) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many persons with care sent maintenance application forms by the Child Support Agency to date during 1995/96 were (a) Income Support claimants, (b) Family Credit claimants, (c) private clients.

At the end of November 1995 the Agency had issued the following Maintenance Assessments Forms (MAFs) for each of the above categories:

(a) 155,442 MAFs were issued to Income Support claimants

(b) 43,424 MAFs were issued to Family Credit claimants

(c) 13,147 MAFs were issued to private clients

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(18) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency applications.

The factors that led to the current level of outstanding maintenance applications have been well documented, and include the combination of new legislation, new systems and new staff at the outset of the Child Support Agency.

You asked when the Agency expects to reach a level of 200,000 outstanding applications. The Agency estimates that a normal head of work would be in the region of 200,000 to 250,000 cases in the process of maintenance assessment. The Agency currently has 392,000 cases at various stages in this process.

I am unable to state categorically when we will reach a steady state of 200,000 to 250,000 cases, but we are progressing towards this. The Agency has not yet agreed with the Secretary of State the priorities and performance targets for 1996/97.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(19) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about cases cleared by the Agency.

You asked for a breakdown of cases cleared in the current financial year without a maintenance assessment. I have based the reply on the first 8 months of the financial year, the period ending 30 November 1995.

During this period, out of 219,596 which were cleared, 130,228 cases were cleared without an assessment. As we have no business need to record a more specific reason for such clearances, I cannot provide a more detailed breakdown of these cases.

I hope this is helpful.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Malcolm Wicks, dated 1 February 1996:

(20) I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency paternity cases.

At 30 November 1995 some 11,464 cases were outstanding in which paternity was disputed. There are a number of circumstances outside the control of the Agency which contribute to the delay in resolving the issue of paternity. The length of time taken to resolve a paternity dispute varies significantly with the complexity of the case, therefore no meaningful average can be given.

You asked how many cases have been abandoned because of the inability to prove paternity.

If DNA testing proves that the alleged absent parent is not the father of the child, the Agency will re-open discussions with the parent with care and consider further appropriate action.

If we think that there are reasonable grounds for an alleged absent parent to be judged the father of the child, even if he refuses DNA testing we will refer the case to a court for their judgement.

If we are not satisfied there are reasonable grounds for paternity to be accepted by a court we will suspend further action, but such cases may be periodically reviewed.

I hope this is helpful.

Disregarded Funds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the Chancellor of the Exchequer's undertaking in his Budget speech, Official Report, 28 November 1995, column 1067, when he expects to bring forward regulations to increase capital disregard maximum from £8,000 to £16,000; and from which date the new regulations will take effect. [13015]

Mr. Roger Evans: Regulations to increase the capital disregard maximum from £8,000 to £16,000 are expected to be laid before the House no later than 10 March. They will take effect from 1 April for housing benefit and 8 April for income support.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of claimants declaring disregarded income; if he will list the amount of income disregarded; and if he will divide these data according to each category of claimant. [13363]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Appeals Legislation

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to amend social security laws in respect of appeals to (a) tribunals and (b) the social security commissioners. [13217]

Mr. Burt: Regulations are being laid on 7 February which will amend the Social Security (Adjudication) Regulations 1986. The changes are to the provisions relating to appeals to tribunals made outside the normal time limits and the way in which chairmen record the proceedings of tribunals. Regulations relating to the procedures before the Social Security Commissioners are the responsibility of my noble friend the Lord Chancellor.

DEFENCE

Army Headquarters

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the location of the headquarters of each Army (a) division and (b) brigade, indicating to which division each brigade reports and for each brigade which Regular and Territorial Army infantry battalions are under command. [12137]

Mr. Soames: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the cost of carrying out an epidemiological survey to establish the existence of the alleged Gulf war syndrome. [12329]

Mr. Saomes: The costs of the epidemiological surveys, which I announced on Tuesday 30 January in my reply to the hon. Member for South Shields, (Dr. Clark), Official Report, column 607-08, have yet to be determined.

Language Training

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) academic and (b) non-academic (i) part-time and (ii) full-time staff are employed in the defence school of languages. [12819]

Mr. Soames: Details of the staff employed at the defence school of languages are as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Military academic | |
| Full-time | 13 |
| Part-time | 0 |
| Military non-academic | |
| Full-time | 19 |
| Part-time | 0 |
| Total | 32 |
| Civilian academic | |
| Full-time | 19 |
| Part-time | 1 |
| Civilian non-academic | |
| Full-time | 32 |
| Part-time | 1 |
| Total | 52 |

In addition to the above there are, at present, a further 22 civilian academic staf employed on a casual basis.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of language training within the responsibility of his Department. [12818]

Mr. Soames: The MOD's requirement for language training is regularly reviewed. The defence school of languages is being restructured as part of the defence costs study. This will take effect on 1 April 1996. Changes include the creation of a European language wing teaching French, German, Italian, Spanish and Russian; and the integration of the hitherto single service, individual language training organisations.

RAF Deployments (Morocco)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what efforts have been made to obtain authorisation from the Moroccan authorities for flights at less than 300 ft about ground level during Royal Air Force deployments to that country. [12890]

Mr. Soames: I regret to advise that my answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 811, concerning the minimum permitted altitude of RAF training deployments to Morocco during 1995 was incorrectly stated as 300 ft above ground level. On further investigation it has been established that we received approval to carry out low flying training at a minimum height of 200 ft above ground level. In the event, though, the RAF only flew sorties down to 250 ft.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what weapons and electronic warfare range facilities are available to the Royal Air Force under the arrangements with the Moroccan authorities for bilateral exercises. [12888]

Mr. Soames: None.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates, numbers and types of aircraft involved, numbers of sorties and minimum permitted altitudes for all Royal Air Force deployments to Morocco since November 1995; and what is the date of the next scheduled deployment. [12889]

Mr. Soames: There have been no RAF deployments to Morocco since November 1995. Further deployments remain under consideration, but none have yet been scheduled.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 811, which other nations participated in the training exercise in Morocco in April 1995; and what arrangements have been established with other air forces for co-ordination of future training deployments to Morocco. [12915]

Mr. Soames: The arrangements with Morocco referred to in my answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 811, are bilateral in nature. No other nations participated in the low flying training exercise held in Morocco in April 1995 and no arrangements have been made with other Governments to co-ordinate future training deployments to Morocco.

Training Facilities (Morocco)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for provision of flying training facilities in the UK to the Moroccan air force. [12886]

Mr. Soames: We have no such plans.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities in the UK have been made available to the Moroccan authorities as a result of the 1993 military co-operation accord. [12887]

Mr. Soames: No facilities have been made available to the Moroccan authorities as a result of the 1993 accord, although we encourage the presence of Moroccan students on courses at UK military training establishments.

Parachute Jumps

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military parachute jumps were made in each of the last five years; and how many injuries were sustained as a result. [12939]

Mr. Soames: The total number of military parachute jumps and injuries sustained requiring medical treatment in the years 1991 to 1995 were as follows:

| Year | Jumps | Injuries | Percentage of injuries |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1991 | 42,964 | 65 | 0.15 |
| 1992 | 42,957 | 105 | 0.24 |
| 1993 | 49,212 | 92 | 0.18 |
| 1994 | 48,608 | [1]94 | 0.19 |
| 1995 | 42,861 | [1]49 | 0.11 |

[1] Includes one fatality.

Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of (a) ex-service men and (b) ex-service women suffering from combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder. [12904]

Mr. Soames: Records are not held by my Department for ex-service men and women suffering from combat-induced post-traumatic stress disorder—PTSD—as the responsibility for their care lies with the national health service. Veterans from conflicts dating as far back as world war one may be suffering from PTSD, formerly known as battle shock. It is therefore not possible to give a meaningful estimate.

Helicopter Flying School

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the defence helicopter flying school. [12273]

Mr. Soames: An invitation to tender for the provision of a commercially owned and maintained helicopter fleet for the defence helicopter school was issued by the Ministry of Defence on 17 August 1995. Three responses were received on 14 December 1995. The bids, which include a number of support activities at RAF Shawbury and the school of army aviation at Middle Wallop, are now being evaluated.

We expect to announce the winning bid in May this year.

Mines

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what weapons systems are deployed in the armed forces which can deliver mines from a land-based system from less than 500m. [12327]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The weapons systems which are currently in service with the United Kingdom armed forces which can deliver mines from a land-based system from less than 500m are Ranger and Barmine. Ranger projects mines over a short distance while Barmine lays them directly on, or under, the surface of the ground.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 270

SESSION 1995–96

22nd January—2nd February 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
